Appalled at the awful grandeur of the scene, I sat like one entranced. Not a breath of air stirred the leafy canopy of the forest, not the carol of a bird spoke of the living. In a moment I looked below, and there in the dim twilight, far away in the shadows, were many sail boats which had passed me before, now lying motionless at anchor. I looked for the grand steamer, and at last found her lying close in to the other shore, close to the waterfall, half hid by the cloud of spray. Her decks were out, her machinery useless, the pilot sat listlessly watching the compass, the steamers hung limp at the masts, and music and shoutings were unheard. Then a low whisper came unto me, like a roar, and said, "Trust not to winds, for they are not reliable; nor to steam, for fires go out, or boilers burst; nay! nor to science, for its powerless here, where mere intellect ends; nor to gold, for it is a little, and see the grandeur of souls when self-reliant!" I looked, and saw the bold swimmer His eye was set upon the vast sheet of falling water. I thought his face looked paler as he neared the boiling, seething cataract. His lips moved, I bend my ear and catch these words: "O, Father, in thine infinite wisdom thou hast placed this awful barrier between thy rest, and vanity, to try men's souls! I know this not; but this power of will can pass this awful abyss!" I have sought thee, even to the very mouth of this stream, where it widens and frittors itself away into swamps, endless sands, and deserts wild, and peopled with unclean things, loathsome lizards, toads and reptiles roil in filth, and hiss and vomit poison upon the ceaseless night; but I found no peace there, and thinner in my weakness, I have striven for thee all these long ages! And now, even when the stream in its purity is a roaring torrent—even here—where I had thought I should find the grand old ocean of rest, I find instead this awful barrier to affright and turn me back. But I will not turn back! I have done my best! I have not sent the needy away empty! I have kept silent when I could not use good words! I have wept with the sorrowing, and have not laughed at the follies of man! I have always opened my mouth against the unjust, and looked with contempt upon wealth and its power! The poor and unfortunate I have never shunned, nor, as the chief priests, driven from synagogues. I have not forgotten the merit and demerit of acts, and in my weakness have I ever drawn thy strength to me in need, by heartfelt, soul-crying prayer! I know, I know, that in spite of all I can do, I lay hold on thee—not as vain boasters of scientific attainments do—but in my ignorance and weakness I trust in thee, as I have ever trusted in the good and pure. Father, to thee I come!"

And the spray and the rainbows and the gathering shadows took him in from my sight. A shrill whirl from the steamer called me from my soul musings, to the steaming room of the engine, as she passed on her way down the stream again. As she swept past where I sat, numerous bands of music accompanied with many voices, were chanting a mournful dirge:

"Man must return from thence he came,
There's no escape, so down, down 'tis glide.
All things are pure—to God the same;
In muck and crystal truths reside.
Nor will we dream of crystal shore
Beyond the range of knowledge gained;

heavy heads at me, while night birds and chirping insects told me 'twas time for sleep. For many days and nights I longed and prayed and waited for the sequel to this strange vision. At last, one day, then hours and years and years of the ceaseless struggle against the rushing tide of numberless cares, I wandered away and fought one lone grave, where I had laid a little head with golden hair, with dimpled hands clasped upon her bosom, and little feet which had trod the rude and thorny paths of life with me for but a brief season—and then I laid my head among the grass which grew over her angel form. I longed to have done with the struggle and doubt of existence. I was tired, and asked, as many, oh! how many, have asked ere now, for rest.

Then the stars found me, and when I was loth to go, and in my agony asked why I could not die then and sleep there with the congregated dead, a voice seemed to say, "Coward! Are you afraid to live, what you know that you are not at the helm? Do you not see the constant interference of God's wrath on every hand, waiting to vomit fire and blood any moment? You have one talent! Do you want to bury it? As you bury that, and ashes for bread you feel and know it, so do you bury yourself, and call to yourself the elements of discord and unrest, at which you complain. Do you wish for encouragement? Then see yourself once more!"

Immediately I was sitting on the crest of the mountain range, down whose precipitous sides rushed that majestic river of which I have spoken. Clouds rolled at my feet, obscuring the forest, and the dome of the sky, but not the face of the awful abyss rolled that vast sheet of milk-white water. Above was one vast expanse of ether, unbroken by star, moon, or sun; on the other side from the cataract lay one unbounded expanse of calm, silvery water, out of which poured the river between two great rocks, upon one of which I sat. A soft, mellow light pervaded everywhere, albeit there was not apparent any source of light. Far in the distance countless islands flecked the ocean, as stars the firmament.

I was in raptures. Irresistibly I was impelled to look down the roaring torrent, and while I gazed, the awful cataract seemed to lay upon his back, with his hands folded over his head, motionless, save as he was impelled through the water, upward, by some unseen and unknown power. Gradually he neared the top of the fall, and launched out upon the still ocean. He rests for a moment upon the calm, still waters, and then the ocean heaves and rocks him with a gentle, undulating motion. A smile lights up his pale face for a moment, and then a radiant sun of earth beams upon and shrouds him round about as he leaps to his feet and stands erect upon the heaving waters. "Home at last," breaks from his lips. He dips the water in his hands, and throws it into the air. As it descends it takes form, and clothes him in garments of pearly white, and while I gaze, a beautiful yacht of pearl and rubies, flower shaped, and of all possible colors, seemed to rise from the deep and he stood thereon. Without wind, or other apparent cause of motion, it glided to the rock where on I sat. Stretching out his arms to me, he said: "Come to me, my other half!" I stepped into the boat, and dissolved into him. We were one! Then the whole deep vibrated as a harp. I drank—and my very being was filled with melody of strongest and most ravishing character. I washed my eyes—and as I took drop from the ocean, I saw the holy hosts of seraphs and angels, whose look was ecstacy itself, and thrones, and gods thereon. I looked into the deep, and its depths were filled with coral reefs, and blossomed like flowers of rarest hue, emitting a fragrance at once delightful and life supporting.

We sailed away—the boat and I—wherever I wished, and wherever we went, I found something new. Islands with rare trees, plants and flowers, were there, whose shores glistened with gems, whose brilliancy would burst the sight of mortal man. Mosaics whose walls were built of stone, transparent. Edifices shaped, and positions, not only emitting an odor of rest, but which sounded in the breeze like ten thousand Æolian harps, wherein was no discord, nor dull, monotonous strains.

Valleys with babbling springs and murmuring brooks, with grottoes and arbors grown with meadows, all thronged with laughing, joyous groups of beings who spake and looked only love. Mountains, majestic and grand, upon whose summits were temples overlooking the world. I had but recently left. Clouds came now and then, and voices sounded therefrom, which priests wrote down in books wherein all could read and understand. They told strange stories there, of some who grew dissatisfied with all the vast things, and never returned, and of others coming from the clouds without life, and floated away over the cataract. "To stay here you must be content," said one of wondrous learning. "This is the magic word of which poets have sung, which stands between men and the gods. Some have dwelt here for myriads of ages, and are still content; while others left but a few moments ago, have been here before, but lacking power to go beyond, returned to earth to gain power. Henceforth, you are a dweller of two worlds. To you the clouds speak. To you the lightnings are flashed 'short hand,' which you shall read to many of earth."

I asked: "Is this the final condition of all the good and true, the loving and gentle?"

"No! There is no final. They come and go from here as they do from earth; yet the stay may be longer."

The boat and I—how we sailed, basked, loved and rested,—pen can not tell. The many islands and continents, cities and hamlets, the glorious beings we saw, volumes could not describe—and yet I was not happy. Of all the vast things, there was not one of the lovely females who shared my journey with me. At last, one time as I sailed, a cloud enveloped me and the ocean; as I wondered at a radiant figure, clad in robes of living fire walked upon the water. She looked at me and smiled. Smile is a poor word to describe this one. Her whole being was a smile. If this the smile of a lover, speaking from ligt and eyes, produced ecstacy, what would that be which was the whole being danced with the joys of a love lit eye; where the very garments smiled, sending wave upon wave, thrill after thrill through one's being, making the blood leap like fire in the moment, and then fuse like ice, only to be thawed again into living fire, and at each throb coursing through the worthless materials of one's body, until one melts into the smile with which it is surrounded? Who of earth would you call that? Yet this and more have I seen and felt. I fell gasping and fainting upon my knees, with outstretched arms, for her to come to me. She approached and said: "Not now, my darling! The ways of earth are for you for a season. Go open the gates of hell—so gilded and brilliant with gold—and let the bond go free. Teach that liberty and love are one. Be the patient toiler against the loves of nature and art. Remember me, for I am thine! I am the Gate of Light!" And then the vision was gone. My head was lying amid the dew-wet grass on the grave of my little dead May, and the marble monuments of the dead were looking, ghost-like, out of the gloom of night at me.

—All that belongs to a man will eventually come to him, on the condition that he shall live the life of a true man.

—To live is to love, and to love is to live. He lives most who loves most, since love and life are one. Cast love out of thy heart, and you shall "pronounce all men liars." Cast out hate, and you shall find little else to deplore.

—Next to "Gnothi Seauton," or "know thyself," is "Crake Seauton," or "conquer thyself; have dominion over thyself."

—Beware, of hate. It brings the clouds over the sky. Love lighteth up the heart, the reason, and the pathway of life.

—"From Natural Graef?" Yes. He that lives with Nature, shall abound in graces of both body and mind; but Nature is the cause and grace the effect.—S. A. Merrill.

Voices from the People.

CLARENCE, MO.—A. O. Dunham writes:—I think I can safely say that my efforts for the spread of the good cause, though feeble, have not altogether been in vain. Of late, we have been having some very interesting communications in our circle, which, as a number of persons who have witnessed them have become somewhat interested, and seem to manifest a desire to investigate the subject. There are a few liberal minds in this place who dare to assert their opinions irrespective of what popular opinion or orthodoxy may say to the contrary. I think at this time, with a little missionary or efficient lecturing labor in this portion of the state, there could be an interest awakened in behalf of the cause of Spiritualism that would be of lasting benefit to many. Your "Search after God" is going to be an eye-opener to many. I read with no little interest the many letters of correspondents on the subject, and, like some others, feel anxious to see the solution of the subject or question. If combined spiritual human intelligence make worlds or planets and evolve them in space, and it being necessary to the life of man that vegetables and animals should exist prior to man's existence, how was the first planet produced?

Remarks:—Read our articles carefully, and you will find a solution to your questions.

CASTALIA, IOWA.—L. S. Maynard writes.—I see my subscription is out, and can not well do without the paper, as it is rich with mental and spiritual food. Those articles from the "Exan," "The Mound Builders," were very interesting to me. I was very sorry to learn that the "Brinsley College Jars" was forcibly taken from the holder. Can not really believe that it was done to be a demonstration of spirit power, to right past wrongs, and demonstrate to skeptical minds beyond a doubt that they did interfere sometimes with the things of earth again. Why was the jar to be kept sixty days,—only to be afraid exposure of calm, silvery water, out of which poured the river between two great rocks, upon one of which I sat. A soft, mellow light pervaded everywhere, albeit there was not apparent any source of light. Far in the distance countless islands flecked the ocean, as stars the firmament.

I was in raptures. Irresistibly I was impelled to look down the roaring torrent, and while I gazed, the awful cataract seemed to lay upon his back, with his hands folded over his head, motionless, save as he was impelled through the water, upward, by some unseen and unknown power. Gradually he neared the top of the fall, and launched out upon the still ocean. He rests for a moment upon the calm, still waters, and then the ocean heaves and rocks him with a gentle, undulating motion. A smile lights up his pale face for a moment, and then a radiant sun of earth beams upon and shrouds him round about as he leaps to his feet and stands erect upon the heaving waters. "Home at last," breaks from his lips. He dips the water in his hands, and throws it into the air. As it descends it takes form, and clothes him in garments of pearly white, and while I gaze, a beautiful yacht of pearl and rubies, flower shaped, and of all possible colors, seemed to rise from the deep and he stood thereon. Without wind, or other apparent cause of motion, it glided to the rock where on I sat. Stretching out his arms to me, he said: "Come to me, my other half!" I stepped into the boat, and dissolved into him. We were one! Then the whole deep vibrated as a harp. I drank—and my very being was filled with melody of strongest and most ravishing character. I washed my eyes—and as I took drop from the ocean, I saw the holy hosts of seraphs and angels, whose look was ecstacy itself, and thrones, and gods thereon. I looked into the deep, and its depths were filled with coral reefs, and blossomed like flowers of rarest hue, emitting a fragrance at once delightful and life supporting.

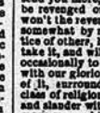
We sailed away—the boat and I—wherever I wished, and wherever we went, I found something new. Islands with rare trees, plants and flowers, were there, whose shores glistened with gems, whose brilliancy would burst the sight of mortal man. Mosaics whose walls were built of stone, transparent. Edifices shaped, and positions, not only emitting an odor of rest, but which sounded in the breeze like ten thousand Æolian harps, wherein was no discord, nor dull, monotonous strains.

Valleys with babbling springs and murmuring brooks, with grottoes and arbors grown with meadows, all thronged with laughing, joyous groups of beings who spake and looked only love. Mountains, majestic and grand, upon whose summits were temples overlooking the world. I had but recently left. Clouds came now and then, and voices sounded therefrom, which priests wrote down in books wherein all could read and understand. They told strange stories there, of some who grew dissatisfied with all the vast things, and never returned, and of others coming from the clouds without life, and floated away over the cataract. "To stay here you must be content," said one of wondrous learning. "This is the magic word of which poets have sung, which stands between men and the gods. Some have dwelt here for myriads of ages, and are still content; while others left but a few moments ago, have been here before, but lacking power to go beyond, returned to earth to gain power. Henceforth, you are a dweller of two worlds. To you the clouds speak. To you the lightnings are flashed 'short hand,' which you shall read to many of earth."

I asked: "Is this the final condition of all the good and true, the loving and gentle?"

"No! There is no final. They come and go from here as they do from earth; yet the stay may be longer."

The boat and I—how we sailed, basked, loved and rested,—pen can not tell. The many islands and continents, cities and hamlets, the glorious beings we saw, volumes could not describe—and yet I was not happy. Of all the vast things, there was not one of the lovely females who shared my journey with me. At last, one time as I sailed, a cloud enveloped me and the ocean; as I wondered at a radiant figure, clad in robes of living fire walked upon the water. She looked at me and smiled. Smile is a poor word to describe this one. Her whole being was a smile. If this the smile of a lover, speaking from ligt and eyes, produced ecstacy, what would that be which was the whole being danced with the joys of a love lit eye; where the very garments smiled, sending wave upon wave, thrill after thrill through one's being, making the blood leap like fire in the moment, and then fuse like ice, only to be thawed again into living fire, and at each throb coursing through the worthless materials of one's body, until one melts into the smile with which it is surrounded? Who of earth would you call that? Yet this and more have I seen and felt. I fell gasping and fainting upon my knees, with outstretched arms, for her to come to me. She approached and said: "Not now, my darling! The ways of earth are for you for a season. Go open the gates of hell—so gilded and brilliant with gold—and let the bond go free. Teach that liberty and love are one. Be the patient toiler against the loves of nature and art. Remember me, for I am thine! I am the Gate of Light!" And then the vision was gone. My head was lying amid the dew-wet grass on the grave of my little dead May, and the marble monuments of the dead were looking, ghost-like, out of the gloom of night at me.



—All that belongs to a man will eventually come to him, on the condition that he shall live the life of a true man.

—To live is to love, and to love is to live. He lives most who loves most, since love and life are one. Cast love out of thy heart, and you shall "pronounce all men liars." Cast out hate, and you shall find little else to deplore.

—Next to "Gnothi Seauton," or "know thyself," is "Crake Seauton," or "conquer thyself; have dominion over thyself."

—Beware, of hate. It brings the clouds over the sky. Love lighteth up the heart, the reason, and the pathway of life.

—"From Natural Graef?" Yes. He that lives with Nature, shall abound in graces of both body and mind; but Nature is the cause and grace the effect.—S. A. Merrill.

REDFIELD, IOWA.—Wm. H. H. Brown writes: The JOURNAL is doing great good. It is the best paper in the world. The "Search after God" is decidedly rich—it pleases me well.

BALLSTON SPA, N. Y.—J. W. Foster writes.—Am doing all I can to increase the circulation of the JOURNAL. There is a great call for the numbers containing the "Search after God." I have circulated my papers as fast as I have received them. May your subscription list continue to grow until it numbers more names than the petition you sent to your legislature last winter. That was a noble act on your part.

PARIS, ILL.—R. B. Kaufman writes.—Your valuable paper comes to hand freighted with food for the hungering spirit, and I do not know how I should be able to do without it, although I do not always agree with all of the articles. Of late I receive through my own organism; but I need it for its variety of valuable essays on various subjects connected with the philosophy of life, its messages from the inner life, its records of events transpiring and phenomena occurring in the basic principles of Spiritualism, its bold and honorable course in defending true mediums, and exposing fraud and humbug in mediumistic pretenders, and, last and more, make it a necessary article of weekly consumption to the spiritual part of the dual being. The "Search after God" is to me a matter of the deepest interest and instruction, and I hope Brother Francis will eventually find somethings to have the love and adoration of intelligent beings. There is also another article in the paper which has interested me much, "Who are they?" Why, I am one, but not willingly, and hope soon to be able to say that my account is settled. I hope you will pardon me for being silent so long—not even acknowledging the great favor you have done me by sending me the first numbers of the JOURNAL so long at your expense. But I had thought to be able to remit some,—so put off writing from week to week, until now I am able to send you a part of my indebtedness, and hope soon to send you more, and hope by the end of the year to be revenged on you by paying in advance, and won't the revenge be sweet? Have tried to atone somewhat for my neglect in the paper, to the notice of others, have succeeded in inducing a few to take it, and will do all I can in the future. I speak occasionally to my neighbors on subjects connected with our glorious philosophy, but have a hard time of it, surrounded by a horde of preconceived ideas of religionists who misrepresent, misconstrue and slander without stint. But none of these things move me, and by the aid of the angel world, will go on and do battle in the cause of truth. Outside of my own family there are none who openly profess themselves Spiritualists in our immediate neighborhood, but often go to the quiet home of my friend and father in the spiritual gospel—Dr. J. Curl, of Paris—which is four miles from my residence—where I always enjoy a season of rest, and become strengthened anew for the battles of life. Excuse me for this long trespassing on your valuable time. Please find inclosed two dollars to pay on arrears, and hope soon to send you more. May the angels bless and reward you, is my fervent wish.

BRENHAM, TEXAS.—A. O. Martin, M. D., writes.—Never have I been half so interested in a subject as I am in the "Search after God," and just to think all the readers of the JOURNAL are enjoying such a glorious feast of science, philosophy and common sense. I hope when Mr. Francis sees him, he will not be making a breech presentation.

PORTLAND, ME.—F. Hatch writer.—The remark has often been made by your correspondents that your "Search after God" is truly worth the whole price of the paper for a year, but in adding anything of other valuable information inserted, and the writer of the same deserves great credit in making it what it is. Your paper is a welcome visitor to our home, and I have no desire to have it is with all others, also, unless they wish to discard the truth, which none should do. Owing to manual labor at present, my writing is poor, but I have your money here to send, and will shortly have a clear conscience and your paper, which is worth more than money. Thus we will go on the great highway of progress together, doing all the good we can, and I trust that many readers will take a common sense God he can stop his "Search," for I think such a God will give common sense beings good satisfaction.

BEAVER DAM, WIS.—Wm. A. Hitchcock writes.—Enclosed find inclosed fifty cents for one trial number. I feel that this one and the other I sent you will be permanent subscribers. God bless the JOURNAL, and the brother in the "Search after God."

PLUM HOLLW, IOWA.—L. Whitley writes.—My father says he will not do without the JOURNAL so long as one remains to be had. I read it with deep interest, especially the "Search after God" and other scientific articles.

PORTLAND, OREGON.—J. W. Peters writes.—I find the JOURNAL such an expounder of abstruse subjects that I feel like introducing it to some of my neighbors.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.

Report of the Seventh Convention held at Sutton, May 5th, 6th, and 7th, 1871.

Mr. William H. Marshall, President, and Mrs. S. L. Craig, Secretary, both of Sutton. Although it rained hard the first day, it did not prevent a successful commencement. On the 1st two days, the weather being fair, the meeting-house where it was held, was well filled with people.

The Speakers were Mrs. Sawyer, of Manchester, Mrs. Sturtevant, of Bradford, Mrs. Withee, Mrs. Craig L. Dean, of Warner, and Miss Harvey and F. Chase, of Sutton.

We had the best of music by Mrs. Sawyer and by the Sutton Choir.

There was chosen a committee on resolutions, but only two resolutions were considered; one relating to the equality of trance and normal speakers, and the other recommending free and independent conventions. The last one was voted down, and the first one the committee refused to report at all—the committee happened to be composed of four trance mediums. The speaking generally was excellent, and the Convention a success.

There was nothing in the speaking particularly new, except in a paper read by F. Chase on What is God. I send you, this, Mr. Editor, to add to the already large stock of "Gods" which you now have on hand.

INVOCATION

Heavenly Father, accept our grateful thanks for teaching us what God is. We desire and pray that we may be enabled to explain to this people, in a manner brief and easily to be understood. We pray for the Great Spirit of Universal Intelligence to overshadow us at this time, to elucidate, and to understand. We pray that we all may be enabled to understand what a principle is and the necessity of worshiping God as a principle.

WHAT IS GOD?

In undertaking to handle this mighty subject, we have not time to review the various ideas of God which have obtained credence by mankind, and this is unnecessary, for it is constantly being done by the various teachers of the world. Nor do we propose to fritter away time by a long harangue about what God is not, and so leave your minds befogged and mystified more than when we began. But we intend to tell squarely what God is.

Again, there are those who think it not necessary or possible for us to know what God is. In answer to such we have only to say, that the world is full of erroneous and false teachings about God, and his ways, and that it is a necessity for mankind to have some idea of what God is, and the only way to uproot or eradicate false and pernicious belief, is to teach higher and more positive truth.

God is Principle, Intelligence, Wisdom, Love, Law, Order, Spirit, Mercy, Justice, Beauty, Harmony, and all other necessary law principles. The Great, Overruling, Intelligent Powers of the Universe, established these principles, worship them, and abide by them, and bid us do the same; for in not the human mind the same in substance as the highest intelligence of the Universe?

We will lay down a few propositions that have obtained the sanction of the best minds, and we might adduce argument in support of them, but have not time in this connection, because we must confine our attention to the subject now under definite consideration. All things undergo various changes, mutations and transformations, but the best scientific mind will sustain us in the statement.

1st.—That the elements of things always existed, and never will cease to exist, as elements.

2nd.—That two general classifications of things exist, and never will cease, viz., mind and matter.

3rd.—That mind or spirit, has outwrought upon matter to produce those wise results which we see everywhere going on around us.

4th.—That which we designate by the general name of goodness, is a definite result sought and obtained by general laws or regulations, by an intelligent power, by which things are reduced to order and reciprocal use; and that evil is simply lack of order, the same as darkness is the absence of light.

We have heard it said that order was Heaven's first law.

Christ said, if ye love me keep my commandments, and strive to be perfect as those great principles which your father hath established, are perfect.

The revelator said, do not worship me, but worship God.

Take one of the Principles of Nature, Progression, and by which we all understand that things are growing better every day, and trace it back to its source, and what do we find but chaos and confusion, in the beginning of the present order of things. And how is it that we have the present harmony in nature, and upon what ground do we base expectations of happiness on earth or elsewhere. On law or order, is, and must be, the answer.

Take an earthly government for example—what is it that we as citizens of the United States, should worship and respect above everything else, if it is not those great principles of our own government, liberty, etc. We can entertain a proper respect for President Grant, Judge Chase, and other ones, the founders and defenders of our system, but, it is necessary, and the perpetuity of our institutions depends upon it, that we worship those great principles upon which our liberties depend, and teach our children to worship them.

The real statesman will tell you, that upon the principles of law and order depend the prosperity of a nation; and that without it, anarchy and confusion will be the inevitable result; it is the same in the constitution of the Universe.

The scientist knows that all things are the result of fixed laws or principles. The mechanic and the farmer, and indeed all trades and professions, recognize the omnipotence of Nature's laws.

Who established, and who maintains those laws or principles? Answer, All the good and wise intelligences of the universe, whether existing on this earth or elsewhere, and everything that grows or exists, has been the result of definite thought and arrangement; same as the present mechanical status of the world represents the best idea of the race of mankind; same as the principles of government have been studied and transferred from one age and nation to another, in what is called the principles of common law. The Principles of Nature are the common law principles of the Universe.

Those mighty spirits or in[illegible] the present order of things, o[illegible]

[illegible] us conceive o[illegible] the universe as constituti[illegible] republic, and that in their united w[illegible] beneficence they have instituted laws and principles, the exact observance of which by all, results in the greatest good to all; and in those principles we have embodied what is God.

Have you never felt arising in the soul involuntary worship for wisdom, or goodness, or order, or harmony, or love, or some or all of those great principles by which every good thing is sustained.

Those heart-felt emotions for beauty, art, order, beneficence, wisdom and love are the true and natural worship of God, and now what will be the practical effect on mankind, when God is worshiped as a principle.

War will become of the infallibility of popes, or the divine right of kings; of despotic rule of man over man in every form.

Special legislation will be sure to go overboard from the ship of state, when God is worshiped as a principle.

When Wisdom and Justice are recognized as supreme, the sexes will stand on equal ground politically, and the right man or woman will be elected to office.

When order and harmony reign supreme, there will be no more war. When love and wisdom prevail, evil, which is simply ignorance and lack of principle, will be entirely dispensed with, and death and hell will deliver up the morally dead which pretend to believe in them.

There's not a star whose brilliant light
Illumes some distant earth,
Or cheers the solemn gloom of night,
But Goodness gave it birth.

There's not a cloud whose dews distill
Upon the parching clod,
And clothes with verdure vale and hill,
That is not sent by God.

There's not a place in earth's vast round—
In ocean deep or air,
Where skill and wisdom are not found;
For God rules everywhere.

Around, beneath, below, above,
Wherever space extends,
All heaven displays a boundless love,
And power and goodness blends.

Letter from George Watt.

DEAR JOURNAL:—As my time has about expired that I have paid for the JOURNAL, enclosed find $3.00. I wish I could send you many more subscribers. I have taken a new plan to circulate the JOURNAL. After I have read it (which is food for my spiritual system), being a tailor and clothier, I wrap the JOURNAL about my packages, and tell all to read it. I have done so with preachers and people for some time, and I expect the fruit of this will appear before long by being able to send you a number of subscribers.

Augusta, Ill.

REMARKS:—Brother, we most heartily approve your independence. You will lose nothing by it. People like an honest, independent free thinker. If our people were generally as independent and outspoken as yourself (even avoiding offensive language, yet firm and conscientious), they would find opposers would respect them and the cause they advocate. How many there are who hide their JOURNAL away for fear a neighboring church-member will see it on their table! Slightly weak in the knees

"A Story of Life in its True Features."

REBECCA;
A WOMAN'S SECRET.

BY MRS. CAROLINE FAIRFIELD CORBIN;

AUTHOR OF "UNCLE TIMOTHY;" OR OUR BIBLE CLASS.'

12mo. 440 pages.

Real Life unfolded in a story of great beauty and power. Society sifted—the good and bad shown in fearful contrast; woman as she is, and for what she was designed; man as he is, and for what he was designed. Society, or men and women made for each other; "set in families," after the Divine order.

A pure and noble inspiration breathes from every page of the book, and its moral tone is all that the most fastidious critic can desire.

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

A Bachelor and a Baby.
The Lion and the Mouse.
Woman's Wit.
About Money-Lending.
A Woman who was not Strong-Minded.
Business versus Love-Making.
"They Twain shall be One Flesh."
Some Ideas Concerning a Woman's Sphere.
Hysterics.
An Old Man's Dream.
The Making of Men.
The Silent Shrew. T
Chiefly Metaphysical.
Hysterics—Male Species.
A Deed Without a Name.
Hen-Pecked.
From Jerusalem to Jericho.
An Embarrassed Lover.
A Chapter which Weak-Minded Persons are Advised to Skip.
A Motherless Child and a Childless Mother.
The Incapables.
Among the "Vines."
Miss Ridalbuber's Summer Bonnet.
A Professional Visit.
The First Law of Courtship.
Joel's Secret.
How Mrs. Morse Paid the Doctor.
A Man's Love.
The Right of a Woman to have a Husband.
The Verdict of the Sewing Circle
The Right of a Man to Whip his Wife.
The Ark of the Lord in Tabernacles.
The Power that is Stronger than Love.
A Love that was Free.
The Flower of the Ages.
Our Best Society.
A Sacrifice for the Public Good.
Two Equal Souls; one round, perfected Whole.
The Penitence that Walketh in Darkness; the Destruction that Wasteth at Noonday.

 Price $1.75; postage, 24 cents. For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 South Clark st., Chicago.

THE CAREER
OF THE
CHRIST-IDEA IN HISTORY.

A COMPANION VOLUME TO

"THE CAREER OF THE GOD-IDEA."

BY HUDSON TUTTLE.

CONTENTS.

I Introductory; II Career of the Christ-Idea in Hindostan and among other Races; III Prophecies of the Advent of Jesus; IV Conception and Genealogy; V Birth of Jesus; VI John the Baptist—his relation to Jesus; VII The sermon on the Mount; VIII Miracles; IX Going forth the Apostles; X The fatal journey; XI Death and Resurrection; XII The Descent into Hell XIII The Gospels; XIV Resume of the Life and Character of Jesus; XV Causes of the Extension of Christianity; XVI The ultimate of the Christ-Idea.

Price $1.25. Postage 16 cents.
The demand for these both in the
For sale

MEDIUMS' DIRECTORY.

The Religio-Philosophical Journal being an especial friend to all true mediums, will hereafter publish a complete Directory, giving the place of all professional mediums who will favor us with their address. This will afford better facilities for investigators to learn of the location of mediums, and at the same time increase their patronage. Mediums will do well to advise us from time to time, that we may keep their place of residence correctly registered.

☞ It is lamentable fact that some mediums so forget their self respect as to speak evil of other mediums, not frequently even of those who are for their support. The names of such persons will be dropped from this Register so soon as we have evidence conclusive of their indulging in such unkindness.

It should be borne in mind that individuals visiting mediums carry conditions with themselves—so to speak—which aid or destroy the power of spirits to control the medium visited; hence it is that one medium gives satisfaction to certain persons, another better to others—all having their virtues, and [illegible] so, too, and all equally honest and earnest in their pursuits.

CHICAGO.

Mrs Ettie Brown, 126 W. Washington St.
Dr. W. Cleveland, 80 West Harrison St.*
Mrs. A. Crocker, 170 W. Madison St.*
Dr. D. G. Dake, 211 Wabash Ave., Chicago.*
Dr. R. Dwyer, 232 West Madison St. Chicago
Dr. L. P. Greg, 232 W. Madison street, cor. Fourth.*
Mrs. Jorgenson, Parlors 28 and 29 Honore Block ‡
Mrs Lovering.*
Dr. J. T. Lewis and wife, 76 Third Ave.*
Dr. S. L. McFadden and Wife, 342 W. Madison St.*‡
Mrs. Norgrove, 126 South St.
Mrs. A. D. Robinson, 148 Fourth Avenue *‡
Mrs. M. Smith, 161 S. Clinton St.*
Dr. Sargent, 74 Third Ave.*
Dr. R. S. Sherman and Wife, 206 South Clark St.*†
Dr. Samuel Underhill, 180 S. Clark street.*
Mrs. E. T. Vliet, 263 Indiana Ave.*‡
Dr. J. Wilbur, 150 W. Randolph St.*
A. D. Willis, Cor. Clark & Madison st.*
Mrs. M. S Weeks, Room 20 Crosby's Opera House Block, Chicago. ‡

BOSTON.

Dr. H. B. Storer.*†
Mrs. Julia M. Friend, 116 Harrison Ave.
Mrs. S. J. Stickney, 833 Tremont St.
Dr. N. Frank Wiswall, 14 Ave.*
Mrs. A. C. Latham, 302 Washington St.
Freeman Match, 3 Seaver Place.
Mrs. M. A. (Doctress) Curry, 31.*
Mrs. Marshall, 30 Edinboro St.
W. H. Munier, 170 W. Springfield street. ‡
Mrs. J. Gleason, 27 Dover St.*
Mrs. M. M. Hardy, 138 W. Concord St.‡
Samuel Grover, 28 Dix Place.
Mrs. J. D. Mosier, 291 Tremont St.‡
B. C. Littlejohn, 26 Hanson street, Boston, Mass.

PHILADELPHIA.

Mrs. S. A. Anthony, S. E. Cor. of 7th and Catharine
D. S. Carpenter, 1005 Race St.
Mrs. H. J. French, 1336 Ridge Ave.
Mrs. A. Goodfellow, 612 Heberprise St.
Mrs. J. J. Mean, 240 Spring Garden st.*‡
Katie B. Robinson 2:32 Brandywine St.
Mrs. Reynolds, 1012 Parrish St.
Mrs. H. Seifrid, 1048 Hanover St.
Mrs. Taylor, 506 North 10th St.
Mrs. Stoddard, 2108 Mt Vernon St.
DeWitt C. Hough, 2108 Mt. Vernon St.‡

NEW YORK CITY.

Jennie Danforth, 64 Lexington Ave.*
Miss Blanch Foley, 694 Third Ave.
Mrs. H. Seymour, 146 Bleeker St.
Mrs. J. Gaston, 317 E. 8th St.
J. William Van Namee, 430 Fourth Ave.*‡

BLOOMINGTON, ILL.

Mrs. Helen Grover.
Mrs. M. E. Gilchell, 413 N. Main St. ‡
Dr. Mary Lewis, Bloomington, Ill.‡

BYRONE CITY, N. J.

Mrs. R. Wallis.

GREEN GARDEN ILL

Mrs. Gilkins.*‡

GENESEE, WIS.

Mrs. E. W. Belcom. *‡
Mrs. F. A. Logan.*

ROCKFORD, ILL.

Samuel Smith, Box 1231, Rockford, Ill. *
Mrs. M. J. Gilson. S. Rockford, Ill. ‡

SAN FRANCISCO.

Wm. H. Hatch, 128 Kearney St.

ST. CHARLES, ILL.

Mrs. Leonard Howard.*‡
D. P. Kayner, M. D.*

SAN JOSE, CAL.

Mrs. Mary E. Beech.

WHITEWATER, WIS.

Mrs. A. B. Severance.*‡

MISCELLANEOUS.

Mrs. Orvis Abbott, Minneapolis, Minnesota. *
Little Annie, Outer Rapids Iowa. ‡
Jonathan Allen, Ottawa, Ill.
Lucinda Atwood, Lake Mills, Wis.
Miss M. A. Aphlett Dayton, Ohio.*
D. Atkinson, Marietta, Ohio ‡
Mrs. Jennie Adams, Box 1196, Kansas City, Mo.*
Mrs. B. A. Blair, 306 Ridge st., Salem, Mass. ‡
Dr. M. Beeler, Wilmington, Stage Co., Ill.*
M. M. Cannon, 106 Bank street, Newark, N. J.*
Mrs. J. F. Carrier, Cincinnati, Ohio.*
J. W. Ellis, Atlanta, Ga.*
Mrs. E. H. Everett, Springfield, Mo. ‡
David S. Fuller, Davenport, Iowa. *‡
Alonzo Fairchild, Schoeciady, N. Y. *
J. B. Fyrette, Dyerson, N. Y.‡
Dr. B. W. Freeman, 116 Leigh st, Columbus, Ohio. *
Mrs. Wm. L. Gay, Canastota, New York. *
Dr. J. M. Holland, No. 6 Upper Broadway, Council Bluffs Iowa.*
Judge D.L. Hay, Mobile, Alabama.
D. A. Hamilton, Beloit, Wis.*
Dr. B. Heal, 62 Whitehall St., Atlanta, Ga.*
Mrs. Jennie Ferris, Traveling. †
Minnie Lafayette, Traveling. †
Mr. & Mrs. C. H. Loland, Myrtlesville, Mass. †
J. H. Nolan, Waterville, N. Y. ‡
Mrs. Nellie Nelson, Kalamazoo, Mich.*
Dr. Abbe Lord Palmer, New Boston, Ill. *†
Mrs Nellie Pine, S with Bend Ind. *
Mrs. A. E. Robbins Terre Haute, Ind.
N. B. Starr, Fort Huron, Mich. *
A. B. Severance and Mrs. J. B. Severance. M. D. 497 Milwaukee street, Milwaukee, Wis.*‡
Mrs. P.W. Stephens, east side of 4th street, between I & J, Sacramento
H. B. Storman, Gobanna, Ohio. ‡
Annie C. Torrey, Houston, Texas. ‡
M. C. Vander Cook, Allegan, Michigan.
Dr. A. B. Severance, 24 Bellevue Block, Cleveland, Ohio.
J. W. Kenyon, Watertown, Wis.
Isaac Jackson Sloan, Covington, Ind. ‡
A. Thomas, Lyndon Station, Ohio. *‡
Warren Wight, Waterloo, Seneca Co., N. Y. *

* Healer.
† Spirit Artists.
‡ Psychometrists.
§ Business and Test.
‖ Writing and Drawing.
¶ Answering Sealed Letters.
♀ Solemnizing Marriages and Attending Funerals.

Exeter Hall! Exeter Hall!

HAVE YOU READ EXETER HALL

THE following are extracts from a few of the notices of Exeter Hall, the Theological Romance:—

"The plot and passion in Exeter Hall show an experienced hand in their delineation. Exeter Hall proves that the author has something to say and knows how to say it."—[Public Opinion, London, England.

"It is indeed a wonderful book."—[New York Mail.

"We commend it to the widest popular approval."—[Banner of Light, Boston.

"We have no hesitation in declaring this a great work."—[Universe, New York.

"The book is well and powerfully written. . . . The most scorching work ever published in America since the 'Age of Reason.'"—[Liberal, Chicago.

"One of the most exciting romances of the day."—[Democrat's Magazine, New York.

"Constantly illustrative of the errors of Theology. —[Investigation, Boston.

"The humane and charitable tendencies of the book must receive the approbation of every friend of humanity."—[Daily Telegraph, Toronto, Canada.

Price, 60 cents. Postage, 4 cents.

For sale, wholesale and retail, by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 187 & 189 South Clark st. Chicago.

LIFE IN THE BEYOND.

BENJAMIN PEIRCE, an Underwood Spirit's History, Francis H. Smith, Medium. Price, 10 cents. For sale at this office.

Speaker's Register.

We are sick of trying to keep a standing Register of Meetings and list of speakers without a hearty co-operation on the part of those most interested.

Mr. HERMANTOWN we shall register such meetings and speakers as are furnished to us BY THE PARTIES INTERESTED with a pledge on their part that they will keep us posted in regard to changes; and in addition to this, EXPRESS indicate a willingness to aid in the circulation of the Journal, both by words AND DEEDS.

Let us be prompt, then, all who accept this proposition and we will do our part faithfully.

J. Madison Allen, Ancora, N. J.
G. Pamela Allyn, Stoneham, Mass.†
Dr. H. Asely, 194 south Clara st., Chicago.
Addie L. Ballou. Address Chicago, care of RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL.*†
Sophia Bowles, Versailles, N. Y.†
Dr. J. H. Bailey, box 394 Laporte Ind *
Mrs. A. D. Barrett, Glen Beulah, Wisconsin.
Mrs. A. P. Brown, 6 J Academy Center, Vt. †
Dr. W. A. D. Bailey, Office 6 Madison st Chicago.†
Hiss Emma Brown, Address 18 West Washington St., Chicago.†
Henry A. Beach, Spring Valley, N. Y.
Mrs. Bell A. Chamberlain, Medford, Minnesota.†
Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Colkins, Green Harbor, Ill.*†
H. T. Child, M. D., 524 Race st., Philadelphia, Pa.*
Mrs. A. H. Colby, Winchester, Randolph Co., Ind.†
F. B. Dowd, Address, Davenport, Iowa.*
Lewis F. Cummings. Address care of the Journal.*
John Corwin, Five Corners, N. Y.
Andrew Jackson Davis, Orange, N. J.
Rev. J. Francis, Ogdensburg, N. Y.
L. H. Garretson, Richland, Iowa.
E. Gerue, Richmond, Ind.
Miss Helen Grover, Bloomington, Ill.
Mrs. M. Hayes, Waterloo, Wis.†
Lyman C. Howe, Fredonia, N. Y. *
Joseph F. Hamilton, Bellaire, Iowa.
Thomas Harding, box 301, Sturgis, Mich.
Samuel Hutchison, Orange, N. J.
U. S. Hamilton, Beloit, Wis.*
Miss M. Lou Hopper, St. Louis, Mo.*
W. H. Holmes, Grass Valley, Cal.
L. D. Hay, Mobile, Ala.†
Dr. Wm. Jamieson, Address him in care of this Office.*
D. F. Kayner, M. D., St. Charles, Ill.‡
L. Lewis, Valparaiso, Ind.
F. H. Lamson, Indianola, Iowa. *
Geo. W. Leak, Nevon Rapids, Mich.*
Wm. F. Lyon, 306 S. Clark St., Chicago.*
Mrs. A. Oliver, Care of Warren Chase, 827 North Fifth Street, St. Louis, Mo.
J. Mansfield, Beville, Ohio.*‡
P. O. Hidden, Forth Worth, Miss.*
Joel Moody, Mound City, Kansas.
J. S. Manley Esq., Vancouver, Washington Territory.
Mrs. M. J. Kendall, Disco, Mich. ‡
Mrs. L. H. Perkins, Kansas City, Mo. ‡‡
Dr. R. Perkins, Kansas City, Mo.
Harriet N. Pool, Morristown, Minn.*
M. s. M. H. Parry, Beloit, Wis. †
J. S. Rhone, Casey, Ill.
Dr. H. P. Fairfield, 19 Court St., Boston, Mass.
Mrs. S. A. Rogers. Address in care of A. J. Grover, Rock Island, Ill.*
Rachael Smith, Rockford, Ill.*
Warren Smith, Alexandria, Madison Co., Ind.*
Job Smyth, Hainsport, N. Y.
Mrs. H. F. Sherman Severance, M. D., Milwaukee, Wis.*‡
Mrs. Laura Cuppy Smith, care of this office, Chicago.
B. W. Stevens, Drawer 45, Janesville, Wis
H. N. Stevens, M. D., 376 S. Clark St., Chicago.*
Mrs. L. A. F. Swain, Union Lake, Rice Co., Minn
D. C. Seymour, Lawrence, Kansas.*
Rachael Smith, Rockford, Ill.*
Mrs. Benjamin Todd, Portland, Oregon.*
Mrs. Sarah M. Thompson, Cleveland, Ohio. *
M. M. Toomey, Lake Mills.
Mrs. R. R. T. Trego, Oil City, Pa.*‡
J. B. Tupper, Jamestown, Wis.*
Hudson Tuttle, Berlin Heights, O.*†
Dr. Samuel Underhill, Toulon, Ill.*
J. William Van Namee, Elmira, N. Y.*
Mrs. M. J. Wilmarth, Care of Journal, Chicago, Ill.*
J. C. Wilkenson & John at Toledo Ohio.*†
R. V. Wilcox, Lombard, Ill.‡
A. B. Whiting, Albion, Mich.*
Elijah Woodworth, Leslie, Mich.
B. S. Wheelock, Blairstown, Iowa —
Mrs. Fanny Wheelock, Blairstown, Iowa.‡
Mrs. Emma Hardinge lectures in London for the next six months. Address 8 Vassall Terrace, Kensington, W., London, England. No unpaid letters received.*†

* Inspirational.
† Trance.
‡ Clairvoyant.
♀ Solemnizing Marriages and Attending Funerals.

UNDERHILL ON MESMERISM.
WITH
Criticisms on its Opponents;
AND A REVIEW OF HUMBUGS AND HUMBUGGERS, WITH PRACTICAL INSTRUCTIONS FOR EXPERIMENTS IN THE SCIENCE—FULL DIRECTIONS FOR USING IT AS A REMEDY IN DISEASE—HOW TO AVOID ALL DANGER.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF ITS CURATIVE POWERS;

How to develop a good Clairvoyant

THE PHILOSOPHY OF
SEEING WITHOUT EYES.

THE PROOFS OF IMMORTALITY DERIVED FROM THE UNFOLDING OF MESMERISM—EVIDENCE OF MENTAL COMMUNION WITHOUT SIGHT OR SOUND, BETWEEN BODIES FAR APART IN THE FLESH—COMMUNION OF SAINTS, OR WITH THE DEPARTED.

BY SAMUEL UNDERHILL, M. D., L. L. D.,
LATE PROFESSOR OF CHEMISTRY, ETC., ETC.

Price $1.25. Postage 12 cents. The Trade supplied. Address S. S. Jones, Chicago, Ill.

FLORENCE SEWING MACHINES.

Wm. H. Sharp, & Co., General Agents.
43 Madison Street.

This machine is recommended to any who desire a first-class Family Sewing Machine; and is noted for its quiet, rapid motion, regularity of tension and ease of management. Executes different stitches, and reversible feed-motion—features peculiar to the Florence Machine, and claimed by no other in the world.

Samples and terms to agents furnished on application.

TEN DOLLARS!
($10) GIVEN AWAY!! ($10)

We will give to every one buying a FLORENCE SEWING MACHINE through our House TEN DOLLARS' worth of any of the books advertised in our book-list, or of the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL, or a part of each as a premium or inducement.

The Florence Machine is one of the very best manufactured, and ranges in price from sixty-five dollars to one hundred and fifty.

We will furnish descriptive circulars and samples on application.

We have sold a large number of these machines, and they have given the most perfect satisfaction in every case.

Call on or address:—
RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE,
187 and 189 South Clark street, Chicago.

THE MAGNETIC TREATMENT.

SEND TEN CENTS TO DR. ANDREW STONE, TROY, N. Y., and obtain a large, highly illustrated book on this system of vitalizing treatment.

17 2t 26 tf.

WOOD'S HOUSEHOLD MAGAZINE contains in every number one complete prize story valued at $100. Forty pages of other matter. Only $1. Sold by news-dealers at 10 cents per copy. Splendid premiums. $200 cash to be awarded for prize clubs. Specimen copy free. Address S. S. WOOD, Newburgh, New York.

HOME.

Spirit visitors visiting Chicago, will find a pleasant home at 168, 6th Avenue, on the South side. Only five minutes' walk from the Post-Office.

☞ Good medicine always in attendance.

Artificial Somnambulism.

The author of the above named book, is a philosopher of large experience and great merit.

In this work he treats of the philosophy of mind as demonstrated by practical experiments during the last twenty years. No work has ever been published which so thoroughly demonstrates many popular theories to be unfounded, and fallacious; and at the same time gives a rational theory for phenomena manifested.

Dr. FAHNESTOCK is a thorough believer in spirit communion, and teaches in this work the modus operandi, to a demonstration.

The following is the table of contents of this valuable work.

CHAP. I.—HISTORICAL SURVEY. Mesmer not the discoverer of the state.—His theory of it.—Its examination by the French commissioners.—Their conclusions.—The author's remarks.

CHAP. II.—Of the causes which have retarded the progress of the science.

CHAP. III.—Of the conditions necessary for the production of the somnambulistic state, with instructions how to enter it, etc.: I.—Of the instructor or "operator." II.—Of the patient. III.—Instructions. IV.—Of the sensations experienced by those who enter this state. V.—Of their awaking.

CHAP. IV.—Theory of this state.

CHAP. V.—Of the somnambulic proper sleep. I.—Of a partial state of Artificial Somnambulism.

CHAP. VI.—Pherono-Somnambulism.

CHAP. VII.—Of the perfect I.—Motion; or, the power to move.

CHAP. VIII.—Of the functions of the faculties. I.—Consciousness. II.—Attention. III.—Perception. IV.—Memory. V.—Association. VI. AND VII.—Likes and Dislikes. VIII.—Judgment. IX.—Its animation. X.—Will.

CHAP. IX.—Of the peculiar functions of perception in the different faculties while in a natural state. I.—Of the peculiar functions of perception when in a state of Artificial Somnambulism. II.—The functions considered when in a state of Artificial Somnambulism. 1.—Consciousness. 2.—Attention. 3.—Perception. 4.—Memory. 5.—Association. 6 and 7.—Likes and Dislikes. 8.—Judgment. 9.—Imagination. 10.—Will.

CHAP. X.—Of reading or knowing the mind. I.—Illustration. II.—Illustration. Theory of Dr. Collyer. Mental alchemy or electrifying.

CHAP. XI.—Of the identity of other mysteries with this state. II.—Of the mysteries practiced by the modern magicians of Egypt. III.—Of the "mysteriosophy." IV.—Of the earth mirrors. Fortune-tellers. Second earth glass. V.—Second sight. VI.—Phantasms.

CHAP. XII.—Transposition of the senses.

CHAP. XIII.—Natural sleep.

CHAP. XIV.—Natural Somnambulism. I.—Trance.

CHAP. XV.—Of Catalepsy.

CHAP. XVI.—Presentiment or foreknowledge.

CHAP. XVII.—Of interior provision. II.—Of exterior provision. III.—Prophetic dreams. IV.—Witchcraft.

CHAP. XVIII.—Sympathy. I.—Clairvoyance. Clairvoyance at a distance.

CHAP. XIX.—Of the sense of hearing.

CHAP. XX.—Of the senses of smell and taste.

CHAP. XXI.—Of the sense of feeling.

CHAP. XXII.—Of the sense of motion. Of their physical strength.

CHAP. XXIII.—Of the influence of Artificial Somnambulism on her system. I.—Of its influence upon a healthy subject. II.—Of the influence of Artificial Somnambulism upon diseased subjects.

CHAP. XXIV.—Of Artificial Somnambulism considered as a therapeutic agent.

CHAP. XXV.—Of the kinds of disease cured while in this state. I.—Chorea, or St. Vitus's dance. II.—Epilepsy. III.—Dyspepsia. IV.—Intermittent fever. V.—Fever. VI.—Case. VII.—Inflammatory rheumatism. VIII.—Chronic rheumatism. IX.—Hysteria. X.—Melancholy from unrequited love. XI.—Case. XII.—Case. XIII.—Case. XIV.—Case. XV.—Contraction of the fingers. XV.—Scarlet fever. XVI.—Case. XVII.—Case.

CHAP. XXVI.—Surgical operations.

CHAP. XXVII.—Observations of cases. Conclusion.

This valuable work is for sale at this office, at $1.50 per volume, postage 20 cents. See book list in another column. ☞ The trade supplied on reasonable terms.

The Great MAGNETIC CURE.

SEND FOR CIRCULAR TO DR. E. SMITH, NORMAL, ILLINOIS.

SPIRIT ARTIST.

MRS. E. A. BLAIR, MEDIUM.

Mrs. Blair, one of the most wonderful Spirit Artists in the world (specimens of whose work can be seen in the Reception-Room of the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING House), is now prepared to furnish beautiful specimens of her wonderful power in price from five to one hundred dollars, to suit the purchaser.

It should be borne in mind that Mrs. Blair executes this work when perfectly individual persons (when convenient, before a public audience), and with a rapidity NOT EQUALLED in this sphere of existence.

The manner in which the pictures are executed was published in No. 3, Vol. 9, of the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL.

For beauty of style and artistic finish they cannot be surpassed. They are worthy of a prominent place in the drawing-room or the picture-gallery. Considering that these paintings are positive demonstrations of SPIRIT POWER IN THE FINE ARTS, no SPIRITUALIST should be without one or more of them.

We will receive orders for any priced pictures desired —ranging from five to one hundred dollars. For ten dollars and upward, it will be well for the person sending to send his or her own photograph, that the Spirit Artist may get en rapport with him or her, the better to enable him to execute a more appropriate piece of work, to order.

In sending orders, address S. S. JONES, 189 South Clark St., Chicago, Ill., inclosing the money by a Post Office Money Order, Bank Checks, or Registered Letter.

☞ Frames will be furnished at wholesale prices, when ordered, ranging from one dollar upward, and sent by express to any part of the country.

MRS. F. W. CALKINS,

BUSINESS, TEST, AND HEALING MEDIUM,

Prescribes Medicines for the sick. Spirits communicate through her quite frequently—give name, disease they died with, &c. Satisfaction warranted. Address her, enclosing a lock of hair and two dollars at Green Garden, Will Co., Ill.

Criticism on the THEOLOGICAL IDEA OF DEITY,

Contrasting the Views Entertained of a Supreme Being by the Ancient Grecian Sages, with those of Moses and the Hebrew Writers; and blending Ancient Judaism, Paganism and Christianity into a Common Original.

BY M. B. CRAVEN.

12 mo., 317 pages.—Price, $1.00; postage, 16 cents.

 For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

IS THERE A DEVIL.

The argument pro and con. with an Inquiry into the Origin of Evil, with a review of the popular notions of Hell and Heaven, or the State of the Dead. Price twenty-five cents, postage two cents. For sale at the Religio Philosophical Journal Office, 189 So. Clark Street Chicago.

VI TF 26 tf

REPLY OF WASH. A. DANSKEN, ESQ., PRESIDENT of the First Spiritualist Congregation of Baltimore, to Rev. Thomas R. Bond, M.D. Price, 10 cents; postage, 2 cents. For sale at the office of this paper.

Religio-Philosophical Journal

S. S. JONES, EDITOR, PUBLISHER AND PROPRIETOR.
J. R. FRANCIS, ASSOCIATE EDITOR

Office 187 and 189 South Clark Street.

RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE.

☞ All letters and communications should be addressed S. S. JONES, 189 SOUTH CLARK STREET, CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

CHICAGO, MAY 27, 1871.

TERMS OF THE

Religio-Philosophical Journal.

$3,00 per year, $1,50—6 months, $1,—4mo.

☞ Fifty Cents for Three Months on trial TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS.

In making remittances for subscriptions, always procure a draft on New York, or POST-OFFICE MONEY ORDER, if possible. Where neither of these can be procured, send the money, but ALWAYS TAKE A REGISTERED LETTER. The registering fee has been reduced to FIFTEEN CENTS, and the present registration system has been found by the postal authorities to be virtually an absolute protection against losses by mail. ALL Postmasters are obliged to register letters when requested to do so.

All subscriptions remaining unpaid more than six months, will be charged at the rate of $3.50 per year.

PAPERS are forwarded until an explicit order is received by the Publisher for their discontinuance, and all payment of all arrearages is made, as required by law.

No name ENTERED on the subscription books without the first payment in advance.

SUBSCRIBERS are particularly requested to note the expiration of their subscriptions, and to forward what is due for the coming year, with or without further reminder from this office

NEWSPAPER DECISIONS.

1. Any person who takes a paper regularly from the post-office—whether directed to his name or another's, or whether he has subscribed or not—is responsible for the payment.

2. If a person orders his paper discontinued, he must pay all arrearages, or the publisher may continue to send it, until payment is made, and collect the whole amount,—whether the paper is taken from the office or not.

3. The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers and periodicals from the post-office, or removing and leaving them uncalled for, is PRIMA FACIE evidence of intentional fraud.

LOOK TO YOUR SUBSCRIPTIONS.

Upon the margin of each paper, or upon the wrapper, will be found a statement of the time to which payment has been made. For instance, if John Smith has paid to Dec. 10th, 1870, it will be mailed, "Smith J.—10 Dec.—0." The 0 means 1870. If he has only paid to Dec. 10th, 1869, it would stand thus: Smith J.—10 Dec.—0, or perhaps, in some cases, the last two figures for the year, as 70 for 1870, or 69 for 1869.

☞ Those sending money to this office for the JOURNAL, should be careful to state whether it be a renewal, or a new subscription, and write all proper names plainly.

A SEARCH AFTER GOD.

NUMBER XL.

Will the Orthodox God Vanish like the Orthodox Devil?—Prayer and its Influence—The Prominent Question, "Who Made the First World?"

In the Search that has been inaugurated for the Divine Architect of the Universe, we have endeavored to render our pathway clear, and so present this question, that the mental horizon that surrounds each mind, would contain no clouds to obscure the vision. Long ago, the idea of an orthodox Devil vanished away as a myth, and while the various orthodox churches retained in their code of belief one being whom they called Deity, and whom they could love, they banished the other that they feared. It was indeed a rapid stride in progress, when the various religious denominations eradicated the belief in the existence of a personal Devil,—a being whom they constantly dreaded. In the early days of that eminent divine, Henry Ward Beecher, the lawgiver of an aristocratic congregation—the dispenser of progressive doctrines to wealthy nabobs, who worship God on soft carpets and sing his praise beneath letters covered in gold—he believed in a personal Devil, and it calculated such a doctrine to thoroughly subserve his ministrations. Luther, it is said, threw an inkstand at his Satanic Majesty, and the Savior was tempted by him,—carried by his Lordship to an exceeding high mountain, and then elevated to a prominent position on a steeple, with the request that he cast himself to the ground." In all ages of the world the idea of a personal Devil has been firmly engrafted within the plastic minds of the people. Poor Eve was tempted by him, induced to partake of the forbidden fruit, and do many naughty things, and in consequence thereof, God became terribly excited, and in a fit of anger, cursed her, and compelled her alone to suffer the pangs of childbearing, and finally drove her and his excellency, Adam, from their rural retreat. Now, the Devil has acted as prominent a part in the history of the world as the Lord God or Holy Ghost, so often alluded to in the Bible. Between the God and Devil of the Garden of Eden, our admiration is only excited for the latter. He did not lie to Eve—told her the simple truth, and because she accepted and acted upon his advice, God cursed her. Now, this God conducted himself very foolishly,—exhibited an exceedingly weak, vacillating nature in the vindictiveness he manifested, for it is well-known that he had never even hinted to Eve that she must not partake of the fruit of that tree. From the conversation, however, that took place between her and the serpent, we are induced to believe that Adam had imparted to her a knowledge of the commands of God. His lordship, the Devil, is constantly manifesting his obnoxious presence in the Bible, and therein are unfolded many remarkable doings of his. His treatment of Job, his generalship as manifested in that battle in heaven, and his constant efforts to overthrow the works of God,—gave him, of course, a prominent place in the litgrature of the various churches. Calvin, the founder of a religious sect, used his name more conspicuously than any man who ever lived on the face of the earth, and gave him a prominence that he had not enjoyed for a long time previous. Luther, too, upheld in the assertion that a devil existed, and even asserts that he threw an inkstand at him. Gradually, however, this mischievous personage has been compelled to take a back seat in religious places of worship, and the minister who would dare to insinuate that his lordship is in attendance, examining those present to see whom he could influence, and finally consign to endless torment, would be regarded as a fanatic or a fool. Now the account of the creation is regarded as illustrative of certain events, a mere shadow of a fact without any of its realities, a piously gotten up allegory with no vein of truth bubbling in sweet accents within it, while the history of Job,—the meek, the patient—whom Daniel Webster regarded as a great poet,—is now considered a mere picture, drawn to represent the peculiarities of an eccentric, imaginary being, who was afflicted in various ways on account of his own base infringement of law. It is even now generally admitted that Jesus was never taken upon that exceeding high mountain, or that very tall steeple by his majesty, and, in fact, the belief is rapidly gaining ground that this remarkable personage has no existence whatever; but still the various orthodox churches tenaciously cling to his great archetype, God, and ascribe to him all power. Religious worship now is attended with but little difficulty compared with it many years ago. Ministers then were not only compelled to serve God, but constantly battle with the Devil, hence had a two-fold work to perform. Their arduous duties have been somewhat relieved by banishing the Devil. Now all they are compelled to do is to worship a God, pray to him, sing psalms in honor of him and in his praise, and ask him to bless all food prepared for the use of mortals. In the grand step which the progressive minds of the various orthodox churches have taken, they have banished their ideas of a personal Devil and a lake of fire and brimstone, and now all there remains is their God,—and the time is not far distant when he will vanish also, and nothing remain on which the various churches can rest for a foundation. Progression, grand in rapid strides, sublime in its manifestations, and exalting in its results, has opened the beautiful avenues of free thought and free speech, and sown their seed, and straightway there has sprung therefrom fruitage that has disclosed the mysteries of creation. On all sides, the masses are advancing. Behind them are crumbling ruins, decaying monuments of ignorance and superstition, and the blood of innocent victims, making the moral firmament of the past a hideous night; behind them are wars, murder, the gibbet, the rack, the funeral pile, all that is horrible to contemplate, all caused through the false ideas of the nature of a Deity; behind them are rivers of blood, the groans and agonies of tortured victims, the cry of the widow and the orphan, while priests, under the supposed sanction of the God they worshiped, claimed that the "grace of God," as Paul said, "might abound through lying;" behind them are cities laid in ashes, works of art ruined, and the smiles of peace and love turned into fires of anger, while before them are the retreating shadows of an orthodox Devil and God, and the dawn of a glorious day. As the Devil with the cloven foot, his horns, his sulphur, his fire, his angels, his constant presence, has vanished,—passed away,—and is now regarded as a myth—even so will the God whom humanity worship to-day, soon cease to exist, and man will learn that there is no limit to his progression.

But the Devil has vanished, and will God vanish? Verily, that is the important question. Once the world was shocked when the belief was announced there was no Devil, no destroyer to fear, and now when we make the assertion that there is no Infinite Personal God to answer prayers, none to love, none to bow in holy reverence to, many sensitive minds shudder, and feel that in our hands is a shining blade, keen as a razor, that we have sent to their vitals, to draw therefrom their life-blood, and those who have been accustomed to kneeling in reverential prayer, to seeking their closets for devotion, and uttering fervent supplication, will regard us as an innovator, one who has taken from them the foundation on which their soul rested. Well, let the shock be felt, it must come some time. To those who have been accustomed to kneeling in reverential prayer, we would utter no word of disrespect. We, too, were once accustomed to pray. In our devotion, in the prayers we uttered, in the reverence our soul manifested, we were sincere, but finally, we found that our assistance came from a circle of spirits; that the aid we received was direct from them; that they heard our prayer and the aspirations of our soul, and responded to our many needs. Had we not prayed, and still aspired as we did, those kind, loving friends would have lent us their aid, and the result would have been the same. Prayers are generally for self-aggrandizement. The prayers that are uttered are understood for self,—to benefit principally the one who utters them,—to exalt him in the scale of existence, and while the request is made to bless all humanity,—we aim to influence a God who is infinitely wise. Prayers, which in many instances are useful in unfolding the soul and unfettering the aspirations thereof—he who utters one, expects to gain favor in the sight of that God. To gain favor from him is to influence him,—to change him. Now, he who secures the blessings of a God through prayer, changes his programme of action, and induces him to do that which he did not intend to. Prayer when uttered, is indicative of the fact, in most instances, that God has no well-defined course marked out in reference to you, and that you expect, through the instrumentality of your intercessions, to induce him to favor you. A prayer that is expected to gain favors from any being, acknowledges its own weakness, shows that existence is not founded on a substantial basis. When you acknowledge that you owe your existence to any God, it is well that you adore him, pay him homage, for that power which creates, forms, etc., can destroy, and our existence is really established on a very insecure foundation. It is easy for the world to acknowledge the fact that an infinite being whom they cannot, from the very nature of things, comprehend, always existed, but it is absurd to suppose that the germ of every human being the nature of which can be comprehended by the higher order of intelligences, has had an endless duration in the past, and will have an endless duration in the future.

The world must soon recognize the sublime fact that man is as important a part of creation as matter, and as the latter has always existed, and is indestructible, we can reasonably infer that the former is also. Now bear in mind that in assuming for man an eternity of existence, we are taking his absolute creation out of the hands of any capricious being, and establishing it on a substantial basis.

But here is the grand question. "Admitting your position to be true, who created the first world, and prepared it for the reception of human beings?" Well, is our theory demolished, our position overthrown, and all our efforts vanquished, by a single question? Surely, that is a pertinent query, and well worthy of the questioner. "Here is a stumbling-block really, and you must remove it, or all your efforts will prove abortive, and "failure" will be written on your Search." How easy it is to interrogate, to query, to suggest, to make distinctions, to draw hair lines, to puzzle through the instrumentalities of shadows and barriers by constantly throwing stumbling-blocks in the way of the investigators. Why, when it was determined that the earth was round, and old women knew it was, "for all the water would spill out when it got around on the other side;" and when the telegraph proved a success, an old gray-headed veteran could not understand how electricity could traverse a wire when it was perfectly solid,—it was impossible, utterly impossible! An old woman could not see how the cackling of geese saved Rome, or the barking of dogs, Hannibal's army, until it was explained to her that the sleeping sentinels were awakened thereby. Well, we will heed the question, and answer it, too, in a future number of the JOURNAL.

Let the light shine. The rays that scintillate from thoughts that bear upon them the impress of truth, will grandly illumine the soul of the world, and each one will be made better thereby. If our thoughts appall you, alarm you, because they are innovators, remember that they are freely given, and go forth in the "spirit of love," and that wherever their influence is felt, no bad results will follow. Did they send fire to burn and devastate, a dagger to pierce your vitals, a poison that would corrupt your soul, then you really might feel alarmed. But dear reader, while they bear with them strange teachings, encroach upon old established landmarks, they tell you that your destiny will be grand, your final success certain, and that eventually, when eons of ages shall have passed away, and you have observed the formation, the sustaining, and final dissipation of worlds, then perhaps you will be able to perform that which you now ignorantly ascribe to a God. Oh! how our feelings expand as we contemplate the grandeur of man's destiny. Onward, upward, scaling the starry heights, by and by his genius shall find a field of operation where now it would dazzle our eyes to look. Then struggling one of earth, ever remember that you are one of an infinite number, and while some are almost immeasurably above you, others are far below you, and if you would merit the assistance of those in the higher spheres, you must kindly grant assistance to those whose life is less fortunate than yours, and thus marching along, with the hands of all humanity interlinked, the destiny of each one shall be grand beyond your present conceptions.

But who made the first earth?
Wait and see.

(To be continued.)

Letter from Allan Harvey.

BROTHER JONES: Our small village has been thrown into a hub-bub of excitement, caused by the visit of one B. Frazer, styling himself the "Great Philosophical Theologian," and professing to expose every class of spiritual phenomena, by tracing them to mundane causes. The idea is entertained by some that he is an ex-Spiritualist, and was excommunicated for his great rascality. Will you be so kind as to answer through your inestimable journal what you know of him—if any thing.

Webster, Ind., May 31, 1871.

REPLY.—We know nothing of him, but presume he is a mountebank who finds that the gullibility of the devotees of old Theology is yet keen, and that he being as unprincipled as they are, takes advantage of it to replenish his pockets. It is well. Such persons serve the very excellent purpose of agitating thought. Old Theology is subserving a very excellent purpose in that direction, in thus bringing her own corruptions prominently before the scrutinizing eye of the people. In her death struggle she employs assassins to do her dirty work, who invariably give thrusts which recoil upon her own devoted carcass, and lay bare her festering sores. She is covered with pollution from the crown of her head to the soles of her feet. Wherever a blow is struck, festering corruption oozes forth. All denominations, even as of yore, fight one another. Their clergymen are most corrupt in their morals, and despite the efforts of the simple deceivers to screen the scoundrels who poison, drown, and otherwise murder their wives, whip their children to death, because they won't pray, seduce little girls, school children, and married women, marry a multiplicity of wives while all are living, steal horses, and hold camp and other protracted meetings to cover up deeds of darkness. These are the people who employ S. P. Leland, Van Vleck, Frazier, Grimes, Mc Queen, H. Melville Fay, and others of like easy virtue, (to say nothing of another class nearer home, who denounce physical manifestations), to pretend that they expose spirit manifestations. These men know well that their whole theological fabric is founded upon a stupendous lie, that the same is being exposed by spirits, and that their iniquity in demanding of the people their money, on pain of never-ending hell torments is becoming too shallow a pretense to weigh with any but the veritable simpleton and cowardly poltroon, hence, they resort to all manner of finesse, to divert the attention of the people from themselves, and like other thieves are loudest in their cry against honest people. We have this to say to them, go on,—give employment to the whole diabolic,—dance, and pay your own fiddlers. Nero caused Rome to be set on fire, and fiddled and danced as the devouring element consumed that which he was in duty bound to preserve; even so the professed ministers of the gospel would destroy the very evidence of immortality, and fiddle and dance over its destruction. But thanks to the powers invisible, as these assassins would destroy, so in an increased ratio the people are enlightened and the evidences sought to be destroyed are increased.

"I am a Methodist."

S. N. Walker, writing from Baldwin City, Kansas, observes with deceit and fraud infiltrated into every line—with this declaration, "I am a Methodist."

By his letter, which follows, of April 20th, 1869, it seems that he had got the JOURNAL six months, and then sent seventy-five cents (just half price, accompanied with honied words), for six months more. Now, after having received it a year and a half on credit, he writes, claiming an exemption from a just debt, because he is "a Methodist!"

LETTER NUMBER ONE.

S. S. JONES—Dear Sir:—Enclosed, please find seventy-five cents, for your valuable paper for six months more. You will hear from me occasionally.

Yours in haste,
S. N. WALKER.

Baldwin City, Kas., April 20, 1869.

LITTER NUMBER TWO.

S. S. JONES—Dear Sir:—You can send your paper as long as you can afford to send it for nothing. I sent you word a year ago, that I could not pay for it. It still comes—you can do as you please about sending it. I am a Methodist.

Yours with respect,
S. N. WALKER.

Baldwin City, Kas., April 29, 1871.

We can understand easy enough how a dishonest man can be a Methodist, but it is not so easy to understand how it should release a man from a legal and moral responsibility.

Ah!—yes, now it is clear—clear as mud. It is the blood—"the blood of the Lamb" that does it!

Foster, Bross and Evarts.

Possibly the first information that General Benedict Arnold had concluded to ally himself with the British, or that John Tyler had given Whiggery a set-back, carried no more astonishment and dismay to their friends and adherents than will the intelligence to the admirers of the "American Huxley," Colonel Foster, that he has a "bone back" on Darwinianism. A red hot thunderbolt from a stormy sky, at midnight, in mid-winter, or the rock of Gibraltar suddenly lifting itself into upper air, and sailing away like a balloon, or anything else extraordinary, would not possibly develop more openmouthed astonishment than this recusancy of the scientific colonel.

This retraction occurred at the Academy of Sciences on Tuesday night. It was listened to by a select audience, of whom only the great American traveler, Deacon Bross, and the great American camp-meeting, theolo-scientist, Dr. Evarts, could retain sufficient presence of mind to applaud the Palæthian conversion, by giving utterance to fervent amens and hallelujahs over the singular and altogether unexpected position assumed by the lecturer.

Possibly what will present itself to the majority of thinkers with the greatest force is the fact that both Bross and Evarts seemed on the point of getting up an impromptu prayer-meeting over the announcement of Foster that he disagrees with Darwin. Evidently they regard Darwin as a most dangerous opponent to the faith of which one is an exponent in the shape of a deacon, and the other, in that of a clergyman. Now, we see no reason whatever for holding any such belief. There is nothing in all of Darwin's teachings that conflicts either with the idea of a Great First Cause, or with the integrity of divine revelations, when properly understood. His views do not certainly contradict the account of the creation of a single pair named Adam and Eve; but the whole intelligent Christian world has long since ceased to regard this account as a literal narration which must be accepted as it stands.

The man who accepts Darwin has no good reason to deny Deity. There is nothing in the theory that all life is derived from some single, original germ, and that it has reached its present multitudinous character by a peculiar process of development, that for a single instant necessitates the denial of a God. Underlying all these forms is the vital principle of life, a spark which must have come from the altar upon which flames the eternal fire of Divinity. Hence, despite the hurrahs and moans of Bross and Evarts, there is really nothing gained for religion by Foster's denial. What appears to be the truth is, that these two individuals represent a very large class of professional believers, who, themselves knowing the Mosaic cosmogony to be something which has no literal basis in truth, are yet unwilling to accept anything which seems to weaken the literal acceptance of the Mosaic account of the creation. They evidently fear that there are weak-minded people in the world, who, becoming convinced that Eve did not bite into an apple at the instigation of a serpent, will at once reject all revelation, and precipitate themselves into infidelity. Rather than thus convince such men, Messrs. Bross and Evarts would prefer they should accept the apple-biting theory, with all its attendant consequences of human depravity and eternal damnation.

Such a view of the case results from pure and simple laziness. The position of Foster was to those two men an assurance that there was less work to do, because it is easier to convert a man and retain him who accepts the Mosaic account, than it is one who repudiates it as a fable. Still, as we have said, the recantation of Colonel Foster is no substantial assistance to Christianity. There is no intelligent believer who has had his faith in a Supreme Being shaken in the least, by the teachings of Darwin, nor have the great scientists of the age, with the exception of those who are professed infidels, employed Darwin other than in purely scientific matters, and for scientific ends.

As to the motives of the colonel in taking the back track, they are of course proper. They must be the result of conviction. The colonel is getting old, and the grave seems nearer than the cradle with its mysteries of birth and of development. He has given Mr. Darwin a second look, or, rather, he has taken a look through the straitlaced rocks, and finding no bones of Mr. Darwin's intermediate animal, he has concluded there never was any. The man who should look for the bones of his great-grandmother, who came over in the Mayflower, and not finding them, would not be entirely warranted, even in the presence of Bross and Evarts in concluding he never had any such ancestor; nevertheless, he might have grounds for feeling some doubt about the whole subject. Should it happen that a thousand years hence the bones of Colonel Foster should not be visible in the rocks, or anywhere else, we are still satisfied that there will even then, in his contributions to science and other efforts, including his remarkable speech to Bross and Evarts, be proof that he once had existence, although the inquirer may nowhere discover any osseous remains which once belonged to our "American Huxley."

The foregoing we copy from the Chicago Daily Times, of May 11th, not that the opinion of Col. Foster, Governor Bross and Dr. Evarts upon the subject referred to, will have any more weight with the public than the opinions of any other three ordinary men, but to indicate the tone, or sentiment of the public, reflected through the press.

It is apparent to observers that our secular press never go in advance of the people. They to some extent reflect public sentiment, but never keep up with radical pioneers. Such work devolves upon the RELIGIO PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL, and other independent newspapers.

This article in the Daily Times shows that public sentiment sustains Darwin. If Col. Foster desires to make a record that will stand the test of science he makes a great mistake in catering to men of but moderate talents, however high they may stand in the estimation of superficial devotees of an effete system of theology.

Darwin will live upon the page of history, while such men will be forgotten.

Darwin's works are for sale at this office. See catalogue, or price list, in another column of this paper.

Laura V. Ellis.

A subscriber writes:

"Have you seen 'Correspondence of the Presbyterian.'—Spiritualism Exposed?' If you have, and think it worth a notice, attend to it. The substance of it is: A Mr. Ellis and his daughter, from Springfield, Mass., held meetings in Wheeling, Va., and after they left, a young man in one of the stores there, did all that Miss Ellis did, by sleight-of-hand, etc. There seemed to be great jubilation over it in that old hunker town."

REPLY.—No; but we have seen denunciations by another correspondent, and yet have every reason to believe, from reports published in the BANNER OF LIGHT, and letters from many close investigators, that Miss Ellis is a very excellent medium, notwithstanding a certain defunct quasi-Spiritualist paper, during the last moments of its procrastinated death throes, denounced her through a correspondent, as an impostor.

Willis, the Spirit-Artist.

Mr. Willis is yet at the gallery, corner of Clark and Madison streets, taking spirit pictures. He is having good success. Those who desire good pictures, should at once avail themselves of the opportunity of procuring them before he leaves the city.

Those at a distance, who desire the likeness of a friend, can send a lock of their hair to him, and follow the directions in his advertisement (to be found in another column of this paper). If he gets no spirit picture, he refunds the five dollars sent to him.

We have no hesitation in vouching for his being a genuine spirit artist.

D. W. Hull

Has published a "Pamphlet on Christianity, its Origin, Nature, and Tendency, Considered in the Light of Astro-Theology." This little work of seventy-five pages is as compact as the meat in a nut, and equally as nourishing. It is written with great care, brief, concise, and in every particular to the point. It will be a valuable addition to our literature, and clasping hands with the "Common Sense Thoughts" of Denton, and the "Bible in the Balance," by Fish, they will form a grand army of aggression, and will do much toward breaking down superstitious notions and eradicating false teaching.

Charles H. Read,

The wonderful medium for physical manifestations, or the "Mysterious Man," is now in the city of Chicago, and will make engagements to hold seances at any place within a hundred miles of Chicago. He will also hold private or public seances at the residence of those who desire it in this city. He can be addressed in care of this office.

Letter of Fellowship.

On the 12th of May the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL SOCIETY granted a Letter of Fellowship and Ordination, in legal form, to Bro. O. S. Lont, of Mazeppa, Minnesota, authorizing him to solemnize marriages in due form. Brother Lont is well recommended as a speaker.

"The Descent of Man."

This remarkable book by Charles Darwin, is having a very great sale, the demand being greater than the supply thus far. We have secured one hundred copies, which will fill the orders on our books, and we shall hereafter be able to fill our orders without delay, we hope.

See advertisement in another column.

Dr. Kayner

Having got settled at the beautiful village of St. Charles, Illinois, is healing the sick with his usual good success, and lecturing. We cheerfully recommend the Doctor, as a highly educated and skillful clairvoyant physician, and an able and eloquent lecturer. To our friends in Northern Illinois who wish to hear a good lecturer on the Spiritual Philosophy, we would say, correspond with the Doctor.

St. Charles, Ill.

We are in receipt of a large number of letters, saying that the writers and many of their acquaintances are intending to make their homes in the above-named beautiful town. It is located on Fox river (one of the most beautiful streams of pure water in Illinois), and only thirty-seven miles by railroad from Chicago.

Come on, Brethren. Let us have one of the most delightful towns in the world, with a majority of Spiritualists.

Secure lots for permanent homes while they can be had cheap. A better location for mechanics or those who wish to do business in Chicago, and live cheap, can not be found. Good farms in the vicinity, range from $40 to $60 per acre.

Letters addressed to JONES & BUNDY, at this office, will be promptly answered.

Personal and Local.

—The address of J. R. Francis at Crosby's Music Hall, on Sunday last, will appear in the next week's JOURNAL. It has attracted the attention of the secular press in this city, an abstract of which appeared in the Daily Times, a special reporter of that paper being present. Dr. Briggs follows Mr. Francis.

—The subscription list of the JOURNAL is rapidly increasing; an evidence that it is a favorite with the people.

—Mrs. Emma Hardinge will lecture in Boston during October, and will be happy to form other engagements in Massachusetts and its vicinity during the coming winter months. We welcome her back to the United States. Perhaps if she could be induced to come here again, she might succeed in reviving into harmonious action our Spiritual society here, which, since her ministration, has only kept up the meetings at irregular intervals.

—Moses Hull is lecturing in Dayton, Ohio, during this month.

—Prof. Wm. F. Lyon, writer of the "Hollow Globe," will receive calls to speak and travel at points within reach of Chicago.

—We learn that Dr. J. K. Bailey has been doing a successful work at Pinno, Ill., in healing the sick, speaking and inculcating the principles of our cause. The Latter Day Saints tendered him their church, and warmed and lighted it gratis.

—Dr. E. E. Perkins, of Kansas City, Mo., speaks in high terms of Jennie Adams, as a clairvoyant and healer.

—Dr. S. P. Fellows, of Philadelphia, is now in the city, and stopping at the Adams House, where he will remain for thirty days.

—S. A. Delbrick, of New Hampshire, writes to us that he can converse with his spirit friends as easily as he can with mortals.

—M. B. De Lano, of South Barre, N. Y., writes to us that Mr. Millerson has drawn a correct likeness of their child in spirit life, a little daughter who passed away at the age of ten years. No likeness was ever taken before she died.

—A little boy asked Dr. Burgen, the preacher, if he would have a light. "No, child," says the doctor. "I am one of the lights of the world." "I wish then," replied the boy, "you were hung up at the end of our alley, for it is a very dark one."

—We are glad to see that "The Science of Evil," by Joel Moody, is meeting with the attention its great merit demands.

—S. A. Merrill, of Council Bluffs, Iowa, speaks in high terms of J. M. Holland, of the same place, as a healer, clairvoyant, and test medium.

—Mrs. M. J. Wilcoxson speaks this month at Decatur, Ill. She is doing a good work in the field of reform.

—G. M. Ramsay, M. D., has announced his intention to lecture a portion of his time on the spiritual philosophy. His address is 75 McDougal St., New York.

—We do not suppose any of our readers are troubled by a fear of the devil—but they all have friends who are, and they should place in their hands the "Biography of Satan," by Dr. Graves, which will save them from the fear of endless damnation.

—Mrs. M. J. Wilcoxson writes as follows in regard to the proposed Convention at Decatur: "We hope the Spiritualists and friends of free thought in Illinois and at convenient distances, will not forget the 'feast of reason and flow of soul' which is to come off in this city, at Smith's Opera Hall, the first Friday, Saturday and Sunday of June. The friends here are sending out posters, and making every proper arrangement for the occasion. Though few in number, every effort will be made by them, to make the meeting a successful one, and speakers, as well as others, as far as means will allow, will be entertained free. We look upon this convention as the initial of a universal uprising of the people on the side of free thought, and as tending to break down the distinctions of creed and party; and unite in fraternal fellowship and unity of spirit all opposed to theological aggression. In view of the ecclesiastical spirit so boldly manifested in repeated conventions of the Evangelical Alliance in this country, and their avowed purpose to destroy the sanctity of our National Charter, by the introduction of a creed in the Constitution, let all who hold inviolable the legacy of religious and civil freedom for which our revolutionary fathers gave their best blood and treasure, meet with us in this convention, and add their united voices in one grand declaration of principles, that shall be felt throughout the land, and for coming generations of time. Let us form our alliance upon the broad foundations of humanity and unshaken loyalty to the genius of universal right. Come, come, come! Thine for a just equality.

M. J. WILCOXSON.

NOTE.—The committee are trying to make arrangements with the Toledo, Wabash & Western, and Illinois Central Railroads, whereby those attending the Convention can come at reduced rates.

—"Artificial Somnambulism," and "Underhill on Mesmerism" are still furnished by us, postage paid, for $3.

—Margaret Lovegate, of New York, a colored woman, aged 45, became religious and entreated God to fetch her Elijah's chariot of fire, but he, not heeding her warning voice, she jumped from the window, a distance of one hundred feet, to the ground, and soon after died from her injuries.

—The pleasure of the guest is always the study of the hotel proprietors—so say Sparrier & Co., of the Sparrier House, Louisville, Ky.

—Artemas Baker writes that Lancaster, Texas, would be a good field for a reformatory speaker.

—Mrs. N. W. Bush speaks in high terms of the ministrations of N. Frank White.

—Our Wisconsin readers will please notice advertisement of Brother Barrett's appointments, in another column.

—We would ask the special attention of the reader to the advertisement of "The Hollow Globe," in another column.

—J. H. Lemon, please give us your post office address.

—Dr. E. B. Wheelock has been lecturing at Pleasanton, Kansas, creating great interest there. See the notice of three days' meeting, at which he will be the principal speaker.

—There will be a basket picnic of Spiritualists and others on the north shore of Lake Mimatooka, just south of G. Leas' farm, two miles west of Long Lake Station, on Saturday, the 10th day of June, at half past ten in the morning, and at two in the afternoon. Good speakers and music will be in attendance.

—J. Madison Allen's address is Alcona, N. J., or care of BANNER OF LIGHT.

—Many of our readers are getting bit, of late, and seem well pleased by it—eg. mean Dr. Mary E. Walker's book entitled "Hit."

Philadelphia Department.

BY.....HENRY T. CHILD, M. D.

Subscription will be received, and papers may be obtained at wholesale or retail; at 634 Race street, Philadelphia.

What Shall we do to be Saved?

NUMBER FOUR.

On the spiritual plane there are many things to be done. Let us inquire what the spirit is. It is a spark of the divinity,—immortal in its nature and identity, hence has existed and will exist forever. It is like its divine author, immutable and unchanging, save in one thing, that it is subject to progression and unfoldment. Our knowledge of spirit in this life, is derived from the influence which it produces upon the physical and mental natures of man. It comes to the physical in its first inception as an embryo, and there is a mutual action.

Whenever the physical is properly unfolded, the soul gradually expands and progresses, and when the mental powers are awakened, they act in a similar manner. Sin, or the violation of law produces stagnation of those powers, which the old writers called death; but there is no death to the soul, and they realized this, hence the absurd ideas of eternal punishment for temporal violations of law.

All through life the soul is dependent upon the other powers for its most beautiful growth and unfoldment, and if there be a fair opportunity furnished by the physical and mental powers, man kind will realize the grand truth that they have souls. How few, however, have come to this blessed knowledge. Realizing the existence of this, the problems of life become much more easy of solution. A community who do not recognize this, are not in a condition to realize the mission of life.

To be saved spiritually, then, we must lay the basis in mental and physical salvation, but it does not stop here; after this basis is laid, and the soul is recognized as a power, higher fields of usefulness and happiness open before mankind. Many degrees of refinement on this plane, are real zed alone through this knowledge of the existence of the soul within us.

The conditions of humanity, when we have thus done all that can be done on the three planes of life, will furnish the very best basis for the transition into the higher conditions of existence. The soul entering these under such circumstances, will find itself prepared for a rapid career of progression, in the realms of beyond this earth.

But even under the most favorable conditions there will still be much to do to be saved in the spheres beyond this life. It may be strange to those who have accepted the idea that heaven is a place of perfect bliss; that there can be any thing to do there. But we know from our experience among the spirits, as well as the testimony of thousands who have come to us, that there as here, there is much to be done on the three-plates, in order to reach the highest conditions.

Spirits in the interior have similar labors on the physical plane to those which we have referred to here. They find numerous imperfections in their spiritual bodies, which they take with them into that life. One of the first labors there is to purify and unfold these systems to the proper conditions, for the new scenes which await them. The same is true of the mental, and there are schools for mental and physical training there, in which the errors of earth are to be remedied, and more harmonious conditions brought about.

The lessons of that life come home to the spirits in such a practical manner, that they are at once perceived and appreciated.

The great central fact, which is the basis of all life here and there also, that we are continually living in the consequences of the past, building upon the foundations which have been laid, and must modify our structures more or less in accordance with these, becomes more and more apparent to us, as we advance on along life's pathway. Therefore, we may all look forward to a great work in this direction—a work of the most practical importance to ourselves.

Spiritualism teaches more emphatically than any other system of ethics, that it is not wise to peep into such matters, but that we should really take these questions home to ourselves in their fullest extent, and seek for the appropriate answer on each plane of life, and we should learn one very important lesson which all future experience will confirm, that the present is never a better time to do this than the present. Now is the accepted time; now is the day of the Lord, and the great work is for us, not for others. We must inevitably seek to know what we shall do to be saved. And knowing it, seek to it that we do it. We know that ignorance is the cause of a great amount of the suffering that exists in the world, but mankind are kept in ignorance, as much by their unfaithfulness to the knowledge which they have, as from any other cause. The angel world are somewhat like an old lady preacher, who was rebuked for preaching the same sermon over and over.

"Well," said she, "when you practice what I have told you, I will have a new sermon for you."

When we have done the best we know, we have unlocked the door that leads to higher wisdom and more perfect knowledge, and each upward step reveals a broader plane and grander views.

Signs of Progress.

We have received the following letter, and would be glad to receive from any author or publisher, such copies as they may feel disposed to donate for said library:

HISTORICAL SOCIETY OF PENNSYLVANIA.

H. T. CHILD, M. D., DEAR SIR:—Efforts are being made by the Library Committee of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, to obtain, as far as possible, the standard publications of the various religious societies in the country; and we have presumed that you would esteem it a pleasure to place in our library, those issued by the people denominated Spiritualists.

Philadelphia, April 21st, 1871.

A Fragment.

Seated with some friends a few evenings since, a medium, who was present, was entranced, and gave a beautiful poem, but as we had not the means at hand for writing, we can only give from memory a fragment:

Each human being is a book; some with coarse, rude letters and scrawls unsightly; others filled with classic lore, and from each page and line some useful lesson we may learn.

Some are full of tragedy; others with farce and comedy abound. Some in calm and peaceful notes do flow; others by post hands are touched till every page doth shine with high divine, and pictures rare are ever there. Some are bound in rich and costly forms, with naught within to pay for searching there; others with plainer binding, when opened reveal their treasures rich and rare. Some never read their own book, but ever eagerly into others look. But wise then, and make thy book so that each line and page shall tell of truth and wisdom, garnered from the past, and treasured for the future. Pictures fair and lovely, of noble thoughts and holy deeds, should find a place in every human book to cheer us on our way, and strengthen others too.

Thus in God's great library each human being would find its place, not alone ranged upon the shelf for show, but ever ready for use.

Missionary Work in Wisconsin.

J. O. Barrett, State Missionary will lecture as follows:

Lone Rock,	Friday evening,	May 26th
Richland Center,	Sunday "	" 28th
Orion or Muscoda,	Tuesday "	" 30th
Pinemore,	Wednesday "	" 31st
Woodman,	Thursday "	June 1st
Bridgeport or Prairie du Chien	Friday "	" 2d
Patch Grove,	Sunday "	" 4th
Bloomington,	Tuesday, "	" 6th
Mt. Hope or Lancaster,	Wednesday "	" 7th

NOTICE OF MEETINGS.

SPEAKERS' AND MASS CONVENTION.

As Chairman of the Committee appointed by the Northwestern Speakers' Association, I am requested to call a Speakers' and Mass Convention to be held at Smith's Opera House, Decatur, Illinois, on the 2d, 3d, and 4th days of June, 1871; to commence its first session on Friday, June 2d, at 10 o'clock A. M.; and to continue them for the three days as directed by the Convention.

This Association has connected a series of meetings to gradually change the good social conventions that have found many good homes for worn, wearied, and sick mediums and speakers, to good social science conventions, to establish the rules by which all faithful workers in the cause of truth will receive just support. Such progress is necessary, in this transition period of religious associations, from the theological to the scientific, and from the rule of the Christian priests of earth, licensed by man, to that of the angels of heaven, through mediums licensed by the laws of God.

This Convention is called to continue the progressive work of the Association, to establish the order and love of the angels in heaven, among the people of the earth.

Invitation is extended to all to be present. Those who attend will receive a cordial reception by the Spiritualists and their friends in Decatur.

Persons wishing special information about this entertainment of speakers and others, will address the Secretary of the Committee of Reception, H. Righter, Box 209 Decatur, Ill.

By request of Mrs. M. J. Wilcoxson, Moses Hull, D. W. Hull, Harvey A. Jones, Dr. Samuel Underhill, and Addie L. Ballou.

H. S. BROWN, M. D., Chairman.

NOTICE.

The Semi-Annual Convention of the State Association of Spiritualists of Minnesota, will meet at Farmington, Dacota County, Minnesota, June 2d, 3d, and 4th, 1871.

All delegates attending will please notice the following rules of railroad companies. On St. Paul and Sioux City R. R. excursion tickets will be sold by agents at the various stations (return tickets included), for full fare one way. Up Milwaukee and St. Paul R.R., including Hastings and Dacota R. R., parties will purchase excursion tickets at various offices, for 60 per cent. of full round trip fare. On Lake Superior and Mississippi R. R., including Stillwater R. R., delegates will be returned free, on certificate of Secretary of Convention that they paid full fare over that road in going to Convention. On St. Paul and Pacific R. R., delegates will find Convention tickets in the hands of the conductors on the trains only. Delegates can get board at the hotels in Farmington, for $1.00 per day.

It is expected that Peter Weet will be present.

HARRIET F. PUTT, Secretary.

Morristown, Rice Co., Minn.

A Voice from the West.

A special notice is hereby given to the Spiritualists of Kansas, and a general notice to the rest of mankind, that the Spiritualist's and Liberal friends of Pleasanton, Lynn Co., Kansas, will hold a series of meetings on the 2d, 3d and 4th of June next, commencing with a lecture on Friday evening, and continuing the meetings through Saturday and Sunday. Rev. J. B. Taylor, of Fort Scott, and other speakers, are engaged.

Let the friends and enquirers, both at home and abroad, give us a call, and a word of cheer. Free entertainment will be given as far as possible.

Mr. Stephen D. Potter, for the promotion of Spiritualism and free thought in general, has just erected a new hall, and he wishes the meetings dedicated to the general benefit of mankind, and not to the God of the Jews. Pleasanton is a railroad town, being 75 miles south of Kansas City, and 25 miles north of Fort Scott, and 7 east of Mound City.

Given by order of the Executive Committee.

S. WADE,	STEPHEN DECKER,
JOSEPH BARR,	HENRY DECKER,
ELI BARR,	DR. E. B. WHEELOCK,
WM. MILLER.	WM. GIBBINS,

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

SPIRITUALISM.

DR. S. L. MCFADDEN AND WIFE, Magnetic Physicians, Spiritual Test Mediums, Business Clairvoyants, etc., have located at No. 342 W. Madison St., corner of May, up stairs, Chicago.

They invite all who wish the benefit of their mediumistic powers, to call and see them. They hold developing circles, diagnose disease without any previous knowledge of the patient, tell of the past, present and future, give news from absent and departed friends, etc. They also explain the laws of life and death, spiritual evil, the cause and cure of inharmony, etc., thereby enabling persons to be a law to themselves,—to be their own thinkers, teachers, doctors, and preachers. ALL MEDIUMS ARE INVITED TO ATTEND FREE OF CHARGE. The contradictions of the Bible, lying spirits, and false communications philosophically explained. Sittings for the examination of diseases, and private communications, from 9 A. M. to 5 P. M. Circles each evening; Sundays not excepted.

Dr. J. Wilbur's
MAGNETIC PAPER

Has cured all sorts of complaints, from cancer to cold feet. Send stamp and receive one paper free. Dr. J. Wilbur, 460 W. Randolph St., Chicago, Ill.
m10 w10 tf.

CARRIAGE MANUFACTORY.
Waverly, N. Y.

THE UNDERSIGNED MANUFACTURES TO ORDER, and keeps on hand all varieties of Open and Top Buggies of the Best Styles; Platform Spring Wagons, with two or more seats, with or without top. This wagon is an improvement on the old two-spring wagon, and as a business wagon, or for family use, is unsurpassed. Best quality of stock used, and first-class workmen employed, and all work WARRANTED.

Situated on the Erie R. R., we have good facilities for shipping, and are constantly sending work to all parts of the country.

N. KINNEY.

v9 n25 13t.

THE LAW OF MARRIAGE.

BY C. L. JAMES.

An exhaustive argument in favor of liberal divorce legislation. For sale by the author, Louisiana, Mo. Post-paid for 25 cents.
v9 n15-tf.

DELINQUENTS.

The following named persons owe for this paper. They have either removed from the town or post office where they formerly took the JOURNAL, without requesting the address to be changed, and paying arrearages; or they have requested some pious postmaster to notify us that the paper was not called for, thinking thus to evade payment. Such of these as remain unpaid four weeks, without reasonable explanation, will be placed in the Black List. Our subscribers who know the present residence of either of these persons, will confer a favor by informing us of the same.

S. M. Argo, Clinton, Ill., $2.50; J. H. Meare, Lincoln, Va., 50 cts.; J. P. Tuttle, West Lebanon, Ind., 75 cts.; J. M. Wilson, Camden 300, Ill., $2.00; W. M. Getchell, St. Louis, Mo., $7.00; Mrs. M. Strong, Buchanan, Mich., $8.00; John Hunton, Harrisburg, Pa., $3.25; A. Mills, Simmonsville, Vt., $3.25; R. Roby, Bridgeport, Ind., $3.25; Geo. Roberts, Emigrant's Gap, Cal., $4.25; Wm. Simms, Curran, Ill., $2.50; Mrs. Emma Cook, Rock Mills, Ill., $9.25; D. A. Grambling, Atlanta, Ga., $2.15; G. W. Orth, Princeton, Mo., $2.25; Wm. A. Harshman, Jackson, Ohio, $5.00; Miss F. Hutchinson, Two Rivers, Cal. $1.25; N. A. Clark, Two Rocks, Cal., $2.25; O. H. McNamee, Edinburg, Mo., $5.50; W. Woodward, Goldsboro, N. C., $4.25; Mrs. Brigham Flint, Mich., 75 cts.; John Harris, Lexington, Mass., $3.50; A. McCord, Troy, N. Y., $5.25; B. R. Matthews, Mt. Pleasant, Mo., $4.25; D. Emery, Gilmore, Iowa, $10.25; H. Brevoort, Fourth Ave., New York City, $9.25; John Bartlett, Hyria, Iowa, $5.00; R. Healey, Herman, N. Y., $4.25; A. B. Cole, Pleasant, Ill., $1.50; T. Yeaton, Salem, Oregon, $2.00; Esther, Monroe, Wis., $1.50.

THE Descent of Man,
AND
Selections in Relation to Sex;

By Charles Darwin, M.A.F.R.S. With Illustrations.

Two Vols., over 600 pp. each. Price $2.50 per Vol. postage 24 cts.

. For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

THE
HOLLOW GLOBE;
Or, the World's Agitator and Reconciler.

A Treatise on the Physical Conformation of the Earth.

PRESENTED THROUGH THE ORGANISM OF
M. L. SHERMAN, M.D.,
AND WRITTEN BY
PROF. WM. F. LYON.

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

"The book is addressed to the reasoning intelligence of Humanity,—to all inquiring and reflective minds, irrespective of creed.

"We earnestly request the reader to suspend his judgment concerning the ideas advanced, until he has carefully perused its pages; when he may be better prepared to form his opinions, and offer his criticisms.

"We do not claim that the teachings contained in this work are infallible, neither are they presented in an authoritative manner. But we do claim that it contains more original, natural and startling ideas, which are of great interest to civilized humanity, and which will be entirely irrefutable, than any book of its size that has made its appearance in modern times.

"We, therefore, commend it to the careful consideration of the modern thinker, being fully persuaded that its pages contain a large fund of thought which may open to his mind new fields of research, thus tending to enlarge his understanding and enlighten his intellect."

EXTRACT FROM INTRODUCTION.

"The central idea contained in the following work, and the one that most of these chapters are designed to substantiate, is, that this globe is constructed in the form of a hollow sphere, with a shell from thirty to forty miles in thickness, and that the interior surface, which is a beautiful world in a more highly developed condition than the exterior, is accessible by a circular and spherical formed aperture that may be found in the unexplored open Polar Sea, and this opening affords easy navigation by a broad and deep channel leading from one surface to the other, and that the largest ships or steamers may sail or steam either way, with as much facility as they can pass through any other winding or somewhat crooked channel. And we have endeavored to show as clearly as possible, that the physical formation of the globe is such as to be perfectly compatible with an outer and inner world, or two worlds instead of one."

12mo., 417 pp. Price $2.00; postage 20 cents.

. For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

MRS. E. MANIFOLD

Medical Clairvoyant, and Healing Medium. Parties at a distance examined by lock of hair. Price, $1.00. Prescriptions, $1.00. Magnetic Remedies sent to all parts of the country. Address Mrs. E. C. Manifold, P. O. Box 1021, Chicago, Ill.
v10 n7 tf

GROSVENOR SWAN, M. D.

DR. SWAN MAY BE FOUND AT ALL hours, at 117 Wabash Ave., Chicago, where he will be happy to receive calls from his old friends and patrons, and all who may require his services.
v9 n8 tf

ABSTRACT OF COLENSO ON THE PENTATEUCH.

A comprehensive summary of Bishop Colenso's argument proving that the Pentateuch is not historically true, and that it was composed by Samuel, Jeremiah, and other prophets, from 1100 to 621 B. C. The substance of five volumes in 45 pages. Price 25 cents. AMERICAN NEWS CO., N. Y.
v10 n5 6m

IT COSTS

Only about one third Bookbinders' prices to do binding handsomely by the use of Alden's Ready Book-Binder. Sizes suited to any publication, from the smallest sent monthly to the largest weekly. Price circular free. Send 50 cents for samples of both File and Binder. Size for the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL, No. 15; price $1.50 and $1.50. Address, RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

THE LYCEUM GUIDE,
A Collection of
SONGS, HYMNS, AND CHANTS,
Lessons, Readings and Recitations,
MARCHES AND CALISTHENIS,
(With Illustrations)
TOGETHER WITH
Programmes and Exercises
FOR SPECIAL OCCASIONS,
The Whole Designed for the Use of PROGRESSIVE SUNDAY LYCEUMS.

By J. M. Peebles, J. O. Barrett, and Emma Tuttle.

The Musical Department by James G. Clark.

THIS NEW BOOK FOR SUNDAY LYCEUMS COMprises all the excellent features of previous works, with many new ideas suggested by the experience of Lyceums during the past six years have suggested.

Its appendix contains a large number of letters from Conductors of Lyceums and Friends of the Institution, illustrating its beneficial influence, and giving much valuable information pertaining thereto.

The book is complete in every particular, and is illustrated with THIRTY FINE ENGRAVINGS of Banner Emblematic Standards for Groups, Calisthenics, &c.

PRICES: In paper cover, 60 cents; postage, 6 cents. In boards, neat, strong and durable, 75 cents; postage, 12 cts In cloth, extra, gold-lettered sides, $1.00; postage, 12 cts From which prices liberal discount will be made on quantities for Lyceums.

For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 187 and 189, South Clark street, Chicago.

Spencer's Positive and Negative Powders, for sale at the office.

MEDIUMS.

MRS. C. H. LELAND,

Wonderful Psychometrist, Soul Reader, and Business Medium, will, upon receipt of photograph, lock of hair, whether married or single, send to any person a correct delineation of character, with leading events in the past and future life, for one dollar. Advice concerning business, two dollars. Written communications from friends in spirit life, two dollars. Satisfaction guaranteed. Instructions for mediumistic development, one dollar. Address, Myrickville, Mass.
v9 n10 tf

SPIRIT PHOTOGRAPHS,
A. D. WILLIS,
CHICAGO, ILL.

Those who live at a distance from my rooms and wish to obtain spiritual pictures, can receive the same result as if they were here, by inclosing five dollars, with a picture or a lock of hair, and setting the day and hour they wish a trial to be made. If no likeness is taken, the money will be refunded. Address, 136 S. Clark St., Chicago, Ill.
v9 n25 12t.

PROF. A. GOODMAN,
Magnetic Healer,
ST. NICHOLAS HOTEL,
Decatur, Illinois.
v10 n7 tf

MRS. LODEMA ATWOOD,
Healing Medium,

Has been before the public as a successful Healer the past fifteen years. Wholly entirely on the controlling influences. We diagnose and give prescriptions by letter. Distance no objection. Will visit in person a reasonable distance those that desire us and can afford the expense. Delineation and advice in a variety of ways. Examinations we give gratuitously to all our patients, when presented by our guides. Our former custom has been to come in rapport with the applicant by the hand-writing or look of hair; but to save time, and the unpleasant sensation of taking on the symptoms of the disease, we require the applicant to give age and sex, with one or two leading symptoms of the disease, written by the patient, if able to write—if not, send lock of hair. As the giving of tests is not the object which we seek, but to restore the patient to health by Nature's own hand, in the shortest time possible, we do not deem it necessary here to lumber up an advertisement with what we have done or what we can do, but prefer to be known by our fruits.

Terms, for diagnosis and prescription, $2; Diagnosis without prescription, $1; all subsequent prescriptions, $1 each. All letters should be accompanied with the fee, and addressed to MRS. LODEMA ATWOOD, Box 15, Lake Mills, Jefferson Co., Wis.
v10 n1 tf.

Dr. Abba Lord Palmer.

BOX 101 NEW BOSTON, ILLINOIS

WONDERFUL PSYCHOMETRIST AND CLAIRVOYAN PHYSICIAN, SOUL READER AND BUSINESS MEDIUM.

Can diagnose disease by likeness, autograph, lock of hair, without a failure, and give prescription, which, if followed, will surely cure.

Can trace stolen property, tell the past, present and future—advise concerning business, and give written communications from spirit friends.

Diagnosis of disease, with prescription, $2.00. Communications from spirit friends, $5.00. Delineation of character with advice concerning marriage, $1.00.
n1 v10 tf.

MRS. A. H. ROBINSON,
Healing, Psychometric and Business Medium,
148 Fourth Avenue, Chicago.

MRS. ROBINSON, while under spirit control, on receiving a lock of hair of a sick patient, will diagnose the nature of the disease most perfectly, and prescribe the proper remedy. Yet, as the most speedy cure is the essential object in view, rather than to gratify idle curiosity, the better practice is to send along with a lock of hair, a brief statement of the sex, age, leading symptoms and duration of the disease of the sick person, when she will without delay return's most potent prescription and remedy for eradicating the disease and permanently curing the patient in all curable cases.

Of herself she claims no knowledge of the healing art, but when controlled by her spirit guides, such "at rapport" with a sick person through her mediumship, they never fail to give immediate and permanent relief in curable cases, through the POSITIVE and NEGATIVE forces latent in the system and in nature. This prescription is sent by mail, and be it an internal remedy, or an external application, it should be given or applied precisely as directed in the accompanying letter of instructions, however simple it may seem to be; remember it is not the quantity of the compound, but the chemical effect that is produced, that relieves taker complaints of.

One prescription is usually sufficient, but in case the patient is not permanently cured by one prescription, the application for a second, or more if required, should be made in about ten days after the last, each time stating any changes that may be apparent in the symptoms of the disease.

MRS. ROBINSON also, through her mediumship, diagnoses the diseases of any one who calls upon her at her residence. The facility with which the spirits controling her accomplish the same, is done as well when the application is by letter as when the the patient is present. Her gifts are very remarkable, not only in the healing art, but as a psychometric, test, business and trance medium.

Terms:—Diagnosis and first prescription, $2.00; each subsequent, $2.00; Psychometric Delineation of Character, $5; answering Business Letters, $2. The money should accompany the application, to insure a reply.

MRS. L. G. RICHARDS

WILL Give a Psychometric Reading for $1 00; with Medical Examination and Advice regarding Business, $2.00; Written Communications from Spirit Friends, $5.00. Lock of Hair and Photograph required; also three letter stamps. Pictures returned. Medicines sent if desired. Address P. O. Box 1319, Binghamton, N. Y.
v10 n3 6t

J. G. W. ENTWISTLE,
CLAIRVOYANT PHYSICIAN,

No. 194 South Clark Street, Room 3, Chicago.

He is prepared to treat any of the many forms of disease, and possesses a peculiar insight into the cause and character, and a controlling power over it which seems wonderful (even to himself). His success in the treatment of patients at any distance will be as thoroughly convincing, and the means of cure (if curable) as definitely pointed out as if they were present, by sending a lock of hair, giving name, age, sex, and two leading symptoms of the disease. Insanity and fits not treated. Examination fee, by hair, $2.00.
v10 n8 tf

DUMONT C. DAKE, M.D.,

ANALYTICAL PHYSICIAN FOR CHRONIC DISEASES.

Patients at a distance successfully treated. Medicines sent by mail or express. Send a simple statement of condition, age, and sex, occupation, temperament, (if not known, send photograph). Address P. O. Box 50, Chicago, Ill. Send a circular. ANALYTICAL HEALTH JOURNAL.
v10 n5 tf

The Rostrum.

LECTURE XXV.

On the Relations of Matter and Spirit. By Mrs. Emma Hardinge, Delivered at Harmonial Hall, Philadelphia.

Phonographically Reported for the Religio-Philosophical Journal, by Henry T. Child, M. D.

INVOCATION.

O Thou Great and Wonderful Spirit, Thou who fillest all space, All Sustaining and All Pervading Counsellor,—Father,—God! once more we meet within the temple dedicated to Thy name, to counsel with Thee, and seek, through Thy ministering spirits, to comprehend Thy holy purposes, and to worship Thee. Lord of the Ages, we look back upon the dim past, and marvel to behold in how many forms men have sought to comprehend the light that was shining in the darkness. The Hindoo hath worshiped Thee through the power of Nature. The Egyptian through the mystery of life. The ancient Chaldean hath sought to trace Thy shining footprints in the sparkling skies. The Parsee hath worshiped Thee in the orb of primeval light. The Jew hath heard Thy voice amid the thunders of Sinai. The Christian in the still, small voice of love that spoke through the gentle Nazarene. Man of the latter ages have comprehended Thee alone, through the majesty of Thy works. They have sought and found Thee in the glorious revelations of arts and sciences. We worship Thee as God, the Spirit. We know Thee only as Lord of Life and Spirit, and in the name of all who have ever lived, and whom Thou hast made, we now invoke Thy sacred presence in our midst. We ask Thee to be the strength of our mortal weakness; to be the power of light and life to us, seeing and knowing Thee to be our High Priest. Here on this altar, wherein we lay naught but our hearts, and the floral blossoms which Thou hast made so beautiful, so sweet, in evidence that Thou dost stoop to the lowest as well as to the greatest of Thy works, in Thy name and our own, and of every spirit, who in ages past has witnessed of Thee, we dedicate the services of this hour to Thee.

LECTURE.

We propose this morning, to speak on the relations that exist between spirit and matter. Our subject is selected with special reference to the cause known amongst us as Modern Spiritualism,—with special reference to those who lovingly believe,—and mean to prove that Spiritualism has come to us as the last, best gift of the Great Spirit,—as a ministry of comfort from all its darkness, all its sorrows and pains. To these we propose to address the counsels of this hour. Let all others concede, that for one brief hour, at least, they must yield up their special thoughts, aims, and purposes to the Spiritualists.

We have come out of strange places and much darkness. We have wandered far and wide to seek the highest and holiest truths of religion, and we have thought we have found these in Spiritualism. So much of darkness has been piled upon our belief, so many cruel shafts have been aimed against our beautiful religion, that sometimes our hearts faint, and our faith grows cold, and our hands grow slack in attempting to guide the car of this revolution forward to success. Therefore, it is, that we propose, outside of all phenomenal revealments, outside, even, of the evidences that have been so abundantly showered upon us, to consider what are the permanent and enduring relations that exist between spirit and matter.

We desire to find a philosophy as firm and unyielding as the eternal rocks, upon which, they say, the faith of God's church must be builded. We desire to find such a foundation as this for our belief, that it may never more be shaken, or turned aside by the psychological influence of the unfaithful.

We have heard since Modern Spiritualism has been amongst us, the voices of the unfriendly repeating many times in each crisis of our movements, in each time when some special mystery darkened upon us, ere we have learned to comprehend its history. "We have heard the unfriendly voices crying out, "Spiritualism is dying out."

We now hear the cry taken up by some of those who have the best reason to fear in this. We hear it from the ranks of Spiritualism itself. We hear it, too, pronounced with some shade of reason. First, it proceeds from those who are weary of the interminous nuisance of individuals that have been forced into the ranks. They perceive that amongst those who profess a belief in spirit communion, there is often no evidence of a change to a purer life. They see that with some a dark Materialism still prevails, which denies a spiritual cause for all things, and from these, the shafts of many have been aimed against Spiritualism. Those who faithfully and reverently believed that Spiritualism had come as a savior to the world, mourn when they perceive that this testimony concerning the hereafter, this assurance that we shall all live in the consequences of our acts and deeds—seeing that Spiritualists fail to apply these sublime truths, and enduring degrade the name of Spiritualism to animalism. We know that the spirits have brought to us wonderful evidence of supra-mundane power, proving that disembodied spirits could perform many signs, and give evidence of power to operate upon matter in a manner different from, and superior to, that which the various branches of science have enabled man to do.

Notwithstanding these sublime revealments of spiritual power, there were those who failed not to make capital of our belief, who made trade in the form of simulated imposture. There were others who received the new revealments of spirit, and acknowledged the fact of its phenomenal manifestations, and yet looked upon these as the last amusement of an hour, as the last and most wonderful sensation; who gathered around where its demonstrations occur, and for a time considered it something superior in marvel, and who now weary of the sameness of the phenomena, in which they have no longer any vital interest,—have cast it aside, because it no longer yields to them the sensual interest for which they sought. Our ranks are full of such as these, and yet we marvel that on the human side of Spiritualism, we no more behold the triumphant progress of the cause, whose former manifestations have chiefly depended upon its numerical strength to astound the world. Some now shrink back, because they find that numbers of those who have not yet become Spiritualists, but are Spiritists in the most absolute sense of the word, are falling away from our ranks, and leaving us alone to bear the brunt and jeers of the world, whose cry is now echoing again, that Spiritualism is dying out.

It is time that we took stock of our religion. It is for this reason that I ask your attention to the subject of the hour,—the enduring, unbroken, and immutable relations that subsist between spirit and matter.

In the first place, I ask your attention to these facts in the physical world around us. All that we behold, we have been accustomed to refer to the action of a creative power, that first formed, fashioned, and manipulated matter into the shapes we now behold. Even the material sciences have brought us the conviction that this is no longer a truth, but that all that we look upon is a phantasmagoria of external forms, fashioned by matter, and vitalized by an all-pervading, universal spiritual principle.

Whether we gaze upon the shining stars, or turn our eyes upon our own globe, wheresoever we look, we behold a sea of external forms, vitalized by an invisible, universal soul. We behold vast bodies launched into space,—shining and sparkling worlds,—outnumbering the power of the astronomer to calculate—all of these launched into the fine ether, are upheld by means of an invisible power that has bound together all the countless lines of invisible magnetic chords, sustaining each one of these in their orbits, and sending them out on the path of life, and enabling them to move forever without jar or discord in their paths of glory, bound as they are by the immutable force of spirit or life that we call magnetism.

Here we stand upon a round, rushing world, launched into space, and upheld, in this same vaporous mass in the midst of the vast, unknown void, still upheld in the strong and masterful arms of gravitation, bound in a path from which it can never diverge,—not even a single grain of dust aside can it turn,—we can neither rush into the arms of our parent sun, nor turn aside from the path where countless planets march, strengthened by the hand of the Infinite God in its place, and bound there by the invisible spirit of magnetism.

On this earth, we stand upon firm ground, while it is moving with inconceivable rapidity. It is whirling off into the vast realms of space, and we move not, but firmly poised, and with all the strength and power of mankind, we walk upon the solid earth, and are sustained in this vast world of moving life by magnetism. We build cities and lay out vast roads, construct great bridges, erect vast palaces and mighty cathedrals, with a feeling that they will stand, and this ever moving ball rolling in space, will still be sustained by the invisible power of magnetism. Wheresoever we turn our gaze, even in the apparent commotion, we find everything in its place, every drop of dew is there, through the all-controlling power of magnetism. The garments we wear, the fabrics of our dress, are full of life,—throbbing with life to-day. We know they are living the instant. We know that in given periods of time they will perish and decay, because the life will pass out of them. They are in existence because they are supported by the invisible power of magnetism, because each thread, each fibre, is sustained and bound together by an invisible life; without it, those blossoms, so fair, so very beautiful, so filled with sweets, will become disagreeable and unlovely, the perfume shall pass from those sweet petals, and no science of man shall retain the life within them. When it has departed, they shall be dead matter. Their beauty, their fragrance, their shape, their perfume, are all expressions of the invisible spirit of life within them, and shall pass away. Even the mountains and the vast crushing gems of the mine, the waving grass beneath our feet, like the shining worlds above our heads, the mighty solar system, and the little dewdrop, —each and all are but expressions of atoms, aggregated together, and rounded into form and sustained in being by the invisible soul-principle or magnetism within them. Even more, we have learned by the revelations of clairvoyance, that while the external perishes, the interior and true essence of form shall remain forever.

Worlds, suns, systems, stars, planets, earths, rocks, rivers, seas, winds, waves, fires, and all elemental forms,—all that is fair and beautiful, from the least atom to the larger system, shall change and perish, but the forms of all these shall remain in their integrity forever,—life can never perish, once fashioned in the mold of matter, it lives forever, for the spiritual part of all things is imperishable. These are the relations of the invisible and unseen, the indestructible life principle, to the external forms which come within the ages of the Nineteenth Century consider as the realities. It is to the atoms that they are looking for their God,—that dust upon which they vainly conceive they shall find the law written on the external instead of the internal. They are looking to the decaying dust for the spirit; looking to the perishing body for the living, immortal soul. What are the relations between the all-pervading spiritual principle and you and I?

In former lectures, we have reviewed the grandeur and beauty of these complex and wonderful structures. We have traced up the rock principle into bone. We have beheld the wonderful order in which the tissues and fibres are arranged into the muscular system,—and have traced all the various parts of the human body.

We have beheld the final loveliness of the blossoms, modeled forth in their most exquisite forms in external expressions, with which these wonderful structures are overlaid. We have traced out the grandeur and use which is displayed in every single atom of these forms, and have seen that they all belonged to the microcosm, man. We have seen that all that ever has been or ever can be, comes up to man, and is bound up in his wonderful form. Even the systems of worlds that the astronomer has discovered, are nothing more than dust bound up by this same living principle.

We have beheld a single cell, and perceived how this grew and elaborated into a living being. We have perceived it aggregating to itself elements of life, until at last it stood before us the miracle of the human form. We have traced it up from the first infantile state to the strength and vigor of manhood. We have seen it turn the hill of time, and gradually give off the ebbing tide, until we have beheld it a mass of clay. We have endeavored with all the power of science to call back life. We have striven with all the intellectual power we could command to gather up the solemn invisible mystery of time from investigating the wonderful structures, until it breaks asunder, and now it becomes a handful of dust, and is scattered to the four winds of heaven. We have seen all this, and know that its integrity, its power, depends upon the preservation of the invisible spirit within. Here we find, therefore, another and higher evidence of the relation of spirit and matter. We perceive it is the only existence—the only true governing power. It is the power which builds and fashions everything; it is the power which lays the foundations of all the arts and sciences; it is the power which throbs in all the vast multitudes of living beings; it is all that is, and I repeat that the external form which we look upon, are nothing more than the mere phenomenal pictures that are to-day gathered around an invisible spirit within the life principle. This great and wonderful mystery of life is the real existence of manhood and of every thing. We have it—the real soul principle, that which sustains and vitalizes our earth. So long as it permeates these bodies, we are men and women, but the very moment it passes out of these atoms, we cease to be,—the human form is no longer a man or a woman. Now arises a question, Can we pass to the beyond? The materialistic philosopher determines that the spirit is but an expression of matter, and hence there is no spiritual existence, but that which is manifested in matter. They, therefore, judge thus far the relations subsisting between spirit and matter,—they acknowledge that matter as an existence, hinges upon the presence of the invisible power of spirits; but is there any lots of evidence throughout the universe known to man, that spirit can exist without matter? That is the question which we ask,—the problem which no philosopher has ever been able to answer, which the religious believer has accepted upon mere faith; but it has never been demonstrated until the middle of this nineteenth century. We now stand in the midst of a host of living spirits, existing and demonstrating their presence and power, independent of the external forms of matter—representing themselves whilst they come to us through phenomenal manifestations. By acting upon matter they prove their presence, and all that we can learn of these mysterious visitants, who for twenty years have been in our midst, and have made themselves known to multitudes—all that we can learn of them, is that they do live independent of matter; they do not belong to it; their world, their existence, whatever it may be, is independent of matter. We know that these people of the spirit country are in the invisible world, which bears no relation and has no affinity to matter. We may call it substance, we may call it essence, as we will; but when we consider the attributes of matter, its divisibility, its impenetrability, and all that which makes up matter,—there is not one single attribute that belongs to the spirit that raps on my table; there is not one single particle of weight, of density; there is not one obstacle in space to the spirit that telegraphs to me. I still live. I do exist, therefore, that modern Spiritualism has carried us far beyond all the demonstrations that have ever been brought by art or science, faith, or tradition or religion. We go back to the days when the foundation of sectarian beliefs were laid. We know that angels were the revealing power. We know that the vast Being whom we worship as God, has ever manifested in all ages and countries, through the same phenomena that we see to-day, and it has ever made its marks through the action of these invisible spirits, but never till now did we comprehend that they come to us through the same laws, through the self-same laws that call this blossom into existence; that vitalizes this earth with magnetic power; that gives us strength to stand upon this round, rushing world, through gravitation; that warms and vitalizes us, and causes the pulses of life to throb in our veins, and flow through every artery and channel until we are living entities. We know and comprehend that it is one and the same power forever, and that this vast soul-world, this realm of the invisible is the spiritual abode, the country, the place where the spirit people who once dwelt in the shadow of this material earth, and have now passed out of it, live. It is the soul-world that permeates and penetrates our own. We talk of the spirit land, we go to God. We write upon the tomb stones, that the spirit sleeps in the dust. We speak to one another as Spiritualists of the forms we have loved, being dearer to us than our own souls. We speak of souls that have passed away, but they are neither gone nor departed, nor passed from us,—these spirit people penetrate and permeate our chambers; they are in our homes; they fill our city streets; they are the soul of the universe, the aggregate and totality of life that is throbbing throughout space, that animates our earth, that sustains and vitalizes ourselves. It is the soul-world whose inhabitants are made up of the spirits that have passed from this mortal world. There is proof, there is no lack nor hindrance to the spirit from out of this material form into the spirit world, when the garment is thrown aside, these bodies are laid off like well worn garments, and the spirits remain forever.

In a word, the spirits are here, and the spirit world's relation to us is that of the soul of the universe. Thus much, therefore, for the relations of spirit and matter; we cannot turn from it; we cannot sever ourselves from spiritual existence; we can no more do so than we can break apart the integrity of the spirit that dwells within, or call ourselves living beings without the soul principle that makes us such. Deprive this earth of the soul-world,—rob it of the spiritual principle, and like the clay form that we still dead it begins to decay before our eyes, and our beautiful planet becomes like the clay-cold form of the dead; nothing but dust.

We return now to the question, by what means does the soul-world manifest its presence to the material world? By what means do we find the difference between the manifestations of spirit in the unconscious movement of Modern Spiritualism, and the various phenomena that have laid the foundations of the various sectarian beliefs? Has it not come again, like a mere convulsive throe of power, which in past ages the Almighty has designed as the means of laying the foundations of new religions, when the great demand of the hour went out as a prophet against the corruption of the old forms; when the cry for daily bread for the soul went up, and God answered it by inspiration, and he poured out the spirit without measure upon his beloved, the good, and true, and faithfully inspired men of past days who came in order to meet the soul demand, and for special purposes ministering angels came and gave signs and tokens, and wonderful visions floated before the eyes of the seers, for special purposes, and in special conditions of great convulsive or national changes. Man was permitted to look through the golden gates that lead into the land immortal, but these visions passed away, and the gates were closed, and it became only a memory. Will it be so to-day?

We know they have come with power,—with signs and tokens; they have come with the evidences of that same deep, internal relation to the external, which in former ages have assured us that God's ministering spirits encompassed around about, of which we now have certain evidence, so that we know that this power shall not recede; that the dark veil of mystery shall not fall again before our eyes, so that we shall be left once again comfortless. It comes to us in two forms; first, it comes to us in the effort of man to discover through science the mystery of his own being. In every direction he has explored the mysteries of creation throughout the world of imponderable matter, until at last he has launched his intellectual spirit away into the dim ether, where he has captured the lightnings, and now we have to apply the lessons of wisdom, and master the mystery of matter, and some of the mysteries of life have been revealed to us. Two Sabbaths ago I showed you how by the inevitable progress of man's intellect,—how by the march of the tramping ages he had arrived at that point where he was capable of solving much of the mystery of life. We saw that the hand of science first opened the door and displayed to him the wonderful power.

Through the genius of Mesmer,—through the revealments of this inspired champion of truth, we have learned that in every human form there exists an imponderable force, neither matter nor spirit, which we call the life-power, which is capable of being projected from one body to another, which is, therefore, no mere expression of life.

Spiritualism now comes to show us that that power subsists beyond death; that that power which we perceive is capable of giving off that which may be transmitted from one body to another,—comes from the spiritual body which passes out of the clay form. There, then, we have direct evidence that the power of life, the power of magnetism, and the power by which the phenomena of nature are outwrought, is one and the same, and its basis is spiritual.

Mesmer gave us the evidence that by putting themselves under favorable conditions, into rapport with each other, we could transmit mesmeric or magnetic elements from body to body. Spiritualism carries us one step further, and shows us that this mesmeric or magnetic element can not only be transmitted from one human being to another, but can be transmitted from one spirit to another, and from these to and from human beings. Mesmer gave us the clue by which the whole phenomena is outwrought. He showed us the very elements of life that throbs within us as human beings here and spirits in the Spirit World; that by a scientific union of two magnetisms, all the phenomena of power that we could produce in the mesmerized subject, can be produced by the spirits. We must either forget Mesmer's experiments and go back to the dark ages, when magnetism was known only as magic, or we never can lose this. The Spirit World will never lose this knowledge and fail to come into rapport with us through magnetism. We know the method; we know the force. The element exists within us, and no longer need we wait to make our knowledge a power; no longer need we wait to hold open communion with the Spirit World.

There is something more. Modern Spiritualism has taught us that they not only still live, but they still love. It has brought us the assurance that the martyrs who died for humanity, the heroes who died for it, the patriots who toiled for it, the great-hearted philanthropists who lived only for others,—that all these have carried their great hearts' love, their burning devotion, their God-like unselfishness and love of humanity, with them; that heaven is made up of such; that whilst the spirit in leaving the perishing form carries with it the effects of sin, and of habits, it leaves behind many impulses, and for a brief period carries its memories, its loves, its affections, its habits, into the other world; yet just so far as we have overcome these lower impulses, and have placed them beneath our feet, and in their stead substituted the great love of humanity,—just as far as we have done this, we have risen above matter, and have conquered even vice and death.

We know that our heroes and philanthropists are happier and wiser, more loving and stronger than they were when they were on earth; that nothing that is beautiful is lost, while all that is sinful and false perishes and falls away.

What, then, do we suppose to be the employment of these mighty ones? What can we suppose to be the purpose and aim of these great souls that have thus loved humanity? Are all these to be quenched in the delights of a selfish heaven?

Oh! mother, father, child, [illegible] put in your protest against this [illegible] fallen of a heaven, where you shall [illegible] full of the toiling pilgrims that you have loved and left. We know that they do live and love us still, and the memory of their life-struggles and toils mingles with their present experiences, and if the still undried tear is on their cheek, as the memory of the grief and pain through which they have struggled comes back to them, it will prove to be the holiest tokens of love and following in their footsteps.

Do you not believe that it is given to them as the highest means of their eternal progress, to be ministering spirits? Is it not the fulfillment of the very condition of progress, that they in their more glorified state shall become ministers unto us,—shall answer the question that has sounded for eighteen hundred years "Are they not all ministering spirits?"

What will you be when you pass from this life? You see what they are

How many to-day pass from the earth with smiling faces, because their dying eyes are gazing into the bright and beautiful land, and so there is no fear, no sigh, no evidence of grief upon the face of the dying. Is it not because they perceive the presence of the spirits, and know that there is no death, that there is no separation,—that in that better life the chain of affection and love is not broken? They perceive that there is no bereavement to the spirit; it is only for us, whilst we remain here. Whilst we can here say, "Good morning and good night. But we should remember that the love that binds man to man—that divine element that God has written in the human heart—is immortal.

They cannot pass from the earth—these spirit people; they cannot part from it; they cannot sever the ties that bind them to it. Fathers, mothers, children, friends, patriots, philanthropists, heroes and martyrs—they all still live around us; they still labor for earth—they need but the means of expression for their affection. They tell us that God is nearer to us than our spirit friends,—than our own spirits, and we have believed it. What evidence do we have of this presence? The evidence in the external world do we find of the existence of a God, except through spiritual revelations which he has written all over creation in intelligence, will, wisdom, love, and power? Is it not so with these spirits—his ministering angels that have made themselves manifest in our midst? We are convinced of their immortality. We are convinced of the fact of their immediate presence, of their intimate relations to us; but there is something more. This same phenomena that I claim to exist in the demonstrations of magnetism,—this same life-principle that enables us to commune with spirits here upon this earth is an eternal principle, since we have discovered its existence here and hereafter.

Modern Spiritualism has been much abused. The cheat and the imposter have pressed into our ranks, and they have left the dark stains and spots of their selfishness upon it.

We do not hear the voice of the spirit always pleading with man; but we have evidence that there are invisible eyes upon us, watching our secret acts, and reading our secret thoughts. We need not suppose, therefore, that because they make no sign of this that they do not comprehend and read and know it.

Do you suppose that the purpose of the Infinite is to great revelation to be thwarted by you? that your coldness, your unfaithfulness, your trespasses, can keep back the army which for ages has been culminating up to this point, until the gates of the Spirit World are thrown wide open, and we perceive them marching through the ages, from one eternity to another? We perceive how these spirits adapt means to ends, and we see that those instruments which are found no longer worthy to proclaim these truths are laid aside and the power is silently but surely passing away from these; yet we see that the power is still there—still at the door of the human heart knocking—still with patient, persistent love working in the depths of the earth, to captivate judgment, to compel reasoning and our reason to acknowledge the invisible and intelligent power that is in our midst.

There is no failure in any part of this work. We have now the evidence that modern Spiritualism is a phenomenal power; that it is based upon the science of mind and matter.

We know that the spiritual world permeates this material world; that its inhabitants will never fail to respond to us so long as they can find minds to receive the truths from them; and we may make these truths our own. This spiritual science only waits for faithful, persevering investigation.

When you speak to me of the receding tides of spiritual forces in past ages, I tell you it was only in the days of ignorance and bigotry when men mistook the laws of spiritual communion, —the days of miracle, and not in the days when spiritual manifestations were placed upon the foundations of science. Now it cannot perish—it will remain forever.

Every human being, by placing himself or herself in the attitude of receptivity, by means of the imponderable forces within himself or herself, may become a medium for the spirit. It remains for us to study the mediumistic forces reduce them to a system—a science. It is but a question of time how soon you shall take part with these telegraphic operators, and work the lines for yourselves.

Spiritualism may die out with some who are unfaithful, but not with the tried and faithful who have come through the fire of persecution, who have gone through the furnace blasts of transformation, and have come out after all their trials resolved to labor more faithfully for the spread of the grandest truths that have ever been vouchsafed to man. Many have read the footprints of the Creator in all this. Many are worshiping him through images and ceremonials, but he calls on us to proclaim that he is a spirit and they that worship him must worship in spirit and in truth. These are God's facts, not man's, and the day has come when a more faithful army must rally around the white standard of Spiritualism, and proclaim his religion forever and forever.

SPEAKERS' AND MASS CONVENTION.

Letter from H. S. Brown, M. D.

In the call which was published in the JOURNAL of April 1st, I gave the statements of our prophets that the Christians will not permit the peaceful triumph of mediums and scientists, but will try to prevent it by war. Many persons say that such a war is impossible, because the people are too enlightened to permit it. This ought to be so, but experience has taught perhaps most reason or sight. And every person who refuses to settle all questions by reason, which allows every person their just right to life and liberty, is on the side of war, no matter how much they deprecate its horrors.

Whether these prophecies prove true or not, the duties of the convention are the same,—to continue the progressive work of the association; to establish the order and love of the angels of heaven among the people of the earth. How is this to be done? is the question of the day. I think that Spiritualists generally will agree with me that we should build houses for worship, and associate together to do the duties of life, and work for the benefit of mankind, rather than for God, and where they can meet occasionally to worship him. Experience proves that such organized God-worship fails to make heavenly love and order among the people of the earth.

If we have agreed upon the first step in the progressive work, let us try another. The house is our home, and the best material family to give the best specimen of a heavenly house on earth, that I have seen. Now enlarge that house and home to as many apartments and occupants as can be together to give the greatest good to all the members of the family, and continue that love and order, and you have the second step in establishing heavenly home on earth, that all people may enjoy. These are the general rules I have given about the special regulations of the last house, but there are a few leading elements in it that will hardly be denied. First, the mother's love, which forgives every child all its sins, and takes all back to the house. Second, the father's wisdom, that separates the good children from the bad, and the useful from the useless, and determines how many can be provided for in the household where love reigns, and who among the children of men should be admitted to the family as their children. Third, when the house and the heads of the family are obtained, then comes the rule that all children born or adopted into the household must be children of love. All should rejoice that they are there, as a blessing to the family circle. Fourth, then the rule should be adopted that there shall be no family or association debts. Persons joining the association will put in what means they are required to, and as much more as they please; but when once in, it belongs to the association, and can not be demanded of it again. Pay as you go, is the philosopher's stone that gives people all the gold they need. Fifth, then the rule should be adopted that none but the poor who work for a living and those who will adopt their mode of life are expected to belong to this home circle, and these only who are able and willing to do a sufficient amount of work to be self supporting, and enough more to give satisfactory financial progress. Sixth, here is the home of all the weary, the poor, or like the poor, in any trade, profession or business, if accepted under the other rules, to obtain all the comfort, society, nourishment and rest which is afforded by the best of homes, and to enjoy the use and trials of the labors of the day, and when in sickness and affliction, they will receive the kindest attention from loving hands and hearts.

It would extend this article too far for me to say all I wish to on this subject at this time, and it is not expected that the convention will take any decided steps to form such an association, but will make such progress in this, and other relative subjects, as have characterized all our conventions, which have been under the personal and spiritual inspirations of Mrs. M. J. Wilcoxson and others.

Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

Mrs. E. A. Blair.

S. Hayford, of North Greece, N. Y., writes:—I have a splendid picture from Mrs. Blair. It will cost $15.00 when all framed and finished. It is 22 by 28 inches. It puts the church people to their wits ends in explaining how it is done. They say no man can paint three words of the poem, with both eyes open in the time (three hours) she was engaged in painting the whole. I send you the following certificate of facts in regard to it:

The time occupied in painting this picture was less than three hours, each stroke of the brush covering new space, requiring no mending.

We the undersigned certify that we saw Mrs. E. A. Blair paint this picture in an unconscious state, and blindfolded so that it was impossible to see.

A. D. HANKINS,
A. A. NICHOLS,
E. A. BLAIR.

Sworn and subscribed to before me, and I certify that I saw the same executed under the condition named above.

JOSEPH NICHOLS,
Justice of the Peace.

Manchester, N. H., March 16th, 1871.

Letter from L. F. Hagar.

BRO. JONES:—Please find enclosed $5.00, for which you will please mark me in advance for another year's subscription to the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL, as I see that my subscription expired on 17th April, 1871; also send me the Bible in the Balance, and the thirty cents remaining add to your benevolent fund, to help those who love to read the dear JOURNAL, and are not able to pay for it.

Cardington, Ohio.

REMARKS:—In behalf of the widows and orphans' fund, we thank you. No matter how small the donations to that fund, they are gratefully received.

—Be not depressed because friends leave thee, or because thou canst not attain to this or that friendship, which thou mayest suppose essential to thy happiness or well-being.

Price-List of Books.

LIST OF BOOKS FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

All orders by mail, with the price of books desired, and the additional amount mentioned in the following list of prices for postage, will meet with prompt attention.

Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies,	12	16
Analytical Somnambulism. By Dr. Pahnestock	1.50	20
A Revelation of Departed Spirits among the Shakers,	.25	03
Alice Vale, a Story for the times, by Lois Waisbrooker,	1.25	16
American Crisis, by Warren Chase,	.75	03
Answers to Questions Practical and Spiritual. Device,	1.50	20
Apostolic New Testament,	1.25	16
A Peep into Sacred Tradition, by Rev. Orrin Abbot. Paper,	.50	08
Age of Reason, by Thomas Paine. Cloth,	.50	08
A Woman's Secret, by Mrs. C. F. Corbin,	1.75	20
A Lecture in Rhyme—The Past, Present and Future, by Mrs. F A. Logan,
Arcana of Nature, or History and Laws of Creation. Vol 1, by Hudson Tuttle,	1.25	20
Analogy of Nature, or the Philosophy of Spiritual Existence, and of the Spirit-World, Vol 2, by Hudson Tuttle,	1.25	20
A B C of Life, by A. B. Child,	.25	02
Arabula, or the Divine Guest, by A. J. Davis,	1.50	20
After Death, or Disembodied Man, by Randolph. Cloth,	1.00	08
Approaching Crisis, by A. J. Davis,	1.00	16
Apostles, (translated from the French) by Renan,	1.75	20
A Stellar Key to the Summer Land by A. J. Davis,	1.00	16
Astro Theological Lectures by Rev. Robert Taylor,	2.00	24
A Kiss for a Blow, a Book for children by H. C. Wright, small edition,	.25	12
Large do.	1.50	12
Antiquity and Duration of the World by G. H. Toulmin,	.25	4
An Eye Opener, by Zepa. Cloth,	.75	12
Paper,	.50	04
A Russian Lawyer in Jerusalem in the first century by W. W. Story,	.15	2
Address on Spiritualism, by T. G. Forster.	.25	02
Analogy between the Facts of the Bible and the Facts of Modern Spiritualism, by T. G. Forster.	.15	02
Arcana of Spiritualism, by H. Tuttle.	2.00	24
Biography of Satan, by E. Graves. Price 85 Cents
Better Views of Living, by A. B. Child,	1.00	12
Blossoms of Our Spring, (a Poetic Work,) by Hudson and Nora Tuttle,	1.25	16
Beyond the Breakers, a Tale of Village Life in the West, by Robert Dale Owen,	2.00	24
Mrs. Fay's Book. Mrs. Fay Hudson. Cloth,	.75	2
Branches of Palm, by Mrs. J. S. Adams, a book for every Spiritualist,	1.25	16
Bro'n'ell, by Professor W. Denton,	1.50	16
Bragg-ism, or Bible Rebuked,	1.25	10
Bungal-ism against the Laws of Life and Health, by A. E. Gardner, A. M. M. D. Paper,	1.00	06
Cloth,	1.50	16
Bumbug Constitution of Man,	1.75	16
Common Sense Thoughts on the Bible, by William Denton,	.10	02
Cosmology, by G. W. Kenney, M. D.	1.50	20
Christ Idea in History, by Tuttle,	1.25	16
Christ Idea in History, H. Tuttle,	1.25	16
Chester Family, or the Curse of the Drunkard's Appetite, by M. M. Ireland, with an introduction by H. C. Wright,	1.00	12
Christ and the people, by A. B. Child, M.D.	1.25	16
Christianity; its Influence on Civilization, and its relation to Nature's Religion, by Caleb B. Weeks,	.25	02
Christianity No Finality or Spiritualism Superior to Christianity, —W. Denton,	.10	02
Criticism on the Theological Idea of Deity, by M. B. Craven,	1.75	16
Character of man, by Davis. Two Vols. ($2.00 per Vol)	4.00	48
Davenport Brothers, their Remarkable and Interesting History,	1.50	20
Day of Doom, A Poetical Description of the Great and Last Judgment with other poems, from the 4th edition of 1715,	1.00	12
Devil's Pulpit, by Rev. Robert Taylor, with Sketch of the Author's Life,	2.00	20
Dawn, A Novel of intense interest to progressive people,	1.75	24
Dealings with the Dead, by P. B. Randolph,	.75	12
Death and the After Life, by A. J. Davis, paper 50, postage 4 cents,	.75	12
Errors of the Bible. Demonstrated by the Truths of Nature. By Henry. C. Wright. Paper, 35 cts; postage, 4 cts. Cloth,	.35	4
Elder Hull, a Theological Romance,	.50	06
Empire of the Mother, over the Character and Destiny of the Race, H. C. Wright paper,	.50	04
Cloth,	.75	12
Fables and True Revival of Religion, by Theodore Parker,	.10	02
Footfalls on the Boundary of Another World, by Robert Dale Owen,	1.75	24
Familiar Spirits and Spiritual Manifestations, by Dr. Newton Crosby,	.20	2
Free Thoughts Concerning Religion, or Nature vs Theology, by A. J. Davis,	.20	2
Fugitive Wife, by Warren Chase, Paper,	.15	6
Farewell Night, an Inspirational Poem, Mrs. M. J. Wilcoxson, Madison,		2
Gazelle, a Tale of the Great Rebellion, by Emma Tuttle,	1.25	16
List of Spiritualism, by Warren Chase,	.50	04
Great Harmonia, by A. J. Davis. 4 vols, viz: Vol 1 The Physician; Vol. 2 The Teacher; Vol. 3. The Seer; Vol. 4. The Reformer; Vol. 5. The Thinker,	6.00	96
Gymnastic Manual for Teachers and Students,	.10	2
God Idea in History, by Hudson Tuttle,	1.25	16
God Dealing with Slavery, by Gerrit Smith Richmond. (Ind.) 50; postage 12 cents. Paper,	.75	06
Hierophant, or Gleanings from the Past, by G. O. Skewarz,
Health by good Living W. W. Hall M. D.	1.50	20
Harbinger of Health, By A. J. Davis,	1.50	20
Harmonial Man, or Thoughts for the Age, by A. J. Davis, Paper,	.50	6
Cloth,	.75	12
History and Philosophy of Evil, by A. J. Davis Paper,	.50	8
Cloth,	.75	12
Hayward's Book of all Religions, including Spiritualism,	2.00	24
Holy Bible and Mother Goose, by H. C. Wright,	.38	02
Holy and Unholy Lessons from Nature,	.50	4
Helen Harlow's Vow, By L. Waisbrooker,	1.50	20
How to Bathe, by R. T. Hillier, M. D., paper,	.50	4
Cloth,	.75	12
Judged In, by Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, author of Gates Ajar,	1.50	16
Hollow Globe,	1.00	20
History and Philosophy of Marriage, or Polygamy and Monogamy compared,	1.25	16
History of the Intellectual Development of Europe, by J. W. Draper, M. D. L. L. D. cloth,	5.00	60
Human Physiology, Statistical and Dynamical, or the Conditions and Course of the Life of Man, by J. W. Draper, M. D. L. L. D. 660 page, cloth 5.00 sheep 6.50		60
History of the supernatural, (2 Vols.) 5.0 pages each,	3.00	48
Hit. by Dr. Mary E. Walker,	1.00	16
Immortality, a Work for every child,	1.25	16
Important Truths, a Work for every child,	.50	04
Is the Bible Divine? by B. J. Finney, paper,	.25	2
Cloth,	.50	12
Is there a Devil? The argument Pro and Con,	1.25	16
Inquirer's Text Book, by Robert Cooper,	1.25	16
Instructive Communications from Spirit Land, Mrs. M. S. Park, Medium,	1.25	16
Incidents in my Life, by Dr. D. D. Home, Introduction by Judge Edmonds,	1.25	16
Infidel, or Inquirer's Text Book by Robert Cooper,	1.25	16
Is it the Despot of Science? by W. D. Gunning,	.10	02
Jesus of Nazareth, by Renan,	1.50	20
Jehovah Unveiled, or the Character of the Jewish Deity Delineated,	.25	4
Joan of Arc, Maiden, translated from the French, by Sarah M. Grimkee,	1.00	12
Kidder's Secrets of Sex Keeping. Price, paper bound 50 cents. Boards bound,	.75	08
Koran, with explanatory notes, by George Sale 2 vo. 870 page, best edition yet published,	2.50	40
Koran. Life of Mohammed, translated by George Sale, Gent. 12 mo., 473 pages.	1.50	20
Life Line of the Lone One, by Warren Chase,	1.00	12
Little Star Lessons,	.30	2
Life of Thomas Paine, with critical and explanatory observations of his writings, by G. Vale,	1.00	16
Life of Jesus,	1.75	20
Love and its Hidden History, by F. B. Randolph,	1.50	16
Life in the Beyond, an Undeveloped Spirit's History, by E. Smith,	.10	2
Lyric of the Golden Age, by T. L. Harris,	1.00	20
Lecture Portfolio, or Resurgence as it, and as it is to be, by G. B. Wood,
Life and Moral Actions of Confucius, by M. E. M. Wright,	1.00	16
Letters to Elder Miles Grant, by Rev. Moses Hull,	.25	02
Living Present, Dead Past. H. C. Wright. Cloth,	.75	12
Paper,	.50	6
Lyceum Guide. Cloth covg,	.75	12
Paper cover,	.50	06
My Love and I, by Abby M. Laffin Purrot,	.50	8
Magic Staff, an Auto-Biography of A. J. Davis,	1.75	20
Mesmerism, by Hyram Orton,	1.50	16
Marriage and Parentage, by Henry C. Wright,	1.25	16
Mystery of Angels Manifested, by A. E. Newton,	.50	8
Midnight Cry,	.25	4
Moses and the Israelites, by Merritt Munson,	1.50	16
Mitchell and Rynder's Prison Life,	1.50	16
small edition,	.50	06
Marvels of the Beyond of Life, by D. D. Cadwall,	.10	02
Manual for Children, (for Lyceums,) by A. J. Davis, Cloth,	.50	4
Abridged edition,	.25	2
My Affinity, and other Stories, by Lizzie Doten,	1.50	20
Methodism, its Love and Conditions, with Brief Instructions for the Formation of Spirit Circles, by J. M. Powell,	.25	02
Man a Trinity, by E. G. Forster,	.15	02
Man a Religious Animal, by T. G. Forster,	.15	02
Modern American Spiritualism 1848 to 1868, by Emma Hardinge,	2.75	44
Man's Rights, or how would you like it, by Annie Denton Gridge,	.15	2
Morning Lectures (Twenty Discourses) by A. J. Davis,	1.75	20
Man and his relations, by Professor S. B. Brittain,	4.00	48
Nature's Divine Revelations, by Andrew Jackson Davis,	3.50	48
New Testament Miracles, and Modern Miracles, by J. S. Fowler,	.10	4
Night Side of Nature, by Crowell,	1.25	20
Ordeal of Life, Through Dr. J. G. Orland, Medium,	.25	04
Orthodoxy False, since Spiritualism is True, by Wm. Denton,	.10	20
Our Planet, Geology by Denton,	1.50	20
Orthodox, the Limbo of Vanities,	.10	02
Origin of Species, by Darwin,	2.00	24
Origin of Civilization and Primitive Condition of Man, by Sir J. Lubbock,	3.00	24
One Religion, Many Creeds, by Rhe Wilson,	1.5	12
Origin of Species, with Notes and References, by G. F. Hidridge,	.10	02
Poems and Hymns, by A. J. Davis,	1.50	20
Pre-Adamite Man, by Randolph,	1.50	20
Physiology of the Spirit, by O. Merril, M. D.	1.00	12
Planchette—The despair of Science, by Epes Sargent,	1.25	16
Philosophy of Spiritualism Interpreted. A. J. Davis. Paper 60 cts; postage 8 cts. Cloth,	1.10	16
Principles of Nature, by Mrs. M. M. King,	1.75	24
Poems from the Inner Life, by Lizzie Doten,	1.50	16
Philosophy of Creation, by Thomas Paine, through Horace Wood, Medium. Cloth,	.60	08
Paper,	.25	04
Real Life in Spirit Land given Inspirationally by Mrs. Maria M. King,	1.00	16
Rules for Raising Spiritual Circles, by Rev. Hardinge,	.5	02
Sexual Physiology, by R. T. Trall, M. D.	2.00	30
Strange Visitors, Dictated through a clairvoyant,	1.25	20
Spiritual Harp,	2.00	24
Abridged Edition	1.00	16
Sequel to The Love Life, by the Spirit of Dr. R. E. Rate,	.30	2
Spiritual Tracts by Judge Edmonds,	.20	2
Self Abnegation, or the true King and Queen, by H. C. Wright, Paper,	.50	6
Cloth,	.75	12
Spiritualism, or Directions in Development, by A. M. Laffin Purrot,	.30	2
Self-Contradictions of the Bible,	.25	2
Soul Affinity, by A. B. Child, M. D.,	.20	02
Sexology as the Philosophy of Life, by Mrs. H. O. G. Willard,	2.00	24
Six Lectures on Theology and Nature, by Emma Hardinge, Paper,	.75
Cloth,	1.00
Soul of Things, by Wilkinson and Hitchcock Denton,	.20
Spirit Manifestations, by Adin Ballou,	.75	12
Spirit Mysteries Explained, by A. J. Davis,	1.50	20
Supramundane Phenomena, by Moses Hull,	.10	02
Social Evils by Mrs. M. M. King,	.25
Spiritual Philosophy versus Diabolism, by Mrs. M. M. King,	.25
Sense and Nonsense, S. M. Landis, M. D.	2.00	20
Songs of Life,—S. W. Tucker,	.50	08
Spiritual Songs,—S. W. Tucker,	1.5	02
Spirit Life of Theodore Parker, through the Mediumship of Miss E. Ramsdell,	.40	02
Seven Hour System of Grammar, by Prof. D. P. Howe, Paper,	1.00	06
Cloth,	.50	08
Scien.es of Evil, by Joel Moody,	1.75	20
Seership, Randolph,	2.00	20
Spiritual Manifestations, by J. S. Rymer,	.10	02
The Fountain, by A. J. Davis,	1.00	12
The Irrepressible Conflict,
The Bible in Spain, or the Journeyings, Records, or Gospels and Gospel, by Wm. Denton,	.75	04
Cloth,	.10	02
The Bible in India,	1.00	97
The Faithful Guardian, an Inspirational Story, by J. William Van Namee,	1.50	16
The Bible in the Family,	1.50	16
That Terrible Question, by Moses Hull,	.10	02
True Love. What it is, and What it is not, by A. B. Davis,	.5	02
The Dynamic Gun, by Leroy Sunderland,	1.00	12
Tale of a Physician, by A. J. Davis,	1.50	20
The Future Life, by Mrs. Sweet,	1.50	20
The Question Settled, by Moses Hull,	.10	02
The Spiritual Harp, by George Wood,	2.00	24
The Gates Ajar, by Miss. E. S. Phelps,	1.50	16
The Orphan's Struggle, by Mrs. H. N. Green,	.15
The Pearl Diver, by Dr. J. W. Kirby	.75
The Gospel of Good and Evil, by Silver	1.50	16
The Trance, by Lenny Sunderland,	1.50	16
The Great South-West, by W. Hiseley,	1.00	14
The Merits of Jesus Christ and the Merits of Thomas Paine as a substitute for merits in others. What is the difference between them? H. C. Wright,	.15	2
The Philosophical Dictionary of Voltaire. Fifth American Edition, 876 octavo page, two steel plates. Largest and most correct edition in the English Language. Contains more matter than the London Edition, which sells for $20.00,	5.00	60
The Gospels, by Rev. Robert Taylor, written by him while imprisoned for blasphemy. This work is a history of the origin, evidence, and early History of Christianity,	2.00	20
The Children's Progressive Lyceum Manual,	.50	02
The Lamar Mystery, an Inspirational Poem by Lizzie Doten,	.20	02
The Deluge, William Denton,	.10	2
The Three Voices,	1.25	16
The Inspired Philosopher, Voltaire,	.75	12
The Woman who Dared, by Epes Sargent,	1.50	20
Theological and Miscellaneous Writings of Thomas Paine,	5.00	24
Thomas Paine's Pilgrimage in the Spirit World.	.75	.08
The System of Nature, or Laws of the Moral and Physical World, by Baron D'Holbach,	2.00	24
The Psalms of Life, by J. S. Adams. Paper cover,	.50	08
Board cover,	.75	12
Cloth,	1.00	16
Tobacco and its Effects, by H. Gibbons, M. D.	.20	02
The Penetralia, by A. J. Davis,	1.75	24
The Fab. o, a Critical Rhapsody,	.75	.08
The Rosicrucian Dream Book, compiled from all language, by P. B. Randolph,	.10	.04
Underhill on Mesmerism, Paper,	.50	04
Unhappy Marriages, by A. B. Child,	.20	02
Unwelcome Child, by Henry C. Wright, Paper,	.38	4
Cloth,	.75	12
Voice of Prayer, by Barlow,	.25	.02
Vestiges of Creation,	.75	.08
Vital Force, how wasted and how promoted, by E. P. Miller, M. D. Paper, 50 cts.; Cloth,	1.00	12
Volney's Ruins; or Meditations on the Revolutions of Empires, with Biographical notice by Count Daru,	1.00	12
Voices from Spirit-Land through N. F. White,	.62	12
What is Right, What is Wrong,	.10	2
What is Spiritualism, and what Spiritualists Have a Creed for, by Mrs. M. M. King,	.25
Whatever is, is Right, A. B. Child, M. D.	1.00	12
Writings of Comte,	.10	02
Wolf in sheep's Clothing, or God in the Constitution, Moses Hull,	.10	.02
Year Book of Spiritualism. Cloth,	1.25	20
Paper,	1.00	08

WE ARE ALSO NOW IN A SITUATION TO FURNISH Miscellaneous books of any kind published at regular rates, and, on receipt of the money, will send them by mail or express as may be desired. If sent by mail, one-fifth more than the regular cost of the book will be required to prepay postage. The patronage of our friends is solicited. In making remittances for books, by postal orders when practicable. If postal orders cannot be had, register your letters.

SOUL-READING,

OR

Psychometric Delineations.

A. B. SEVERANCE.

THE WELL-KNOWN PSYCHOMETRIST,

Will give to those who visit him in person, or from autograph, or look of hand, a reading of character; marked changes, past and future; advice in regard to business; diagnosis of disease, with prescription; adaptation of those including marriage relations. Directions for the management of children; hints to the inharmoniously married, etc. Terms—$2.00 for Full Delineations; Brief Delineations $1.00. A. B. SEVERANCE.

457 Milwaukee St., Milwaukee, Wis.

vol. 7, No. 15—tf.

H. SNOW,

319 KEARNEY ST., (Up Stairs,) SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.,

Keeps for sale the

RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL,

And a general variety of

Spiritualist and Reform Books,

At Eastern prices. Also, Orton's Anti-Tobacco Preparation, Spence's Positive and Negative Powders, Adams & co.'s Golden Pens, Planchettes, Dr. Storer's Nutritive Compound, etc. Catalogues and Circulars mailed free. Remittances in U. S. currency and postage stamps received at par. Address, HERMAN SNOW; P. O. Box 117, San Francisco, Cal.

Warren Chase & Co., No. 603 North Fifth street, St. Louis, Mo.,

Keep constantly on hand all the publications of Wm. White & Co., J. P. Mendum, Adams & Co., Banner Publishing Co., Publications, and all other popular Liberal Literature, including Religio-Philosophical Journal and Banner Light, Magazines, Photographs, Picture Frames, Golden Pens, Stationery, etc.

Rail-Roads.

SUMMER ARRANGEMENT.

ARRIVAL AND DEPARTURE OF TRAINS.

Chicago and Northwestern Railroad—Council Bluffs and Omaha Line—Depot North Wells street

Ticket Office, south-east corner of Clark and Lake streets.

	Leave.	Arrive.
Cedar Rapids Passenger	8.30 a. m.	4.50 p. m.
Pacific Past Line	10.45 a. m.	3.30 p. m.
Rock Island Express	10.30 a. m.	3.45 p. m.
Pacific Night Express	12.5.00 p. m.	7.00 a. m.
Rock Island Night Passenger	17.01.0 p. m.	7.30 a. m.
Union Passenger	4.00 p. m.	11.30 a. m.

Prospect Line.

Prospect and Dunleith Pass	9.00 a. m.	7.15 a. m
Prospect and Dunleith Pass	9.45 p. m.	8.00 p. m.
Northfield, Night, Fox River and State Line	4.00 p. m.	11.15 a. m.
St. Charles and Elgin Passenger	4.15 p. m.	9.45 a. m.
Junction Passenger	5.30 p. m.	8.30 a. m.
Lombard Accommodation	6.15 p. m.	8.45 a. m.

Milwaukee Division—Depot corner of Canal and Kinzie street.

Milwaukee Mail	8.00 a. m.	10.15 a. m.
Day Express	9.45 a. m.	4.0 p. m.
Evanston Accommodation	11.00 a. m.	2.00 p. m.
Rose Hill, Evanston, and Highland Park	1.00 p. m.	3.40 p. m.
Afternoon Past	4.00 p. m.	7.40 p. m.
Kenosha Express	5.15 p. m.	9.30 a. m.
Waukegan Passenger	6.30 p. m.	9.30 a. m.
Waukegan Accommodation	6.00 p. m.	9.45 a. m.
Milwaukee do	11.00 p. m.	6.30 a. m.

Kenosha and Waukegan trains leave from Wells street Depot.

Wisconsin Division—Depot corner of Canal and Kinzie streets

St. Paul Express	10.00 a. m.	7.15 p. m.
Fond du Lac Express	9.00 p. m.	8.00 a. m.
Janesville Accommodation	9.00 p. m.	1.00 p. m.
Woodstock Accommodation	4.30 p. m.	10.15 a. m.
Hampton Accommodation	6.15 p. m.	7.55 a. m.

GEO. L. DUNLAP, General Superintendent.

H. P. Stanwood, General Ticket Agent

Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Rail-Road.

Depot corner Van Buren and Sherman streets. Ticket Office 66 South Clark street.

Mail	8.30 a. m.	7.00 p. m.
Special N Y Express	9.00 a. m.	4.00 p. m.
Mixhardt Accommodation	12.30 p. m.	10.35 a. m.
Atlantic Express (daily)	4.15 p. m.	9.30 a. m.
Night Express	5.00 p. m.	10.30 a. m.

Detroit and Grand Rapids Line.

Day Express	7.30 a. m.	7.30 p. m.
Night "	5.00 p. m.	10.30 a. m.

P. B. Moore, Gen'l Pass. Agt., 66 Clark st., Chicago.

Michigan Central Railroad—Union Depot, foot of Lake street

Ticket Office Lake st., cor. Dearborn—Passenger trains of this company leave and arrive at Chicago as follows:

Mail Train	8.30 a. m.	8.00 p. m
Atlantic Express	9.00 a. m.	4.30 p. m.
Atlantic Express (daily)	10.15 p. m.	7.00 a. m.
Night Express	5.00 p. m.	10.30 a. m.
Kalamazoo Accommodation	4.15 p. m.	10.30 a. m.

Cincinnati and Louisville Route.

Day Express	9.00 a. m.	9.30 p. m.
Through Express	4.30 p. m.	10.30 a. m.

for St. Joseph via New Buffalo.

Day Express	9.00 a. m.	11.30 p. m.
Accommodation	4.30 p. m.	8.00 p. m.

HENRY C. WENTWORTH,
General Passenger Agent.

U. B. SARGENT, Gen'l Superintendent, Chicago.

Chicago, Burlington and Quincy

Ticket Office 63 Clark St., opposite Sherman House. Union Depot, foot of Lake St.

Hinsdale Accommodation	9 a. m.	6.15 p. m.
Mail and Express	7.30 a. m.	3.40 p. m.
Pacific Past Line	10.45 a. m.	4.15 p. m.
Hinsdale Accommodation	4.45 p. m.	9.20 p. m.
Aurora Accommodation	5.30 p. m.	9.45 a. m.
Evening Express	8.00 p. m.	7.35 p. m.
Aurora Passenger	12.01 p. m.	6.30 a. m.
Hinsdale Accommodation	4.15 p. m.	8.50 a. m.
Pacific Night Express	12.00 p. m.	17.00 a. m.

ROSSER HARRIS, Superintendent.

SAMUEL POWELL, Gen'l Ticket Agt. Office in Gl. Cent. Depot

Illinois Central Rail-Road—Depot, foot of Lake street.

Cairo Mail	9.30 a. m.	7.45 p. m.
Cairo Express	6.15 p. m.	7.00 a. m.
Cairo Passenger	9.0 0 a. m.	6.30 p. m.
Kankak Night Passenger	12.00 p. m.	7.00 a. m.

On Saturdays this train will leave at 6.45 p. m.

Champaign Passenger	4.50 p. m.	9.30 a. m.
Hyde Park and Oak Woods	8.30 a. m.	9.45 a. m.
" " "	10.00 a. m.	2.45 p. m.
" " "	12.15 p. m.	2.45 p. m.
" " "	4.00 p. m.	6.15 p. m.
" " "	5.30 p. m.	7.45 p. m.
Mail Train	9.30 a. m.	7.45 p. m.

(St. Louis through Trains.)

Day Express	9.30 a. m.	6.15 p. m
Fast Line	6.15 p. m.	7.00 a. m.

M. HOUSTON, Gen'l Supt.

W. P. JOHNSON, Gen'l Passenger Agent.

Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne and Chicago—Depot, Corner of Madison and Canal Streets.

Mail	7.30 a. m.	6.10 p. m.
Day Express	9.00 a. m.	6.00 a. m
Atlantic Express	8.15 p. m.	8.00 p. m.
New York Express	8.00 p. m.	9.00 a. m.
Valparaiso Accommodation	5.30 p. m.	7.00 a. m.

W. G. CLELAND, Gen. West'n Pass. Agt., 66 Clark st.

Chicago and St. Louis—Depot, corner Madison and Canal streets

Express Mail	9.15 a. m.	6.00 p. m.
Lightning Express	12.00 m.	6.00 a. m.
Accommodation	4.45 p. m.	9.45 a. m.
Night Express	10.30 p. m.	6.00 a. m.
Lightning Express	9.00 p. m.	6.30 a. m.

*Except Sundays. †Runs through to St. Louis every night. ‡Saturdays and Sundays excepted. ||Except Monday.

T. B. BLACKSTONE, Pres. & Gen'l Superintendent.
A. NEWMAN, Gen'l Pass. Agt., Office 55 Dearborn st.

CHICAGO, DANVILLE AND VINCENNES RAILROAD.

Milwaukee Depot—Corner Canal and Kinzie Sts., West Side. Freight Office at C., D. & I. C. R. R.'s Office, corner Halsted and Carroll sts.

Mail Train Chicago time,	3.45 p. m.	9.15 a. m

Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad. cor Van Buren and Sherman Streets.

Pacific day Express	10.00 a.m.	4.15 p.m.
Fast Accommodation	4.30 p.m.	9.50 a.m.
Pacific Night Express	12.5.00 p.m.	7.00 a.m.

An elegant parlor sleeping car is attached to the 10 a. m. train, running through to Council Bluffs and Omaha.

A. H. CALVERT, Gen'l Passenger Agent.
E. St. John, Gen'l Ticket Clerk.
F. A. HALE, Asst'Gen Superintendent.

Pittsburg, Cincinnati, & St. Louis R. R.—Cincinnati Air Line.

Cincinnati Express	9.45 a. m.	6.40 a. m.
Cincinnati Express	9.45 a. m.	9.30 p. m.
Cincinnati Night Express	17.45 p. m.	6.35 p. m.
Columbus Night Express	17.05 p. m.
Lafayette Accommodation	4.45 p. m.	9.35 a. m.

W. H. SNOW, Gen'l Pass. Agt., Ticket Office Corner Randolph and Dearborn streets.

Goodrich's Passenger Steamers.

For Milwaukee and West Shore ports *daily at 9.00 a. m.
For Grand Haven and East Shore ports *daily at 7.00 p. m.
For St. Joseph and Benton Harbor, *daily at 10 a. m.
Green Bay Ports, Tuesdays and Fridays at 7 p. m.

*Sundays excepted. †Mondays excepted. Saturdays excepted.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF CREATION

Unfolding the laws of the Progressive Development of Nature, and embracing the Philosophy of Man, Spirit, and Spirit world. By Thomas Paine, through the hand of Horace G. Wood, Medium.

Price 75 cents, postage 6 cents. For sale at this Office

The Biography of Satan;

or an Historical Exposition of the

DEVIL AND HIS FIERY DOMINIONS.

Containing the oriental origin of the belief in a Devil and Future Endless Punishment. All about the

BOTTOMLESS PIT, KEYS OF HELL Chains of Darkness, Casting out Devils, etc.,

By E. GRAVES, author of "Christianity Before Christ." Price 75—25 cents. The Trade Supplied at Liberal Rates.

PUBLISHED BY
RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL Publishing House,
187 & 189 S. Clark St, Chicago.

THE CELEBRATED

CRAIG MICROSCOPE

Is an optical wonder; reveals the thousands of hidden wonders of Nature; is of permanent use and practical availability, combining instruction with amusement, and never losing its interest. It magnifies a power equal to other microscopes of many times its cost. Reveals countless little worlds all around us, teeming with life, which, to the naked eye must forever remain a sealed book—as Eels in Vinegar, Animals in Water, Cheese Mites, Sugar and Itch Insects, Milk Globules, Claws and Hairs of Insects, Hundreds of Eyes in the Single eye of a Fly, Dust of a Butterfly's Wings to be perfectly formed feathers, the much talked of Trichina Spiralis or Pork Worm, which was first discovered in America with this Microscope.

TEN THOUSAND TIMES,

It is of infinite value to professional men, to teachers and to students, but nowhere is it of greater value than on the family table, within the reach of every member. It will delight yourself, your children and friends during the long winter evenings. It will show you adulterations or uncleanliness of various kinds in food, as sugar, tea, bread, meat, &c.

It is of Inestimable Value to the Farmer

in examining insects which prey upon his crops. The power of a 250 microscope, and so simple in its construction that any child can use it understandingly and with appreciation.

A Beautiful Present, Elegant, Instructive, Amusing, and Cheap. Over 60,000 sold.

During the past six years its worth has been testified to by Thousands of Scientific Men, Farmers, School Teachers, Students, Physicians, Heads of Families, and others.

PRICE $3.00.—Sent by Mail, Post-paid.

Every instrument is neatly boxed, and handsomely labeled with full directions for use. Thousands have been sent by mail.

Address:—RELIGIO - PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 South Clark St., Chicago.

Prof. Wm. Denton's Works.

THE SOUL OF THINGS; OR PSYCHOMETRIC RESEARCHES AND DISCOVERIES. By William and Elizabeth M. F. Denton.

This valuable and highly interesting work has become a part of the standard literature of the country.

Price, $1.50cts. Postage, 20cts.

LECTURES ON GEOLOGY, THE PAST AND FUTURE OF OUR PLANET. A valuable scientific work.

Price, $1.50cts. Postage, 20cts.

COMMON SENSE THOUGHTS ON THE BIBLE. For Common People. Twelfth thousand, revised and enlarged.

Price, 10cts., Postage, 2cts.

THE DELUGE, IN THE LIGHT OF MODERN SCIENCE.

Price, 10cts, Postage, 2cts.

WHAT IS RIGHT. Price, 10cts., Postage, 2cts.

BE THYSELF. Price, 10cts., Postage, 2cts.

For sale at The Religio-Philosophical Journal Office.

Address S. S. Jones, 187 & 189, South Clark street, Chicago, Ill.

NEW WORKS BY PROF. DENTON.

"ORTHODOXY FALSE,

Since Spiritualism is True."

Price, 10 cents: postage, 2 cents.

THE IRRECONCILABLE RECORDS; OR, GENESIS AND GEOLOGY.

160 pages. Price: paper, 25 cents, postage, 4 cts. cloth, 40 cents, postage 6 cts.

For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 187 & 189 S. Clark Street, Chicago.

ARCANA OF SPIRITUALISM.

A MANUAL OF

SPIRITUAL SCIENCE AND PHILOSOPHY

By Hudson Tuttle.

With Portrait of the Author. Price $2.00; Postage 24c.

This work embodies the results of the author's researches and experience during the past twenty years, and is, without doubt, the most thorough presentation of the subject of Modern Spiritualism before the public.

Dealing, as it does, with a question in which the interest of all mankind is centered, it cannot fail to command universal attention.

While the experience of thousands will repudiate some of the conclusions the author arrives at, they will still be able to obtain much invaluable information from the book. It is a good book to place in the hands of every person who would know more of what it is that is waking the world to religious aspirations, and planting a tree of life beside every man's door.

 Price, $2.00; postage, 24 cents. For sale, wholesale and retail, by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

CONJUGAL SINS

AGAINST THE

LAWS OF LIFE AND HEALTH,

AND

THEIR EFFECT ON THE FATHER MOTHER AND CHILD.

BY AUGUSTUS K. GARDNER, A.M., M. D.

Late Professor of Diseases of Females and Chemical Medical Midwifery in the New York Medical College.

CONT

Frontier Department.

BY.....E. V. WILSON

A Loathsome Fiend.

Below we give our readers a few statements from the press, of the doings of religious free lovers and retired Christian ministers. May Spiritualists never be cursed with settled speakers:

No. 1—From the Murrey Weekly Times, Delaware County, Ind:

For some days we have been in possession of certain facts concerning the beastly career of a pseudo minister in Wells County, but have withheld them in the interests of justice. The circumstances demanding their being withheld have ceased to operate, and we lay them before the public, in the hope that they may aid in bringing the diabolically beastly scoundrel to the condign punishment he so richly deserves. The facts are these:

For some years past there has resided in Wells County a sort of base wood preacher by the name of Sutton. What denomination he belonged to we have not learned. He had a wife and a family of grown up daughters. In the course of a few years he seduced three of these daughters, and made an attempt to ruin the fourth, but failed, and the girl informed her mother. Investigation then disclosed his other beastly crimes, and steps were taken to bring him to justice, but he, hearing of his danger, fled from the officers, and came, as is supposed, to this county.

On Saturday, the 6th ult., the sheriff of Wells county arrived here in pursuit of Sutton. He had fled on hearing that he was in danger of arrest and as he had relatives in this county, the sheriff of Wells supposed he could be caught here. He expected to catch the fugitive while he was making some rallies in the vicinity from here, on Sunday, the 26th ult., as Sutton is very fond of exercising his pulpit gifts, but he had probably received information of the presence of the sheriff of Wells in this county, for he did not put in an appearance at the meeting referred to, and has probably fled to distant regions, it may be to continue his career of incomparable villainy.

Nor is the seduction of his children the only crime that Sutton is charged with being guilty of. If stories in circulation in Wells County are true, there is a lower deep still to the immeasurable villainy of this fiend, in human form. It is openly charged in Wells County that he was accessory to the death of one of his unfortunate daughters, whilst attempting to hide the results of his devilish criminality.

We are sorry we have not an accurate description of this human ghoul, that by its publication we might do something to ward bringing him to the punishment he so richly deserves. Let the press pass this infamous record around, and it may head him off yet.

From the Boston Sunday Times, Oct 9th, 1870.

CAUGHT AT LAST.

The Story of a Clergyman Who Is Not a Saint.

The life and adventures of a man calling himself Rev. James S Green, who has just been arrested by the police for various charges, must have been eventful and exciting, if we may judge from the following story of his doings:

He is a native of New York, and a Japanese by trade. The police were first acquainted with this man just four years ago, when he was living in Middleville, Ct., as pastor of a Methodist church. While there, his first wife appeared upon the scene, and found him living with a second wife, and obtained money from him in some way, so that he became pecuniarily involved to the amount of about $600 Shortly afterward, the parsonage in which he was living was burned, and he and his wife, according to their representations, escaped with what little clothing they could don. He also claimed to have lost $300 in money by the fire. His little flock had their sympathies aroused, raised money enough to reclothe them, and made good the $300. They disappeared immediately afterwards, and nothing was known of them until lately. Some time afterward, a lot of baggage which had been lying in the depot unclaimed for a long time, was advertised for sale, and on being opened, was found to be the household goods and clothing of the missing minister, which he claimed to have had four wives.

The next known of him was in Greensburg, Ind., where he was settled as pastor of the Baptist Church, as Rev. James S Green. He was very popular, and obtained the confidence of many of the best men in the county, from some of whom quite large sums of money on his personal note, which they endorsed. He pretended to own large property in Baltimore, where he should shortly go and sell it, and with the proceeds take up the notes which were deposited in the bank in Greensburg. He left ostensibly for that purpose, and returned with four notes of $1670 each, all signed by Wilson & Co., and dated Baltimore, Jan. 1st, 1870, and running one, two, three and four years. These were deposited finally in the bank in Greensburg. He left the place as soon after as possible, and the notes were found to be forgeries, and it was also discovered that he never owned property in Baltimore, and that the whole story was a complete humbug. He probably came to Boston, but did not get off at the Boston and Albany depot, where detectives were on the watch for him in response to a telegram that he was seen on the train at Albany. Baggage belonging to him was traced to a house on Cambridge street, but he eluded the officers, and he was finally found to be living in Cambridge. When the officers went there they found he had gone to Connecticut, and they finally arrested him in Middleville, as stated. He is a fine, smart looking man, of about fifty years, and a good talker. He is said to have had four wives. He admits the whole thing.

He is wanted principally in Indiana, as there he is alleged to have committed forgeries to the big tune of $30,000. He was brought to Boston yesterday morning, en route for Indiana.

A Striking Coincidence.

The last number of the Medical and Surgical Reporter contains a communication from M. Reece, M. D., of Abington, Ill., relating to a clergyman of this city, which is, in substance, as follows:

The Rev. James B. Dunn delivered, not long since, a sermon on the death of Sir James Y. Simpson, which was printed in the August number of the Journal of the Gynæcological Society of Boston. It seems that a portion of that sermon was "conveyed" from a discourse on "The Sacredness of the Medical Profession," delivered in Philadelphia, 1865, before the students of Jefferson Medical College, and the Medical Department of the University of Pennsylvania, by the Rev. E. R. Beadle. The following are extracts from the two sermons:

"It may be said that Parker opened the gates of China with a lancet, when European cannon could not break a single bar. Dr. Halley entered the island of Madeira with a single companion, a sick wife, leaning on his arm; he left it with eight hundred men, won for the truth and God. Thomas was an early medical missionary in India. A Hindoo came to him with a dislocated shoulder. He reduced the luxation, and then told him of Christ, who came into the world to save sinners. He was touched, subdued, soon broke caste, became a changed man, became a Christian. He was the first Hindoo convert, and the leader of a mighty host who have since entered into the kingdom. It was a physician who gave India to England; it is a physician who is winning Africa to civilization, and preparing a high way and home for the African race. It was a physician, well known and dear to the hearts of many in this community, who forced his way to the north magnetic pole, and brought to the doors of Christianity those unknown and wandering tribes of the icy north; and a physician who followed in his steps, did his best to complete the discoveries which he inaugurated, and made the frozen and inhospitable regions of our globe warm with the love of Christ. Physicians led in the van of that army which lifted the South Sea Islands from cannibalism, and lighted on those distant groups a civilization which is never to go out."—Rev E. R Beadle.

"Parker, it may be said, opened the gates of China with a lancet, when European cannon could not break a single bar. Dr. Halley entered the island of Madeira with a single companion, a sick wife, leaning on his arm; he left it with eight hundred men won to the truth and God. Thomas was as early medical missionary in India. A Hindoo came to him with a dislocated shoulder. He reduced the luxation, and then told him of Christ, who came into the world to save sinners. He was touched, subdued, soon broke caste, became a changed man, became a Christian. He was the first Hindoo convert, and the leader of a mighty host who have since entered into the kingdom. It was a physician who gave India to England; it is a physician who is winning Africa to civilization, and preparing a high way and home for the African race. It was a physician, well known and dear to the hearts of many in this community, who forced his way to the north magnetic pole, and brought to the doors of Christianity those unknown and wandering tribes of the icy north. It is a physician who followed in his steps, did his best to complete the discoveries which he inaugurated, and made the frozen and inhospitable regions of our globe warm with the love of Christ. Physicians led in the van of that army which lifted the South Sea Islands from cannibalism, and lighted on those distant groups a civilization which is never to go out."—Rev E. R Beadle.

*Gabriel Broughton, in 1656

From the New York Standard, May.

Disgracing Their Creed.

The examination of those engaged in the religious riot at Rockville Center was to have been entertained on Saturday last, owing to the illness of Justice DeMott, an adjournment was unavoidable. The examination was set down for a week from next Wednesday. A large party of men had gathered to be witness of the legal proceedings, the latter lasting about two hours, being marked by the clemency of the weather. The prevailing opinion was that had the examination proceeded, there would have been a free fight before the closing of the day. Both sides were out in about equal numbers. An altercation occurred between some of them a few evenings ago, and Mr. Sherwood had his pants torn almost entirely off. However, it was the intention to conclude the previous encounter on equal ground, and in the presence of equal numbers. The conversations among those interested, were disgustingly absurd. One man, a member of the church, said that to become a thief and respected, it was only necessary to join the church. Another added that there were more thieves in the church than out of it. And another said that to find an honest man it was necessary to go among the heathen. After rubbing several times, some one proposed a game of "sewer-up." Some demurred, but at length consented, and the game proceeded for several hours. All were very willing to take their refreshments, and the great crowd dispersed with interested countenances. There was much talk concerning the trustee's philippic against Mr. Kelsey and the elder of the district. They say they will swear to every word of it, which augurs badly for the ministry.

Harrisburgh, Pa.

Our friends at the above place can procure the JOURNAL of Wm. Bishop, Newsdealer, on Broad street.

Amusements.

CHICAGO ACADEMY OF DESIGN.

66 Adams street. Fifth Annual Exhibition. Open every day, and on Saturday evenings. Admission, 25 cents. We would again call the attention of our citizens to this very worthy institution. The public spirit and enterprise shown by the managers in procuring the finest paintings to be had in the country, for the admiration of the lovers of the beautiful in this city, is commendable, and we hope our people will show their appreciation of this, by extending to them that liberal patronage they so well deserve.

CROSBY'S OPERA HOUSE

Last week of the great Ravel-Martinetti Pantomime Troupe. This Tuesday, May 16th, Jocko. Hair at Home. Ballet divertisement. Can-can, by De'a and Ignacio Martinetti, aged four and six years. Entire change on Friday, Grand Matinee Saturday. Monday, May 15th, 1871, opening night of the famous Lydia Thompson Burlesque Troupe. Laughable Farce. Burlesque of Lurline! Box Sheet now open for the sale of Reserved Seats.

DEARBORN THEATRE

Manning's Minstrels. The highly sensational, very laughable, and exquisitely beautiful burlesque, with its wonderful Flying Palace, Gorgeous Enchanted Cavern, Original Sand Fly, Trained Elephant, etc., entitled "Aladin." The excruciating sketch introducing the famous lecture on Anatomy, entitled "The Examination." Great Comic Quartette. Ricardo in new ballads, etc. In active preparation, with everything new, an original version of "Pocahontas."

HOOLEY'S OPERA HOUSE.

Another monster bill. Turkish Musical Cats. An entire new tournament. Alias Crystals. Aquecute. Mr. J. C. Kemp's Popular Melodies. Egyptian Sphynx! Imported direct from the Kairbo Catacombs. Cinderella. Beauty. Novelty. Mirth. Excitement. Wonder. Delight. Entire new tournament.

M'VICKER'S THEATRE.

Engagement of the Brilliant Little Star, Lotta, in her speciality in three acts, of The Little Detective. Lotta in six characters, Songs, Dances, and Lotta Specialities. Saturday, Lotta Matinee. Friday, The Little Detective. Monday, "Little Nell and the Marchioness."

LAKE PARK

Circus. The Paris Pavilion. Dan Rice, manager. At Lake Park, foot of Randolph st., for two weeks, commencing Monday night, May 15th, at 7 o'clock. Grand Entree at 8.

SPURRIER HOUSE;

SIXTH AND MAIN STS.,

LOUISVILLE, KY.

MOST CENTRALLY LOCATED.

($2.00 PER DAY)

E. R. Spurrier & Co.

10 n38t.

First Enlarged Edition.

Death and the After-Life.

EIGHT LECTURES ON THE SUMMER LAND.

By Andrew Jackson Davis.

This edition contains more than double the amount of matter in any previous edition, with only a small advance in price. Bound in cloth, 75cts, Postage, 12cts; in paper, covers, 50cts, Postage 4cts.

For sale at the Office of the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL, 187 & 189, South Clark street, Chicago, Ill.

GOD

DEALING WITH SLAVERY.

God's Instrumentalities in Emancipating the African Slave in America.

SPIRIT MESSAGES

Given During the Years 1860 to 1870, inclusive,—from FRANKLIN, LINCOLN, ADAMS, JACKSON, WEBSTER, PENN, and others to the Author,

THOMAS RICHMOND.

This is one of the most interesting books in the whole catalogue of Spiritualist publications. Its author is well and widely known throughout the Western States, he having been one of the early pioneers and a man of extraordinary energy and ability, who would make his mark in any country. After an active business life of over sixty years, he now, in his seventy-fifth year, is as strong and lively, and as capable of doing business as he was fifty years ago. His ability, energy, and acquaintance with many of the leading men of the country, pointed him out to Franklin and other distinguished spirits as the most fitting instrument with which they were to accomplish a mighty undertaking. The manner in which they worked through him and the results achieved are herein related by the author in a book of 336 pages.

PRICE: Cloth, $1.00; postage, 12 cents. Enamled paper sides and cloth back, 75 cents; postage, 6 cents.

For Sale, Wholesale and Retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 187 & 189 South Clark street, Chicago.

THE HIEROPHANT,

OR

Gleanings from the Past.

BY O. C. STEWART.

"Being an exposition of Biblical astronomy, and the symbolisms and mysteries on which were founded all ancient religions and secret societies, with an explanation of the dark sayings and allegories that abound in the Pagan, Jewish and Christian Bibles; also the real sense of the doctrines and observances of the modern Christian churches."

The above is a good deal to promise the reader that he will find done up in a neat little 16 mo. book of 324 pages, but we assure our readers that they will find all the subjects mentioned treated in a clear, concise, and satisfactory manner.

The book has already passed through several editions, and the demand, of late, has greatly increased.

For sale at the office of this paper. Price, $1; postage, 12cents.

THE LIFE

AND MORAL APHORISMS

OF

CONFUCIUS.

BY MARCENUS R. K. WRIGHT.

This little volume, newly revised, greatly enlarged and neatly printed and containing a correct Likeness of the Great Chinese Philosopher, is now for sale at the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 South Clark street, Chicago, Ill.

To those who Love Justice, Admire Goodness, and desire to follow a life well recommended for its representation of worthy deeds and exemplary conduct among men, this code of moral precepts is particularly recommended.

PRICE:—35 cents Postage 4 cents

THE PSALMS OF LIFE,

A COMPILATION OF

PSALMS, HYMNS, ANTHEMS
CHANTS,
ETC.,

Embodying the Spiritual, Progressive, and Reformatory Sentiment of the Present Age. By John S. Adams.

This work has been prepared with special reference to the large and increasing demand for a volume expressing the sentiments and views of the advanced minds of the present time, and meeting the requirements of every phase of Reform. It is entirely free of Sectarianism, and all the theological dogmas of the past, and fully recognizes the presence and administration of Spirit, in every condition of life on earth.

This book contains five hundred and twenty-two choice Selections of Poetry, with suitable music on each page from Handel, Hadyn, Mozart and Other Distinguished Composers.

It combines the advantage of "Hymn" and "Tune" Book. It is prefaced with a Classification of Subjects, and Compiler's Indexes of First Lines, Tunes and Meters; and being of convenient size, is generally accepted as the alike desirable for the LECTURE ROOM and the HOME CIRCLE OF THE PEOPLE.

Standard Music Book of Spiritualism, Radicalism and General Reform.

"I think there is in the book a great proportion—no, I think I ought to say a greater amount—of beautiful and truly spiritual poetry than in any other collection I have seen, whatever the size of the volume."

Rev. John Pierpont.

PRICE:—Paper cover, 50 cents; Postage, 6 cts. Board cover, 65 cents; Postage, 12 cts. Cloth-bound, 90 cents Postage, 16 cents.

For Sale at the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL BOOK STORE,

187 and 189 South Clark St.,

Chicago, Ill

v6n13 tf.

NEW EDITION—REVISED AND CORRECTED.

THE VOICES

Three Poems.

VOICE OF SUPERSTITION.
VOICE OF NATURE.
VOICE OF A PEBBLE.

By Warren Sumner Barlow.

THESE volume is startling in its originality of purpose, and is destined to work a mighty change among sectarian bigots than any work that has hitherto appeared.

THE VOICE OF SUPERSTITION takes the creeds of their word, and proves by numerous passages from the Bible that the God of Moses has been defeated by Satan, from the Garden of Eden to Mount Calvary!

THE VOICE OF NATURE represents God in the light of Reason and Philosophy—in His unchangeable and glorious attributes. While others have too often only descended, the author has erected a beautiful Temple on the ruins of Superstition. Judge Baker, of New York, in his review of this poem, says: "It will unquestionably come the nearer to be classed among the ablest and most gifted children's poets of the age."

THE VOICE OF A PEBBLE delineates the individuality in matter—God, mind, Universal Truth and Love.

The book is a repository of original thought; awaking noble conceptions of God and man, forcible and pleasing in style, and is one of the few works of the present day with the years and mature with the centuries. It is already adopted by its thousands of readers.

Printed in beautiful type, on heavy, fine paper, bound in beveled boards, in good style; nearly 200 pages. Price $1.50, postage 16 cents. Very liberal discount to the trade. For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 South Clark St., Chicago, Ill

ABRIDGED EDITION

OF THE

SPIRITUAL HARP,

PRICE:—$1.00. Postage 16 cents. For sale at the

RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING-HOUSE,

187 & 189 S. Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

Criticism

ON THE

THEOLOGICAL IDEA OF DEITY.

BY M. B. CRAVEN.

CONTENTS.

CHAPTER I.

The Hebrew conception of a Divine Being contrasted with that of the Grecian Sages, with Quotations from, and Criticisms on, various Theologians, ancient and modern.

CHAPTER II.

Same subject continued, in connection with the doctrine of Immortality being embraced by Pagan Nations before it was by the Jews.

CHAPTER III.

Changeability and inconsistency of the Hebrew idea of God—Contradictory statements of Different Biblical writers, in regard to seeing God, etc.

CHAPTER IV.

Angelic communications with the Hebrews—Jewish idea of the Spirit of the Lord—View of Deity in connection with history of Jephtha, etc.

CHAPTER V.

The Hindoo faculty—Christian Missions—Images not supposed by Pagans to be Deities—Christian worship contrasted with Paganism—Various opinions of God—The worship of a Supreme Being prevalent among all Polytheistic nations of antiquity, etc.

CHAPTER VI.

The Indian belief in God more spiritual than the Hebrew—Hebrew custom of pronouncing curses—Irrelevant ideas of Deity entertained by the Prophets—Platonic philosophy contrasted with Pauline Christianity and Judaism—Trinity, of Pagan origin, etc.

CHAPTER VII.

The curse of Balaam—Ancient Sacrificing—Micaiah and the Prophets of Baal—Gideon's Judgeship—Israel's perverseness—The Lord's anger with them—Character of Balaam reviewed by various theologians, etc.

CHAPTER VIII.

Slaughter of the Midianites—God's friendly dealing for the Moabites—Israelites compared with Heathens in dedicating spoils to Deity—Plundering by the Israelites consistent with their Ideas of God—Israelites compared with Mormons, etc.

CHAPTER IX.

Judaism and Paganism blended together in the narrative of Jonah—Repentance changed from God to man, etc.

CHAPTER X.

The Lord and Satan placed on a social equality in the book of Job—Curse of the original Serpent in the person of Satan—Views concerning Job, and the book that bears his name, by various theologians.

CHAPTER XI.

Satan, and his supposed influence theologically the work of God—Origin of evil—Moral depravity of the human race, and God's curse the result of Adam's transgression, with quotations from, and criticisms on, various theologians.

CHAPTER XII.

Same subject continued—Inference that the Bible furnishes no reliable evidence that the moral affairs of the world are controlled by a Being of Almighty power and Infinite goodness—Incomprehensibility of God, etc.

CHAPTER XIII.

View of the Devil, as incorporated into the works of Divinity—Veracity of the Serpent vindicated—Tree of Life—Satan a myth, etc.

PRICE: $1.00; postage, 16 cents. For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago,

PROF. HOWE'S

SEVEN-HOUR SYSTEM

of

GRAMMAR.

The writer of this useful book has had a practical experience in the art of teaching of upwards of thirty years. He had long been impressed that a shorter pathway to grammar than that which led through the perplexing subtleties of the text books could be secured, and with much skill devised his "Seven-Hour system" of oral teaching. Appeals from his audiences and request from correspondents abroad became so numerous and repeated, that he was compelled to put his ideas into print for the public good. His discoveries in the science are many and startling, reducing the labor, in many instances, from years to minutes. The introduction of the Subjunctive Mood and Preposition, with many other interesting features of the work, are not only original, but might with very great propriety be considered inspirational. These are of the utmost value to the the public writer, the platform speaker, the clergyman, or the senator. Fifteen minutes attention to any one of them will protect any intelligent person from erring once in a lifetime!

The work is got up in pamphlet form of about 60 pages, strong and neat covers, with large plain type, containing everything within, in its simplest meaning, to constitute the Practical Grammarian. It is now sold for the value of the paper, print, or binding, but for the Seven-Hour grammatical education contained within.

Price—cloth $1.00. Paper 50 cents. For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 187 & 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

v9 n1 tf.

The Bible in India.

HINDOO ORIGIN OF

Hebrew and Christian Revelation.

TRANSLATED FROM

"LA BIBLE DANS L' INDE."

BY LOUIS JACOLLIOT.

EXTRACTS FROM AUTHOR'S PREFACE:

"I come to show you humanity, after attaining the infancy regions of speculative philosophy, of untrammelled reason on the venerable soil of India, wastrammelled and stifled by the altar that substituted for intellectual life a semi-brute existence of dreaming impotence.....

India is the world's cradle; hence it is that the common mother in sending forth her children even to the utmost west has, in unfading testimony of our origin, bequeathed us the legacy of her language, her laws, her morals, her literature, and her religion.....

To religious deception, torpedos, speculative delusions, and class-legislation, may be attributed the decay of nations.....

.....Aware of the resentment I am provoking, I yet shrink not from the encounter.....We are no longer burnt at the stake."

 PRICE $2.00; postage 24 cents. For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark street, Chicago.

MOSES HULL'S WORKS.

THE QUESTION SETTLED, a Careful Comparison of Biblical and Modern Spiritualism. Price, $1.50; postage, 16 cents.

SPIRITUALISM UNVEILED. This sharp and brilliant little book, by one of our acutest writers and most efficient speakers should be read by all. Price, 25 cents; postage, 2 cents.

THE SUPREMACY OF REASON. This little work is a masterly argument on the Supremacy of Reason. The author handles sectarianism as opposed to reason, without gloves. Price, 10 cents; postage, 2 cents.

THAT TERRIBLE QUESTION.—Being an Essay on Love and Matrimony. Price, 10 cents; postage, 2 cents.

 For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

Prof. Spence's Positive and Negative Powders. For sale at the office. Address, S. S. Jones, 170 South Clark street.

New Books.

THE

Science of Evil;

OR

FIRST PRINCIPLES OF HUMAN ACTION.

BY JOEL MOODY.

THE SCIENCE OF EVIL is a book of radical and startling thought. It gives a connected and logical statement of the FIRST PRINCIPLES OF HUMAN ACTION, and clearly shows that without Evil there can be neither Morals, Science, Knowledge, or Human Action on earth. In fact, without Evil, man could not exist. This work fully solves the problem, and unveils the MYSTERY of Evil, giving it a scientific meaning, and shows it to be THE LEVER WHICH MOVES THE MORAL AND INTELLECTUAL WORLD.

The book is a large 12 mo., of 343 pages, printed from large, clear type, on fine, heavy paper. Price, $1.75; postage, 20 cents.

 For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 187 & 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

SECOND EDITION.

A WORK OF GREAT RESEARCH.

ONE RELIGION: MANY CREEDS.

BY ROSS WINANS.

"We object to what the Church demands, an unbounded and unjustifiable confidence in the infallibility of the writings of Moses and the prophets, and the Evangelists and the Apostles. We dissent from a superstitious attachment to an impossible compound of God and man. We protest that Christian theology, as we have it, is not taught by God himself, nor by Christ himself, nor is it consistent with established facts, nor is it comprehensible by our reason. We would show you that Christianity, as taught among us, is no better than other systems taught in other than Christian countries, and in some things not so good.

The historic part of the Bible, in relation to the creation of the world, has its counterpart, also in the several systems of theology here mentioned. They all had their cosmologies based on equally good authority and equally wide of the truth, as that recorded in the Bible. The time and manner of the creation, all man has ever known, or ever will know, in this life; not so much knowledge of importance in preparing us for the life to come."—EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

This book is a large 12 mo. of nearly 400 pages, printed on fine, heavy tinted paper, and is sold at much less than the actual cost. Price, $1.50; postage, 22 cents.

 For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

THE BIBLE IN THE BALANCE,

A Book for the Age and the Times,

and one that should be in the hands of every liberal man and woman in the land.

You want it for your own instruction, that you may be furnished with acknowledged authority to meet the arguments of the theologian, historian, chronologist and scientific man with his own weapons.

It discusses the matter of Bible canons, versions, translations and revisions with ability, citing none but authors in the highest repute, and those that are above criticism.

The book is printed in excellent style, 12 mo., or now type and fine paper, with beautiful illustrations of the mounds and ancient relics of the Mississippi Valley.

It is substantially bound in cloth and contains three hundred and twenty pages.

The interest felt in the work is so great that orders were received for nearly the whole of the first edition before it was published, one party alone having received orders for over three thousand copies.

Price, $1.50; postage, 20 cents.

THE TRADE SUPPLIED.

Address: RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE 187 & 189 S. Clark St, Chicago.

v5 n26 tf.

LIFE'S UNFOLDINGS;

OR

THE WONDERS OF THE UNIVERSE REVEALED TO MAN.

By the Spirit Guardians of

DAVID CORLESS.

A very entertaining and instructive little book. Price, 30 cents.

 For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

MRS. MARIA M. KING'S WORKS.

THE PRINCIPLES OF NATURE, as discovered in the Development and Structure of the Universe—The Solar System—Laws and Methods of its Development; Earth—History of its Development; Exposition of the Spiritual Universe. Price reduced to $1.75; postage, 24 cents.

REAL LIFE IN THE SPIRIT LAND.—Being Life Experiences, Scenes, Incidents, and Conditions, Illustrative of Spirit-Life and the Principles of the Spiritual Philosophy. Price, $1.00; postage, 16 cents.

SOCIAL EVILS: Their Causes and Cure.—Being a Brief Discussion of the Social Status, with reference to Methods of Reform. Price, 25 cents; postage free.

THE SPIRITUAL PHILOSOPHY VS. DIABOLISM. In two lectures. Price, 25 cents; postage free.

WHAT IS SPIRITUALISM? and SHALL SPIRITUALISTS HAVE A CREED? In two lectures. Price, 25 cents; postage free.

 For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

Health by Good Living.

BY W. W. HALL, M. D.,

Editor of Hall's "Journal of Health."

THIS book is to show how high health can be maintained at common disease cured by "good living," which means along with a perfect health the food, prepared in the best manner.

The best food includes meats, fish, poultry, wild game, fruits, and the grains which make bread.

The best cookery preserves the natural tastes and juices.

As there can be no "good living" without a good appetite, how to get this great blessing without magic without price, is pointed out, and, it is hoped, in very clear and plain terms.

Some of the subjects treated are:—

The object of eating: Power to work: Early breakfast: Dinner-time: Luncheon: Eating "down town:" What shall a man eat: What shall he not eat? How to get fat: Bad blood: Diet for the sick: Epidemic diseases: Children's eating: Forcing children to eat: Young ladies' eating: Cold feet and headache: Biliousness: A lazy liver: Bilious comfort after eating: Cole slaw: Certain cure of neuralgia: Nervous debility: Air and exercise: Food cure, etc., etc.

It tells

How to cure dyspepsia: How to cure neuralgia: How to cure biliousness: How to cure nervousness: How to cure exhaustion: How to get a good appetite: How to get lean: How to get good sleep: How to maintain high health, How to avoid disease: And all these without medicine: without money; without price.

It tells about

Luncheons and how to take them: Late dinners and how to take them: How drunkards are made at eating-houses: How girls are spoiled at boarding-schools: How health is lost: How home love is lost: How novel-reading ruins them: How love of dress is instilled: How young men are ruined about: How bad matches are made: How good wives are made at home: How home influences purify.

Price $1.50. Postage 16 cents. For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189, So. Clark Street, Chicago, Ill.

AN EYE-OPENER.

"CITATEUR PAR PIGAULT"

LE BRUN,

DOUBTS OF INFIDELS.

Embodying Thirty Important Questions to the Clergy; also, Forty Close Questions to the Doctors of Divinity.

BY ZEPA.

For sale at the office of this paper.

Price, in cloth, 75 cents; postage, 12 cents. In paper, 50 cents; postage, 4 cents.

RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL.

CHICAGO, JUNE 1, 1872. VOL. X.—NO. 11.

J. R. FRANCIS ON THE ROSTRUM.

His Lecture at Crosby's Music Hall, May 14th, On 61,000 Ministers of the Gospel, their Morality and Immorality, and the Effects of their Teachings on Society.

There are to-day millions in the United States, who point significantly to the garden of Eden as the place where evil originated in the world, and they will, with evident sincerity, narrate that wonderful incident that occurred there between God, the Serpent, and Adam and Eve—believing every word that is uttered. The world to-day is very bad; licentiousness and crime of all shades abound, and the human mind shudders, turns cold, in contemplating the condition of affairs. Bad to-day—yet on taking a retrospective view, we find that it was much worse a century or so ago,—the people being much more superstitious then than those living now, and inclined to violate those laws that constitute the moral code of to-day. Louis the XIV, during the eventful period of his reign, touched twenty four hundred persons to cure "king's evil." Eighty-nine years ago, in civilized Europe, the land of scholars, refinement, and the garden of science and philosophy, a strange scene might have been witnessed. Look! there was a woman with disheveled hair,—eyes streaming with tears, an expression of countenance with dismay and terror depicted thereon. She was surrounded with a pile of fagots. There, in the light and civilization of the eighteenth century, was a human being prepared to be burned, and for no crime—for we to day do not consider it possible for any one to be a witch. The torch was applied to that pile of fagots, and soon another sacrifice was offered up on the altar of superstition and ignorance!

In 1787 a woman was stoned in that excellent Quaker city, Philadelphia, as a witch. Some [illegible] British Empire, and the American Provinces. In fact, we might review the condition of the country hundred years ago, and compare it with the condition of affairs to-day, and we would find that the world had made rapid strides in the improvement of mankind, and that to-day the world [illegible] this world to-day is bad enough, but we need more Howard's, Nightingales, Dixs, and those whose hearts beat a true love for humanity.

Evil existed in the past, and it exists to-day. In the city of Chicago are twenty-seven hundred saloons, six thousand fallen women, hundreds of gambling hells and houses of prostitution. What a scene! Young men ruined! The fairest flowers of creation stricken down,—blasted, and that within the sound of the church-bell, and the echo of the minister's voice. On all sides are the fruits of crime. Not only in Chicago, but in every city in the United States, the same state of affairs exist. To resist this evil, to act as a counter-irritant on the minds of the people, there are in the United States to-day, sixty-one thousand ministers of the gospel. This grand army, as large as Grant's was before Vicksburgh, presents itself a solid phalanx, to resist the portentious waves of evil, as they rise up covered with putrid sores, and all manner of unclean things. They represent a God somewhere,—their God, who showed his hinder parts to Moses, and he is their imaginary Commander-in-Chief. He controls this grand army. Did Logan, Sherman, or Hitchcock, command a braver army than this? Before proceeding further, we desire to examine the character of this God who commands them. We will examine his own inspired words. His character is not good, and any jury would condemn him for incompetency. In order to accomplish a nefarious act, he sent forth lying spirits, and visits the iniquities of the parents on the third and fourth generations—besides, in Deuteronomy it is said that "his anger burns to the lowest hell!" He builds up; but one of his own naughty children pulls down. What he creates, satan attempts to destroy. With this Commander-in-Chief, they go forth with organs sounding, choirs singing, lips preaching—armed with the moral precepts that they find in the Bible, and which they rarely, if ever, practice. These ministers that compose this army, are said to be moral reformers, and pretend to have a call to preach, but whether humanity ever had a call to hear any of them sermonize, is very doubtful. It would be well to critically examine the condition of this army of religious teachers. As the United States has officers, whose business it is to inspect its army, and pass judgment thereon, so will I constitute myself an agent to examine this phalanx of praying Christians. How was it with Elder Kinderick, of Iowa, while attending a convocation of Ministers of the Gospel, and while in the presence of one of the daughters of a prominent church-member, he insulted her,—yet to-day he is retained in the church, and we never learned that he was ever reprimanded for his conduct. And then, according to the Indianapolis Sentinel, one "Dr. Fuller, a practicing physician and local preacher, had long been suspected of holding sweet converse with one Sarah Stevens, a gay young widow of about forty-five years of age. The wife of Dr. Fuller, a very estimable lady, became jealous, and by reason of said jealously, became insane, and has been for near two years under treatment at the Insane hospital.

"About two months since, she was returned home restored, and went to her residence. Her husband refused to let her remain, and she was forced to seek a home with her married daughter. On the evening of the 4th she went to the home of her husband for the purpose of seeing her children. There are five remaining at home. Upon appearing at the door she was ejected by the brutal husband, and her package of clothing kicked by him from the door step. The neighbors, upon hearing the noise, at once rallied, and then, learning the cause, took the gentleman aside, and, after some pretty rough treatment, stripped him naked save his pantaloons, and treated him to a coat of tar and feathers. While the male portion of the town was thus engaged, the female portion of the inhabitants had proceeded to the residence of the widow, administering to her similar treatment. After they were both thoroughly coated, they were then taken and placed astride two rails, and carried side by side down the main street.

"After the ride on the rail, the doctor was taken to his house, and some gentlemen kindly offered to help get the tar off, and get him cleaned up and dressed, after which he was given until midnight to leave the country. The woman was given a similar notice, and both availed themselves of the offer.

"This riot was of no low grade, but was composed of the best citizens in the town. Many of them rank among the stable members of the Quaker Church."

Then there was the Rev. McWilliams, an M. E. preacher, while holding a protracted meeting at Rensselaer, Ind., was arrested for horse-stealing and bigamy. Another at Winamack, Ind., was tried, and sentenced two years in the penitentiary for attempting to rape one of his charge. And Trinity Church, N. Y., with its tall spire, its carpeted aisles and golden bound books, is not altogether innocent, for near by is a building owned by the church that is rented for a house of prostitution. But our mind sickens when examining this grand army of moral reformers, whose business it is to resist the encroachment of evil, and open the gates of heaven, and assist sinners in repenting. I do not allude to these erring ones exultingly, but to show the world that these men clothed with the garb of sanctity, are not altogether faultless.

Connected with this grand army, is Henry Ward Beecher, who ought to be next in command to God himself, as he has more brains than a whole regiment of these from the state, and his ministrations are extended to a wealthy and aristocratic congregation. He is a great man, a wise man, influential, progressive and energetic. He is a peculiar man; deals with sin as Robert Collyer used to with his iron,—pounds it, shaping it into a moral code. He wisely says that some coates [illegible] of these. He says [illegible] Lord, I am proud as he can be, but [illegible] Lord, I am so mean and stingy, that it is only with great pain that I can unloose my fist—make me generous!" This liberality is like the tides,—how rises grandly up, then recedes to suit the pulse of the members of his church! He said in a recent sermon, that if his mother had danced and sung more, and studied the catechism less, it would have been better for all the family. He has remarkable colloquial gifts; he is verbose, but that constitutes one of the elements of his success. He regards Plymouth Church as his family. The pulpit to him is no more sacred than a green-carpeted mound in the pastures, or an arbor by the side of some purling stream. He is not arrogant, don't look like a man who worships much. In his lecture-room, he is at home. He steps upon the platform, and as one of his hearers said, "He flings down his hat on the floor, picks up his hymn book, manipulates it as a mechanic would a tool before using it. What other ministers would say to half a dozen brethren around the pulpit, Mr. Beecher would say to his whole congregation in the pulpit. In the lecture-room, he comes in at the side door, and, if it is cold, stands awhile over the heater, tumbles up his hair, washes his hands in invisible water, with his face toward the congregation, mounts his platform and takes his seat, with neither table nor desk between him and the people. He begins the service abruptly, without prelude or introduction. He does not say, 'Let us sing,' or 'Let us praise God,' but simply says '134.' He sits during the entire performance, except when he leads in prayer. His talks are given in a sitting posture. He puts one leg over the other, tilts back, puts both feet on the rounds of the chair, and takes his ease during the service."

In case it could be demonstrated that no God exists, we believe that these sixty-one thousand ministers would vote to have Henry Ward Beecher take the reins of the universe in his hands. Not like many other ministers of the gospel, his moral character is above reproach, and his religion is of the most harmless character, as he sends no one to hell.

In the city of Chicago, is one of these moral reformers. Robert Laird Collier is an eminent divine of this city—eminent in the sense that the world uses the term. Intellectual worth does not always make a man great in the estimation of others. Greatness depends upon the minds of those with whom you are surrounded. A man of diminutive intellect might, by those far beneath him in point of knowledge, be considered great. I had the satisfaction of hearing this eminent divine preach. I approached the church with a feeling of awe, mingled with a sort of the old reverence for orthodox institutions, impressed upon me by a mother, and which I have found somewhat difficult to get rid of. Who can approach a tabernacle of God, with its tall spire, its beautiful windows, carved stones, and exquisite paintings, without feeling that they all mean something. I am not accustomed to praying, but I am free to confess, as I walked up the carpeted aisles of this aristocratic church, I felt just like praying, and regretted that it was not in order, for me to advance into the pulpit, and pray to Brahm the Hindoo God, to Osiris the Egyptian God, or to Phœbus Apollo the God of the Sun,—a statue of which the sturdy old Greek carved out of Parian marble, or to the Great Spirit, the Indian God, or to any God, to all Gods, to the angel Michael, to Jesus of Nazareth, to St. Augustine, or to Nature! Ah! I would have prayed to Nature, in the Church of the Messiah—yes, there, where Nature is crucified, and where in her agonies she protests against select aisles, select pews, select men, select women, and against worshiping God by rote, by rule, by formula—there I would like to have prayed,—prayed to Nature!

In this church all is deception. I was deceived—badly deceived—when I first entered; for back of Mr. Collier, I saw a cross standing some six feet in height, but the nearer I approached him—presto change! the cross flattened against the wall, and we found it was only a representation of one. The columns all stood out from the wall until you approached them, when they all seemed to pass away. Yes, all was deception—no reality! The cross disappeared, the columns disappeared, and we thought for a moment we were not in a house dedicated to the worship of God. This church is a fine one. The altar was crowned with a beautiful festoon of flowers, and over it was an arch that contained the following passages of scripture:

"Thou shalt serve the Lord God, and him only shalt thou serve."

Underneath these two passages stood this eminent divine. He is a small man, with a massive forehead, features that show the effects of age, an eye that is inclined to well upward, not only when he is praying, but when he is preaching. In this sacred pulpit, standing behind a beautiful festoon of flowers, and beneath two brilliant passages of scripture, he gives expression to his sentiments in an earnest, emphatic manner. His elocution is miserable. He has cultivated those peculiar inflections which make his sentiments sound sanctimonious, and his words die away on his lips like the expiring notes of an æolian harp. Standing in a church where all is calculated to deceive the [illegible] esthetic, for thirty minutes [illegible] thoughts to the few [illegible] "weary souls."

But there is another Collyer. He is physically and intellectually strong, and presides over a large and intelligent congregation in this city. A few years ago—perhaps fifteen—he was a blacksmith. As a mechanic, he was a success. [illegible] the mighty hits that he would strike and [illegible] the mighty hits that he would strike in the pulpit. He graduated from the blacksmith-shop into a Methodist pulpit, absorbing its doctrines, its hell, its brimstone, its devils, its traditional history, all its mysticisms, and leaving off the apron and dropping the hammer, he assumed the title of "Reverend," and entered the grand army of 61,000 ministers of the gospel, to fight Satan! As a Methodist, he believed that slavery was right, morally so, and that the four million of slaves in the South were in their proper position. While connected with that church he believed that Thomas Paine—the patriot, the statesman, the moral reformer, and the friend of humanity was in hell! My blood chills me as I think of such contemptible, foolish, absurd, insane ideas! Thomas Paine in hell? Yes, and by his teachings and philosophy, he consigned Jefferson there, too. Finally a grand change came over this remarkable man. What a grand stride! In a few hours' time, he was changed from a shouting Methodist into a Unitarian, and during the transition he took Paine and Jefferson from hell, and declared the negro entitled to his freedom. What a step in progress! Madame Sarjeah can not be excelled for physical gymnastics, neither can Mr. Collyer for his mental gymnastics. They should travel together,—one as a physical acrobat, the other as a mental and religious expert. But I will leave him. He is doing a good work, and he can remain in his glory.

While a few of this grand army are doing good, many are sowing a most pernicious influence. There was the highly-inspired Theodore Parker, whose name I only breathe with a holy reverence. In Boston, all the members of the orthodox church hated him,—yes, worse than a fighting gladiator hates his successful antagonist. There is a magnetism in hate, in love, in all the breathings of the mind. These orthodox ministers centered on this prominent divine the magnetism of their hate, and through the influence thereof he died, and they murdered him! They are guilty of causing his death.

Ah, who can desire to officiate in some of the positions that have been occupied by ministers of the gospel? In the Union army were a thousand chaplains; in the Rebel army as many more. Their prayers were influenced with fire and swords, and sounded as harsh to an angel as the cry of the wild hyena. What a scene! Do you admire it? But then there was another minister who, filled with patriotism for the South, let his voice always sound forth in favor of slavery. He was a chaplain in the Rebel army, and was earnestly and faithfully devoted to the cause of the rebellion; and when the flag whose cause he had so devoutly espoused was trailed in the dust, he resolved to die in the arms of a government that was devoted to slavery; so he went to Brazil, and finally becoming deeply involved in debt, his two daughters, highly intelligent and refined, were sold into slavery, in accordance with laws existing there, to liquidate the father's indebtedness. Perhaps this minister of the gospel, when he saw a practical realization of his teachings, was not in favor of slavery.

In this army I find but few really liberal men. At Newburgh, New York, a church organist committed suicide. Poor fellow! he was weary of the cares and toils of this world, and under the insane impulses of his nature, destroyed the vital spark of life. Through the instrumentality of the church organ, for years he had given a holy expression to the music, and under the influence thereof, the minister felt that he was much nearer heaven. This church organist was a sinner,—a pious sinner,—who was used, as the monkey used the paw of the cat, to serve the interests of God. No doubt the songs he blew, the notes he touched, and the sweet expression that he gave to the solemn chants and lively airs, had an elevating effect on the minds of those who listened to him each Sabbath. But he died. Could he have committed suicide and lived,—killed himself and still been a walking human being, with eyes to see, ears to hear, and a mind that could feel, he certainly would have had his mirthfulness and pity alternately excited, over the feeling that his demise created. Poor fellow, he died, and as no suicide can enter the kingdom of heaven, no minister of the gospel, of this town, would consent to preach his funeral sermon. Unfortunately for him, he committed suicide in a town where there was no "church round the corner," with a decent minister of the gospel, to utter the last solemn rites over the dead body of one of earth's children. We pity Newburgh. Her ministers are a sickly class, devoid of justice, common sense or decency, and have forgotten that "charity covereth a multitude of sins." Such ministers of the gospel will sometime see the need of charity. Now, with their fat salaries, and the blood of Jesus, which they have patented, they think "they are lord of all they survey," and they will not officiate at the funeral of one who has committed suicide.

Oh, for a "church round the corner" in Newburgh, New York. One is also needed in New York City, and the refusal of the Rev. Mr. Sabine to officiate at the funeral of George Holland, because he was a theatrical performer, gave rise to the following poetry:

"It was thought of old, when a man was cold,
And dress'd for his last long journey,
A parson should come to direct him home,
By clerical power of attorney:
But now men of grace, from a holy (?) place,
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
With, "Excuse me, I [illegible]
Of the little church round the corner!

"A soul with the stain and the brand of Cain,
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
But a man of worth who had charity for one's
By promoting harmless laughter,
Is thrust in the cold, from the sacred fold,
With no hope in the great Hereafter!
But all are not lost of the Christian host,
So we'll silence the jeering scorner,
And all honor pay *one for an act well done,
In "the little church round the corner."

* Rev. Dr. Houghton, who officiated at the burial of George Holland, comedian, after the Rev. Mr. Sabine had refused his services.

Perhaps this integral part of the army of the Lord, entertained the old fossilized sentiment, that poor George was in hell, where he must remain forever and ever. Perhaps he had made engagements in the Spirit World to take a prominent part there in some comedy, while this Divine had consigned him to hell. Fortunately, however, all the ministers in New York city are not Sabines—the Rev. Dr. Houghton kindly offered to officiate, and George Holland was decently buried. This little incident made Dr. Houghton popular.

The old woman's dream is illustrative of the characters of those ministers, and holds up, in beautiful contrast, Spiritualists. She died, as she thought, and went to heaven,—knocked at the gate, and the angel, Gabriel admitted her. Around the throne of God were ministers of the Gospel singing psalms and shouting his praise. This looked natural that they should be permitted to be under his immediate supervision, and they were regarded by him, she thought, as under his especial guardianship. Everything seemed grand, beautiful, and eminently well calculated to enhance the happiness of all. She opened a conversation with God by enquiring what the various denominations were in the distance. First, there were the ministers, then Methodists, Baptists, Episcopalians, Unitarians, and Universalists, in regular order; but away off in the distance, just as far as she could see, she caught a glimpse of an innumerable host of men and women, enjoying themselves splendidly, and when she asked God who they were, He replied, "They are Spiritualists,—the only class of my children that I can trust away from my throne." This vision of the old lady teaches an important lesson. Those that are constantly teaching so much austerity, are the ones that need the most watching, and they are generally guilty of some misdemeanor, and those who use in their religion the most "blood of the lamb," are those who have the greatest sins to answer for.

Leaders of a religious character can only be recognized to the extent that the intrinsic merit of their teachings and general deportment demand—anything any further than that should not be endorsed for a single moment. The ministers representing this grand army have a lesson yet to learn. The cry of "great is the mystery of godliness," should no longer be tolerated. They consider themselves infallible, and are now anxious to have their "Commander-in-Chief" take especial supervision of the Constitution of Uncle Sam, and have his name written thereon in tablets of gold. They have never seen him, never heard his voice, never felt his influence, yet they have named him, and are acting under his imaginary guardianship. They claim to be "Doctors of Souls," acting as prominent a part in the world as the doctors of physical ills. The only remedy that they use, however, is the "blood" of Jesus, the reputed son of God. Too cowardly to suffer for their own arrant tricks and sins, they are mean enough to exult in the fact that an innocent being was crucified that they might be saved, and while they could only be saved "through Jesus," they condemn Judas, who is really the genuine Savior, for it was through his instrumentality that he was crucified. Their doctrinal teachings are eminently well calculated to inspire the thinking mind with disgust, for they show the inherent weakness of those who inculcate them. The world is gradually growing better, is making rapid strides in improvement, just in proportion as the people become more liberal. The blood of Jesus is no longer an antidote for sin of all grades, and that which a man sows he must reap.

The austerity and consummate arrogance of many in the religious field to-day, was illustrated recently in New South Wales. In January last a theological discussion occurred there, between those religiously inclined and Mr. Jones a sculptor, and member of the Royal Academy of Arts. Mr. Jones entertained the opinion that many parts of the Old Testament were of an immoral character, and could only exercise a bad tendency on the minds of the people, and in consequence thereof, he was accused of blasphemy, tried in a court, and found guilty, the principal witnesses being two local Methodist preachers, and sentenced to two years imprisonment with hard labor, and to pay a fine of one hundred pounds. This occurred in the "boasted freedom' of the nineteenth century, in a country under the jurisdiction of England, the object of the severe punishment being to "check infidelity." Perhaps it may check it for a brief period, keep for a while the smouldering fires in bay, but only to burst forth again with renewed vigor. Those that comprise the grand army of ministers, would to-day, if they had the power, institute hard and unjust measures to "check infidelity," and prevent the people from worshiping God according to the dictates of their own conscience.

The time is not far distant when all sectarian [illegible] will [illegible] Spiritual Gods vanish the world [illegible] [illegible] devils [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] and superstition never [illegible] any A blind adherence to any doctrine, can result in no good. Ever keep the eyes of reason open, and the mind clear, and receive truth from whatever source it may come.

The teachings of these ministers should not be received as authority. [illegible] carefully weighed, the wheat sifted from the chaff, and their erroneous conclusions banished. Spiritualism has no creed, no men or women who speak as one having authority." They believe that which a man sows he will reap, and who so cowardly as to want some innocent being to suffer for him? The teachings of these sixty-one thousand ministers of the gospel, tell us that an innocent being suffered death in order that the sins of the world might be washed away. All the Orthodox churches believe this absurd dogma, and men of profound wisdom, such as Beecher, Chapin, Collier and others, entertain the idea that the death of Jesus is an antidote in some sense, for the sins of the human family. But the world is making rapid progress in becoming liberal, the dawn of a new day is near at hand, and the influence of ministers of the gospel rapidly on the wane.

Angels speed the day, when the doors of the Summer Land, fully opened, will give all a view of celestial glories, and induce each one to lead a purer, better life.

What Is the Cause!

It is with deep mortification that we witness the disposition so openly manifested among mediums and lecturers to speak disparagingly one of another, as if Spiritualism were to make headway in the world by pursuing the same selfish methods that have finally wrecked the vitality of the creeds. We allude to this visibly growing evil with pain, and regret even more to discover its appearance in several of the spiritual papers. It ought not to exist. Those who are conscious of feeling at all hard toward others, should test the key-principle which they profess to possess, by resolving once more to change about and practice only a spirit of forbearance and forgiveness, let the case be what it may. We are not set up as judges over one another. If those who are addicted to this habit are determined to take no pains to correct it, knowing it to be a vice, if it is anything, they had better make up their minds to go over to the church forthwith, where carping and condemnation are the rule, and not the exception. The Orthodox fold has abundance of room to contain not only the lambs, but the wolves, too, and there is where morose, jealous, fault-finding natures, that snap at others as if they would devour them, rightly belong. Each to his own. Genuine Spiritualists are bound by their profession to show a larger liberality in every sense than the creeds; but it excites the most unsatisfactory reflections that so many who march under the broad banner of Spiritualism, suppose they can be allowed to have a troop of evil passions at their heels.—Banner of Light.

—Unless you wish a premature death you will let all poisonous hair preparations alone. NATURE'S HAIR RESTORATIVE is perfectly harmless, as any druggist will tell you. See advertisement.

—Greenlanders having all become converted, the question arises, what shall be done with the hymn, "From Greenland's icy mountains?"

Original Essays.

Written for the Religio-Philosophical Journal.

ANSWERS TO MORE QUESTIONS.

By Wm. B. Fahnestock.

I have just returned from a visit of a week to Castile, State of New York, where there is a "water-cure," under the superintendence of a very worthy, capable, and intelligent lady, who through the influence of others sent for me, with the view of learning the somnambulic art, and while there many of the inmates were taught to enter the condition with benefit to themselves, and somnambulism will hereafter also be practically employed for the cure of diseases in that institution. I have no time nor disposition to enter into details, or to blazon the cures about —they will in due time speak for themselves.

Upon my return I found the JOURNAL again crowded with questions that have been answered for others many times before; and I will here only reiterate that as no one has ever demonstrated or proved that animal magnetism has an existence in nature, I deny that it does exist, and again state, that because some susceptible persons imagine that they feel heat proceeding from a hand that has been held upon loc—or to a hand held two or more feet above a so-called operator's head—is no proof that a "strong current" of any kind is passing from the hand to the head.

I have often stated that I do not deny that cures have been effected in susceptible persons, by the method usually adopted by those who suppose themselves to be a "human battery," or a magnetic operator,—but because cures have been thus made, is no proof that they were effected by magnetism, and not by faith, or a belief upon the part of susceptible persons, or [illegible]ld not have been effected even better [illegible]y were in a proper condition,—the [illegible]lic,—and the mind or will-power of the subject exercised upon them.

I could detail any number of cases that were cured in the old way, and could effect them again in susceptible persons if I deemed it as well to do so. But to show that it is not magnetism that is the agent in effecting cures, I will state a case in point, which occurred in Philadelphia, in a young girl whose foot was drawn or turned completely around—directly opposite to the natural position of that member, viz: the toes were where the heel should have been. The case was under the care of a Dr. Child of that city, who had been operating in the usual manner of magnetic operators, for a long time, without any benefit. He described the case to me after one of my lectures, given in the parlors of Dr. Noble, and desired to know whether I could suggest any thing for her relief.

I at once told him that if he would abandon the old method and direct her mind to the foot, and get her to make a resolution, while in the somnambulic condition, that the foot should assume and keep a natural position when she threw herself out of the state, he could effect it in an instant.

On the following day he succeeded in getting her to do so, and brought the young lady round to Dr. Noble's parlors, the same evening, perfectly restored. She was then able to keep the foot in its natural position, and during the evening walked and ran about the room as if it had never been out of place.

The case was notorious in that part of the city at the time, and the cure by [illegible]

[illegible] It is, therefore, evident that it is the power of [illegible] subject's will, or a faith, a belief, or a desire [illegible] their part that effects it in all cases, also), I would like to know whether they cannot feel any other sensation they please, believe, or imagine,—or even suppose that a current (which really has no existence) is streaming from the hand or head of any one else out/de of the so-called operator.

I have again but to say to those who still cling to the idea of an "animal magnetic" or a nervous influence, that they certainly will save themselves a great deal of trouble and useless labor if they will study the true nature of the condition which is natural to some persons at all times, and can be brought about in others by instruction.

I will conclude by stating, that I have always found that diseases cured by the power of the subject's will, are more permanent than those effected in any other way; and the remedy, when once acquired, is always at hand, and can be exercised at pleasure, independent of any one, or of any theory, and is the only true practice, because it is independent of both, and being natural can only yield the truth.

I hope I am understood.

Written for the Religio-Philosophical Journal.

UNDERHILL VS. FAHNESTOCK.

When Doctors Disagree, what shall be done?

BY D. G. MOSHER.

Both these philosophers seem to be doing a good work in developing principles, and in relieving human suffering; each in his own way, however at variance their modes of producing the same or similar results. One affirms the existence of a magnetic fluid, or refined element as brought to bear by the action of the will-power to produce certain results; the other denies the existence of such a fluid or element, as controlled by the will or volition of the operator, as directed upon the mental and physical organism of a second person.

Both of these philosophers claim to believe in the Spiritual Philosophy, or that disembodied spirits have power to produce upon the mental and physical organization of mortals, manifestations that are not only wonderful, but incomprehensible even to be most profound philosopher. Fahnestock claims to teach his patients to produce by their own mentality and will-power, the same or similar effects upon themselves, that Underhill claims to produce upon others by what he claims to be a magnetic fluid

[illegible] men [illegible] independent of the mag- [illegible] of Underhill, or the [illegible] the teachings of [illegible] is sensitive to their sufferings, she being "clear-minded," and that the symptoms of her patient as reproduced in her, are the result of false teaching.

How, I ask, does Mr. Fahnestock know that the controlling spirit does not, for wise reasons, produce these symptoms and that all "clear-mindedness" is not spirit impressions? On the other hand, does Mr. Underhill know that the results of his system are not produced by spirit impression?

Who that is susceptible to spirit impressions, in any great variety, believes that disembodied spirits have not greater power over the mental and magnetic forces of mortals, than can be exercised in the form? Who that is in a good degree mediumistic, and endowed with a fair philosophical capacity, does not believe that in the spirit world, there are ample facilities for obtaining immediate or instantaneous information, even at vast distances?

Admitting this to be true, and that mediums or persons in a somnambulic condition, are susceptible to spirit impressions,—whether in the form of words of our language, or to the "impressional language of the spheres,—all mysteries in regard to a knowledge of places, persons, answering sealed letters, or any other transaction, must forever be solved.

It is an established fact in Spiritualism, that certain kinds of manifestations, are witnessed only in the presence of certain persons called mediums, and this is according to accordance with an invariable rule, at least with few exceptions, we can but suppose that a pre-arrangement is effected, on the part of the controlling spirits, for the prosecution of each particular manifestation.

I shall include among the mediums for the various phenomena, Mr. Fahnestock and Mr. Underhill. With these considerations in view, I leave these worthy philosophers for a while, to fight their own battles.

Mosherville, Mich., March 6th, 1871.

SPIRIT COMMUNICATION.

From Charles S. Bingham, Through A. M. Lewis.

My dear friends, I improve this, the only way I have at present, of communicating with you

I know you will think it very strange, and will not know what to believe about it, and will, perhaps, feel mortified that my name should appear in this way. But I feel that the time has come for me to make the attempt to try and break the spell that hangs over your minds in regard to this spiritual communion.

I have been very anxious for a long time to make known to you in some way the fact that I have a conscious existence, and that I am very near to my friends on the earth, and am knowing to their thoughts and acts. Am as happy as I deserve to be, or as I am capable of being under the circumstances. Every justice is meted out to every one in this life. There is no way of escaping it as on the earth. We are here taken for what we really are in heart, and not for what we have seemed to be while dwelling in the flesh.

This is a very different world from what I expected to find. I could not realize for a long time after my spirit left the body, but what I was still on the earth,—for I was so near to it, and every thing looked so much like the earth-life—but to convince me, my spirit friends here took me to the grave where you had laid my body, and I could see right down to it, through the earth and coffin, and could see that decay had begun its work. Then they took me to my friends, whom I could see were sorrowing over my departure. I was then convinced that I had really passed away from the earth, at least from your sight; for I saw that al-

[illegible] Friends, who have [illegible] thankful for your [illegible] joys and sorrows, but who are ever ready to sympathize with and cheer you on in your journey through life.

It is not, and th[illegible]

[illegible] that when [illegible] would and [illegible] ed for a time, until some kind spirit can succeed in enlightening their minds, and causing them to understand their true condition. Various means have to be resorted to, before the desired result is found. Some spirits are more easily convinced than others, owing entirely to education, and their powers of reasoning. Those who are the most prejudiced against the idea of spirit communion, are the hardest to be convinced of its truth. You know I did not believe in this communication between the two worlds; but when I realized that I could be so near you as to touch you, and you not be sensible of it, it then occurred to me that perhaps there was some way whereby I might be able to make you know that I was with you, and could read your thoughts. I thought of the Spiritualists, and what they professed to do which, of course, I had been led to believe was all a delusion, or the workings of the evil one; but in my anxiety to comfort you, and make you know that I was not dead to you, I was willing to make use of any agency whereon to accomplish my purpose.

Last night Uncle Lemuel came to talk with me. He said he could take me to a medium who would help me to commune with my friends. Said Cousin Abbie was a medium, developed as a writer, though not of a very satisfactory kind. She was not a test medium, but could be easily impressed to give messages of a general character, and that her husband could control through her, and Cousin Planchette. Uncle said he would help me to get control. At first I told Abbie by the Planchette that I wanted to send a message to my folks. She said they would not believe it, and was very loth to comply with it. But we have impressed her so strongly with the idea, that she has given way to our control. I say "we," for I could not do this alone. Several spirits are helping me, and that is why it will not sound much like my talk, being the work of combined minds.

We want to do something to arouse your attention, and set you to investigating this subject, that your prejudices may no longer keep you from seeking to know more of this most beautiful and consoling of all religions. Would it not be a comfort to you all, if you could hold intercourse with the many dear friends who have passed over the river? Remember it would be no more a comfort to you than it is to us. We are as anxious to communicate as you could possibly be, supposing you had gone to some distant country on the earth, and wanted to hear from your friends left behind of your safe arrival and present happiness.

Mother, I have seen grandma and grandpa—but they occupy very different spheres. Grandma is a very bright and pure spirit. She comes often to me, and tells me of the beauties and glories that await me in the upper spheres; but I have got to earn them, and second step by step, the ladder of progression. She wants me to try this experiment of sending a message to you, in order, if possible, to convince you of the fact that spirits of the next world do come down to earth's children to comfort and bless them, and that it is a great pleasure and satisfaction to them, developed as they have succeeded in arousing the attention of mankind, and caused them to think seriously of this matter. She says, "Tell them that spirits are not above God their Father, and if he condescends to have a care over, and labor for his children, to lead them up higher and nearer unto perfection, why should not his workers, the spirits, be engaged in the glorious work?"

Grandpa is still prejudiced, and does not believe in this doctrine, but he will have to learn it, little by little, as any child learns the great lessons of my ministrations of love. I would not be placed back again in my old body, if I could, for now I can see that it is better as it is. I can now improve my powers and talents much faster than I should, if I had remained longer on the earth; and am in hopes to be made the instrument in God's hands, of drawing your minds up to contemplate the realities and beauties of the Summer Land.

I shall be with you when you get this message and I do hope and pray that the good Father will so send the rays of light into your understandings, that you will not lay it idly by, and say it is all the work of imagination. It is placing our cousin in a very embarrassing position, but she has been chosen for this purpose, and is willing to suffer wrong and persecution for the truth's sake.

No more this time, and may the light of truth descend and rest upon you, is the prayer of Charles N. Bingham, from his home in the Summer Land.

Letter from Dr. T. J. Lewis.

BROTHER JONES:—As Mrs. Grundy, priest, nor creeds, find favor in your liberal paper, the following may in a measure solve the problem recently agitated in the BANNER OF LIGHT, as to whether stimulants are or are not beneficial to mankind.

By comparing the habits of men and women under the present false system of civilization, based upon too much art and too little nature, we will find that women are more virtuous, more susceptible to spirit control, possess greater endurance in times of adversity, commit less crime, suicide, lust and divorces, than men, because they use eighty per cent. less stimulants, or more generally follow the man medium, Jesus' teachings, gathered from the bible of nature, of practicing temperance in all things that are a natural necessity to our well-being.

In regard to Darwin's theory that the origin of man can be traced back to monkeys, let me say, if Mr. Darwin be correct, how does it happen that mankind, both savage and civilised, are now so much inferior to monkeys? Man, with a Bible under his arm, a prayer book in his hat (and sometimes a brick), a lawyer in front of him, a doctor and priest on each side of him, and surrounded by jails, prisons, churches, police, and jail-locks to keep him straight, yet, in spite of them, will persist in the practice of false pride, egotism, big salaries, laziness, lust, intemperance, abortion, murder, suicide, slander, creeds, selfishness, war, slavery, and gambling for office and money, while on the other hand, monkeys are entirely free from all such unnatural hells, and require no human straight-jacket appliances to keep them on the track of living natural lives!

Monkeys, and all other animals, birds insects, fishes, plants, atmospheres, chemistries, and planets can do many things that are impossible for man to do, and man can do many things that they can not do, hence, equity is the universal, natural condition of all nature. The reason that the artificially civilized man behaves worse than the so-called brutes, is because he follows art rather than nature or spirit, and because he is the last born animal on this planet, and has not lived on it long enough to ripen up his good behavior on as high a natural plane as other forms of life,—falsely termed brutes.

The real cause why all bodies in the universe differ in their forms and actions from each other, and make what are called different species, is simply owing to the difference of density or rarity of the matter composing them. The cause of that difference of density and rarity, is a brain-cracker to the would-be anti-spiritual scientists. Angels only can answer

[illegible]

On the 19th of April last, we wrote a [illegible] S. B. Fayette, spirit-artist, Oswego, New [illegible] for a spirit likeness. We sent him the [illegible] of two persons in spirit life.

[illegible] what is contained in the following extract, [illegible]:

"I send you the name of my wife's sister, who has been in the spirit world over twenty-nine years. She was about twenty-four years of age when she passed to the higher life. Her name was Huldah R. Camp,—the daughter of Philo G. Camp, who is also in spirit life.

"I will also give you the name of a daughter of mine, who was nine weeks old when she died, and she has been in spirit life about twenty-one years. Her name was Lavinia M. Jones. Only four days ago, she gave me a palpable kiss upon my forehead—an affectionate little dear —always presents herself, and communicates when conditions are favorable."

On the 13th of May, we received by express the likeness of a young lady, from Mr. Fayette. It is executed upon paper board, in fine, life-like colors, artistically shaded. It is a well executed painting. The color of the hair—golden—is the same as that of our deceased Lavinia. The forehead strongly resembles that of our eldest daughter,—with a striking family resemblance in the other features. Indeed we are quite content to receive it as a true likeness of our beloved angel-daughter, Lavinia.

On the receipt of the likeness, we immdiately wrote Mr. Fayette, requesting him to give the particulars in regard to the manner in which he executed the work, and here is his reply:

S. S. JONES—Dear Brother:—Yours of the 13th is received, and contents noted. I am happy to learn that the painting interests you or gives you pleasure.

Your letter of the 19th of April, containing the names of your wife's sister,—Huldah, and that of your daughter, Lavinia, introduced them to me, as they both came with the letter, and have been with me several times since. Some spirit friend held Lavinia up in their hands, and presented her as an infant, in a long dress. She remarked, "This looks too babyish, and I do not wish to be painted in this manner," and immediately presented herself as a young lady.

When I sat with the letter for painting, I desired to paint Huldah first, as she would be more readily recognized, but when the sitting was ended, the academy board (the material used to paint on) contained the face and features of Lavinia. After a few nights, I again sat with the letter, desiring Huldah's likeness. Again I was overruled—a gentleman's likeness was given,—one that had been ordered or desired by a friend.

I then relinquished the idea of getting Huldah's likeness, and turned my attention to Lavinia's picture, which was finished, and sent to you by express. The Spirit friends say it is a good likeness, and she appears satisfied, and said she should try and convince her father, that the painting is a likeness of his daughter. It was executed at two sittings of about forty minutes each.

You ask me if I see the spirit while painting. Sometimes I do, but as a general rule, I see or [illegible] of the spirit before sitting. [illegible] son is clear and vivid, and I can see the spirit likeness constantly before me. At such times, I use very vicious attitude until I do the task required. While painting, I seem to be guided by impressions, and at times, seem to be wholly absorbed in the task, yet the spirit artists claim to do it themselves, and tell me that I have never painted a picture but what was first impressed upon my brain by their influence. I have no desire to dispute them, as experience has shown me that the results I get are perfect copies of the impressions received before the sitting. Hence, if I receive a correct impression of a spirit, the painting will be correspondingly correct, but the whole matter depends on conditions that I can not control.

A number of years in the past, a spirit came to me, giving his name, and claiming to have been an Italian artist in the earth-life, and wished me to follow certain directions that would be given me from time to time, by my spirit guides, as they wished to use me in painting the departed loved ones of earth, and this they claimed would be accomplished if I could be induced to follow rules. I promised to follow all directions, on condition that they would satisfy me that they did and could manifest themselves in an unmistakable manner. I wished to be satisfied of the reality of Spirit manifestations. They promised me that I should have all the evidence my skeptical nature required, and that they would give me positive and unmistakable evidence of their existence and power. This was fulfilled to the letter, and the skepticism of my nature departed, and I tried to be obedient to all demands from my spirit guides. They have fulfilled their promises to me in all things. Many in the form can testify to this fulfillment of their promise, in the loved faces that have been returned to them by spirit influence,—faithfully portrayed on the canvas,—at least I have very much evidence in this direction, that has been received by me from the mourning and afflicted ones in earth-life.

You ask in regard to the price of paintings. The price of such one is ten dollars. All I can do for any one is to try. The matter depends on conditions, and what the spirit friends are able to do at the sitting. I have no desire to paint for any one, unless they feel a willingness to accept what the spirit friends can do for them in the premises, as it is a matter I do not control.

Very truly yours,
J. B. FAYETTE.

Oswego, N. Y., May 16th, 1871.

Letter from J. L. Potter.

BROTHER JONES:—I have just read "The Fountain," by A. J. Davis, and am in quite as much of a dilemma as the Dutchman was when he heard the preacher explain the meaning of "into," as used in the Bible: "It did not mean 'into,' but near, or close by." So I am at a loss to know whether Brother Davis means just what he says or not.

That others may see how badly I am puzzled, I will send you a few quotations of his, and let each one judge for themselves. On page 53 of "Death and the After Life" Brother Davis says:

"It is known, and can be demonstrated, that this subject of the future life came upon me years ago. I stand before you educated to some extent, by that advent."

Page 58rd and 54th:

"My position is that of a person who, without forethought or intellectual preparation, became slowly acquainted with realities and scenes that were transmitted or impressed, day by day, from a higher sphere."

In "The Fountain," page 216, we read:

"That the reading of books and reflection, as a means of [illegible]

[illegible] able mansion, and without the aid of books, but with the aid of clairvoyance, proceeded with his researches, etc."

On same page read what C. O. Fool says:

"A little over two months ago, Mr. Davis took possession of his writing room in my house. No book was in, or has been used in the room except Webster's Dictionary."

On page 13 read:

"Not only was this volume written without referring immediately to any other book or author," but the term, "as usual," implies that "The Thinker" was written as all others had been, without either reading or referring to books or authors.

If Mr. Davis has done thus in all that he has written, why may not others approximate something near it, without being accused of promulgation a great error? How did Mr. Davis come to write "The Fountain?" In the introduction page 9 we find:

"One bright morning last May, as I was idly sleeping at the foot of a grand mountain, the voice of a reverend instructor said, 'Arise! Go up to the very top, survey the ways of wisdom, observe the needs of the world, be healthful and hopeful, and perform thy work.' And in the beautiful light above the forest, a friendly voice said, Write a 'book.' In obedience to the voice of wisdom, I proceeded to write, and the present volume is the result."

Who has done more to impress the Spiritualists with the idea that books were of no avail in spiritual matters than Brother Davis? Still I do not find fault with him even if he does say that he is not all right, or has anything like error clinging to him. It looks like this to me—that Brother Davis has shown himself quite fallible in judgment.

Lake City, Minn., May 6th, 1871.

Letter from an "Investigator."

ED. JOURNAL:—Many years ago when in San Francisco, I sought the church of the Rev. Starr King for the purpose of hearing that eminent divine preach, who at that time was universally conceded to be the ablest pulpit orator on the Pacific coast. But it was not my privilege to hear him, as he was at that time suffering from ill health, unable to be in his pulpit, consequently it was to me a very great disappointment, as I had long had an anxiety to hear him, and in fact had gone from Sacramento to San Francisco for that very purpose.

Though many years have elapsed since then and his decease, I can truly say, the evidence of my senses being admitted, that it has been my privilege to hear him. It was upon the occasion of a circle of friends at West Elkton, Ohio. At this sitting there were some very remarkable manifestations,—such as the moving of articles of furniture, and the playing of musical instruments. But the most remarkable manifestation was, the talking through the trumpet by what purported to be departed spirits. To me, it was a most convincing test, as many of my departed friends gave me most unmistakable evidences of their presence and power to identify. As to the evidence that was given, I would refer to their relating some of the incidents of my experience during the day, known only to myself.

But the most surprising to me, and remarkable of all, was what appeared to be an address of some kind. Though it lasted some minutes, I was unable to understand exactly the drift of the remarks, as many of the words were not distinctly articulated, although they were in tone of voice above an ordinary conversation. At the close of this, the name of Starr King was given. This gave me much surprise, and greatly excited my curiosity. To ascertain that I was not mistaken, I asked again for the name, which was promptly and with emphasis given,—Starr King. Thinking here was an opportunity to get an additional test to what I had already had, he being a stranger to the others of the circle, I asked, "Where did you depart this life?" to which the reply came in as plain and distinct a voice as any living person can speak, "San Francisco."

I then asked, "To what religious denomination did you belong?" and the quick reply was "Unitarian." I then asked him if he could give me the name of the street upon which his church stood in San Francisco. This he attempted many times, but failed to articulate the name sufficiently plain to be understood. I next asked, "What of Universalism?" "None," he replied, "If I were upon the earth, I would go into the streets to-night and proclaim the truth of Spiritualism."

Letter from H. H. Smith.

DEAR JOURNAL:—I see in the issue of the 22d of April, that Mr. Hicks, of Rashford, Mich., feels sure that his spirit left the body and was gone some time, and then came back again and took possession of the physical form. It might be made to appear so to him and to others, but does not every one know, who is conversant with mesmerism or psychology, that the subject can be made to think, see, feel, hear, or taste, just what the operator may choose with him to? The person does not always know that he is psychologized. His generally feels as though he was performing or seeing things himself, when in fact, he does not really see any object, he thinks he does.

For instance, the operator wishes to make a snake appear before his subject. He only has to say to him mentally, that there is a snake on the floor in front of him, and he feels as though it was surely so, when, in fact, there is none there. The subject can be made to swear, dance, fight, pray, clog, describe any place at a distance that the operator wishes him to. Is this real because the operator makes it so? Is it not psychologically just what the operator wills, and the subject is ready to swear to it? Upon the same theory, or by the law of mesmerism, can it be made to appear to the subject that he is out of the body and in different places, viewing scenaries and things at a distance, when, in fact, the spirit must be in possession of the body to sustain life? I hold it firmly that when the spirit really leaves the body, it can never get back and restore again the body, and that spirits in or out of the body can not go beyond the power granted them, as finite beings; in other words, no mind can give forth intelligence it does not possess, be in the body or out. And this is now proves to me the existence of spirits in the spirit world; that is, when the subject, whether knowingly psychologised or not, gives intelligence that he does not possess, it is done by an operator, and when not in the body, some mind psychologizes that is out of the body.

When I sit down to give a test by writing a spirit's name, I do not know that it is through the mediumship of some spirit psychologist that I give the name, and this is what proves it so to me, and why I am a Spiritualist. Brother Hicks, it is by this psychological fact that I am convinced of their presence and power.

When a medium describes a disease that he does not know himself,—it is done by some spirit that does know. This again proves a spirit presence. So with all the tests,—they prove spirit presence and power, and not mind alone. Upon the same theory can the appearance out of the body be explained—instead of its being really so, it is only made to appear so by the spirits. They psychologize subjects many times, and give sights that appear real.

Osseo, Minn.

Dr. Abba Lord Palmer.

DEAR JOURNAL:—While Mrs. Palmer was visiting a short time since at our house, several persons requested her to give them a psychometrical reading of their characters, and she acquiesced, perfectly describing the past and present, and the disposition of each; also stating what would happen in the future, which we have no cause to disbelieve, as the other reading was so correct.

A young man then requested her to [illegible] letter a likeness that a number in the room said was the lady which the medium had described, and he said he supposed it was his intended wife.

We write this statement, as we wish the world to know that she is a reliable psychometric and test medium.

SARAH HALL,
CHARLES HALL.

New Boston, Ill., May 1st, 1871.

Letter from Wm. W. Campbell.

BROTHER JONES:—Will some of the many scientific writers of the JOURNAL, answer, or give their opinions on the following questions:

First, what is the difference between mind and matter? If mind is not substance, what is it?

Second, what is heat, and is it not the cause of all life and motion?

Third, is space a substance? Space being unlimited, or endless, is it absurd to think it all filled or occupied by worlds; that there are worlds without end?

Fourth, if man came from the lower animals, would that be any proof that he has not a spirit or soul?

Fifth, is there any matter in the universe different from the matter of this earth?

I have been taking your paper for a short time only, and thus far, as a happy to inform you that I think—like most of the readers—am willingness to discuss on any religious topic or creed.

Camden, Ohio, May 16th, 1871.

Letter from Dr. Daniel Reed.

ED. JOURNAL:—As it seems your very excellent paper is regarded by Spiritualists as a medium of thought between friend and friend, as well as the source from which is to be derived much valuable information in regard to the advance of the great and beautiful truths of spirit communion, I take the liberty to say that we have lately been enjoying a feast, as shown through the powers of that very excellent lady, and powerful test medium, Mrs. Jennie Ferris. Coming here as she did, just on the eve of the Brinkley College ghost sensation, the minds of many were ripe for investigation, and the result has been that she has done us great and lasting good, and it was with sincere regret that we parted with her, and we shall joyfully hail the day of her return.

Memphis, Tenn., May 16th, 1871.

"The Bible vs. Spiritualism."

The above is part of the title of a pamphlet by Professor G. T. Carpenter, A. M., of Oskaloosa, Iowa. The amount of the Professor's argument is, 1st, that the Bible condemns Spiritualism; 2nd, it is denounced by certain persons who call themselves 1 and 2nd, it is a species of Infidelity. This is about the substance of the arguments used by Prof. Carpenter, A. M. (hasn't he got any more titles?), and although we are not believers in Spiritualism, yet if we had no better arguments to bring against it than those which he offers, we think we should have sense sufficient to keep still. But the vanity of certain Professors to appear in print, when they have nothing to say, is wonderful, even for so promising a State as Iowa.—Boston Investigator.

—The nineteenth century demands a religion based upon science, and it is fast achieving it.—S. A. Merrill.

Original Poetry.

Written for the Religio-Philosophical Journal.

TO MY OLD WIFE.

BY H. WINCHESTER.

I love my old wife
Though wrinkled and old
Far more than earth's treasures
A thousand times told;
For she's richer and fairer
And purer to me
Than all things of earth,
Or gems of the sea.

Oh, yes! I love my old wife,
Though sixty long years
Had made in her cheeks
Deep channels for tears.
Though all that was mortal
In me now laid away,
Her spirit is with us
To greet us each day.

Yes, I love my old wife,
For she's purer by far
Than the light that comes down
From the beautiful star.
Her spirit immortal
Forever will bloom,
And her heart be my heaven
Beyond the dark tomb.

Yes, my darling old wife
Is my guard and my guide
The angel that loves me,
Who stands by my side,
Ever blessing and cheering
My pathway in life;
Oh! I LOVE HER—God bless her—
God bless my old wife!

Lower Lake, Cal.

A REVIEW.

To Mrs. Emma Hardinge Brittan.

DEAR SISTER:—I have seen your article recently published in the BANNER OF LIGHT, in which you have been pleased to defend yourself against the critic'sms of a few "Spiritualists" of America; for I have not the least idea that the grand majorities of Spiritualists in this country (even reported by our opponents as reaching ten millions) have ever indulged in any very unjust opinion concerning your course in employing a clergyman of the English church to make legal your recent marriage.

Spiritualists are very much like other people; and the few who have so ungraciously intruded their questions or opinions upon you, have done exactly what the members of the English church, or any other orthodox denomination would do, should one of their eminent bishops or elders go to a dissenting ecclesiasticism for the performance of the marriage ceremony. And especially would this be the case when long years had been spent by this expounder in a zealous and devoted service with voice, pen, and influence, to establish the merits of his special faith. And while your reasons are quite logical in some respects, showing the necessity of conformity in England, and the perils, as well, of non-conformity, the results of your obedience, according to your own confession, have not proved very flattering in defense of your personal and private rights. For after all, it seems those "persecutions and threats of harassing law-suits," which have beset you "from bitterly antagonistic family causes," do not betray a better or higher consideration of your peace and comfort, or a profounder respect for English authority than the curious and critical questions of Spiritualists, of whom you complain, have done.

Except, then, in a civil or legal sense, the English law of marriage does not protect you—and it understand you aright, your own people, whose laws you seem to elevate to such a dignity, are [illegible] as any Spiritualists of whom you complain. [illegible] "persecutions," those which [illegible] the [illegible] law which you elevate to such an imposing authority, in contrast with the not less honorable claims of Spiritualists, which you so sweepingly condemn, prove it.

At your position in the last paragraph but one of that article (BANNER OF LIGHT of Apr. 29th) I am more than surprised. You say, "legal enactments become legal only when they emanate from duly constituted authorities." "When the Spiritualists, who are so fond of repudiating law, but are so particularly strong upon the law of their own opinions, are sufficiently in harmony with the laws of right, good order, God and Nature, as to be recognized for a law-abiding, law-loving people, their enactments will, no doubt, be acknowledged as legal, and ceremonies by their ministers will not endanger the good name of those who participate in them."(!)

As an advocate of Spiritualism, I deny that our people are fond of "repudiating" any law "founded upon right, good order, God and Nature," or that they are not a "law-abiding people. No more loyal or patriotic people are to be found in these United States than Spiritualists; and with the exception of a few fanatics, who are found hanging upon the skirts of any powerful movement, even your dear England can not compare favorably with them in point of "good order" and a high-toned morality.

Why, think you the Spiritualists of this country would have "harassed you with law-suits," "ever since we have been here," or did Spiritualists do it in England? Have not the advocates of English law just proven themselves opposed to its same legal result, this obedience to good order, and shown to us and the world that it is only the high military court, the crown police, that holds them in restraint? Where, then, is their superiority to Spiritualists, whom you sink so low in the scale of civil obedience? Let the criminal records of the last twenty-five years give us the exact statistics. Let the tables of dissention and divorce, the Richardson and Crittenden murders, the long catalogue of curtained crime which festers in the arms of English law, and Protestant American law, to say nothing of the excesses of Roman Catholic priestcraft, which fattens on the lives of the innocent. Let all this foul pool of human licentiousness be fathomed, and tell me, wise is republican for the glaring immolation of these hundreds of thousands of public prostitutes in all the proud cities of "law abiding" England, and "law-loving," orderly, and virtuous orthodox America!

What beautiful morality this, which stares us in the face from all the high courts of Christendom! Add to this the greed of speculation, the sanction of enormous frauds, and villainies in every species of respectable swindling that curses the marts of Christendom, the deadly dragging and sale of liquors, and the [illegible] crimes that are sanctioned by Protestant England and America, from all of which they secure their revenues, and you will discover why Spiritualists want to see consistency. Nor are they without "a bar, a rostrum;" and the select that bar and rostrum is, in the present, as a prophecy of the future. Besides, what you imply is not true in fact, for we have our "legal enactments," which have emanated from duly constituted authorities. And ceremonies sanctioned by us do not "endanger the good name of those who participate in them." The RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL SOCIETY of Illinois is a duly chartered society, with full power to bestow the ministerial authority upon its worthy and gifted members. The Louisiana State Society of Spiritualists, the Indiana State Society, and others in this country, are on just as good legal foundation as any Episcopal or other Protestant denomination. Nor are these "the enactments of the self-elected authorities, who rise up in our midst and proclaim upon their own witness their right to make, and even break, laws at their pleasure"(!)

I am not willing such charges should go out to the world on the score of a personal grievance, and, therefore, have felt moved to reply to your position. I must believe that those words were uttered without consideration of their use by our ever watchful opposers, and with too much asperity of feeling against a few honest or censorious inquirers. But should any conduct of theirs tempt us to betray our Christ, or weaken our native fidelity to a great and noble cause? And is it just and right, in the hour of painful trial to wound the sacred cause which has poured angel benedictions upon our lonely pilgrimage, and lavished upon us the very best gift to give? Let us remember that the true mariner can not, must not expect exemption from all the vicissitudes of a tempestuous ocean. In our commerce with the world and with Spiritualists, we shall find captious, dogmatic, and curious minds, who may not regard the sensitiveness of their victims, but my candid conclusion is, that no one religion practically accepted provides a higher security to society and to the individual than does our angel gospel, which makes every man a law unto himself. And while you may be worldly wise in choking obedience to orthodox authority, I doubt much if you do not find our free country and free religion far more endurable with its ten millions of Spiritualists, and in every respect a far more genial home under its present administration, than that of any arbitrary system the fruits of which are intolerance and persecution, though it be a "a duly constituted authority" of church and state.

Again, while we profess a spirit of almost unlimited toleration toward the rights of private judgment; we may still regard it as a healthy token when the advocates thereof attempt to throw off the dogmatic claims of any aggressive power seeking the subordination of the reason. In this, I have not found Spiritualists "dictating" to any one, that they should "throw aside all forms, law, and order;" and I look over our great congregation of so many millions, and find them quite as true to their principles, as our High Church adherents.

If Brigham Young attends our meetings, he is a Mormon still. If John Noyes attends, he is still the high priest of the Oneida Community; and if Father Hecker goes over the land defending the truths of Spiritualism, and teaching their wondrous purity in the church—their diabolical nature outside of the church—he is a Roman Catholic for all that. But the resolute, open, fearless and uncompromising character of vital, genuine Spiritualism, which now refuses to be represented by any counterfeit issue, is more active than any other power in America, in arresting the perpetuity of tyranny in any and every form of civil and ecclesiastical oppression,—as witness the recent defeat of the ignominious medical bill in four different States, the Chicago conspiracy against mediums, etc. And thus it is that legislatures are defining who we are and what we are, without any great fear of losing their "good name" by it, and we do not have to pay for the respect we have earned in a heroic and consistent defense of our just rights.

Spiritualism is not so much despised in this country as many imagine,—and if it were, who has made more of its converts than our sister [illegible]

Truly, M. J. WILCOXSON.

"Science of Evil."

Well, Evil is at last reduced to its proper rank among the sciences. No problem has presented half the difficulties to the moral [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Religio-Philosophical Journal.

S. S. JONES, EDITOR, PUBLISHER AND PROPRIETOR.
R. FRANCIS, ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

Office 187 and 189 So. Clark Street.

Religio-Philosophical Publishing House.

☞All letters and communications should be addressed to S. S. JONES, 189 South Clark Street, Chicago, Illinois.

TERMS OF THE

Religio-Philosophical Journal.

$3.00 per year, $1.50 6 months, $1.— 3 mo.

☞ Fifty cents for Three Months on Trial TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS.

In making remittances for subscriptions, always procure a draft on New York, or Post-Office Money Order, if possible. Where neither of these can be procured, send the money, but ALWAYS IN A REGISTERED LETTER. The registration fee has been reduced to fifteen cents, and the present registration system has been found by the postal authorities to be virtually an absolute protection against losses by mail. All Postmasters are obliged to register letters when requested to do so.

All subscriptions remaining unpaid more than six months, will be charged at the rate of $3.50 per year.

PAPERS are forwarded until an explicit order is received by the Publisher for their discontinuance, and until payment of all arrearages is made, as required by law.

No names returned on the subscription books without the first payment in advance.

SUBSCRIBERS are particularly requested to note the expiration of their subscriptions, and to forward what is due for the ensuing year, with or without further reminder from this office.

NEWSPAPER DECISIONS.

1. Any person who takes a paper regularly from the post-office—whether directed to his name or another's, or whether he has subscribed or not—is responsible for the payment.

2. If a person orders his paper discontinued, he must pay all arrearages, or the publisher may continue to send it, until payment is made, and collect the whole amount,—whether the paper is taken from the office or not.

3. The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers and periodicals from the post-office, or removing and leaving them uncalled for, is PRIMA FACIE evidence of intentional fraud.

LOOK TO [illegible] upon the wrapper, will be found a statement of the time to which payment has been made. For instance, Mrs. John Smith has paid to Dec. 10th, 1870, it will be marked, "Smith J.—10 Dec.—0." The 0 means 1870. If he has only paid to Dec. 10th, 1869, it would stand thus: Smith J.—10 Dec.—9, or perhaps, in some cases, the last two figures for the year, as 70 for 1870, or 69 for 1869.

☞ Those sending money to this office for the JOURNAL, should be careful to state whether it be a renewal, or a new subscription, and write all proper names plainly.

CHICAGO, JUNE 3, 1871.

A SEARCH AFTER GOD.

NUMBER XI.

The first World—A Retrospective View—Improvements in Different Planets—Who made the First Engine or Telegraph?

You ask the orthodox divine in reference to the first man or the first world, and he will unhesitatingly answer you, "This earth was the first habitable globe made by God, and Adam was the first man." The geologist, however, will impart to you different ideas in regard to this matter, and sustain his position by evidences which seem to be correct. Whatever question the human mind may consider, this idea invariably arises in reference to the first cause, and many even are so foolish as to inquire, "What was before the eternal?" In explaining the nature of any law intimately connected with the material world, the query invariably arises, who instituted these laws, who controls them, or do they, from some inherent impulse, work independent of supervising intelligence?

It is easy to perplex any philosopher with queries, embarrass him with suggestions, and throw [illegible] in his way that he finds it quite im-

The little child who asked her [illegible] the birdies?" and, in response thereto received the answer, "God made them, darling," had another query immediately arise in her mind, and she still desired to know, "Did God make the mice?" and received an affirmative reply. Still inquisitive, she desired her mother to inform her, "Does God keep a cat?" The mother, in answer to her last question, said, "Darling, you had better go to bed."

Since we commenced discussing this intricate God question, from all sides interrogatories have come pouring in, and we have been intensely interested in studying them, and obtaining from the influence that accompanies the letters, the character of the inquisitive writers. Some are investigators, who have no well-defined opinion in reference to Deity, and who are following our Search with great care, hoping to find some safe place where they can securely rest without danger of having some profound thinker create a squall, or a hurricane, or earthquake, or volcanic eruption, or pestilence, or war among old notions, and banishing all of them through the force of his will, establish others in their place. Well may thinkers seek for a sure foundation on which to rest, knowing that some iconoclastic thinker may come along to take from them the foundation on which they stand. The Devil has gone; poor Adam is regarded as a myth; Mother Eve long since vanished like a will-o'-the-wisp; and now the Christian God is about to take his departure also. Old theories are passing away, to give room to encroaching new ones, and the world is all aghast at what will come next. Well may humanity query, throw in obstructions here, cut off our retreat there, harass us by criticisms, and regret the failure of our efforts to overthrow existing ideas. We stand in the position of an invading army, and opposing us is the whole Christian world and many who have no well defined notions in regard to this question.

Now, the great obstacle thrown in our way, to embarrass us, cut off our retreat, and compel us to relinquish our Search, is the question: Who made the first earth? This, really, is an important question. On its correct conclusion all depends. If our previous position be true we must have it in our power to answer this question in a manner to be easily understood. Really, how can we answer the inquiry, "Who made the first earth?" when time is of endless duration?

A RETROSPECTIVE VIEW.

We go back in the misty past, millions and millions of ages, until the mind is lost, as it were, in the contemplation of the number of years, and still we see worlds revolving on their axis and inhabited by intelligent beings, and we find the same grand achievements then as now. The magnetic telegraph, the steamboat, all the vast and complicated machinery of earth, has always had an existence on some of the older planets. The engine, railroad,—in fact, all improvements that have a place on the surface of this earth, have acted out as important a mission on numberless other worlds. Ask me the question, "Who made the first engine," and so far as this earth is concerned we might trace its history from Stevenson, Newcomen, Fulton, and others, but still I could not answer the question, "Who made the first engine?" In yonder orb that twinkles so beautifully in the azure dome, and whose light would require thousands of years to reach the earth, and which would continue to twinkle, if annihilated at once, for the length of time its light requires to reach us, had the engine long before this earth was conceived,—in fact, had all improvements that characterize us here. Yes, there, suspended, as it were, by a hair, is a world where the improvements inaugurated exceed those of earth as much as the light of the orb of day exceeds that of night. There, too, long since, the telegraph has been laid aside, and an invention adopted that is a marvel of simplicity and usefulness. Through the operations of a simple contrivance, the people there converse with each other, though thousands of miles apart, and all the characteristics of the voice are sustained in the transition. Yes, there, on that glorious world, the arts and sciences have reached a grand height indeed, and the philosopher in his wisdom there never asked who made the first engine, for should he, there would echo throughout the vast corridors of the heavens, "Who made the first hour?" Who started time on its ceaseless wings? Who combined matter, and maintains its laws? On each planet, on each throbbing world, in the vast regions of the inhabitable space, the most ancient historian has never attempted to chronicle the date of the creation of the first engine or the first telegraph. In essential particulars, all worlds are the same. It is true that human beings differ somewhat in different planets; so do all classes of machinery, though in essential particulars they are the same. The engine that moves the commerce of the world, that goes belching along with terrific speed, and is the wonder and admiration of all, resembles those that have existed for millions of years, yet if you should see one that has been constructed in the older worlds, you would not at first recognize it as an engine; in principle the same, but in appearance as widely different as you can imagine! Would you ask me who made the first engine, who first conceived the magnetic telegraph, or the spinning jenney? Please go with me to yonder planet. Our spiritual eyes discern activity there. Spread out before us on an inclined plane, are many strange devices, and we are lost, as it were, in contemplating their nature. These are inventions that have had their day, acted their part in the race of progress, and now have been laid aside in a cabinet designed for the purpose, like the Patent Office at Washington. What magnificence! The various machines there, in order to illustrate their character, are in motion, and the noise created almost deafens us. [illegible] for weaving and spinning and casting metals, that have been laid aside—they are no longer essential to the people there, having been superseded by others more useful. Then, what scenes greet us! The eye is bewildered, the mind lost, as it were, in the contemplation of the grandeur of the view. The engine superseded—in fact all of our useful inventions here have had their day there.

Shall I carry you, reader, to another world in space, where your eye can not reach, and from which light has never struck the children of earth? We will wend our way thither. There, too, we are appalled. What progress. Why, all the inventions of the world just visited, have been superseded there, and the engine there would no more compare in usefulness with our present mode of conveyance, than a train of oxen would with a train of cars! Thus it is, progress is written on all things. You might search for the first engine, or the first magnetic telegraph, and yet never find it. The first important invention—well, who conceived it? The question is a pertinent one. Yes, progress will never cease. The earth is only in its teeth year,—it is growing yet, scarcely able to stand alone. You gaze at its arched domes, tall steeples, palaces, and wonderful improvements, and imagine, perchance, that they can not be excelled. You trace the history of important inventions on earth, but can not follow them in other worlds. Thus it will ever be. Man will constantly be presenting questions for solution. A little child can puzzle and perplex the wisest philosopher. Who made the first earth, the first engine, the first telegraph—who first conceived them? Where shall we go for an answer? Shall we philosophize; shall we glance in the horoscope of the past, place ourselves in rapport with the soul of things, penetrate the arcana of nature, in order to find a solution for it? The world desires to know. An answer to the question is demanded. If individualized intelligences make worlds, who made the first one, and if individualized intelligences make engines, who made the first one? Now, as it would be impossible, as you can see at a glance, to tell who made the first engine, would it not be equally impossible to tell who made the first world? But we know how an engine is made, and in essential particulars all engines are constructed like it. We know that this earth was made by individualized intelligences, and in essential particulars, all worlds are made like it. But how can we solve this question, so it can be understood by all—who made the first earth? Supposing we should ask the interrogator to date the commencement of time, when it is endless in duration, both past, present, and future. But if individualized intelligences are developed, brought forth through the instrumentality of worlds, and in no other way, and they have the power, in turn, in eons of ages, perhaps, to became world makers, the question is a pertinent one, and well worthy of the exercise of the ingenuity of the mind of man. Obstacles are in our way, and we must remove them. Puzzling questions have been asked, and we must answer them. Clouds have arisen over our pathway, and we must dissipate them. Amidst all these difficulties, we will proceed in our investigation, knowing ere long, the lights we are reaching for, will burst in upon us, revealing the footprints of the being after whom we are searching. Thus it is with life,—onward and upward, with an eye on the celestial glories above, marching with stately tread, humanity moves on. The firing of cannon, the tolling of bells, the cry of the widow and orphan, the moans of the dying, the shouts of revelry, the hearty laugh of joyous mirth, and the music of happy hearts, all unite in one grand song—still the column moves, the masses falter not, the material recedes, and the celestial opens up in grandeur to receive the advancing columns, but, remember as passing along in this grand phalanx, that you are only one of a grand army, beautifully interlinked with all the rest, and that in proportion as you try to make others strong, pure, and self-sustaining, you will grow strong, pure, and self-sustaining yourself.

(To be continued.)

Joseph Potts and his two Sons, William and Andrew.

We had the pleasure last week of receiving a call from Joseph Potts, a resident of Harrisburgh, Penn., and were highly entertained by his conversation in relation to the wonderful mediumistic development of his two sons, Andrew and William, twin brothers.

Mr. Potts is well advanced in life, having reached the good old age of sixty-seven years, and, judging from his quick step, bright eye, and hearty appearance, he is destined to live many years yet. He is somewhat mediumistic himself, and being constantly under the ministration of loving spirit friends in his own family, he indeed leads a happy life. Mr. Potts is an honest man; every lineament of his face, every word he utters, every movement he makes, speaks in emphatic language his purity and integrity. "An honest man is the noblest work of God;" such is Mr. Potts, who favored us with a brief narration of the spiritual experiences of his own family. He formerly resided with his family at York, Penn., some eighteen years ago, and it was there that the development of his sons commenced. Sitting in circles that were harmonious, the peculiar mediumistic traits of his two boys were soon brought grandly out. The raps first came, then the tipping and moving of the table, which was followed by writing and speaking.

William's mediumistic nature is entirely different from Andrew's,—his being more of the artistic color, ably sustaining those claims that the Spirit World can use in painting likenesses and landscapes,—and the wonderful manifestations through his organism excell the remarkable levitations of Home, an account of whom was published in a previous number of the JOURNAL. [illegible] with the work of his spirit band—they do not use his hand, and, in fact, his presence is not always demanded.

The room dedicated to the work of this circle of artists, is of small dimensions,—only 12x15 ft.,—and when they are at their labor, it is partially darkened. No one is allowed to be present in the room when they are at work, and no material is required,—only the paper on which the picture is to be projected,—not even a pencil, brush, or colors of any kind, is required. The paper is merely put in the room, and it is moved to a place suitable for the work of the artists, when they accomplish what they desire. It may not be amiss to say that it is only since October last that this peculiar phase of manifestation was given through William's mediumship.

Mr. Potts informs us that the artists controlling his son have furnished him correct likenesses of his father and two daughters,—no portrait of them having been obtained during their earth-life. But their efforts seem to be more particularly directed in presenting landscape views of the Summer Land, all of which are really beautiful, and the manner in which the work is accomplished, cannot fail to confound the skeptic and the scientist, and compel them to acknowledge that spirits do the work. Who among the artists of earth can improvise material for a likeness or a beautiful landscape view? Well may such peculiar exhibitions of power attract the attention of the civilized world, and instigate the inquiry, "What is it, if not spirits?" But where is the material obtained by those who execute the work? Why, every school-boy knows the peculiarities of light, and how the different colors are separated and blended by the "solar spectrum." In this light, we judge, is the "mine of colors," from which the scientific circle of artists extract the material they require. Indeed, it looks reasonable that they should, for light is, in a sense, a tangible substance—tangible to the spirits, who can extract therefrom various hues. Mr. Potts once witnessed their operations, and the material used seemed to surround the paper like a cloud, and was projected therefrom, forming the image desired. There seems to be no blot or blemish about the paper to indicate that the work is slovenly done; the different colors blend beautifully, exhibiting great skill on the part of the artists.

When the work was first commenced, in October, pencils were used, but now all materials excepting the paper itself, are omitted.

The spirits who are engaged in this work are now experimenting, not fully understanding the nature of the process they are compelled to use; and the time is not far distant when more wonderful developments will be brought forth, and in a manner that can be made more public.

This medium is a fine clairvoyant, and the spirits will hold up before him words and sentences which he will read in rapid succession, many times giving some remarkable tests and statements of facts.

The mediumship of Andrew is quite different. He is controlled in a mysterious manner by the spirit Patrick, who frequently entrances him, and performs some remarkable feats. The phase of manifestations through him are peculiar indeed, and truthfully exhibit his own nature, for the spirits must work in accordance with the natural tendency of the elements they use. Under the control of Patrick he sees (or the spirit controlling) into the earth, as we would into a glass, and detects the character of all objects concealed there, and never fails to correctly point out their localities. Strange feature this, but nevertheless true. A few weeks ago, while entranced, he was taken by Patrick near the Virginia line, where he dug up from the earth several dollars in specie. He remained away three days, and knows absolutely nothing of the place where the money was obtained, only as he was told by his controlling spirit.

One time Patrick took him to a mud-hole, and he dug therefrom thirty-five dollars. To convince a neighbor of the truthfulness of spirit control, he went on to his farm, and in various places requested him to dig, and in each instance the article was found as predicted.

It would require a large volume to give in detail all the remarkable incidents connected with his mediumship. He once found a lead jar in a tree, containing "continental money." Seizing a hammer and chisel on one occasion, he went to a rock two or three miles from town, and in the presence of several witnesses, dug into it several inches, taking therefrom a human tooth.

These are strange manifestations on the part of the Spirit World, yet admirably adapted for a specific purpose, for they cannot fail to convince skeptics that supramundane influences are engaged in the work.

On all sides we hear of wonderful manifestations. It seems as if the angel world were determined to break down the barriers that support old Theology, and convince the world of the truthfulness of spirit communion.

These two mediums are doing a grand good work, and we hope the time is not far distant when they will be before the people in a more public manner. Their mediumship differs from all others of whom we have any knowledge, and in their peculiar sphere of action, the doors of the Spirit World will swing open to give us a clearer view of friends there.

Long may the father and two sons live to disseminate the truths of the Harmonial Philosophy.

Physical Manifestations.

Our city continues to be favored with physical manifestations of spirit power, of an astonishing character. Mr. Willis continues to [illegible] him an opportunity. His terms are five dollars, if a spirit picture is obtained—nothing if not.

The price may seem high, but when it is considered that four-fifths of the trials are abortive, and all at his loss, a different conclusion will be arrived at. Mr. Willis is not making so much money as he would if he followed his regular profession as a photographer. If he does ordinary work, it unfits him for taking spirit likenesses.

We again say to friends, avail yourselves of this opportunity to procure spirit likenesses.

MRS. LORD has returned to the city, to remain during the summer. We have often reported the phase of her mediumship. No better one lives, for intelligent and interesting communion with loved ones in spirit life, re-clothed with physical bodies,—tangible and palpable to the touch, as well as affectionate in conversation.

The BANGS CHILDREN are now settled, and holding seances regularly—the time and place will be given hereafter.

These little children, it will be remembered, give their seances in the day-time. We attended one on Monday evening, in company with a Baptist minister in high standing with his denomination. His spirit friends manifested themselves to him in a manner absolutely convincing.

One incident we will venture to relate:

One of the children held a slate under the table with a pencil on it with one hand, while the other rested upon the top of the table, in the light. A name was immediately written on the slate, without the touch of mortal hand. The minister read it, "Aunt Bishop," and said he did not understand it. The name was rubbed out, and the child again held the slate under the table as before. The pencil was heard writing again, and immediately a signal (rapping the pencil on the slate) was given, which seemed to be understood to mean that the writing was done. The slate was taken out, and to the surprise of the minister, there was written in a bold hand, "Ann Bishop." The clergyman admitted that he knew Ann Bishop well in this life, and that she died some time since.

Then followed an interesting conversation between priest and spirit—Ann Bishop. It was interesting to listen to, especially such portions as had a theological bearing. Such questions as a preacher would be likely to ask, were asked. To most of them quick and emphatic answers were given. To the question, "Are you with Jesus?" the spirit was absolutely silent. Then to the question, "Are you happy?" the response was an emphatic, "Yes." The gentleman was left to conjecture, whether Ann could be happy, and yet not be with Jesus.

We have not seen an investigator more sincere in all our experience than was this gentleman. He called on Mr. Willis the spirit artist, and sat for a spirit-likeness. He got as fine a one as we have ever seen. He called at our reception rooms, gave the numerous spirit paintings and likenesses belonging to this PUBLISHING HOUSE a careful and critical examination.

Quite a number of other strangers have called during the great Baptist gathering in this city. We feel confident that many of them, and this gentleman in particular, will go home the wiser and happier for the knowledge gained in regard to the truth of Spiritualism.

We would not omit also to state, that the same clergyman attended one of Charles H. Read's seances, at MRS. A. H. Robinson's residence, 148 Fourth Avenue, where he had a most ample opportunity to witness the marvelous feats performed by spirits through that remarkable medium, one of which we will describe, as it was repeated several time for the special benefit of the Baptist clergyman:

He held Read fast, so that he could not stir without his knowing it. While holding him with one hand fast to his shoulders or his coat, the light was extinguished but for a moment, when Read's coat was removed,—thrown clear from him. This most remarkable manifestation being so extraordinary, the minister requested it repeated—it was done several times, together with many other equally strange things.

This remarkable medium's powers are so surprising, that we shall present our readers with another article, more fully delineating the same.

Charles H. Read

Arrived in the city a few days ago, and is creating great interest among Spiritualists on account of the wonderful manifestations given through his mediumship. The spirits managing his seances seem to have perfect control of the forces required, and operate with them in a manner that can not fail to open the eyes of the skeptic. We had the pleasure of attending one of his seances, and the exhibition of spirit power was truly remarkable. A committee was appointed to tie him, and it might be well to state in connection, that one of the members thereof was a distinguished Baptist clergyman, who dared meet with Spiritualists, and who was willing to test the truthfulness of their assertions in reference to the origin of the phenomena. The care with which he tied him, and the close scrutiny manifested, showed plainly that he did not intend to be deceived.

We look upon this movement on the part of this clergyman as auspicious of his future conversion to Spiritualism. No one can attend Mr. Read's seances, and go away without believing there is an influence outside of the mortals of earth, caused by spirits.

No sooner was Mr. Read thoroughly tied by this skeptical committee, and the room darkened, than he almost instantly ordered a light, revealing a chair suspended on his arm. This was so quickly done that it startled all present. Again the room was darkened, and ten seconds had not elapsed before his coat was taken from him. It might be well to state that the committee had securely tied his hands together, also secured him to the chair, rendering it impossible for him to move. Notwithstanding all this, the powers controlling him could so manage the forces that they could accomplish as quick as thought, all that they desired. Solid rings were put on his arms, and this so rapidly done as to show conclusively that the medium had nothing to do with it, only as an instrument which the invisibles could use.

After these tests, the committee and others were invited to put their hands upon his shoulders, and while his head rested upon the one standing by him, his (the medium's) coat would be taken off of him in an instant, and spirit hands felt touching the face and arms of the investigator.

The manifestations given were of the most convincing character, and all left the seance well satisfied that Mr. Read is really a most wonderful medium. Indeed! what a shower of manifestations at the present time! Spirits now write with their own hands, give the likeness of loved ones in spirit life without the aid of any material except a white sheet of paper,—painting scenes in spirit life on pieces of glass, and are developing new mediums in all parts of the country, with various phases of manifestations.

Spiritual Seances.

The BANGS CHILDREN will hold seances on Tuesdays and Thursdays, from 2 to 5 o'clock, P. M., and on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday evenings, at 7:30 o'clock.

Residence, 227 South Morgan street. Take Madison street horse cars to Morgan street. Go south to No. 227—second door south of Tyler street.

The time, and places where seances will be held by other mediums, from time to time, can be learned by calling at this office.

The Bhagvat Geeta—Hindoo New Testament.

We have to announce to the many liberal-minded people who have already dared to send for the above-mentioned book, which was written over four thousand years ago, and contains the basis of the Christian's New Testament, that they will during the ensuing week, receive the same, bound in best quality Magenta muslin, nicely embossed in gold. It is a book that the purchaser will be proud to exhibit, and place in the hands of acquaintances.

Every one who has any desire to know the truth in regard to the origin of the Christian religion, and the fact that KRISHNA of the Hindoos, in the day of their country's glory, three thousand years ago, was venerated and worshiped, precisely as Christ now is by Christians.

We have been induced to get out this rare work in a neat and cheap form, that it may go into every house where people dare read, and speak of the truth as it really exists.

Price $1.25; postage, 16 cents.

We Have not Forgotten Them.

Who? Certain names on our mail list, with figures which indicate 1870, 1869, 1868, etc, etc. We are really anxious to renew our correspondence with them! Will all such take notice, and write us first? We will reply promptly.

See the little yellow monitor—a tell-tale that sometimes causes the JOURNAL to be hid away from neighbors, when it should be read by them!

Personal and Local.

—The "Search after God" will be concluded in about ten more issues of the JOURNAL. Mr. Francis will then commence a series of articles of thrilling interest.—"A Rimble Among the dry bones of Old Theology in Chicago," embracing "Sketches of the Other Side of Life."

—Dr. J. K. Bailey was in the city on Thursday last, on his way to La Porte, Ind. He will attend the State Convention at Indianapolis, Ind.

—Dr. Kayner gave two lectures at Belvidere, Ill., much to the gratification of the people. He was very successful in diagnosing disease. F. A. Hall speaks in high terms of his efforts.

—Thanks to Mrs. Addie L. Ballou for forwarding to us several important items in reference to Spiritualism. She is lecturing this month at Terre Haute, Ind.

—The Rev. Edward Werner, of Michigan, a Lutheran preacher, is in trouble. He is charged with obliterating the cancellation on postage stamps, and using them again.

—There is a haunted house in Sanilac County, Michigan, and unearthly noises fill the people with horror.

—P. R. Lawrence has been lecturing and healing at Augusta, Iowa.

—Brother Nathan Stevens informs us that Jacob Speers is performing some remarkable cures in Missouri as a "faith doctor."

—Brother A. J. Fishback sends us a large list of new subscribers. Thank you, dear brother. Our lecturers can do much in turn for favors received through the JOURNAL, by aiding in its circulation. He writes to us from Marion, Ill.

—Mrs. F. A. Logan has been lecturing at Loganville, Wisconsin, and several other places along the line of the railroads there. Her address is Geneseo, Wis.

—George Mee writes to us speaking in high terms of the ministrations of Dr. Blair at Lowell, Ind. Mrs. Maud Lord has also been there holding success, creating great interest.

—Moses Hull speaks the first Sunday of June at Lotus, Ind.; second, at Michigan State Convention; third, at Sturgis' yearly meeting; fourth, at Battle Creek, Michigan.

—James S. Parshall, of Morrisania, N. Y., writes: "Please find inclosed ten dollars, which you will have the goodness to place to my account, as I see by the yellow slip pasted to the paper sent me, I must be one 'to whom it may concern only.' Now, I shall, on reading your paper, feel when I see the above notice, that it is not intended for me, but for some other unfortunate individual."

Remarks.—Thank you, brother. Your example is worthy of imitation. Our philosophy is doing its work well! There are but very few readers of the JOURNAL any considerable length of time, who do not appreciate the beauties of the golden rule.

—N. B. Starr, the spirit artist, will visit Chicago this summer.

—In answer to the query, "Can spirits pass to the other worlds?" Hudson Tuttle gives the following in his "Arcana of Spiritualism:" "This depends on their degree of refinement. While some are very pure and ethereal, others are gross and unrefined. The sensualist, the depraved debauchee, in many instances are so gross that gravity chains them to the earth's surface, as it does man. They are denser than the spirit ether, and hence have weight, and can not rise from the earth. Others, who are more spiritual, can only rise to the first sphere; while others, still more refined, pass all will through the universal ocean of ether, visiting other globes and other solar systems. The degree of purity or spirituality determines whether or no the spirit shall be chained to earth, or allowed freedom to travel the ocean of space."

—Next week we shall publish the result of the Brinkley College ghost story, giving contents of jar, and other interesting particulars.

—The Hull Brothers, Mrs. Addie L. Ballou, Mrs. M. S. Wiggenton, Dr. Bailey, Dr. Underhill, and other distinguished speakers and mediums, will be in attendance at the Destiny Convention.

—Thank you, Brother Wood, for that interesting pamphlet.

—Mrs. Bell Chamberlain gave two lectures at Charles City, Iowa, which Brother H Preston says we were well received.

—Mrs. Shaw is lecturing in various parts of Ohio with great success.

—Several weeks ago, George Henry Starr, aged sixteen, the son of the well-known microscopist, committed suicide at his parent's residence, No. 67 Morton street, New York city, by taking laudanum. Brooding over religious questions rendered him insane, and in a paroxysm he ended his life. Alfred Garroway, aged twenty-two, a firm friend of young Starr, was with him the evening previous to his death. Grief for the loss of his friend depressed him exceedingly, and he committed suicide also, by taking morphine.

—The Spiritualists will hold a grove meeting at Halsey, Oregon, to continue four days.

—The Medium and Daybreak gives the following account of a seance: "The spirit Katie came immediately, and wanted to know what we allow any other spirit to come near us. John King, she said, was engaged with the boys, alluding to Messrs. Herne and Williams, who were holding a seance at their rooms, and others she made curious remarks. She now asked for a cotton, to Emma had to leave the room for it. Question put by me, —'But, Katie dear, what are you going to do with it?' Answer,—'To make you a crown of glory.' 'But I wish you would do something for Emma, as you know this seance is held on her account, and whatever gifts you have to bestow, please shower them upon her. She is going to school on Monday, and it will help to make her happier if she takes something with her that you have given.' Answer,—'I will make a wreath for her, of purity and goodness.' I think these were the words. We then heard the cotton being untwisted, the whole room being filled with a powerful perfume. Frequently the wreaths were placed on our heads; lights were ordered, and two of the most exquisite were seen, most gracefully arranged—Emma's chaste and beautiful, mine gorgeous with color. Katie then made a most flattering speech, very classical and very pretty. Either she is better versed in mythology than we gave her credit for, or she must have had a spirit dictating it to her. I must here say that at the time she was speaking of Helen and Paris, two apples were placed in my hands. After this, perfume of a most delicious kind was literally showered upon us. A locket with a diamond star was taken from the chain of Mrs. Guppy, without its being unfastened, this was given to me, and a chain of Indian workmanship was given at the same time to Emma. On my remonstrating and objecting to these manifestations, the spirits forbade me at my peril to take it from the child, or to omit wearing the brooch until they gave me orders to return it. I was now so thoroughly exhausted that we were allowed to take some refreshment, but I did not return to the seance room again. Mrs. Guppy and Emma, however, went, and a sixpence with a hole in it, was given to the child, and something else which I have forgotten. The flowers were so fresh, and so beautifully arranged, that Mrs. Guppy suggested they should be photographed, but the morrow was Sunday, and who could we get to do it? Mrs. Guppy, however, took them away, unfastened the lock, and right well has she succeeded. A most beautiful photograph of them is now to be seen, which will ever be preserved as a souvenir of one of the most elegant manifestations we have had the privilege of witnessing."

Philadelphia Department.

BY.....HENRY T. CHILD, M. D

Subscriptions will be received, and papers may be obtained at wholesale or retail, at 634 Race street, Philadelphia.

Human Life.

How wonderful in all its departments is human life. Its lights and shadows are ever falling upon us, and blessed are we when we realize the true meaning of these, for in each there is a lesson fraught with instruction for us. Very often in symbols and visions, life is reflected and illustrated.

Sitting quietly in a Friends' meeting many years ago, we saw a road on which we seemed to be travelling in a small carriage, alone. Sometimes the road was smooth and level, and at others it was so much higher on one side than the other that there was danger of upsetting, at a time it became so rough and uneven that we were obliged to get out and leave the carriage. Then for a time we rode on the horse, but the road became still more precipitous and rough, and we soon reached a portion on which the horse could not go, but we could go along it, and there we found a beautiful plane, a road on which we could travel with more ease and rapidity than we had ever done before.

Our friend, Jonathan P. Magill, related a vision he had, as follows: "I was walking along a road and came to a place where there were high bars across the road, and I could not go on until I had taken these down, so every little while I would come to such a place as this. It seemed emblematic of life's duties. We must stop and do what we find to do, and then the bars will be down for us to walk on.

Our young friend, the poetess, M. M. J., related a vision illustrative of human life. Three views were presented to her. First, a dense old forest with large trees, stumps, and fallen trees. A few of the trees had green branches on them, and there was considerable undergrowth of green shrubbery, but many of the trees were dead, and had their dried and withered leaves on, so that the scene was not very attractive. Next, she saw a large stubble field, very unattractive, no green things growing there, only the dry old stubble. Lastly, she saw a beautiful field of golden grain, waving in the breeze, rich and ripe for the harvest. These represented three conditions of humanity. The first was the church, with its old creeds and dogmas, many of them like dead trunks and stumps of trees that had formerly lived but had lost all their greenness and beauty, occasionally a branch and some undergrowth had a green tuft of spirituality on it, but it was not very attractive.

The stubblefield was cold, barren materialism without any green thing in it, in which a great many persons live. Lastly, the beautiful field of grain was Spiritualism with its rich and waving fields of grain, ready for the harvest for everyone who is willing to put in the sickle and reap for themselves, and enjoy the gathered sheaves.

Then she received the following:

The angels from their starry home
In pitying love look down,
And say this path, though dark and lone,
Leads upward to a crown.

But if life's victory we would gain,
Or hope that crown to wear,
We must pass on, and oft in pain
The heavy cross must bear.

Ye do not seek in unfilled fields
The golden grain to find;
The planted seeds, the harvest yields,
With toil and care combined.

And when the precious ore would find,
Ye do not plow the ground,
But deep down in the earth's dark mine
The gold and gems are found.

Do ye plant thorns to gather flowers,
And hope to see them bloom?
Or can ye stay the flowing hours
That bear ye to the tomb?

Each page of Nature's book is clear
For every soul to learn;
The tiny seeds thou sowest here
Rich harvests there return.

To-day, walking in the garden of Gethsemane, with weeds of sorrow upon our spirit, we have a vision of life. The pathway leads pleasantly along for a time, and then all is dark and gloomy—clouds and storms overwhelm us, and the passage through there is one of suffering, in order that we may lay down some heavy burden, and through this we "must tread the wine-press alone," and it seems that all have forsaken us—yet the cup can not pass away.

Soon, however, the clouds begin to disappear, and as the mists rise, when the morning sun shines more brightly than ever before, and a new path opens more beautiful and pure than any we have trodden before, and so each sorrow lifts us to a higher plane—a clearer atmosphere, wherein we may walk for a season, until some new elevation is to be reached; and walking again through the shadows, we shall find still another and brighter light.

So life moves on. Each new morning is brighter, for the day-spring shines in our souls, and bids us go forth bravely on life's journey.

Failure was the first grand and signal success of man. His first great fall was his first elevation.—N. J. T. Brigham.

All good and truth is gradually developed by a growth in the human soul; but there is a certain time when we accept these.—Ibid.

A new truth never steps forth pure and clean, but always has some of the dust of the past upon its garments.—Ibid.

Every thing here is beautiful, and calculated to bless us, if we are ready to receive the blessing.—Ibid.

The only true happiness comes from positive good.—Ibid.

The older religions were based on fear; the new and the true on love.—Ibid.

A bird which has been caged through all its life, can not fly well and soar away,—so if our wings have been crippled by the older theology, we must not expect to fly freely at once.—Ibid.

All human sorrow is nothing but the dark background of the life picture; sometime in the ages we shall thank God for all our experience.—Ibid.

One of the most beautiful things that we can learn concerning God, is the completeness and perfection of his care. In all existence there is not a single flaw in the perfection of his works.

Even in the fall of the leaves there is wisdom; each leaf has a polished side and a rough side, and you will find that nine out of ten will fall with the rough side up, so that moisture remains upon it, and this makes its decay very rapid, and so the leaf turns to dust and builds up new life.—Ibid.

"Oh! who the exquisite delights can tell,
The joy which mutual confidence imparts?
Or who can paint the joy unspeakable,
Which flames in two hearts to faithful hearts."

The consciousness of spirit presence, and of their power to communicate to mortals, is the source of more joy than any other single item of knowledge. The soul eagerly grasps after this, though prejudice and ignorance may lift their barriers against it.

Light is sown for the righteous, and joy and gladness for the upright in heart.

Love lightens all life's burdens.

Jealousy and suspicion blight, not only the soul that harbors them; but all who come within their influence feel their withering blast.

Jealousy is always selfish, however much it may seek to hide this.

Truth wears no mask, needs no disguise.

No truth can satisfy the human soul forever, as no goblet can hold water enough to satisfy the thirst of a human being always, and it is the very nature of water to become stagnant. The fountain of truth is always open to man, and God gives him small goblets to drink with, but permits him to fill them often.—N. J. T. Brigham.

There never was a mind deep enough to hold all truth, but we can see truth wherever we are able to understand it.—Ibid.

We are all children of God, and in each soul there is some likeness of God; it may be covered over with dust, but it is there, and sooner or later it will germinate and grow. It may require the rain of our tears and the sunshine of good resolutions, in order that the flowers of good deeds shall spring up.—Ibid.

In every year there is more sunshine than rain.—Ibid.

Stimulants only double up the line of our lives; and if you can do more to-day, it is only by reaching out and borrowing of to-morrow. We can not lengthen the Age of life.—Ibid.

As no two persons are exactly alike, so no person can absolutely control another. We are bound to respect the rights of others, or forfeit our own.—Ibid.

"The element of fire is pure; it burns as brightly in the cottage of the peasant, as in the palace of the king."

"Love is to the human heart
What sunshine is to the flowers."

We can only help others as we become strong ourselves.

We can do nothing that lessons our self-respect without feeling it, though we attempt to hide it from others.

It is not always best to try to soothe. Sometimes the truth may seem very severe, but in the end it will be found best.

You must be just to yourself, before you can be just to others. You can not do any thing that injures yourself in the hope of helping others.

"Such harmony is in immortal souls.
But whilst this muddy vesture of decay
Doth grossly close it in, we can not hear it."
—Shakespeare

Some persons say they wonder that modern Spiritualism did not come sooner. We only wonder that it came as soon as it did. For today, if a person is entranced, and gives communications outside of the church, they say it is the devil; but if they experience the same thing in the church, it is a manifestation of the glory of God, and his special interest for that church.

We wonder that Spiritualism has come so safely to its mediums, when we read of Salem witchcraft and the persecutions of former times. We know it has come as soon as the world was prepared to receive it.—N. J. T. Brigham.

The churches constitute the brakes on the car of progress, and the ministers are constantly putting on the brakes to keep the car from going too fast.—Warren Chase.

Spiritualism are the golden rays of truth that pierce the darkness.

When a pebble falls in clear water, we may see that it all moves, even deep down to the bottom of the lake; but if the waters be muddy, we can only see the movement on the surface,—so is it in the human soul.

Missionary Work in Wisconsin.

J. O. Barrett, State Missionary will lecture as follows:

Lone Rock,	Friday evening,	May	26th
Richland Center,	Sunday	"	28th
Orion or Mazoola,	Tuesday	"	30th
Pinemore,	Wednesday	"	31st
Woodman,	Thursday	"	June 1st
Bridgeport or Prairie du Chien	Friday	"	2d
Patch Grove,	Sunday	"	4th
Bloomington,	Tuesday,	"	6th
Mt. Hope or LaMoster,	Wednesday	"	7th

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

SPIRITUALISM.

DR. S. L. McFADDEN AND WIFE, Magnetic Physicians, Spiritual Test Mediums, Business Clairvoyants, etc., have located at No. 363 W. Madison St., corner of May, up stairs, Chicago.

They invite all who wish the benefit of their mediumistic powers, to call and see them. They hold developing circles, diagnose disease without any previous knowledge of the patients, tell of the past, present and future; give news from absent and departed friends, etc. They also explain the laws of life and death, good and evil, the cause and cure of inharmony, etc., thereby enabling persons to be a law to themselves,—to be their own thinkers, teachers, doctors, and preachers. ALL MEDIUMS ARE INVITED TO ATTEND FREE OF CHARGE. The contradictions of the Bible, lying spirits, and false communications philosophically explained. Sittings for the examination of diseases, and private communications, from 9 A. M. to 5 P. M. Circles each evening; Sundays not excepted.

Dr. J. Wilbur's
MAGNETIC PAPER.

HAS cured all sorts of complaints, from cancer to cold feet. Send stamp and receive one paper free. Dr. J. Wilbur, 460 W. Randolph St., Chicago, Ill. n10 v10 tf.

CARRIAGE MANUFACTORY.
Waverly, N. Y.

THE UNDERSIGNED MANUFACTURES TO ORDER, and keeps on hand all varieties of Open and Top Buggies of the Best Styles; Platform Spring Wagons, with two or three seats, with or without top. This wagon is an improvement on the old two-spring wagon, and as a business wagon, or for family use, is unsurpassed. Best quality of stock used, and first-class workmen employed, and all work WARRANTED.

Situated on the Erie R. R., we have good facilities for shipping, and are constantly sending work to all parts of the country.

N. KINNEY.

v9 n25 13t.

HESPERIA:

AN EPIC OF THE PAST AND FUTURE OF AMERICA.,

By Mrs. Cora L. V. Tappan.

 PRICE: $1.75; postage, 20 cents. For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 319 S. Clark St., Chicago.

NOTICE OF MEETINGS.

Eighth National Convention.

The American Association of Spiritualists.—The Eighth National Convention will meet at Troy, New York, on Tuesday, the 12th of September, at 10 o'clock in the morning, and continue a session three days.

Each active State or Territorial organization of Spiritualists, within the limits of the United States of America, shall be entitled to one delegate for each fractional fifty members of such organization, and of each working local society, and each Progressive Lyceum within the boundaries of such State or Territory, provided that only one general organization shall be entitled to representation from any State or Territory. Each Province of the American Continent shall be entitled to one delegate for each working association within its limits, and the District of Columbia shall be entitled to two delegates.

Each active local Society, and each Progressive Lyceum of any State, Territory, or Province which has no General Association, shall be entitled to one delegate for each fractional fifty members.

These Associations are respectfully invited to appoint delegates to attend this meeting and participate in the proceedings.

HANNAH F. M. BROWN (Chicago, Ill.), Pres.
HENRY T. CHILD, M. D. (634 Race St. Phil.), Sec.

Indiana State Spiritual Association.

TO THE SPIRITUALISTS OF INDIANA, GREETING:

We would announce to the friends of the Harmonial Philosophy throughout the State, and elsewhere, that the Fifth Annual Convention of the Indiana State Spiritual Association, will be held at Masonic Hall, in the city of Indianapolis, commencing Friday, June 16th, 1871, at 10½ o'clock, A. M., and will continue in session over Sunday. Each local liberal society within the State will be entitled to three delegates, and one additional delegate for each ten members over twenty, and each county where no society exists will be entitled to three delegates. The friends of the cause generally are cordially invited to be present and assist in making this convention a pleasant and profitable one.

Business of much importance is expected to be brought before the Convention.

Good speakers will be procured for the occasion. A noted test medium is expected to be present, to add to the interest of the Convention.

Half fare arrangements will be effected with the railroads as far as possible.

Good board has been arranged for at $1.00 per day for all who may attend the Convention, provided they remain three full days.

By order of the Board of Trustees.

J. R. BUEL, Secretary.

Indianapolis, Ind., April, 1871.

MICHIGAN ASSOCIATION.

The semi-annual meeting of the Michigan Association of Spiritualists will be held at East Saginaw, commencing on the second Friday of June, and continuing over Saturday and Sunday. Each Society is entitled to three representatives, and each County Circle to as many as the county has members in the legislature.

Friends, give this notice your attention, and let us go to the feast with gladness and zeal, with full determination to take a long step upward in the journey of life.

J. H. Powell and other good speakers will be present to instruct, and with the objects of interest to be seen in that new and growing section, we may by communing with nature, and kindred souls, be strengthened for coming conflicts. The place is easy of access by railroads, and the good friend promise good cheer and hospitality.

E. L. MANCHESTER, Pres.
J. P. AVERILL, Sec.

THREE DAYS MEETING.

The friends of progress, free thought and free religion, will hold their anniversary meeting on the 16th, 17th, and 18th days of June, at the Free Church, in the village of Sturgis, commencing on Friday, at 10 o'clock A. M., and continuing until Sunday evening.

Able speakers from abroad will be in attendance to address the people. Ample provision will be made to accommodate strangers who attend the meeting. A general invitation is extended to all to meet with us on this occasion, to discuss questions that concern humanity at large.

By order of the Executive Committee.

OREGON GROVE MEETING.

The Spiritualists of Oregon will hold a four days meeting at Halsey's Station, on the O. & C. R.R., seventeen miles north of Salem, Marion Co., commencing on Thursday, June 29th, 1871.

A general invitation is extended to all, and mediums and speakers especially.

By order of Committee. JOHN S. HAWKINS.
E. V. SHORT.

April 23d, 1871.

NUNICA.

The Spiritualists of Nunica, Ottawa Co., Mich., will hold their quarterly meeting in the Bartholomew School-house, on the second Saturday and Sunday in June, commencing Saturday, at two o'clock P. M.

Mrs. S. A. Pearsall is engaged as speaker. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

R. B. JENNINGS.

Grove and Basket Meeting.

There will be a grove and basket meeting held under the auspices of the Spiritualists, in a grove near the residence of Levi Lewis, in Bedford, Monroe Co., Mich., (in the Mason District), on the second Sunday (the 11th) of June, commencing at 10 o'clock A. M., and continuing throughout the day.

Miss Jane Fowler, of Adrian, trance speaker, and other eminent speakers, will be present.

The public are respectfully invited to attend; particularly members of Christian societies, and ministers.

Lowell Society.

The regular quarterly meeting of the First Spiritual Society of Lowell, Mich., will be held in Union Hall, on the 1st and 2d days of July next. Friends from a distance will be provided for.

Speakers wishing to locate in the Grand River Valley, and speak to the several societies in that vicinity, by the year are invited to correspond with the committee appointed, stating their terms and their different phases of mediumship.

H. B. ALLEN, Sec.,
B. E. BURT,
Mrs. M. A. FULLERTON. } Committee.

Obituary.

DIED.—At Moline, Ill., of whooping cough, Charles H., infant son of C. W. and P. L. Reed, aged 8 years and 4 months.

A few hours previous to his departure, he looked up into space, and waved his hands, and shouted as loud as he could. He then said: "Here, here, here, take me—take me—take me!" He then became quiet and remained so until he died.

CHRISTIANITY;

Its Origin, Nature and Tendency, Considered in the Light of Astro-Theology.

By D. W. Hull.

THIS book is, so far as it goes, a thorough review of the Origin of the Christian system, showing it all to be plagiarized from ancient heathens. Being unlike almost any other work ever written on the subject, it cannot but be deeply interesting to all. Its explanations of Scripture are lucid, and so self-evidently correct that no one can gainsay them.

 For sale, wholesale and retail, at the office of this paper. Price at retail, 25 cents; postage, 2 cents.

MEDIUMS.

A. B. Severance,

THE WELL-KNOWN PSYCHOMETRIST,

Will give to those who visit him in person, or from autograph, or lock of hair, readings of character; marked changes, past and future; advice in regard to business; diagnosis of disease, with prescription; adaptation of those intending marriage; directions for the management of children; how to develop harmoniously mediumship.

Terms—$2.00 for Full Delineations. Brief Delineations $1.00.

A. B. SEVERANCE.
467 Milwaukee St., Milwaukee, Wis.

v1. 7, No. 13—tf.

SPIRIT PHOTOGRAPHS,
A. D. WILLIS,

CHICAGO, ILL.

Those who live at a distance from my rooms and wish to obtain spiritual pictures, can receive the same result as if they were here, by inclosing five dollars, with a picture or a lock of hair, and setting the day and hour they wish a trial to be made. If no likeness is taken, the money will be refunded. Address, 106 S. Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

v9 n25 13t.

PROF. A. GOODMAN,
Magnetic Healer,

ST. NICHOLAS HOTEL,

Decatur, Illinois.

v10 n7 tf

MRS. LODEMA ATWOOD,
Healing Medium,

Has been before the public as a successful Healer the past fifteen years. We rely entirely on the controlling influences. We diagnose and give prescriptions by letter. Distance no objection. Will visit in person a reasonable distance those that desire, and can afford the expense. Delineation and advice in a variety of ways. Emblems we give gratuitously to all our patients, when presented by our guides. Our former custom has been to come en rapport with the applicant by the hand-writing or lock of hair; but to save time, and the unpleasant sensation of taking on the symptoms of the disease, we require the applicant to give age and sex, with one or two leading symptoms of the disease, written by the patient, if able to write—if not, send lock of hair. As the giving of tests is not the object which we seek, but to restore the patient to health by Nature's own hand, in the shortest time possible, we do not deem it necessary here to lumber up an advertisement with what we have done or what we can do, but prefer to be known by our fruits.

Terms, for diagnosis and prescription, $2; Diagnosis without prescription, $1; all subsequent prescriptions, $1 each. All letters should be accompanied with the fee, and addressed to MRS. LODEMA ATWOOD, Box 45, Lake Mills, Jefferson Co., Wis.

v10 n3 tf.

Dr. Abba Lord Palmer.

BOX 101, NEW BOSTON, ILLINOIS

WONDERFUL PSYCHOMETRIST AND CLAIRVOYAN PHYSICIAN, SOUL READER AND BUSINESS MEDIUM.

Can diagnose disease by likeness, autograph, lock of hair, without a failure, and give prescription, which, if followed, will surely cure.

Can trace stolen property, tell the past, present and future —advise concerning business, and give written communications from spirit friends.

Diagnosis of disease, with prescription, $2.00. Communications from spirit friends, $3.00. Delineation of character with advice concerning marriage, $1.00.

n1 v10 tf.

MRS. A. H. ROBINSON,

Healing, Psychometric and Business Medium,

148 Fourth Avenue, Chicago.

Mrs. ROBINSON, while under spirit control, on receiving a lock of hair of a sick patient, will diagnose the nature of the disease most perfectly, and prescribe the proper remedy. For, as the most speedy cure is the consultation object in view, rather than to gratify idle curiosity, the better practice is to send along with a lock of hair, a brief statement of the sex, age, leading symptoms and duration of the disease of the sick person, when she will without delay return a most potent prescription and remedy for eradicating the disease and permanently curing the patient in all curable cases.

Of herself she claims no knowledge of the healing art, but when her [illegible] with a sick [illegible] fail to give [illegible] cause, through the [illegible] in the system and in nature, [illegible] by mail, and be it an internal remedy, or an external application, it should be given or applied precisely as directed in the accompanying letter of instructions, however simple it may seem to be; remember it is not the quantity of the compound, but the chemical effect that is produced, that science takes cognisance of.

One prescription is usually sufficient, but in case the patient is not permanently cured by one prescription, the application for a second, or more if required, should be made in about ten days after the last, each time stating any changes that may be apparent in the symptoms of the disease.

Mrs. ROBINSON also, through her mediumship, diagnoses the diseases of any one who calls upon her at her residence. The facility with which the spirits controlling her accomplish the same, is done so well when the application is by letter as when the the patient is present. Her gifts are very remarkable, not only in the healing art, but as a psychometric, test, business and trance medium.

Terms:—Diagnosis and first prescription, $2.00; each subsequent, $1.00; Psychometric Delineation of Character, by answering Stationery Letters, $3. The money should accompany the application, to insure a reply.

J. G. W. ENTWISTLE,
CLAIRVOYANT PHYSICIAN.

No. 194 South Clark Street, Room 3, Chicago.

He is prepared to treat any of the many forms of disease, and possesses a peculiar insight into the cause and character, and a penetrating power over it which seems wonderful (given to him only). His medicines are purely vegetable. Invalids at any distance will be as thoroughly examined, and the means of cure (if curable) as definitely pointed out to them as were present, by sending a lock of hair, giving name, age, sex, and two leading symptoms of the disease. Insanity and Sin not treated. Examination fee, by hair, $2.00.

v10 n3 tf

DUMONT C. DAKE, M.D.,

ANALYTICAL PHYSICIAN FOR CHRONIC DISEASES.

Patients at a distance successfully treated. Medicines sent by mail or express. Send a simple statement of condition, age, and sex, occupation, temperament, (if not known, send photograph). Address P. O. Box 50, Chicago, Ill. Send for ANALYTICAL HEALTH JOURNAL.

v10 n3 tf

GROSVENOR SWAN, M. D.

DR. SWAN MAY BE FOUND AT ALL hours, at 117 Wabash Ave., Chicago, where he will be happy to receive calls from his old friends and patrons, and all who may require his services. v9 n8 tf

Phenomenal.

From the Memphis Avalanche.

SPIRITS ON THE RAMPAGE.

Experiences Among the Faithful at Cochran Hall.

The Manifestations as seen and Described by Clara Robertson—Her Development as a Clairvoyant—Conversations on a Subject now Exciting a great deal of Interest and Comment.

Said a pleasant-looking gentleman, according one of the Avalanche corps:

"I want you to go with me to Cochran Hall to-night; some extraordinary manifestations are promised, and I have no doubt that you will be much interested."

"But," replied the reporter, "I have been there twice, and it was the same thing each time."

"True; but

CLARA ROBERTSON IS TO BE THERE to-night, and, if you will be on hand, you may have a seat next her in the circle, so as to hear her describe her sights and impressions of what may occur."

"Can Clara Robertson see what takes place?"

"Yes; she is a clairvoyant and can see every thing, though the place be as dark as Erebus."

The sensation hunter reflected a moment, and finally accepted the invitation.

THE SEANCE.

The company assembled at Cochran Hall on this occasion was mostly of the better circles of Memphis society, and included a number of ladies and gentlemen of education and cultivation. Some of them were there on the occasion of our previous visit, but on the whole the company was more select, and elevated in tone, and much more orderly. There appeared to be no "boisterous spirits" in the group, and the fact seemed to be appreciated by the "medium," who proceeded to arrange the circles with an air of quiet satisfaction. It was, in fact, rather a serious gathering in contrast with the ones previously attended by the reporter, and an odor of unqualified respectability pervaded the premises. There was scarcely any levity, and no disorder worthy of notice.

MRS. FERRIS, THE "MEDIUM"

looked about as on the former visit, except that, instead of the blue dress heretofore described, she wore one of a light brown color, which was modestly trimmed, though otherwise gay in the arrangement of the "head gear," she presented rather a "gay" appearance. She does not impress with a sense of refinement, but for all that she receives and entertains with much courtesy, and is rather pleasant in address and conversation. On the table were the rings, bells and musical instruments, which play so prominent a part in the "manifestations"—are, with the medium, the whole of them in fact, for all the reporter could see to the contrary—and resting against the wall on one side of the table, was a guitar exposed in an open case. Among the instruments on the table was the rope with which it is customary to bind the "Medium." It is about six feet in length, three-eights or a half-inch in thickness, and seems to be of hemp. The bells were five or six in number, and of various sizes, from the toy or parlor size up to the ordinary size used in dining room service.

THE CIRCLES.

[redacted] mittance. The fortunate ones were in three circles, the "believers" being well tributed among the most numerous. It was noticeable that the medium arranged the circles with what might be termed

"AN EYE TO BUSINESS."

At each end of the main circle it seemed necessary to place a person, who, if not a believer, was at least possessed of a spirit of investigation. But perhaps these were but

THE IMPRESSIONS OF A SKEPTIC.

The inner circle, which was nearest to the "medium," was composed of Clara Robertson, our reporter and some half-dozen other persons of both sexes. Behind this was the main circle, which extended around from corner to corner of the north side of the room, and in the rear of this was still another, but a smaller circle. Between the inner circle and the table at which the medium sat was a space of some five feet.

THE LITTLE CLAIRVOYANT.

The object of interest was Clara Robertson, who occupied a seat on the left of the reporter. She looked pale, delicate and demure, though for every one who addressed her, she had a pleasant and graceful greeting or answer, without lavishness of words. Her eyes seemed large and lustrous, and about her there was an air which commanded respect, as well as attention. Her face was commented upon as being decidedly spirituelle, as well as strikingly intelligent, and the eyes, though not of the piercing order—the color is gray—but on the contrary rather dreamy seemed, as if possessed of much more than ordinary power. "What a sweet face," "How pretty she is," and "What glorious eyes," were remarks frequently uttered as people in the circle surveyed the little heroine of the Brinkly College ghost sensation, a subject which, from motives of delicacy, was broached to her by very few if any of those who addressed her. The night was warm, and she appeared in a white marseilles or pique dress, trimmed with blue. Her head was covered by a straw jockey, under which her hair was drawn back with a round comb, and caused to droop in thick masses over her shoulders. Back of her, in the main circle, sat Mr. Robertson, her father, and near were seated several other members of the family. Once the subject of the Brinkly College ghost sensation was broached in an inquiring way, when she replied that often now; could see her whenever she wished, in fact; but that there was no communication about the jar. "For," said she, "Pa has had enough trouble on my account, and I will not talk to Lizzie about the jar. I don't want him to have any more trouble. Lizzie looks well now," continued Clara, "nothing like a skeleton, as when I first saw her, nor looking sad. Why, she looks real fat, and I am not a bit afraid of her."

SHE SAW LIZZIE DAVIE

"Do you see other spirits?"

"Oh, yes, I see a great many."

"You are a believer in spirits, then?"

"Yes, indeed."

"You told me once you believed the Bible."

"Well, the Bible is full of Spiritualism."

"But how about hell fire and future punishment, as read of in the Bible?"

"Oh! I don't believe that part of it; that isn't what is meant; we live in the life to come as we have lived here, and our sins here have all to do with our progress there."

These were her words in substance if not verbatim.

Here Miss Clara's attention was diverted, and the subject was dropped.

CONVERSATIONAL.

Quoth an intelligent looking lady, in the main circle, addressing the reporter:

"Mr. ——, are you the author of the sketch of these seances, which appeared in Sunday's Avalanche?"

"I am, madam."

"Are you aware, then, that you rapped some very good people over the knuckles?"

"I should be sorry to know that I did?"

"Well, you did. This is a serious matter with many of us."

"I came professionally, madam, and only after long importunity. I simply wrote my impressions in a humorous way of all that occurred."

"Then you do not believe in what you saw and heard here?"

"As the work of what are called spirits, madam, I must say that I was not impressed. I can't reconcile my conception of things spiritual with physical manifestations like these, and particularly with the din and discord produced with these instruments. It seems any thing but spiritual to your humble servant."

"Well, if I had never seen or experienced any other manifestations than of this order, I would never have been impressed and convinced. But I have seen and been impressed with the highest order of manifestations. Why, sir, this is but the and these physical manifestations are for the benefit of investigators, who can not comprehend the more advanced stages. You can't see any thing here, but you can hear and feel. I can see as well as feel and hear."

INITIAL STAGE OF THE BELIEF,

"You are one of the faithful, then?"

"Most assuredly I am."

"And you are content and happy in the belief?"

"Perfectly so. What would you think if in broad day light you should see a table raised from the floor without visible agencies, and suspended over your head?"

"I should think I saw a table elevated over my head."

"But (seeriably) could you account for it?"

"I don't know that I could satisfactorily."

"Well, sir, I shall see that you shall soon have such a manifestation, and at the same time see pictures on the walls move out from their places and DANCE IN THE TWILIGHT."

"That would be very interesting."

"It ought to be more than interesting; it ought to be convincing. But there is still a higher order of manifestations."

"What is it?"

"Seeing and conversing with spirits."

"Are you a medium?"

"No, sir; at least I am not much of a one; but my husband is; he feels, sees, and talks with spirits."

"What is chiefly the basis of your conviction?"

"I am a believer chiefly from investigation and impression. Now what do you think of the tying and untying of the medium there by invisible agencies?"

"I have seen jugglers get in and out of knots in the broad glare of gas-light," suggested a listener to this conversation, sitting near by.

"Well, what about the ring test?"

"Well," responded the same authority, I have seen sleight-of-hand performers make chains of solid iron rings on the stage. But that may have been illusion."

"Ah, gentlemen, I fear you are unable to comprehend these things," said the lady.

"Are there many Spiritualists in Memphis, madam?"

"It is estimated that there are three thousand firm in the belief, and the number is rapidly increasing. We intend to organize a society soon for gentlemen."

"I had no idea that there was that number."

"Why, sir, the element is strong in every church in Memphis. There is no telling how many believers there are. A great many believe in the cause, but are either afraid or ashamed to acknowledge it. Some of the orthodox preachers, however, have avowed their belief in it, one in the pulpit recently, and I see there is to be a discussion on the subject, between two

EMINENT GENTLEMEN OF THE CLOTH.

Here the conversation was interrupted by the tying of the Medium, the joining of hands in each of the circles, and the putting out of the lights, by a gentleman at one end of the main circle.

The darkest thing ever read of by the writer, was the circumstance of a negro with a dark lanter on an intensely dark night, looking in a dark cellar for a black cat. The darkness of the room when the lights were put out, was beyond even this comparison. It was impossible to see any thing, nor was there a gleam of light any where visible.

MANIFESTATIONS.

In a moment after the lights were extinguished the instruments on the table began to rattle and sound in a manner almost deafening, and without any apparent regard to note or measure. Some of them sounded as if floating around the room.

"Miss Clara, who is making that noise?"

"That's Dick."

"Why, Dick?"

"A sailor boy, and he looks so funny."

"What is he doing?"

"He's cutting up all sorts of capers with the Medium"

"Are there other objects there?"

"Yes, a great many."

"Tell me what you see."

"I couldn't begin to. The room is full of spirits and they are doing everything."

"Can you see the people in the room?"

"Oh, yes! I can see everybody and everything that goes on."

"What is the Medium doing?"

"She is tied and has a white light all about her; I can't see her plain. Dick is fooling with her."

Here Clara burst out in a merry laugh which shook her entire frame.

"WHAT ARE YOU LAUGHING AT?"

"At Dick; he is the funniest fellow I ever saw."

This conversation was low and could hardly have been heard by others than those interested.

"Did you see Lizzie Davie?"

"Yes; she is right by your knee, looking at us very earnestly."

Here the medium said there was a spirit in the [redacted] in a whisper.

[redacted] the spirit named "Belle." At the same time invisible hands were placed lightly on some in the circle, and a current of air swept around the room and was felt by everybody.

The hymn ended, the jargon of instruments was resumed as if all the spirits of heaven and earth and the infernal regions were engaged.

"Miss Clara, what causes that current of air in the room?"

"It is Belle. She makes it with a sheet or shroud which seems to go all around the circle, and sometimes she swings her guitar."

"What else do you see?

"I SEE SODA,

an Indian girl; she is dressed like an Indian and has a blanket over her head and shoulders."

"Are the spirits in the room all the time."

"No, they keep going and coming and changing all the time."

"Where is Lizzie Davie now?"

"Right over there, by the medium."

Here Clara's hat and comb were removed and the latter placed in the hair of a gentleman near by. While it was being done Clara was heard to laugh and remonstrate.

"Dick, go away and leave me alone; please stop; don't pull my hair."

The light was turned on and the "medium" was found tied, and looking as if she had not changed in any way her position. Scattered about the room were the instruments, some of them in the laps of persons in the circle. One of the guitars was suspended from the chandelier. A gentleman was discovered with a tamborine ring around his neck. Resting on the lap of another gentleman was a chair with the legs upwards and topped with bells. One gentleman's spectacles had been removed and were found assisting the eyesight of a lady on the opposite side of the room.

"Clara, who did all this?" asked a lady.

"Dick and Ross, they're full of tricks."

The light was again extinguished and the rattling went on as before. What was called the spirit of Ross, talked at intervals with persons in the circle and at the same time laid hands upon them.

"Ross," asked a gentleman. "Clara says she sees something on the floor like

A TURTLE WITH A FIDDLE ON ITS BACK,

what is it?"

Ross or the medium gave an unintelligible and unsatisfactory reply. It was in effect that the thing was symbolic.

Here the medium was heard to be talking in a low tone and as if giving instructions to somebody.

"What's going on there, Clara?"

"She's talking to Dick. He's untying her."

In a moment the rope was flung across the room and light was thrown upon the scene. The medium was in a state of perspiration and diligently using a fan. All complained of heat and doors were opened to admit air.

In a few minutes the light was turned out again, and in a little while Clara whispered to somebody:

"Look there, Dick is tying up the medium."

"Not so tight, Dick," the medium was heard to exclaim, "you hurt me."

The light was turned on, and revealed the medium securely bound in her chair, the hands in a hard knot behind.

A BETTING INVESTIGATOR.

Said a gentleman in the circle: "I'll bet fifty dollars I can get that rope off without disturbing the knots."

This was a bombshell in the camp. Confusion followed. The gentleman was reminded of the conditions of the seance, and finding the majority disposed to curb his investigative spirit, he subsided into his place. Finally, however, he was allowed to try the experiment.

He tried it and failed. It was found necessary to loosen the knots to remove the rope.

The light went out again, and one of the circle was called forward to take part in the ring test, which was performed as heretofore described. As the party called forward held the medium's hands, there was a terrific din from the instruments, which sounded as if in every part of the room, and at the same time the iron ring was placed on the gentleman's arm. As it was done, the noise of writhing and convulsion was heard to come as if from the medium.

The turning on of the light revealed the medium apparently in a state of trance, her teeth and eyes set, and both hands held firmly by the gentleman on whose arm was the ring.

[redacted] upon Ross to

EXPLAIN THE TRICK.

"Well, you see, Chief," said that industrious young lady, "we forms a battery by drawing power from each person in the room, which we concentrate on the ring; it dissolves the ring, and then we slip it over the arm, and it comes together again. Do you stand under?" [Laughter.]

"Its about as clear as mud," said the gentleman; "but I presume it is all right." [Laughter.]

"Say, Mr.——"

"Well, Ross."

"I wish you wouldn't put some of the silly things I say in the paper. I say them just to make laugh, you know."

Here Clara Robertson said that Dick was putting the tamborine ring on the gentleman's arm, and DESCRIBED HOW HE DID IT.

When light was struck the ring, sure enough, appeared to view on the arm of the gentleman, in each of whose hands was held firmly the hands of the medium.

In the dark again Clara Robertson was heard to laugh.

"Why do you laugh?"

"That turtle's on its hind legs and dancing, and there's Dick dancing a horapipe."

That's diseased imagination thought the reporter.

Here

A LIGHT OF A PHOSPHORESCENT KIND floated around the room, taking a course like a bird in flying."

"What's that Clara?"

"Its an angel. Oh, its so beautiful."

"How does it look?"

"Oh, I could'nt describe it. I never saw any thing so beautiful—such lovely colors."

Whispered a gentleman near our reporter:

"THAT'S THE SPIRIT OF MY LITTLE GIRL."

Most people in the room saw nothing but a phosphorescent light, getting small and large by turns, but some declared it had form and was a child.

It was followed by other lights which were represented to be the spirits of Belden, an Indian chief, and his child.

Near the close of the seance a voice addressed the circle in French. It said it was a French girl who died in Michigan.

A lady in the middle of the circle conversed with it in French for several minutes.

When the light was turned on the medium was found calmly seated by the table.

The company prepared to depart.

Said a lady addressing the man of notes:

"Well, what do you think of that?"

"I think just as I did before, but I don't pretend to explain the thing."

"Well, how about Clara seeing all that took place?"

"I can't account for that, either, but there's sometime about that turtle business suggestive of mind disclosed."

"YOU ARE TOO MUCH OF A SKEPTIC to see or believe any thing in its true light."

"But I can't get over the turtle."

"Why, that's simply symbolic, and belongs to the spirit of some Indian. I have seen such symbols myself."

"How is it you see what you call spirits, and I can not?"

'Read the twelfth chapter of the First Epistle to the Corinthians. You'll find an answer in that.

ST. PAUL EXPLAINS IT FULLY."

"How is it that Spiritualism doesn't progress? These manifestations are stale, and any thing but edifying."

"Well, but there is progression in it, nevertheless."

Acquired one gentleman of another:

"What do you call this?"

"I look upon it as nothing but

JUGGLERY IN THE DARK,"

was the skeptical reply; "nothing but humbug."

"Can you demonstrate it to be humbug?"

"Well, no."

"Then you should not call it humbug. My opinion is that this is the work of a power that may some day be developed and applied to practical purposes, as in the case of the telegraph. Why a great many intelligent people said the telegraph was a humbug when it was first discovered, and I have heard of people even in this country, who think General Jackson is President. I am not prepared to accept that this is the work of spirits, but it is certainly some great and undeveloped power which the medium herself neither understands nor controls."

"Clara Robertson's case is the most wonderful part of the whole thing. Who can explain that?" asked a lady.

Several concurred. One suggested she was a

VICTIM OF HALLUCINATION,

and another remarked that there was something strange, indeed, in clairvoyance.

Said a lady, "If she is laboring under hallucination, then I am too; for I see some of these things, and I know I'm not crazy."

Remarked a long haired gentleman, with piercing but pensive eyes:

"Think and say as you please, gentlemen, Clara Robertson is developing rapidly, and will be the finest medium of this age. The thing was predicted several years ago at a seance in Jefferson Block. Her name was not mentioned, nor were recent events referred to, but I identify her as the one described."

The company dispersed, each chewing the cud of his or her own opinions and reflections.

The "manifestations"

LAST NIGHT

were more striking than on any preceding occasion. Clara Robertson was present, and the "spirits" were delighted. Dick, the sailor, after tying the medium's hands to the back of the chair, tied Clara in sailor fashion, and carried her in the chair from one part of the room to the other, and then, with the help of other spirits, placed the medium, chair and all, upon the table, which was just large enough for the legs of the chair to stand on, and in that position the medium was discovered when the room was lighted. The medium, before the light was struck, begged for help as if alarmed.

It may be stated, to explain the power necessary to achieve this feat, that it required three table-bodied gentlemen to lift the medium to the floor. The spirit of Lizzie Davis made its appearance in the pink dress, but made no communication. The character of Clara Robertson as a clairvoyant of great powers was regarded as fully demonstrated. The spirit of "Belle," a gentle spirit, requested a private seance with Clara Robertson and a few others to be chosen by her, promising to give demonstrations more wonderful than ever dreamed of or looked for by the most faithful.

Letter from Crown Point.

BROTHER S. S. JONES:—Having had some, to us, [redacted] ship of Mrs. Maud Lord, of Chicago, who has just been with us, and feeling that the evidences given us ought to be borne to the world, I write you a few of the demonstrations given, for publication, should you consider them worthy of general notice. I will preface what I have to say of her seances by saying that not one person of all who attended them charged her with deception or collusion.

The first seance I attended was at Mrs. J. W. Hughes, in Lowell. Twenty persons were present, seated close together, and hands joined, when the lights were taken out,—and we were in total darkness.

Many wonderful things were done. Mr. Thomas Clark's spirit wife came and talked to him, put her arms around his neck, and talked in such endearing, well-known terms that it melted his heart, converted him from infidelity to a firm faith in the principles of our philosophy. Before parting with him, she wiped his eyes with a handkerchief highly perfumed with musk, a favorite with her, and which was recognized at once by the entire circle, none being ever of it about their persons.

She also gave to Mr. Clark my watch to "Snowdrop," a little Indian girl in the Spirit Land. She came to me and asked so that others heard it:

"Is this Mr. Luther?"

Being answered affirmatively, she unfastened and took the watch from my pocket quicker than I could have done it, and carried it to Mr. J. H. Sanger across the circle, who kept it until the circle closed. Snowdrop requested him to "cross his legs" that she "might ride." He did so, and to his surprise, his foot was mounted, and he gave the ride.

Mr. S. is a wealthy farmer near Lowell, Ind., had before been a skeptic, but is such no longer. I had received several favors from Snowdrop, when she said to me:

"Will you please give me something to play with?"

I replied, "You can take what you please," presuming she would go into my pockets, but after a considerable time, nothing being taken, I thought to assist her, and having a silver half dollar, took it in my open hand for her, saying nothing of this, except to my wife, in a low whisper. I did not hold it to exceed one minute before it was taken from me, and given to another across the circle, who said:

"I have got a big penny or a half dollar—whose is it?" and the enquiry went around.

To be a little sharper, I took from my pocket my key-ring, some keys on a ring, unknown to all. These were soon taken and carried around over the circle like a child playing with a reticule box, and then given to another, who kept them the other side the half dollar, until the circle was closed.

At a circle in my own house, I, being outside, requested the privilege of making an experiment. Taking the same half dollar in my hand, I ran my arm between two persons, laid my hand upon theirs inside the circle, and requested Snowdrop to take what I held in my hand to Mr. H. S. Holton, a skeptic, on the opposite side of the circle. It was taken to Mr. H., as requested, but soon taken from him and given to my son with the remark, "This is your father's money." Had not mentioned what I had in my hand.

At another circle at my house in which I sat, after receiving several favors from Snowdrop, she said to me:

"I have been so good, will you please give me a kiss?"

I answered that I would if I could, and supposed that the end of it, but after a moment, a tangible face was placed to my lips, and I kissed it, verily believing I kissed an angel.

Are those not as good demonstrations of individuality, intelligence and power, as would be manifested by any person in making such requests, or performing like acts by request of another? If this could be answered in the negative, I would be glad to hear it.

I could show this article out to almost any length in describing the manifestations given, but it seems to me the foregoing are sufficient. The manifestations were all remarkable, consisting of touch and slaps by spirit friends, spirit presence and voices, and in the cabinet seance, spirit hands and faces, some of the latter being recognized. Many skeptics and some churchmen were converted by these things, and I cheerfully, yes, urgently, recommend Mrs. Lord to Spiritualists everywhere, and especially to those who, like myself, are almost overwhelmed with religious, and skeptical bigotry, especially the latter and worst of the two.

Yours for all truth.

J. H. LUTHER.

Crown Point, Ind., May 15th, 1871.

From the Wooster (O.) Republican.

Astonishing Manifestations.

If the Rev. Cotton Mather, of witchcraft memory, were living in these degenerate days, he would have his hands full of business in this city, at the house of Mr. David Hoffman, near the corner of Pittsburg avenue and J. Stibb's lane. The family is said to be haunted by malignant spirits, who are uncomfortably rampant in their evil doings, diabolical in their transactions and mysterious in their ways.

The family consists of five persons: Mr. Hoffman, who is about fifty-five years of age; his wife, about fifty; two daughters, respectively aged about seventeen and twenty, and a son, probably fifteen years old. They formerly lived in Holmes County, Mr. Hoffman being employed as miller in Sharp's mill, two miles south of Millersburg, where the family were regarded as respectable, intelligent and Christian people. He stated that he was doing well at the mill, had a good salary and a good home, and in every way in comfortable circumstances, until disorder, in a mysterious way, visited his family. It first commenced, he said, a year ago last June, by his missing two dollars from his pocket-book, after which he privately hid his money; but that, too, disappeared in the most unaccountable manner. Articles of food and clothing, in daily increasing quantities, went the same way. Crockery ware fell from shelves and broke to pieces; stones and gravel, eggs and other things were thrown about the house, apparently without human agency, the badness seemingly having headquarters in the cellar. The family, from being annoyed, at length became frightened, and, imagining that change of abode might bring relief from the spirits, removed to Wooster last summer, Mr. Hoffman remaining at the mill, where he was unmolested by any evil visitation. But his family who lived in Mr. Shock's house, West Liberty street, was not so fortunate. The clothing of the mother and eldest daughter was taken, some returned—from whence, no one could tell—all cut to pieces as if with shears, and some found secreted in out-of-the-way places. For instance: all their underclothing was found stuffed into the mouth of the cellar drain, a bundle hid under a wood-pile in the cellar, and skirts, etc., buried in the sand. Many written notes were thrown, apparently from the cellar, bearing all kinds of messages. One was, that, if Mrs. Hoffman would come down to the foot of the cellar stairs on her knees, on a certain specified day and hour, she would there find a box containing two thousand dollars. Prior to this, the family had become afraid to enter the cellar; and as she could only go down the steps backward on her knees, Mrs. Hoffman, afraid of bodily injury, was dissuaded by neighbors from making the hazardous attempt. But she went to Holmes County and brought her husband to Wooster, hoping he could get the lucre, and by his presence abate the spirits, or "it," as she calls the evil agents of her fireside. Another note was received, stating that no one could get the money but herself. It has not been secured up to the present time.

Some [redacted]

The troubles raged on, [redacted] as a sacrifice, was compelled to give up his situation at the mill, and join his family in Wooster. A few weeks ago they moved to where they now reside, followed by [redacted]

By request of the [redacted] Wooster Republican, [redacted] ly after he left, a scene of [redacted] ly to the floor, upon which [redacted] they (the family) had "prayed to God," the spirits wouldn't bother them for awhile. All was quiet for a few days. Then more clothes were taken, which, after absence of one or two days, would be found in the house or yard, cut to pieces.

About ten days ago, while another reverend gentleman was there, a piece of new calico, sufficient for three dresses, disappeared. A neighbor lady next day found it, uncut, under a box of potatoes, in the cellar.

Frequently at night there are poundings on the walls, stones, from pebbles to those as large as a man's fist, thrown in the rooms, and a general rumpus created, as if imps were holding high revelry. On one occasion Mr. Hoffman called upon it to cease, without avail; whereupon he indulged in a little tall swearing, when all became serene.

A young man who called there last Friday evening, said if the spirits could cut up his hat or handkerchief, they were welcome. A small stone dropped on his head, which, when picked up, he found red hot, and upon taking out his handkerchief, discovered it cut to pieces. As another instance very peculiar, a young gentleman, a confirmed skeptic in Spiritualism, with other persons visited the house on last Sabbath afternoon, and on his return to his brother's residence, to the amazement of all, at least twenty holes were found in his handkerchief, which had not been off of his pocket at the haunted house. Mr. Hoffman answered to one of the spirit-notes, placed his reply quietly in the cellar, but just as he got up stairs into the room, his own note dropped on the floor at his side—all his family present.

Until last Friday, nothing of Mr. Hoffman's clothing had been touched. That night his two pairs of boots—all he had—were taken, also the table knives, but the boots were mysteriously returned next day. On last Saturday all his clothing, excepting an old working suit was taken, and words written on the side of the house to the effect that they would not be returned.

Mr. and Mrs. Hoffman, and the eldest daughter, have no clothing but that on their backs, while in the house are piles of cut-up garments of all descriptions, of good quality—a dozen dresses, silk, delaine, calico, etc., cloth sacques, four shawls, under clothing, and any quantity of lesser articles.

The whole matter is confounding. There are, however, several plausible theories for the cause of the seemingly marvelous manifestations. Careful watch has been kept, yet no clue to the perpetrators of the outrages has been discovered. Hundreds of men and women have visited the premises. It is said that the Spiritualists propose holding meetings at the house, and get up a circle to see if any thing can be developed. We will keep our readers posted upon the subject.

—Self-denial in the young is voluntary, fruitful in virtue, and in the comforts which it brings to age.

—Self-denial in the old is deprivation, vain, bitterness. Deny thyself, therefore, when thou canst; not when thou must.—S. A. Morrill.

Price-List of Books.

LIST OF BOOKS FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

All orders by mail, with the price of books desired, and the additional amount mentioned in the following list of prices for postage, will meet with prompt attention.

	Price	Postage
Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies,	.75	16
Artificial Somnambulism. By Dr. Fahnestock,	1.50	20
A Revelation of Departed Spirits among the Shakers,	.20	02
Alice Vale, a Story for the times, by Lois Waisbrooker,	1.50	70
American Crisis, by Warren Chase,	.20	02
Answers to Questions Practical and Spiritual. Device,	1.50	20
Apocryphal New Testament,	1.25	16
A Peep into Sacred Tradition, by Rev. Orrin Abbot. Paper,	.50	02
Age of Reason, by Thomas Paine. Cloth,	.50	03
A Woman's Secret, by Mrs. G. F. Corbin,	1.75	20
A Lecture in Rhyme—The Past, Present and Future, by Mrs. F. A. Logan,	.15
Arcana of Nature, or History and Laws of Creation, Vol 1, by Hudson Tuttle,	1.25	20
Arcana of Nature, or the Philosophy of Spiritual Existence, and of the Spirit-World, Vol 2, by Hudson Tuttle,	1.25	20
A B C of Life, by A. B. Child,	.25	02
Arabula, or the Divine Guest, by A. J. Davis,	1.50	20
After Death, or Disembodied Man, by Randolph. Cloth,	1.00	20
Approaching Crisis, by A. J. Davis,	1.00	16
Antidote, [translated from the French] by Rousseau,	.15	02
A Stellar Key to the Summer Land by A. J. Davis,	1.50	16
Astro-Theological Lectures by Rev. Robert Taylor,	2.00	24
Alice in a Show. A Book for children by H. G. Wright, small edition,	.63	12
Large do.	1.40	15
Antiquity and Duration of the World by G. H. Toulmin, M. D.	.25	4
An Eye Opener, by Epes. Cloth,	.75	12
Paper,	.50	04
A Roman Lawyer in Jerusalem in the first century by W. W. Story,	.15	2
Address on Spiritualism, by T. G. Forster,	.15	02
Analogy Between the Religion of Nature and its Facts of Modern Spiritualism, by T. G. Forster,	.15	02
Arcana of Spiritualism, by H. Tuttle,	2.00	24
Biography of Satan, by H. Grawes. Price 35 Cents.
Better Views of Living, by A. B. Child,	.25	02
Blossoms of Our Spring, (a Poetic Work,) by Hudson and Emma Tuttle,	1.25	16
Bogged in the Bramble, a Tale of Village Life in the West, by Robert Dale Owen,	2.00	24
Brittan's Discord, by Pen, Pat and Nason. Cloth,	.75	8
Branches of Palm, by Mrs. J. S. Adams, a book for every Spiritualist,	1.25	16
Bible of Ages, by Rev. W. Denton,	1.50	20
Bhagvat-Geeta, or Krishna's New Testament,	1.25	16
Zoological Sins against the Laws of Life and Health, by J. K. Gardner, A. M. M. D. Paper,	1.00	06
Cloth,	1.50	16
Combs' Constitution of Man,	1.75	16
Curious Things to be Found in the Bible, by William, Denton,	.10	02
Cosmology, by G. W. Ramsey, M. D.	1.50	20
Christ Idea in History, H. Tuttle,	1.25	16
Christ Idea in History, H. Tuttle,	1.25	16
Chester Family, or the Ourse of the Drunkard's Appetite, by Julia M. Friend, with an introduction by H. C. Wright,	1.00	12
Christ and the people, by A. B. Child, M.D.	1.25	16
Christianity; its Origin, Evidences, Doctrines, Revelation and Morals, by Robert Taylor, with an introduction by Caleb S. Weeks,	.25	02
Christianity No Finality; or Spiritualism Superior to Christianity,—Wm. Denton,	.10	02
Criticism on the Theological Idea of Deity, by M. B. Craven,	1.50	16
Descent of man, by Darwin. Two Vols. ($2.00 per Vol),	4.00	45
Davenport Brothers, their Remarkable and Interesting History,	1.50	20
Day of Doom, A Poetical Description of the Great and Last Judgment with other poems, from the sixth edition of 1715,	1.00	12
Devil's Delight, by Rev. Robert Taylor, with Sketch of the Author's Life,	2.00	20
Dawn. A Novel of intense interest to progressive people,	1.75	24
Dealings with the Dead, by P. B. Randolph,	.75	12
Death and the After Life, by A. J. Davis, paper 50, postage 8, cloth,	.75	12
Errors of the Bible. Demonstrated by the Truths of Nature. By Henry. C. Wright. Paper, 50, cts; postage, 4 cts.	.50	6
Easter Rail, a Theological Romance,	.50	06
Empire of the Mother, over the Character and Destiny of the Race, H. C. Wright, paper,	.50	06
Cloth,	.75	12
Fables and True Revival of Religion, by Theodore Parker,	.10	02
Footfalls on the Boundary of Another World, by Robert Dale Owen,	1.75	24
Free Thought Concerning Religion, or Nature vs Theology, by A. J. Davis,	.20	2
Freedom, by Warren Chase, Paper,	.25	4
Poetical Works, an Inspirational Poem, Mrs. M. J. Wilcox,	.75	8
Gambler's Wife, a Tale of the Great Rebellion, by Emma Tuttle,	1.25	16
Gist of Spiritualism, by Warren Chase,	.50	04
Great Harmonia, by A. J. Davis. 4 vols, viz: Vol. 1 The Physician; Vol. 2. The Teacher. Vol. 3. The Seer; Vol. 4. The Reformer; Vol. 5. The Thinker, each,	1.50	20
Gymnastic Manual for Teachers and Students,	.10	2
God Idea in History, by Hudson Tuttle,	1.25	16
God Manifest with Mercy, by Thomas Richmond. Cloth, $1.00; postage, 12 cents. Paper,	.75	08
Hierophant, or Gleanings from the Past, by G. C. Bryant,	1.00	08
Health by good Living W. W. Hall M. D.,	1.50	20
Harbinger of Health, by A. J. Davis,	1.50	20
Harmonial Man, or Thoughts for the Age, by A. J. Davis, Paper,	.50	6
Cloth,	.75	12
History and Philosophy of Evil, by A. J. Davis Paper,	.75	8
Cloth,	.75	12
Hayward's Book of all Religions, including Spiritualism,	2.00	24
Holy Bible and Mother Goose, by H. C. Wright,	.25	02
How and Why I became a Spiritualist, by Mrs. Helen Harlow's Vow, by L. L. Walsbrooker,	1.50	20
How, to Bathe, by R. T. Miller, M. D., paper,	.50	4
Cloth,	.75	12
Indicted in, by Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, author of Gates Ajar,	1.50	16
Hollow Globe,	2.00	20
History and Philosophy of Marriage, or Polygamy and Monogamy compared,	1.25	16
History of the Intellectual Development of Europe by J. W. Draper, M. D. L. L. D. cloth,	5.00	60
Human Physiology, Statistical and Dynamical, or the Conditions and Course of the Life of Man, by J. W. Draper, M. D. L. L. D. 656 pages, cloth 5.00 sheep 6.50	6.50	60
History of the Supernatural, (2 Vols., 510 pages each),	3.00	45
Hitt, by Mary E. Walker,	1.25	16
Intuitions, by Mrs. F. Kingman,	1.25	16
Important Truths, a book for every child,	.30	4
Is the Bible Divine? by J. Finney, paper,	.25	2
Cloth,	.50	12
Is there a Devil? The argument Pro and Con,	.25	2
Inquirer's Text Book, by Robert Cooper,	1.25	16
Instructive Communications from Spirit Land, Mrs. M. S. Park, Medium,	1.25	16
Incidents in my Life, by Dr. D. D. Home, Introduction by Judge Edmonds,	1.25	16
Infidel, or Inquirer's Text Book, by Robert Cooper,	1.25	16
Is it the Despair of Science? by W. D. Gunning,	.15	02
Issue of Humanity, by Alexander Smyth,	1.50	20
Immortal Unveiled, or the Character of the Jewish Deity Delineated,	.25	4
Joys of Life—Biography, translated from the French, by Sarah R. Griffith,	1.50	12
Children's Sources of Eco Keeping. Price, paper bound 50 cents. Board bound,	.75	08
Kansas, with original poems, by George Sale 9 mo.	1.50	16
672 pages, best edition yet published,	2.00	40
Koran, with Life of Mohammed, Translated by George Sale, Gent. 12 mo., 479 pages,	1.50	24
Life Line of the Lone One, by Warren Chase,	1.25	16
Life's Unfoldings,	.50	2
Life of Thomas Paine, with critical and explanatory observations of his writings, by G. Vale,	1.50	16
Life of Jesus, by Renan,	1.75	20
Love and its Hidden History, by P. B. Randolph,	1.50	16
Life in the Spheres, an Unabridged Spirit's History, by F. H. Smith, medium,	.10	2
Lyric of the Golden Age, by E. L. Harris,	2.00	20
Legalized Prostitution, or Marriage as it, and as it Should Be, by C. S. Woodruff, M. D.,	1.50	16
Life and Moral Axioms of Confucius, by M. R. K. Wright,	.25	02
Letters to Hiter Miles Grant; by Rev. Moses Hull,	.25	02
Living Present, Dead Past. H. C. Wright. Cloth,	.75	08
Paper,	.50	04
Lyceum Guide. Cloth cover,	.75	10
Paper cover,	.50	04
My Love and I, by Abby M. Laffin Farnsworth,	.50	6
Magic Staff, an Auto-biography of A. J. Davis,	1.75	20
Midnonia, by Myron Colony,	1.50	12
Marriage and Parentage, by Henry C. Wright,	1.50	20
Ministry of Angels Realized, by A. E. Newton,	1.50	20
Midnight Prayer,	.5	2
Moses and the Israelites, by Horace Mann,	1.50	16
Manchester Prison Life,	.10	02
small edition,	1.00	06
Miracle of the Road of Life, by D. B. Cadwallader,	.10	02
Manual for Children, (for Lyceums,) by A. J. Davis, Cloth,	.50	6
Morning Lectures,	1.50	20
Second edition,	.75	8
Poetry, and other Stories, by Lizzie Doten,	1.50	20
Modern American Spiritualism 1848 to 1868, by Emma Hardinge,	2.00	44
Man's Rights, or how would you like it, by Annie Denton Cridge,	.15	2
Morning Lectures (Twenty Discourses) by A. J. Davis,	1.75	20
Man and his relations, by Professor S. B. Brittain,	4.00	48
Nature's Divine Revelations, by Andrew Jackson Davis,	5.00	48
New Testament Miracles, and Modern Miracles, by J. H. Fowler,	.10	4
Night Side of Nature, by Crow,	1.25	20
Ordeal of Life, Thoughts by Dr. J. C. Grimsel, Medium,	.25	04
Orthodoxy False, since Spiritualism is True, by Wm. Denton,	.10	2
Our Planet, Geology by Denton,	1.50	20
Optimism, The Lesson of Ages,	.75	12
Origin of Species, Darwin	2.00	24
Origin of Civilization, and Primitive Condition of Man, by Sir J. Lubbock,	5.00	24
One Religion, Many Creeds, by Rose Winans,	1.50	12
Origin of Species, with Notes and References, by G. F. Kittredge,	.10	02
Persons and Events, by A. J. Davis,	1.50	20
Pre-Adamite Man, by Robert Dale Owen,	1.50	20
Physiology of Woman by C. Morril, M. D.	1.50	20
Pleasantries—The despair of Science, by Hon Sarges. Denton,	1.25	16
Philosophy of Spiritual Intercourse. A. J. Davis. Paper 60 cts; postage 8 cts. Cloth,	1.00	16
Principles of Nature, by Mrs. M. M. King,	1.75	24
Poems from the Inner Life, by Lizzie Doten,	1.25	16
Philosophy of Creation, by Thomas Paine, through Horace Wood, Medium. Cloth,	.60	06
Paper,	.35	04
Real Life in Spirit Land given Inspirationally by Mrs. Maria M. King,	1.50	16
Rules for forming Spiritual Circles, by Emma Hardinge,	.5	02
Sacred Physiology, by E. T. Trall, M. D.	2.00	20
Strange Visitors, Dictated through a clairvoyant,	1.50	20
Spiritual Harp,	2.00	24
Harmer Wood, Medium. Cloth,	1.00	16
Sequel to The Love Life, by the Spirit of Dr. R. K. Elder,	.30	2
Spiritual Tracts by Judge Edmonds,	.20	4
Scientific Theologists; or the true King and Queen, by H. C. Wright, Paper,	.50	6
Spiritualism, or Directions in Development, by A. M. Ladin Farrar,	.50	2
Self-Contradictions of the Bible,	.35	06
Soul Affinity, by A. B. Child, M. D.,	.30	03
Sexology as the Philosophy of Life, by Mrs. R. G. C. Willard,	2.00	24
Six Lectures on Theology and Nature, by Emma Hardinge, Paper,	.75
Cloth,	1.00
Soul of Things, by William and Elizabeth Denton,	1.25	20
Spirit Manifestations, by Adin Ballou,	.75	12
Spirit Mysteries Explained, by A. J. Davis,	1.50	20
Synonymy of Scripture, by Moses Hull,	.10	02
Social Evils by Mrs. M. M. King,	.15
Spiritual Philosophy versus Diabolism, by Mrs. M. M. King,	.25
Sense and Nonsense, S. M. Landis, M. D.	2.00	20
Songs of Life,—S. W. Tucker,	.25	02
Spiritual Song,—S. W. Tucker,	.15	02
Spirit Life of Theodore Parker, through the Mediumship of Miss B. Ramsdell,	.60	02
Seven Hour System of Grammar, by Prof. D. P. Howe,	1.00	08
Paper,	.50	04
Science of Evil, by Joel Moody,	1.75	20
Searship, Randolph,	2.00	30
Spiritual Manifestions, by J. S. Rymer,	.10	02
The Fountain, by A. J. Davis,	1.00	12
The Irreconcilable Theories, or Genesis and Geology, by Wm. Denton,	.25	04
Cloth,	.50	06
The Bible in India,	.75	08
The Faithful Guardian, an Inspirational Story, by J. William Van Namee,	1.50	16
The Bible in the Balance,	1.75	24
That Terrible Question, by Moses Hull,	.10	02
True Love. What it is, and What it is not, by A. B. Child,	.5	02
The Dynamic Cure, by Leroy Sunderland,	1.50	15
Tale of a Physician, by A. J. Davis,	1.50	16
The Bible in the Light of Reason,	1.50	20
The Question Settled, by Moses Hull,	1.50	16
The Gates Wide Open, by George Wood,	1.50	20
The Gates Ajar, by Miss. E. E. Phelps,	1.50	16
The Orphan's Struggle, by Mrs. H. N. Green,	.75
The Pearl Diver by Dr. G. W. Kirby,	.15
The Gospel of God and Hell, by Silver,	1.50	16
The Trance, by Leroy Sunderland,	1.50	16
The Great South-West, by W. Nicolay,	1.00	14
The Mortality of Christ and the Mortality of Thomas Paine as substitute for mortality others. What is the difference between them? H. C. Wright	.25	2
The Philosophical Dictionary of Voltaire, Paine's American Edition, 576 octavo pages, two steel plates, largest and most correct edition in the

The System of Nature, or Laws of the Moral and Physical World, by Baron D'Holbach,	2.00	24
The Pastures of Life, by J. S. Adams. Paper cover,	.50	06
Board cover,	.75	08
Cloth,	.50	16
Tobacco and its Effects, by H. Gibbons, M. D.	.20	02
The Two Brothers,	1.75	20
Tse Yah c, a Satirical Rhapsody.	.70	08
The Resurrection Dream Book, compiled from all Languages, by P. B. Randolph,	.50	04
Underhill on Mesmerism, Post-paid,	1.50
Unhappy Marriages, by A. B. Child,	.50	2
Unwelcome Child, by Henry C. Wright, Paper,	.50	6
Cloth,	.60	12
Voice of Prayer, by Barlow,	.50	08
Vestiges of Creation,	.15	02
What Force, wasted and how preserved, by R. P. Miller, M. D. Paper, 50 cts.; Cloth,	1.00	12
Volney's Ruins; or Meditations on the Revolutions of Empires, with Biographical notice by Count Dare,	1.00	12
Voices from Spirit-Land through N. F. White,	.02	12
What is Right, William Denton,	.15	2
What is spiritualism; and shall Spiritualists Have a Creed? by Mrs. M. M. King,	.15
Whatever is, is Right, A. B. Child, M.D.	1.50	16
Writings of Omahs,	.10	02
Wolf in sheep's Clothing, or God in the Constitution, Moses Hull,	.10	02
Year Book of Spiritualism. Cloth,	1.25	20
Paper,	1.00	16

WE ARE ALSO NOW IN A SITUATION TO FURNISH Miscellaneous books of any kind published at regular rates, and, on receipt of the money, will send them by mail or express as may be desired. If sent by mail, one fifth more than the regular cost of the book will be required to prepay postage. The patronage of our friends is solicited. In making remittances for books, buy postal orders when practicable. If postal orders cannot be had, register your letters.

H. SNOW,

319 KEARNEY ST., (Up Stairs,) SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., Keeps for sale the

RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL,

And a general variety of

Spiritualist and Reform Books,

At Eastern prices. Also, Orton's Anti-Tobacco Preparation, Spence's Positive and Negative Powders, Adams & co.'s Golden Pens, Planchettes, Dr. Storer's Nutritive Compound, etc. Catalogues and Circulars mailed free. ☞ Remittances in U. S. currency and postage stamps received at par. Address, HERMAN SNOW, P. O. Box 117, San Francisco, Cal.

WARREN CHASE & CO.,

No 601 North Fifth St, St. Louis, Mo., Keep constantly on hand all the publications of the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, Wm. White & Co., J. P. Mendum, Adams & Co., and all other popular Liberal Literature, including RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL and BANNER OF LIGHT, Magazines, Photographs, Parlor Games, Golden Pens, Stationery, etc,

First Enlarged Edition.

Death and the After-Life.

EIGHT LECTURES ON THE SUMMER LAND.

By Andrew Jackson Davis.

THIS edition contains more than double the amount of matter in any previous edition, with only a small advance in price. Bound in cloth, 75cts, Postage, 12cts; in paper, covers, 50cts, Postage 4cts.

For sale at the Office of the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL, 187 & 189, South Clark street, Chicago, Ill.

Rail-Roads.

SUMMER ARRANGEMENT.

ARRIVAL AND DEPARTURE OF TRAINS.

Chicago and Northwestern Railroad—Council Bluffs and Omaha Line—Depot North Wells street

Ticket Office, south-east corner of Clark and Lake streets.

	Leave.	Arrive.
Cedar Rapids Passenger	8.30 a. m.	6.00 p. m.
Pacific Fast Line	*10.40 a. m.	8.00 p. m.
Rock Island Express	10.30 a. m.	*3.50 p. m.
Pacific Night Express	11.00 p. m.	7.00 a. m.
Rock Island Night Passenger	*10.50 p. m.	*7.00 a. m.
Dixon Passenger	*4.00 p. m.	*11.30 a. m.

Freeport Line.

Freeport and Dunleith Fast	*9.00 a. m.	*7.15 a. m.
Freeport and Dunleith Pass	*9.45 p. m.	*3.30 p. m.
Rockford, Elgin, Fox River and State Line	*4.00 p. m.	*11.10 a. m.
St. Charles and Elgin Passenger	*8.15 p. m.	*8.45 a. m.
Junction Passenger	5.30 p. m.	8.30 a. m.
Lombard Accommodation	*6.10 p. m.	*9.50 a. m.

Milwaukee Division—Depot corner of Canal and Kinzie street.

Milwaukee Mail	*8.00 a. m.	*10.10 a. m.
Evanston Accommodation	*9.45 a. m.	*10.0 p. m.
Evanston Accommodation	*1.00 a. m.	2.00 p. m.
Rose Hill, Evanston, and Highland Park	1.00 p. m.	3.40 p. m.
Evanston Express	*5.15 p. m.	*7.40 p. m.
Kenosha Pass	*4.10 p m.	*9.10 a m.
Waukegan Passenger	*4.30 p m.	*9.35 a. m.
Highland do	*6.00 p. m.	*7.40 a. m.
Milwaukee do	11.00 p. m.	5.10 a m

Kenosha and Waukegan trains leave from Wells street depot.

Wisconsin Division—Depot corner of Canal and Kinzie street

St Paul Express	*10.00 a. m.	*7.15 p. m.
Night Passenger	*8.00 p. m.	*6.30 a. m.
Janesville Accommodation	*6.00 p. m.	*1.00 p. m.
Janesville Accommodation	*8.15 p. m.	*10.00 a. m.
Barrington Accommodation	5.15 p.m.	7.45 a. m.

GEO. L. DUNLAP, General Superintendent.

E. P. Stanwood, General Ticket Agent

Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Rail-Road.

Depot corner Van Buren and Sherman streets. Ticket Office

Day Express	*9.00 a. m.	*7.30 p. m.
Through Express	12.30 p. m.	12.00 a. m.

for St. Joseph via New Buffalo.

Day Express	*9.00 a. m.	*11.30 a. m.
Accommodation	*4.30 p. m.	*12.00 p. m.

HENRY C. WENTWORTH, General Passenger Agent

N. B. RAMSDELL, Gen'l Superint'endent, Chicago.

Chicago, Burlington and Quincy

Ticket Office 63 Clark St., opposite Sherman House Union Depot, foot of Lake St.

Day Express	*7.45 a. m.	*8.15 p. m.
Night Express	17.30 a. m.	3.50 p. m.
Aurora Express	*12.45 p. m.	*10.30 a. m.
Aurora Express	*4.30 p. m.	*10.30 p. m.

ROSWELL MILLER, Gen'l Passenger Agent.

ROSWELL MILLER, Gen'l Ticket Agt. Office in Gt. Cent. Depot

Illinois Central—Depot, foot of Lake street.

Cairo Mail	*9.30 a. m.	*7.45 p. m.
Cairo Express	*5.15 p. m.	*3.45 a. m.
Kankakee Day Passenger	*4.17 a. m.	*7.45 p. m.
Kankakee Night Passenger	*8.05 p. m.	*7.00 a. m.
(On Saturdays this train will leave at	4.45 p. m.
Champaign Passenger	*4.05 p. m.	*9.35 a. m.
Hyde Park and Oak Woods	*9.30 a. m.	*7.05 a. m.
" " "	*2.00 a. m.	*8.01 a. m.
" " "	*12.10 p. m.	*2.45 p. m.
" " "	*5.00 p. m.	*6.40 p. m.
" " "	*8.00 p. m.	*11.30 p. m.
Mendota Express	*6.10 p. m.	*7.30 p. m.

(St. Louis through Trains.)

Day Express	*9.30 a. m.	*6.15 p. m.
Fast Line	*8.15 p. m.	*7.00 a. m.

M. HOUSTON, Gen'l Supt.

W. F. JOHNSON, Gen'l Passenger Agent.

Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne and Chicago—Depot, Corner of Madison and Canal Streets.

Mail	*1.30 a. m.	6.10 p. m.
Day Express	*9.05 a. m.	8.05 a. m.
Atlantic Express	8.15 p. m.	9.05 a. m.
New York Express	3.00 p. m.	2.00 p. m.
Valparaiso Accommodation	5.30 p. m.	7.20 a. m.

W. C. CLELAND, Gen. Ward's Pass. Agt., 66 Clark st.

Chicago and, St. Louis—Depot, corner Madison and Canal sts

Express Mail	*8.15 a. m.	*8.00 p. m.
Fast Line Accommodation	*4.40 p. m.	*7.50 a. m.
Night Express	10.30 p. m.	8.00 a. m.
Lightning Express	9.00 p. m.	*5.30 a. m.

*Except Sundays. †Runs through to St. Louis every night. ‡Saturdays and sundays excepted. §Except Monday.

T. B. BLACKSTONE, Pres. & Gen'l Superintendent.
A. NEWMAN, Gen'l Pass. Agt., Office 66 Dearborn st.

CHICAGO, DANVILLE AND VINCENNES RAILROAD.

Milwaukee Depot—Corner Canal and Kinzie Sts., West Side. Fare 10 Cents at C., O. & I. C. O.'s Office, corner Halsted and Carroll sts.

Mail Train Chicago time,	3.45 p. m.	9.15 a. m.

Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad. cor Van Buren and Sherman Streets.

Pacific day Express	10.00 a.m.	$4.15 p.m.
Joliet Accommodation	*4.30 p.m.	*9.00 a.m.
Pacific Night Express	11.00 p.m.	7.00 a.m.

An elegant parlor steeping car is attached to the 10 a. m. train, running through to Council Bluffs and Omaha.

R. ST. JOHN, Gen'l Passenger Agent.
R. St. John, Gen'l Ticket Clerk.

P. A. HALL, Asst Gen Superintendent.

Pittsburg, Cincinnati, & St. Louis R. R.—Cincinnati Air Line.

Cincinnati Express	*8.45 a. m.	9.00 a. m.
Columbus Express	*8.45 a. m.	*9.00 p. m.
Cincinnati Night Express	*7.45 p. m.	*8.30 a. m.
Columbus Night Express	*7.45 p. m.
Leaving Accommodation	4.30 p. m.	9.35 a. m.

H. B. HOLLINS, Gen'l Pass. Agt., Ticket Office Corner Randolph and Dearborn streets.

Goodrich's Passenger Steamers.

For Milwaukee and West Shore ports *daily at 8 00 a. m. For Grand Haven and West Shore ports *daily at 7.30 p. m. For St. Joseph and Benton Harbor, *daily at 10 a. m. Green Bay Ports, Tuesdays and Fridays at 7 p. m.

*Sundays excepted. †Mondays excepted. ‡Saturdays excepted.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF CREATION

Unfolding the laws of the Progressive Development of Nature, and embracing the Philosophy of Man, Spirit, and Spirit world. By Thomas Paine, through the hand of Horace G. Wood, Medium.

Price 25 cents, postage 4 cents. For sale at this Office

The Biography of Satan;

or an Historical Exposition of the

DEVIL AND HIS FIERY DOMINIONS,

disclosing the oriental origin of the belief in a Devil and Future Endless Punishment. All adapt the

BOTTOMLESS PIT, KEYS OF HELL Chains of Darkness, Casting out Devils, etc.,

By H. GRAVES, author of "Christianity Before Christ." Price :—35 cents. The Trade Supplied at Liberal Rates.

PUBLISHED BY

RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL Publishing House, 187 & 189 S. Clark St, Chicago.

A NEW BOOK.

FUTURE LIFE:

As Described and Portrayed by Spirits.

Through Mrs. Elizabeth Sweet.

WITH AN INTRODUCTION BY

JUDGE J. W. EDMONDS.

CONTENTS.

Chapter I.—The Holy City.
Chapter II.—Spiritual Message.
Chapter III.—The Spirit Echo.
Chapter IV.—Powers and Responsibilities of Mind
Chapter V.—Communication from a Spirit.
Chapter VI.—Spirit-life.
Chapter VII.—A picture of the Future.
Chapter VIII.—Margaret Fuller.
Chapter IX.—Reasonable Words.
Chapter X.—Interview with Pollock.
Chapter XI.—New Desires.
Chapter XII.—John C. Calhoun.
Chapter XIII.—Interview with Webster.
Chapter XIV.—A Second Visit.
Chapter XV.—Another Interview.
Chapter XVI.—Reformation.
Chapter XVII.—The path of Progression.
Chapter XVIII.—Valley of the Shadow of Death.
Chapter XIX.—A Mirror.
Chapter XX.—The Book of Life.
Chapter XXI.—A Beautiful Lesson.
Chapter XXII.—Retrospection.
Chapter XXIII.—The Mechanic.
Chapter XXIV.—The Preacher.
Chapter XXV.—Reception of Spiritualism.
Chapter XXVI.—The Drunkard.
Chapter XXVII.—The path of Ease and Fashion.
Chapter XXVIII.—The Self Satisfied.
Chapter XXIX.—Natural Development of the Soul.
Chapter XXX.—Voltaire and Wolsey.
Chapter XXXII.—The Second Birth.
Chapter XXXII.—The Slave.
Chapter XXXIV.—The Queen.
Chapter XXXV.—A Scene in Spirit-Land.
Chapter XXXVI.—The Miser.
Chapter XXXVII.—Spiritual Influence.
Chapter XXXIX.—The New City.
Chapter XL.—The Erring One.
Chapter XLI.—The Idler.
Chapter XLII.—The Beggar.
Chapter XLIII.—Insignificance of Man.
Chapter XLIV.—Orphalinism of the soul.
Chapter XLV.—The Skeptic.
Chapter XLVI.—Realities of Spirit-Life
Chapter XLVII.—The Convict.
Chapter XLVIII.—The Soul's Aspiration.
Chapter XLIX.—The Dying Girl.
Chapter L.—The Inner World.
Chapter LI.—The Foolish Mother.
Chapter LII.—The Disobedient Son.
Chapter LIII.—Cardinal Richelieu.
Chapter LIV.—Practical Nature of Spirit-Life.
Chapter LV.—Glimpse of a Higher Life.
Chapter LVI.—Communication.
Chapter LVII.—A Word from Voltaire
Chapter LVIII.—Home of Unhappy Spirits.
Chapter LIX.—Experiences of Voltaire.
Appendix.

Price $1.50: postage 20 cents.
For sale at this office.

Prof. Wm. Denton's Works.

THE SOUL OF THINGS; OR PSYCHOMETRIC RESEARCHES AND DISCOVERIES. By William and Elizabeth M. F. Denton.

The valuable and highly interesting work has become part of the standard literature of the country.

Price, $1.50cts, Postage, 20cts.

LECTURES ON GEOLOGY, THE PAST AND FUTURE OF OUR PLANET. A valuable scientific work.

Price, $1.50cts. Postage, 20cts.

COMMON SENSE THOUGHTS ON THE BIBLE. For Common Sense people. Twelfth thousand, revised and enlarged.

Price, 10cts., Postage, 2cts.

THE DELUGE, IN THE LIGHT OF MODERN SCIENCE.

Price, 10cts., Postage, 2cts.

WHAT IS RIGHT. Price, 10cts., Postage, 2cts.

BE THYSELF. Price, 10cts., Postage, 2cts.

For sale at THE RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL Office.

Address S. S. Jones, 187 & 189, South Clark street, Chicago, Ill.

NEW WORKS BY PROF. DENTON.

"ORTHODOXY FALSE,

Since Spiritualism is True."

Price, 10 cents: postage, 2 cents.

THE IRRECONCILABLE RECORDS, OR GENESIS AND GEOLOGY.

160 pages. Price: paper, 35 cents, postage, 4 cts cloth, 60 cents, postage 8 cts.

For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 187 & 189 S. Clark Street, Chicago.

CONJUGAL SINS

AGAINST THE

LAWS OF LIFE AND HEALTH,

AND

THEIR EFFECT ON THE FATHER MOTHER AND CHILD.

BY AUGUSTUS K. GARDNER, A. M., M. D.

Late Professor of Diseases of Females and Chemical Medical Midwifery in the New York Medical College.

CONTENTS.

I. The Modern Womens' Physical Deterioration. II. Local disease in children and its cause. III. At what age should one Marry. IV. Is Continence physically injurious. V. Personal Pollution. VI. The injurious results of Sexual Excesses. VII. Methods used to prevent Conception and their consequences. VIII. Infanticide. IX. Conjugal relations during the period of Menstruation. X. Conjugal relations between the old. XI. Marriage between Old Men and Young Girls XII. What may be done With Health in View, and the Scarof God before us. Appendix.

Price in cloth, $1.50, postage 16 cents; in paper, $1.00, postage 8 cents. The Trade Supplied at Liberal Rates. Address S. S. Jones, 187 and 189 So. Clark St., Chicago Ill.

A REVELATION!!!

of the

EXTRAORDINARY VISITATION of

DEPARTED SPIRITS!

Of Distinguished Men and Women of all Nations, as Manifested through the Living Bodies of the "Shakers."

The Spirits of WASHINGTON, FRANKLIN PENN, GIRARD, ST. PATRICK, NAPOLEON, JOHN WESLEY, BYRON, GEO. FOX and Hosts of Celebrated Characters of the Past, who take Possession of and Discourse through the Living Bodies of the "Shakers," of New York, giving Wonderful Information respecting the Events of their Lifetime, and their Opinions of Present Criticisms concerning those Events, as well as their Immediate Condition in the World of Spirits.

PRICE:—25 cts; postage, 3 cts. Liberal discount to the trade.

ADDRESS:—RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 187 and 189 S Clark street, Chicago, Ill.

Prof. Spence's Positive and Negative Powders for sale at this office.
Address, S. S. Jones, 187 & 189 S. Clark st.

39,308 CURES

BY THE

POSITIVE & NEGATIVE POWDERS.

IN the following list, the total number of cures of different diseases, which have been performed by the Great Spiritual Remedy, PROF. SPENCE'S POSITIVE AND NEGATIVE POWDERS, is indicated by the figures which follow the name of the disease. The kind of Powders which should be used in each disease is indicated by the letters "P" or "

Frontier Department.

BY.....E. V. WILSON

Extraordinary Manifestations.

To our readers: This week we present you number one of a series of communications, written with spirit hands, in the dark, in the presence of several witnesses, many of whom were skeptical and unbelievers. We shall, from time to time, give the names of persons who saw the luminous hand, and heard the pencil as it marked the paper or slate on which the spiritual hand wrote.

We have witnessed these writings again and again, and know that the mediums through whom they were given, are incapable of deceit, and receive no earthly gain therefrom whatever, but to the contrary, are the losers, socially and pecuniarily, suffering even mob violence for their fidelity to the cause of Spiritualism and the laws of mediumship.

The conditions under which these communications were given, are as follows: First, a slate or marked sheet of paper, with marked pencil, are placed on a table in a lighted room. Second, the circle come together around the table, and frequently sit some distance from the table. Third, the lights are extinguished, when the writings commence.

Proof that the writing is not executed by human hands: First, the hand is a luminous one, seen by the spectators as well as the medium, and commented on by all present. Second, the ruled lines are followed exactly, the i's dotted, the t's crossed, the writing plain and well executed. Third, [illegible] men are true, until proved, liars.

As to the merit or demerit of these communications, we have nothing to say,—our readers must determine for themselves.

Number One.

On the 10th of January, 1871, at a special circle at the residence of J. Koons, I submitted the following question to the presiding spirit of our band:

Will you favor us with a few remarks relating to the doctrines of the Bible, and of the Bible God, as it reaches us? [J. Koons].

Answer.—There are Bibles many, and Bible Gods many, whose devotees claim to be the superlative and absolute rulers of heaven and earth, all of whom should have written their infallible guide books of wonders, containing a diversity of standard rules for the strict observance of mankind, which conflict materially in their mandates, their edicts and their philosophies, especially in the astronomical assertion of the shining heavens, and geological records of fossilsils,—the rotating kingdoms of terrestrial and celestial orbs and planets.

God is a spirit, invisible, that no mortal eye hath ever seen, nor ever will see. [See Christian Bible].

According to this Bible admission, it was not this God who dictated the Bible account of the creation of the heavens and the earth. Neither was it God who planned the plan of life; this God who entered into a league with Abraham, or wrestled with Jacob, or the God who exhibited his hinder parts to Moses, nor the God who incarnated himself in the birth of Christ, with all of his absolute perfect will.

These gods were personal, and subject to the ruling elements of man.

Then Asked One Present:

Who is God, the All-pervading, so as to address the carnal senses of man with His Omnipotent majesty?

Answer.—God is that all pervading, imponderable, vital element with its incessant oscillations from centripetal centres to centrifugal circumferences, of systematical kingdoms of positronous rubber-fluid essences, spirit fields and atomical formations of physical compounds, all acting reciprocally with due regard to each other's positive and negative forces.

It is in the internal bosom of the invisible God, occupant of space infinitum, where conditions are offered for the procreation and the generation of magnetic nebio-worms of ponderable elements, for the generation of centripetal and centrifugal extremes, and points of gravity for the diverse embodiments of dissimilarities of imponderable substances into material formations, as we now behold them through infinitude, with their spiritually developed and undeveloped embodies, in their various characters and colorings, beginning its first visible manifestations in physical formations and animal life in the fact, moltusca and polyparia genera, receiving into diverse species of fish, reptiles, birds and mammals, until the consecutive compound proceeds of the essential elements arising from the diversity of consecutive formations arising from these chemical laboratories, receive their living—their spiritual and immortal essence, into the crowning summit of physical life, in the image of men, whose immortal spirits are the godly and personal representatives of the imponderable and invisible gods of material form, who are embraced in the term, "Elohi," or the Bible gods of modern days.

In consequence of the many torturing compilations, corrections, expulsions and interpolations of human doctrines and political Bible speculations of knaves and fools, the Christian Bible is at present an incomprehensible bundle of facts and fictions, and unworthy of the name and the authors of its line of inspired law-givers.

Man is the temporal embodiment of God, and the departed spirits of mankind are the divine essence of God, and man's duty to God's own spirit within himself is, to act in harmony with his [man's] own divine nature; and to serve God generally is to obey inviolably the divine constitution of his [man's] own carnal nature, without a lack or excess of moral duties to himself and others; as well as to avoid excessive submission to his physical lusts and gravitations to crime; least every offender will suffer the penal records of his own transgression in both spirit and flesh, accor ding to his acts, whether sensual or required.

The members of this circle, who are prepared to announce that this was not written with mortal hands, will please attach their signatures.

King Lee, and 2nd President of the band of ancient and remote earthly date. Exit and adieu.

We, the undersigned, witnessed the above writing, and subscribe our names thereto: Geo. P. Hascall, M. D.; A. Hascall, Carter Wilkey, M. D.; Lydia Hughes, John S. Tipple, S. A. Bates, Geo. E. Koons, C. M. Brookins, Joseph Border, S. B. Koons, Margaret Bates, Newcomb Graves, Alvis Taylor, J. R. Koons, S. M. Wilkey, Robert Taylor.

The following persons are the mediums of the Koons family: Jonathan Koons, N. W. Koons, negatives; N. J. Koons, Manerva J. Drew, female centers.

Notes from Spirit Life, No. 2.

Sunday, January 15th, 1871, the following questions were answered in writing during the time of a dark circle of ten members, held at the residence of S. D. Goodale, near De Quoin, Ill., by spirits. A luminous hand was distinctly seen before, and the time of meeting:

1st.—What are the temporal ruling elements of man?

2nd.—Has the house of strife a good or evil tendency?

3rd.—What is the highest attainable degree of personal happiness?

4th.—What are the immortal gifts and treasures of man?

5th.—What are the constituent elements of man's constitution?

Answers by the Band of Spirits.

1st.—See manuscript. (Missing.)

2nd.—We answer, first—Resolved: That the house of strife deserves more merit in the development of the ruling generation, for its [illegible] all the [illegible] nailed to the cross, is more ecstatic in its enjoyment, under the temporal support of bread and water, than the luxuries of an emperor's banquet, or the golden diadem of a ruling pontiff, with all their glittering and illustrious tokens of mundane power or super-imperial state.

(A cross was attached to this, on which was written the word "Christ.")

5th.—Resolved: That man is the outgrowth of all ponderable elements in physical life,—and that the individualized spirit of man is the outgrowth of all living essence of animal life, and that the spirit of man is the essential embodiment of the immortal spark of spiritual life.

Thos. Paine, Secretary.

If the circle please, we do not importune you—but desire you to put your signatures to this writing, in token that it is not a mortal production. King 1st and 2nd Pres.

This closes our written ministry at our present advent.

Certified by the circle as follows:

It seems impossible that the above could have been written by any one of the company. S. D. Goodale.

We feel positive that it is not mortal production. Andrew Frazur, F. Wells, W. W. Wells, Louisa Goodale, N. W. Koons, D. C. Goodale, G. E. Koons, Althea Goodale.

E. V. Wilson's Appointments for June and July, 1871.

The four Saturdays and Sundays of June, in Fort Scott, Kansas.

The 1st and 2nd, Thursday and Friday, at Gardner, Kansas.

On Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings, at Ozawa, Kansas, four lectures, June 5, 6, 7th, and 8th.

The evenings of the 12th, 13th, 14th, 15th and 16th are held open for a discussion at Fort Scott, provided some champion of the cross, of masculine gender, accepts our resolutions.

On the 19th, 20th, 21st and 22nd, Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings, we are to lecture in Columbus, Kansas.

On the 23rd, 24th, 25th and 26th, Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings, in Oswego, Kansas, four lectures.

On Saturday, Sunday, Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings, July 1st, 2nd, 3rd, 4th, 5th, 6th and 7th, 1871, we lecture in Carthage, Missouri,—eight lectures.

On Saturday, Sunday, Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings, 8th, 9th, 10th, 11th, 12th, 13th and 14th, in Springfield, Missouri,—eight lectures.

On Saturday, Sunday and Monday evenings, July 15th, 16th and 17th, we will lecture in Marshfield, Missouri,—four lectures.

Address us in June at Fort Scott, Kansas.

The Hollow Globe.

We have read a portion of the book recently published at this office, entitled "The Hollow Globe; or, the World's Agitator and Reconciler," and not only find it to be a work of absorbing interest, but one that is appropriately named, and will doubtless produce an agitation of thought upon a variety of subjects of great interest to the modern thinker—subjects which have been overshadowed by a cloud of darkness, and only guessed at by scientific men and philosophers.

The work is original in its character, manifesting in its various chapters an entire independence of all so-called authorities, and arrives at conclusions by simple processes of reasoning that seem to carry conviction to the mind of every reader.

It handles the subject of the great internal fires within the crust of the globe, and quenches their eternal flames with perfect ease, regardless of La Place or all the eminent scientific men who have ventured and advocated that theory. It seems to treat upon these difficult subjects,—earthquakes, volcanoes, gravitation, solar influences, and other phenomena that exist upon the surface of the earth in a manner that renders those usually dry themes extremely attractive and absorbing. This book, if true, as it appears to be, shows conclusively that this globe must of necessity be built up in the form of a spherical shell in order to subserve, to the greatest possible extent, the purposes for which worlds are constructed, and supports the theory with an array of arguments which seem to be perfectly unanswerable.

The work evidently contains a rich fund of original thought, and both the rich and the poor who have any interest in the great truths inscribed upon Nature's ample volume, many of which are transcribed and presented upon these pages, should possess themselves of a copy.

In order that they may do so, and to bring the book, as far as practicable, within the reach of all, we have been enabled to reduce the price to two dollars.

Decatur Convention—Attention.

The Illinois Central Railroad has agreed to return all attending the Convention on June 2nd, 3rd and 4th, for one fifth the regular fare. Passengers or delegates to the Convention are to pay full fare thereto, and on application to the Decatur Committee, certificates will be furnished for this reduced rate of return. Such certificates to be presented at Decatur and Tolono stations. The Toledo, Wabash & Western Road is not heard from, but will probably do the same.

BEN. H. RIGHTER,
Secretary.

Healing Mediums

MRS. A. H. Robinson continues to heal the sick by letter. She diagnoses and prescribes in that manner for from ten to forty per day, of the worst chronic cases, and almost invariably cures by one single prescription. See her advertisement.

DR. J. G. ENTWISTLE is also a very excellent healing medium. See his advertisement.

PHYSICAL MANIFESTATIONS.—Where are the spiritual missionaries, that go around the country denouncing all mediums for physical manifestations in dark circles as impostors, and the spiritual journals that sustain such mediums as abettors of fraud? What a glorious thing it is to be a missionary of that kind!

Our Advertising Mediums.

By reference to our advertising columns, the readers of the JOURNAL will find many good mediums in various parts of the country that are worthy of patronage.

See also our Medium's Register.

McFadden and Wife

Are doing a good business in their mediumship, at No. 343 W. Madison street, Chicago. They accommodate a few sick patients at their own home, as well as board transient callers.

See his advertisement.

—Be careful not to take envy or hate or [illegible] at your adviser.—S. A. Merrill.

City Amusements.

CROSBY'S OPERA HOUSE.

Last night but two of the Lydia Thompson troupe. Thursday evening, May 25th, last night of "Paris, and Laughing Hyena." Friday, Farewell Benefit of Lydia Thompson. She will appear in two pieces and five characters. Grand Matinee Saturday at 2 P. M. Monday evening, May 29th, San Francisco Minstrels, from New York.

M'VICKER'S THEATRE.

Last night but two of the season. The brilliant little star, Lotta. Thursday, last night of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," Topsy, Lotta, with songs, dances, banjo solos, etc. Friday, Benefit of Lotta, two comedies. Saturday, Farewell Lotta Benefit.

HOOLEY'S OPERA HOUSE.

The great sensation of the season. The inimitable combination. Something entirely new and original. Mammoth triple company, "The Lauris, the Walhallas, and the wonder of the age." "El Kino Eldie," in their chaste, elegant, and refined entertainments, concluding with Lauri's new sensational comic pantomime, entitled, "K-ki Ko-ko-oh-ki-key, every evening, and Wednesday and Saturday Matinees.

DEARBORN THEATRE.

Last week but one this season of Manning's Minstrels. A great hit. A decided triumph. "Pocahontas" rearranged and localized, abounding in brilliant wit, local hits, songs of the period, elegant scenery. The finest bill of the season. "And yet I am not happy." Perfect ventilation and comfortable temperature secured by a continual current of ice-cold air forced through the auditorium.

METROPOLITAN HALL.

The New Northwest. A lecture will be delivered at Metropolitan Hall, by Hon. S. Garfield, M. C. from Washington Territory, Friday evening, May 26th; subject, "The Great Northwest—its Climate, Soil, Wonders, and Resources." Admission, 50 cents. Tickets for sale at McNally's Bookstore, 51 Dearborn-st.

DELINQUENTS.

The following named persons owe for this paper. They have either removed from the town or post office where they formerly took the JOURNAL, without requesting the address to be changed; and paying arrearages; or they have requested some pious postmaster to notify us that the paper was not called for, thinking thus to evade payment. Such of these as remain unpaid four weeks, without reasonable explanation, will be placed in the Black List. Our subscribers who know the present residence of either of these persons, will confer a favor by informing us of the same.

S. M. Argo, Clinton, Ill., $3.25; J. H. Mears, Lincoln, Va., 50 cts.; J. P. Tuttle, West Lebanon, Ind., $1.75; J. M. Wilson, Camden Mill, Ill., $2.00; W. M. Setchell, St. Louis, Mo., $7.00; Mrs. M. Strong, Buchanan, Mich., $6.00; John Hiles, Harrisburg, Pa., $1.75; A. Mills, Simmonsville, Vt., $3.25; E. Roby, Bridgeport, Ind., $3.25; Geo. Roberts, Emigrant's Gap, Cal., $4.25; Wm. Simms, Dorsey, Ill., $2.50; Mrs. Rosina Cook, Black Hills, Ill., $6.25; D. A. Orambling, Atlanta, Ga., $6.75; G. W. Orth, Princeton, Mo., $5.25; Wm. A. Hardman, Jackson, Ohio, $6.00; Miss F. Robinson, Two Rocks, Cal., $1.25 etc.; J. Clark, Two Rocks, Cal., $2.25; G. H. McNamee, Edinburg, Mo., $5.50; W. Woodward, Goldsboro', N. C., $4.25; Mrs. Alphas Pike, Mich., 75 cts.; John Hooker, Lexington, Mass., $3.50; A. McCord, Troy, N. Y., $3.25; B. R. Mathews, Ist, Vernon, Mo., $3.75; D. Emery, Ottumwa, Iowa, $10.25; H. Brevoort, 96 Third Av., New York City, $3.25; John Bartlett, Elgin, Iowa, $5.00; S. Healey, Herman, N. Y., $1.75; A. B. Cole, Pigeon, Mo., $1.50; O. F. Tooley, POEMS

FROM

THE INNER LIFE.

BY LIZZIE DOTEN.

This is by far the finest edition of these Poems ever yet issued—printed on heavy paper and elegantly bound.

Price $1.25, Postage 20cts.

For sale at the Office of the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL, 187 & 189, South Clark Street, Chicago, Ill.

THE Descent of Man, AND Selections in Relation to Sex;

By Charles Darwin, M.A.F.R.S. With Illustrations.

2 Two Vols., over 400 pp. each, Price $2.00 per Vol.; postage 24 cts.

. For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

ABSTRACT OF COLENSO ON THE PENTATEUCH.

A comprehensive summary of Bishop Colenso's argument proving that the Pentateuch is not historically true, and that it was composed by Samuel, Jeremiah, and other prophets, from 1100 to 624 B. C. The substance of five volumes in 45 pages. Price 25 cents. AMERICAN NEWS CO., N. Y.

v10 n5 6m

IT COST

Only about one-third Bookbinders' prices to do binding handsomely by the use of Alden's Ready Book-Binder. Sizes suited to any publication, from the smallest Monthly to the largest Weekly. Price circular free. Send 50 cents for samples of both File and Binder. Size for the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL, No. 19; price $1.20 and $1.50. Address, RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

MRS. E. MANIFOLD

Medical, Clairvoyant, and Healing Medium. Parties at a distance examined by lock of hair. Price, $1.00. Prescriptions, $1.00. Magnetic Remedies sent to all parts of the country. Address Mrs. E. C. Manifold, P. O. Box 1024, Rockford, Ill.

v10 n7 tf

MRS. C. H. LELAND,

Wonderful Psychometrist, Soul Reader, and Business Medium, will, upon receipt of photograph, lock of hair, whether married or single, send to any person a correct delineation of character, with leading events in the past and future life, for one dollar. Advice concerning business, two dollars. Written communications from friends in spirit life, two dollars. Satisfaction guaranteed. Instructions for mediumistic development, one dollar. Address, Myrickville, Mass.

v10 n10-tf.

THE LAW OF MARRIAGE,

BY C. L. JAMES.

An exhaustive argument in favor of liberal divorce legislation. For sale by the author, Louisiana, Mo. Post paid for 25 cents.

vp.n15-tf

THE COMMUNIST

a monthly paper devoted to Social Reform and Liberal Communism. Fifty cents a year. Specimen copies sent. Address ALEXANDER LANGLEY, 23 S. Eighth St., Mo.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

MEDICINA PSYCHICA! ANIMA MEDICA!!

☞ "Dico hominem externum esse animal:—Internum vero non animal sed imaginem DEI VERAM!" VAN HELMONT.

THIERS' ODYLLIC WAFERS.

The most safe, salutary, and effectual Nervine Medium Developer, and curative in all

DISEASES OF THE NERVES,

Including Neuralgia, Epilepsy, Hysteria, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Gout, Lumbago, St. Vitus' Chorea (St. Vitus' Dance), Depression of Spirits, Melancholy, &c.

Sent per mail, in letter-form. Price $1.00 per package. Test or trial packages mailed free for 25 cents. Address:

W. F. J. THIERS, M. D., NEUROPATHIST,
No. 71 I St. Washington, D. C.
v10 n11 tf

The Bible in India.

HINDOO ORIGIN OF Hebrew and Christian Revelation.

TRANSLATED FROM

"LA BIBLE DANS L' INDE."

BY LOUIS JACOLLIOT.

EXTRACTS FROM AUTHOR'S PREFACE:

"I come to show you humanity, after attaining the loftiest regions of speculative philosophy, of untrammeled reason on the venerable soil of India, was trammeled and stifled by the altar that substituted for intellectual life a semi-brute existence of dreaming inspection.....

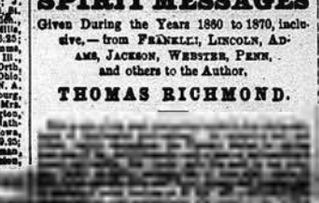
India is the world's cradle; hence it, is that the common mother in sending forth her children even to the utmost west has, in unfading testimony of our origin, bequeathed us the legacy of her language, her laws, her morals, her literature, and her religion.....

To religious despotism, imposing, speculative delusions, and class-legislation, may be attributed the decay of nations.....

.....Aware of the resentment I am provoking, I yet shrink not from the encounter.....We are no longer burnt at the stake."

. PRICE $1.00; postage 24 cents. For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark street, Chicago.

GOD



DEALING WITH SLAVERY.

God's Instrumentalities in Emancipating the African Slaves in America.

SPIRIT MESSAGES

Given During the Years 1860 to 1870, inclusive,—from FRANKLIN, LINCOLN, ADAMS, JACKSON, WEBSTER, PENN, and others to the Author,

THOMAS RICHMOND.

PRICE: Cloth, $1.00; postage, 12 cents. Bevelled paper sides and cloth back, 75 cents; postage, 6 cents.

☞ For Sale, Wholesale and Retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 187 & 189 South Clark street, Chicago.

THE HIEROPHANT, OR Gleanings from the Past.

BY G. C. STEWART.

"Being an exposition of Biblical astronomy, and the symbolism and mysteries on which were founded all ancient religious and secret societies, with an explanation of the dark sayings and allegories that abound in the Pagan, Jewish and Christian Bibles, also the real sense of the doctrines and observances of the modern Christian churches."

The above is a good deal to promise the reader that he will find done up in a neat little 16 mo. book of 234 pages, but we assure our readers that they will find all the subjects mentioned treated in a clear, concise, and satisfactory manner.

The book has already passed through several editions, and the demand, of late, has greatly increased.

For sale at the office of this paper. Price, $1; postage, 12cents.

THE

HOLLOW GLOBE;

Or, the World's Agitator and Reconciler.

A Treatise on the Physical Conformation of the Earth.

PRESENTED THROUGH THE ORGANISM OF

M. L. SHERMAN, M.D.,

AND WRITTEN BY

PROF. WM. F. LYON.

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

"This book is addressed to the reasoning intelligence of Humanity,—to all inquiring and reflective minds, everywhere upon the earth

"We earnestly request the reader to suspend his judgment concerning the ideas advanced, until he has carefully perused its pages; when he may be better prepared to form his opinions, and offer his criticisms.

"We do not claim that the teachings contained in this work are infallible, neither are they presented in an authoritative manner. But we do claim that it contains more original, natural and startling ideas, which are of great interest to civilised humanity, and which seem to be entirely irrefutable, than any book of its size that has made its appearance in modern times.

"We, therefore, commend it to the careful consideration of the modern thinker, being fully persuaded that its pages contain a large fund of thought which may open to his mind new fields of research, thus tending to enlarge his understanding and enlighten his intellect."

EXTRACT FROM INTRODUCTION.

"The central idea contained in the following work, and the one that most of these chapters are designed to substantiate, is, that this globe is constructed in the form of a hollow sphere, with a shell some thirty to forty miles in thickness, and that the interior surface, which is a beautiful world in a more highly developed condition than the exterior, is accessible by a circuitous and spirally formed aperture that may be found in the unexplored open Polar Sea, and this opening affords easy navigation by a broad and deep channel leading from the surface to the other, and that the largest ships or steamers may sail or steam either way, with as much facility as they can pass through any other winding or somewhat crooked channel. And we have endeavored to show as clearly as possible, that the physical formation of the globe is such as to be perfectly compatible with an outer and inner world, or two worlds instead of one."

12 mo., 447 pp. Price $2.00; postage 20 cents.

. For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

New Books.

THE

Science of Evil;

OR

FIRST PRINCIPLES OF HUMAN ACTION.

BY JOEL MOODY.

THE SCIENCE OF EVIL is a book of radical and startling thought. It gives a connected and logical statement of the FIRST PRINCIPLES OF HUMAN ACTION, and clearly shows that without Evil there can be neither Morals, Science, Knowledge, or Human Action on earth. In fact, without Evil, man could not exist. This work fully solves the PROBLEM, and unveils the MYSTERY of Evil, giving it a scientific meaning, and shows it to be THE LEVER WHICH MOVES THE MORAL AND INTELLECTUAL WORLD.

The book is large 12 mo., of 342 pages, printed from large, clear type, on fine, heavy paper. Price, $1.75; postage, 20 cents.

. For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 187 & 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

SECOND EDITION.

A WORK OF GREAT RESEARCH.

ONE RELIGION: MANY CREEDS.

BY ROSS WINANS.

"We object to what the Church demands, an unbounded and implicit belief in the infallibility of the writings of Moses and the prophets, and the Evangelists and the Apostles. We dissent from a sentimental attachment to an impossible, nonsensical and unreasonable belief in most Christian theology, as we have it, is not taught by God himself, nor by Christ himself, nor is it consistent with established facts, nor with the commonsense of the present day. We would show you that Christianity, as taught among us, is no better than other systems taught in other than Christian countries, and therefore is not so good.

The historic part of the Bible, in relation to the creation of the world, has its counterpart also in the several systems of theology here mentioned. They all had their cosmologies based on equally good authority and equally wide of the truth, as that recorded in the Bible. The time and manner of the creation, no man has ever known, or ever will know in this life; nor is such knowledge of importance in preparing us for the life to come."—EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

This book is a large 12 mo. of nearly 400 pages, printed on fine, heavy-tinted paper, and is sold at much less than the actual cost. Price, $1.50; postage, 22 cents.

. For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

THE BIBLE IN THE BALANCE,

A Book for the Age and the Times,

and one that should be in the hands of every liberal man and woman in the land.

You want it for your own instruction, that you may be furnished with acknowledged authority to meet the arguments of the theologian, historian, chronologist and scientific man with his own weapons.

It discusses the matter of Bible canons, versions, translations and revisions with ability, citing none but authors in the highest repute, and those that are above criticism.

The book is printed in excellent style, 12 mo., on new type and fine paper, with beautiful illustrations of the mounds and mound-relics of the Mississippi Valley.

It is substantially bound in cloth and contains three hundred and twenty pages.

The interest felt in the work is so great that orders were received for nearly the whole of the first edition before it was published, one party alone having received orders for over three hundred copies.

THE WONDERS OF THE UNIVERSE REVEALED TO MAN.

By the Spirit Guardians of

DAVID COBLENZ.

A very entertaining and instructive little book. Price, 80 cents.

. For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

MRS. MARIA M. KING'S WORKS.

THE PRINCIPLES OF NATURE, as discovered in the Development and Structure of the Universe; The Solar System—Laws and Method of its Development; Earth—History of its Development; Exposition of the Spiritual Universe. Price reduced to $1.75; postage, 24 cents.

REAL LIFE IN THE SPIRIT LAND.—Being Life Experiences, Scenes, Incidents, and Conditions, Illustrative of Spirit-Life and the Principles of the Spiritual Philosophy. Price, $1.00; postage, 16 cents.

SOCIAL EVILS: Their Causes and Cure.—Being a Brief Discussion of the Social Status, with reference to Methods of Reform. Price, 25 cents; postage free.

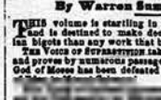
THE SPIRITUAL PHILOSOPHY VS. DIABOLISM. In two lectures. Price, 25 cents; postage free.

WHAT IS SPIRITUALISM? and SHALL SPIRITUALISTS HAVE A CREED? In two lectures. Price, 25 cents; postage free.

. For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

NEW EDITION—REVISED AND CORRECTED.

THE VOICES.



Three Poems.

VOICE OF SUPERSTITION.
VOICE OF NATURE.
VOICE OF A PEBBLE.

By Warren Sumner Barlow.

THIS volume is startling in its originality of purpose, and is destined to make deeper inroads among sectarian bigots than any work that has hitherto appeared.

THE VOICE OF SUPERSTITION takes the creeds all their word, and proves by numerous passages from the Bible that the God of Moses has been defeated by Satan, from the Garden [illegible] the age."

THE VOICE OF A PEBBLE delineates the individuality in Soul and Mind, fraternal Charity and Love.

The book is a repository of original thought, awaking noble conceptions of God and man, forcible and pleasing in style, and is one of the few works that we have seen with its years and makers with the centuries. It is already admired by its thousands of readers.

Printed in beautiful type, on heavy, fine paper, bound in bevelled boards. 12 mo., of nearly 200 pages. Price $1.50, postage 16 cents. Very liberal discount to the trade. For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 South Clark St., Chicago, Ill

MOSES HULL'S WORKS.

THE QUESTION SETTLED, a Careful Comparison of Biblical and Modern Spiritualism. Price, $1.50; postage, 16 cents.

SPIRITUALISM UNVEILED. This sharp and brilliant little book, by one of our acutest writers and most efficient speakers should be read by all. Price, 25 cents; postage, 2 cents.

THE SUPREMACY OF REASON. This little work is a masterly argument on the Supremacy of Reason. The author handles sectarianism as opposed to reason, without gloves. Price, 10 cents; postage, 2 cents.

THAT TERRIBLE QUESTION.—Being an Essay on Love and Marriage. Price, 10 cents; postage, 2 cents.

THE WOLF IN SHEEP'S CLOTHING; or, God in the Constitution. An impartial interpretation of the mysteries of the Book of Daniel, and the Apocalypse, together with an agreement between Christianity and Christianity, and the Sabbath in our National Charter. Price, 10 cents; postage, 2 cents. For sale, wholesale, and retail, at the office of this paper.

. For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

HARMONIAL PHILOSOPHY

RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL.

DEVOTED TO THE ARTS AND SCIENCES, LITERATURE, ROMANCE AND GENERAL REFORM.

$3,00 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.] Truth wears no mask, bows at no human shrine, seeks neither place nor applause: she only asks a hearing. [SINGLE COPIES EIGHT CENTS.

S. S. JONES, PUBLISHER AND PROPRIETOR. CHICAGO, JUNE 10, 1871. VOL. X.—NO. 12.

The Rostrum.

EXCELLENCE AND BEAUTY OF TRUTH.

A Lecture by Mrs. N. J. T. Brigham, Delivered at Harmonial Hall, Philadelphia, April 30th, 1871.

Phonographically Reported for the Religio-Philosophical Journal, by Henry T. Child, M. D.

INVOCATION.

Oh, God, our loving Father, thou whose soul teaches us all, and whose love endures forever, in our weakness, in our striving after truth, we are grateful that thou canst ever give us that for which we seek. We are grateful that thou dost answer the hungering and thirsting of our spiritual natures; that thou hast not alone developed a demand, but that through all life thou dost give its answering supply. So, as we strive for truth forever and forever, its spirit hears and answers our prayer. For this would we perpetually thank thee, that thou dost not pour it out all upon any one age—upon one nation, or one individual, but that as each flower, each blade of grass, as well as the trees and mountains, are bathed continually with sunlight and with falling rain,—so the least of us, as well as the greatest, is remembered continually by thy spirit. Our prayer is one of gratitude—not a vain seeking to grasp thy glorious nature, and bend and distort it until all our human desires shall be responded to. In our prayers would we express that which we need—striving to gain that spiritual elevation which we so much require. Oh, thou who art always present, and always willing to guide and instruct us teach us at this time, and inspire us not only what to speak to others, but inspire us that we may follow that which shall prompt us to ask questions, and enable us to answer them by our intuitions. Teach us not only to strive for the excellence of truth, but also to bring forth its beautiful harmony in our words and deeds. Teach us to be just to each other, to be forgiving and charitable one to another, remembering that we are brothers and sisters, and that the chain that holds us all together can never be sundered. Teach us to draw those who are lower nearer to our level, and if we fancy ourselves high, to look upwards to those who are above us, and as the truth flows through them, may we be prepared to receive it.

LECTURE.

A wise man, years and years ago, saw that "there was nothing new under the sun." So we to-day feel that whatever is, has been in some form forever; that truth is of the infinite ocean. At different times we may see only a little of its flowing tide,—a few of its beautiful waves, but then we gaze upon it, and say this truth is ours; it is new and beautiful, and we have discovered it. We have originated it, perhaps, by our own process of thought.

A person living near the sea coast, finds the tide flowing into the land up through little channels; they are full when the tide is nigh, and dry when it is low. One moment they call it theirs, and the next it is gone; so of these truths that we think we originated and possessed—just as this tide recedes they pass away from us. The ocean of truth is infinite, and we are finite, and therefore we can never expect to grasp all truth. The best that we can hope for, is to grow day by day forever, and we shall grow more and more harmonious through the understanding of that which we gain.

We speak of new truths, only because our knowledge of them is new; but the truths stand forever. They are somewhat like the atmosphere in a forest, when a place is low and covered over with mosses and thick undergrowth, it does not see much of the light. After a time it grows and pushes its way up through the surroundings, and spreads its branches forth into the light. The light does not go down to it,—so we must rise to a condition to see the truth before we can get it; or rather we are continually getting more as we grow higher. The truth is around and about us forever, and we grow into a reception and understanding of one truth after another, and we say to the world,—behold the excellence and beauty of these; but when we go deep enough, we find that we had only learned to see a part of that which constitutes the glorious and perfect form of truth.

We find that we are progressive. We are the ones that change. We learn that we are children that grow taller and taller in our understanding—for truth is changeless, because it is perfect. Ah! truth is beautiful.

There are a great many people who listen to certain theories, and admire them, but then they say they are too good to be true. They are too fair and beautiful. We must not believe them. Rather let us keep to the old ruts in which we have run so long—these old thoughts and opinions. God, through nature, shows us not only the excellence of truth, but its innate and perfect beauty.

Take any law in the Universe as a whole, and it is wholly beautiful, and no person can gaze upon it and not realize its beauty, as well as its excellence. Thus everywhere in nature, we see the beauty and excellence of the laws of God; so all around us, whatever changes occur in nature, the eternal strength and beauty of God's laws is evident, the eternal excellence and beauty of truth is apparent.

If at any time a law has been suspended,—if at any time the plan was changed or amended, just then and there there would have been a broken link in the chain of truth. An amendment or a suspension of a natural law proves that something unforseen has occurred, and presented itself to the vision of God, and so he has provided for an improvement.

Some men have seen that which they call supernatural; they believe in miracles, in the suspension of God's laws, in special providences. These men are teaching that the harmony of truth is imperfect; that there is not a sublime perfection in God's laws. We know that if any change takes place, it proves imperfection, for a change is a break in the law; it shows that the law was not right. We are thankful for this belief, that nature's laws are perfect and unchangeable; that they never can be suspended or changed, and in our prayers we never ask God to suspend a natural law. Our prayers are that we may come into harmony with that which is—it is by prayer that we may lift ourselves and come into harmony with the divine Being.—It is that we may approach him, and not bend him down to us. He who prays with the expectation of changing any of the laws of nature; he who asks for help when disease is all through his body, is asking for an impossibility. He who asks for life, when God says its fingers up to the human body, is asking for that which cannot be. There is no power that can bring the departed spirit to its old time tenement of clay.

There are people that think this is very wrong; that think such an expression is calculated to do an injury. They say nothing is impossible with God; but the Bible says it is impossible for God to lie. Then if God ever speaks through the law of gravitation, and if a man falls into the water and does not know how to swim, all the prayers in the world can not save the man, for the simple reason, that gravitation or the law of God says he must sink and perish if there is no help near, and if there is, the law remains unchanged, but something comes between with a stronger law that overcomes this, and this saves the man.

We believe that no law of the divine Being was ever changed; that there never was any special providence. We believe that the infinite spirit of nature is changeless, and as we strive to understand him, we find that through every law that exists, there speaks the same beautiful and immutable nature, and this is just what we want here in our changeable conditions, in which we so often disappoint each other and ourselves. Is it not beautiful that out of our weaknesses we can trust his enduring strength; out of our mutable nature we can rely upon that which is changeless and immutable. It seems to us that this is the very anchor of the world. It is the very light of our spiritual natures; the atmosphere of trust and confidence which we breathe, and for which we are deeply grateful for, this understanding of Deity. We do not believe in a God who stands by our side—a God who can be seen by man as his brother man can be seen, but rather that wide expanded spirit which "spreads undivided, operates unspent through perfect and immutable presence, that answers all our demands, and elevates us forever." His truths are forever around us, but we can not receive them all at once. There are persons who think that God could give us inspirations that are absolutely infallible, and then we could accept them without any fear and trembling.

We know there are persons who have been seeking for years, to reconcile that which never can be reconciled. They have looked upon their Bibles, and they have said, Why did God bring forward such a diversity in the character of the inspirations? Why did he not give us the plain truth, so plain that we need no longer look for an explanation? We find the Baptists and the Methodists, the Presbyterians and the Quakers, etc., all going to this book, and saying, Right here is our faith grounded. Then some one says, Why could not these statements be so plain that every one could understand them clearly? Why, suppose a person was about to take a certain journey. One man says, As you know nothing about this, you had better buy a guide-book. Suppose when you get that guide-book, every thing is contradictory. You are told to go directly East when you want to go West. You are told different things about a road you are to travel. You say, What do I know about it—that guide-book only makes confusion worse confounded.

What are we to do. Some speak of that undiscovered country toward which we are all journeying, as a "bourne from which no traveler returns."

All these sects tell us that man can not go to heaven unless he takes their particular road.—so they present many forms of belief. We are to say you must be baptized, and others say it is of no use. Others say you need only be sprinkled, as the heavens sprinkle the earth sometimes. One says you must believe that God is a God of wrath, and all these beliefs are based upon the Bible—the guide-book. So some say, if God gave us a Bible at all, why did he not make it so plain that there could be no mistake about it. It seems to us very plain, why it is so. As exercise is requisite for the development of physical life and strength, just so is it with the mental and spiritual natures,—exercise is equally necessary. If any teacher comes to us and tells us exactly what to believe, and makes it perfectly plain and consistent, there would be nothing for us to do. We should do no good. We are like the stagnant pool; but when we doubt and question and reason upon things, then we become like the flowing stream that finds a rock in its path,—it does not stop and try to go back —it is obliged to go forward—there is so much back of it. It flows around and over the rocks, and if there were no rocks, there would be no music to the stream, because of these rocks they sing the song that every mountain brooklet knows by heart. Just so it is with man's spirit, when he is obliged to think. When objection lies here, and doubt lies there, and he must reason upon these things, the crystal waters of truth flowing through his soul, makes it musical and strong,—even by the obstacles that we place in his pathway. So we are thankful for all these things. We always appreciate that best for which we have striven most earnestly, and so man in seeking for the truth, becomes developed even by the obstacles that lie in his pathway.

When we find something in one place that is directly opposed to another, it only shows us that man is progressive. So God has given an inspiration,—if you have a little hollow in a rock, it can never be more than full. Whatever it receives over that, it can not hold. Can not we take that comparison to our own spirits. We go to the Bible and find a certain beautiful inspiration. We receive that, but there are many things that we can not receive. We say let it run over—it is of no use to us; but we do not destroy it or say it is worthless, for if it does not feed us to-day, it may at some other time. It is pleasant sometimes for us to look back upon our childhood, and to know what strange fancies we have had. Just in that way, it is well for man to look back over the centuries, and see what men did in the childhood of the race. So with all due respect for what men say, we know that God's inspiration is always perfect; that it is only changed by flowing through the human mind. When it strikes a mediumistic mind, it always takes the stamp and characteristic impression of the mind which it touches. Suppose only one grade or kind of inspiration is received, what would we do with the Bible? There we have the Psalms of David, the lamentations of Jeremiah, and the soul utterances of Jesus—all of which are easily distinguishable, and which clearly prove that inspiration takes its character from the mind through which it comes. It is the human part of it that seems to us contradictory, inconsistent and imperfect, while the divine part is changeless and beautiful forever. We know there are some persons who imagine that God gave all he ever intended the world to have, to the Jews and to his eldest son, Jesus. That all that was poured out there, is fresh and good for us, and it is not necessary for the world to have any thing new.

Somewhat like they do in England, give the eldest son all the estate.

We believe that each one receives some of this divine light; that in every age this divine inspiration has fallen upon the world as the sun, that some have been able to receive more than others. Some have been especially blessed because they were more harmonious in organization, and there was a greater fitness to receive the inspirations.

We find one but what the Father loves and blesses, and teaches with his own glorious truth. So we assert that all truth is most beautiful—not only excellent but beautiful.

We may take this theory of Spiritualism, and we find those who say it is too beautiful to be true. It was just so with Universalism. One hundred years ago, a great and good man (Hosea Ballou) proclaimed the idea of Universal salvation, and men said it is too good—too beautiful to be true. The organism of that man enabled him to give forth this truth. He had been mentally prepared to receive it,—and so he declared that God is love, and his laws are changeless and perfect, however man may stray. He is always surrounded by God's love. Men said it was too good to be true. They believed that deep down in the spirit of God was a feeling of wrath and vengeance, and that he treasured it up, to pour it out upon man, but this teacher labored to proclaim this doctrine,—that Jesus came into the world to proclaim the truth, and not to die for sinners; not to be offered as a sacrifice, which was only carrying out the old idea. When they supposed God was angry, they believed they were called upon to offer sacrifices, and thus appease the same. He saw that this could not be so; he saw that Jesus was our teacher, our elder brother, who came into the world to proclaim the truth, and died as any one would have died,—who set forth that which is in advance of the people, but he did not have all the truth. He believed that there was no punishment beyond the grave, because there was so much on this side. We said before, no man is great enough to grasp all the truth, because we are all finite.

We hold that where a man died immediately after the commission of sin, he had his punishment in the pain of death, but if this is so, then little innocent children may be punished more than old persons. Some have supposed they were punished before the sea, but this cannot be so, because the result cannot come before the cause. As between the highest mountains are the deepest valleys, so those minds that have found so much, are always weighed in the balance, and found wanting in something because they are finite. Spiritualism presents these beautiful truths to man, that God's love is measureless, deeper and broader than we can comprehend; that in that love there is nothing unjust, so when Spiritualism teaches man those truths, when it brings down to him the proof that he can not die,—that his loved ones care for him and love him still—when it shows him that he must learn to live and not to die, it is then that truth is revealed to him as he progresses.

You say, Who are the Spiritualists and where are they? If you could stand as we do and look upon the world of mankind, you could point out who are Spiritualists, and you would be surprised to see how many there are in the churches and in the pulpits, though the congregation may know nothing about it. One man says, Is it not wrong for them not to stand openly and honestly before their congregations and show themselves? We say they are just taking themselves where they know by their own intuitions what is best for them to do. Sometimes we think that among certain people, who would fear nothing of Spiritualism, these ministers are putting a little leaven of Spiritualism into their congregations, and it works there silently until it leavens the whole lump. It is the new wine put into old bottles, and we are only waiting the time when we shall see the result. It is the new cloth set with the old garment, if it conceals the old rent, we are satisfied. So the good work goes on, and the hatred and fears of the people will not affect it. When the world speaks falsely of us, when they seek to hide the beautiful features of the truth, we know that they can not do it, for in time as the sunbeams gather to themselves and combine and dissolve them all, so the sunshine of truth shall change all these clouds and mists, and light shall fill the world.

How many lives do we see that seem to be made up of one vast tissue of falsehood. They never think of it themselves; they do not seem to realize how bad this is; they say their little falsehoods are scarcely accounted as anything in fashionable society, they are only white lies but those who look at them properly, will see that they are black ones,—white-washed. Whenever a man forgets in any way his own honesty and integrity, he just so far changes the purity and beauty of his spiritual nature, and when such a spirit enters the other world, where all masks and disguises fall off, how sadly they are disappointed. How they strive through days and years of patient waiting and earnest labor to bring themselves back to the purity that has passed from them, and their work will sometimes be successful, but it takes a long time.

We see persons around without taking much notice of them, but if there be a feeling of aversion, then a thousand little things that would not have been noticed, come up, and they seem absolutely fearful. You speak of these and another person takes them up, and adds a little to them, like a rolling snow ball that the boys love to play with, until at last some positive falsehood stares us in the face. Everyone knows just how this is. We have all met it sometimes in our lives. We have felt them ourselves, and know how cruel and unjust they are. Let us remember that of all weakly and diseased things in this world, lies are the most so,—they can not live only when they fly,—the moment they settle they die. In looking at these liars and slanderers, we have sometimes been reminded of the old process of making pins. The wire was passed through a machine and cut off just the right length, then it was passed to another machine and pointed, and then a little further on another put the head on it; so you find a certain process about whom you feel quite sure, you have a right to say, for the purpose,—you speak sharply of it like cutting off the wire; another person repeats and puts a point on it, and then another person takes hold of it, and puts on the head. And then it is ready to send out into the world. Now if we can all of us learn to cherish only the truth that comes to us, and that teaches us to be just and charitable, and look for the good rather than the evil, in those around us, then we shall find the beauty and excellence of truth. We know errors sometimes appear beautiful to us, but it is only as they know something here and there from truth. You know it has been said that a lie is half a truth, but you can't find the half that is true. It seems to us just like the little fire flies, that make their bright little sparks, but if you catch them they are only little black bugs.

We would have you remember then that all truth is excellent and beautiful. Let us, therefore, seek for all the truth we can, knowing that we can not have it all, and if we are satisfied today,—to-morrow we shall call for more; so striving, so grasping to understand that which our Father feeds our minds, life shall become beautiful and looking one upon another, the truth may shine over us so that we all may recognize the good and cast aside the evil.

LITERARY.

Hesperia; an Epic of the Past and Future of America. By Mrs. Cora L. V. Tappan. In one volume, 12 mo. Price $1 75.

Astrea, the Genius of Liberty and Justice, seeks a dwelling place upon the earth. Persecuted and driven about from land to land, she follows the evening star, and finds at last a beautiful kingdom in the western world; this becomes her home and the birthplace of her beloved daughter Hesperia.

Erotion, the Genius of Love and Fidelity, the husband of Astrea and father to Hesperia, after many wanderings in search, at last joins the objects of his love and care. Reunited they preside over the new land and seek to preserve its for their child's inheritance. They are recognized and cherished by a small band of devoted followers, who summon them to their councils in the city of Fraternia.

At first Liberty and Love prevail, but Astrea discovers the presence of a serpent who breathes on her a subtle poison, and she (with Erotion) is slain.

Llamia, the serpent of policy, then controls and takes in charge the beautiful child Hesperia; seeking to unite her in marriage to her foul son Slavery—who must be nameless evermore; but Hesperia is warned by the Genius of Nature, Callos, who, in the guise of a poet and magician, holds away even over Llamia. When Hesperia beholds him she recognizes her soul's counterpart, and is prepared, by his words and love, to resist all the evil machinations of Llamia and her son.

Llamia, however, holds temporary power over the form of Hesperia, and succeeds in throwing a spell around the maiden, which she vainly imagines will prove fatal; the love of her parents and of Callos rouses her spirit, and with them she withdraws into the world of souls, where, for a time, she beholds the scenes enacted under the influence of Llamia. She witnesses in Athenia and Cresceus in deeds of horror and the torture inflicted upon the oppressed. Callos sings to her in plaintive songs of these down-trodden ones, lures her by the voices of nature, and in interludes of love and truth seeks to win her back to her earthly kingdom.

Long years does Llamia hold sway, and at last wakens the voice of war; when Astrea, not dead, but only withdrawn for a space, turns the sword of Llamia upon her son.

Through long suffering is Hesperia made strong and pure. She listens to the voice of Nature's children and their tortures cease; slavery and war are known no more. Astrea and Erotion are again the attendant and abiding souls of this fair land; they witness with rapture and benedictions the union of Callos and Hesperia, who rule with undivided sway over the most lovely Empire of the Earth.

Mrs. Tappan, the authoress of this book, is widely known, and is one of our most gifted inspired speakers and writers. This work sparkles with rare gems of thought,—in fact, its pages are grandly illuminated with a light divine, and the ideas advanced, clothed in beautiful language, cannot fail to have an elevating influence. We quote the following from Part V.

HYMN TO THE ROCK OF PILGRIMS.

Proud Rock of Pilgrims, ever round thy form
Sweep surging billows, spirits of the storm;

The wild wide waves beat 'gainst thy hardened breast,
Torturing their fair bosoms with unrest;

The winged winds waft to thee from each clime
The moaning of a message all sublime;

But thou, immovable, steadfast alone,
Unmindful of the winds' and waters' moan,—

Because within thy bare and barren breast
The beatings of a mighty soul are prest. ‖

The fair, fair feet of Freedom first there trod,
And found a fitting altar for her God;

Because strange fires burn there with a new light,
Prometheus, a flame in darkest night;

Because, anew, the love of Truth and Faith
Were rescued from a dark and dreary death;

Because all nations 'neath the sun might gaze
Upon thee from the dim and distant maze

Of tyranny and wrong, and say, "Behold!
There is a miracle of love untold;

"Truth's ripened fruit doth grow, and God is God, Far o'er the seas where Freedom's feet have trod;"

Because through all the silent, startled years,
Amid great sorrows, wrongs, tortures and tears,

Thy light was quenched not, but was all aglow
With lasting flames that from Tru th's altar flow;

Because through months grown red with sin and shame,
When armed men trampled Liberty's sweet name,

And in Bellona's, she, too, and red war,
Gazed through her tears thy glowing light upon;

Because across this lingering lapse of woe,
History's wrongs, and tears, and bloody threat,

Thy sacred head is still upheld, and bows
Upon thy bosom,—for the fruit once grown,

Ripened from blood and tears that fell on thee,
Shall golden grow and ready for Liberty.

O, rock of Freedom! destined e'er to be
A light to guide man to eternity,—

A hint of that unknown and nameless shore,
Around which the Stygian waters evermore

Beat with the burdened billows of the soul's
That seek a portal to its rest goals,—

Forever and forever shall the sea
And winds all entertwined, a weep over thee;

Forever and forever shall thy fires
Consume all sordid, worldly, low desires;

Forever and forever shall God's hand
Uphold thee and through thee this sacred land.

"Hesperia" is neatly bound, printed in large, clear type, and should be in the hands of all Spiritualists. For sale at this office.

RECENT PUBLICATIONS.

Press Comments.

THE SCIENCE OF EVIL.—This is the title of a very neatly bound, 12 mo. volume, by Joel Moody. Typographically the book would be a credit to any publishing house, East or West. We consider the style of the author eminently attractive—being bold, fearless and direct. He deals with those questions of morals and sociality, which have so widely and deeply engrossed the attention of the best men of every school of philosophy and religious opinion, with a calmness seldom met with in any writer on such subjects. Indeed, the thoughts expressed throughout the work, seem to be those of an honest, earnest mind, that has observed with calmness and sagacity the various perplexities of every-day life. The work is highly philanthropic and reformatory in character, and will be very much prized among all classes of really progressive people. It is a work that will meet with warm friends and bitter enemies. No time-server nor worshiper at the shrine of antiquated custom, will be an admirer of the book, because it arraigns and convicts before the bar of common sense and the nature of things, many of the popular follies and abused notions of the day.—Topeka, Kas., Record.

Rebecca; or a Woman's Secret, by Mrs. Caroline F. Corbin.

There are power, and genius, and art, and skill, and passion, in this book, besides the mental stability, and clear insight, and vehement protest, and imperfectly defined longing, that show it to be the work of a woman busy with the great problems which the country can not escape, and which it is resolutely attempting to solve.—The Morning Star, N. H.

Henry Ward Beecher in a sermon said: "Some believe that those bodies of ours shall rise again, but not I." And, as he spoke, he rapped on the desk in a manner that said as plainly as could be, that he had no patience with such a doctrine. "What the earth takes, let it keep. There's a natural body and a spiritual body, and 'flesh and blood,' says the apostle, 'shall not inherit the kingdom of God.' Good-by, old body, good-by."

Phenomenal.

BRINKLEY COLLEGE GHOST STORY.

The Solution of this Startling Mystery—Confession of the Jar made Known—Arrest of the Men who Stole it—Affidavits of those Engaged in Digging for the Jar.

We herewith present our readers with the solution of the Brinkley College ghost story, which created such wide-spread excitement throughout the country upon its first announcement. The story was at first looked upon as a hoax by many, but we have received letters from several persons of high standing in the city of Memphis, verifying its truthfulness, and we below present our readers with the affidavits of those persons who were prominently connected with the affair, who vouch for the truthfulness of all that we have published in regard to it.

We published the opening chapters of this thrilling narrative in Nos. 1 and 3 of Vol. X, of the JOURNAL, to which we refer our readers. In No. 4 of this volume, we gave an account of the loss of the mysterious jar,—Mr. Robertson being seriously injured at the time by the ruffians who abstracted it. Why they took the jar is still a matter of conjecture. It would seem at first sight that they were prompted to do so solely with the desire to secure the money and other valuables which it was supposed to contain, but some of our correspondents have hinted that the orthodoxy, who are always on the alert to crush anything which may dare to raise a voice in objection to them, had a hand in it. Be this as it may, however, the jar has been recovered, and the contents have been made known to the world.

Since the publication of the first chapter, we have received numerous letters of inquiry as to why sixty days should elapse before the jar was opened. To this, we can only say, that it was probably done in order to give public excitement, which was wrought to a very high pitch, time to subside, in a manner which would certainly seem to be very desirable at that time. The extracts given below are made from a pamphlet published by Mr. J. R. Robertson, father of Clara, who is the central figure in this matter. This little work, which contains the entire history of the case, can be procured of him, at Memphis, Tennessee; price, 30 cents.

From the Avalanche, March 3d.

"How about that ghost?" was the question which the man about town encountered now at every turn; "and that jar—did you see it? what was it like? Was it a family jar? Was there any whisky in it?"

All day long, and all through the night, "the ghost" was talked of wherever one chanced to go, and "ghost" with a spoon in it was the favorite beverage in every bar-room. Steamboats went out of port with special shadows about them, and men as they walked through the streets last night, dodged at every alley or open door-way, while children cried in terror if left for a moment alone. Groups discussed the marvelous occurrences at almost every corner of the streets, and various were the theories suggested, and wonderful the experiences related. One theory concerning the alleged finding of the [illegible] that Mr. Robertson was simply making sport of his daughter Clara, and [illegible] the kind indicated would have the effect of restoring her to her senses, and in this connection the matter of "sixty days" was held up with the idea that then the ghost would come to give the child time to recover from the depression and nervousness superinduced by the ghostly visitations of the past two weeks. But against this it was argued that it was an unnecessary proceeding on the part of Mr. R., to go in the dead of night, in company with the wierd woman and the old digger as described, to dig for the secret in the presence of a large crowd of people, when a glass jar, brought sealed from some corner grocery, would have answered the purpose as well, so far as any knowledge Clara could possibly have is concerned.

Mr. Robertson, however, regardless of all the cries and fancies, avows most sacredly, that the jar was found by him in the excavation, and it may have been there since the deluge, for all he knows to the contrary. He had but one opinion on the subject, he said, and that he did not volunteer to express.

The possibility of some "jolly fellows" having placed the jar in the excavation for him to find, he would not entertain for a moment. He found it, he said, under the instructions received at the seance on Monday night, and is satisfied. Besides, if he would decieve his child, where is the necessity of also deceiving the public?

The jar found by Mr. Robertson was about twelve inches in height by ten in diameter, and of thin glass, such as is commonly used by druggists and confectioners; the top is sealed closely, and the weight of the whole is about six pounds. It was deposited in a place of safety known only to Mr. Robertson and his daughter. Its possession apparently relieved the child of all supernatural influences.

The age and evident innocence of the child disarms every suspicion that she is the tool of designing persons, and nearly every body inclines to the belief that she has had visions of the mind's eye, if not in reality. Her deep earnestness, truthfulness, and piety are spoken of by all to whom she is known, and with none does she stand in higher esteem than with the inmates and habitues of Brinkley College.

The spectre as described by Clara was unsightly and terrible. It was in the form of a child of eight or nine years of age, dressed in faded pink, covered with a slimy greenish mold, which seemed to speak of the tenements of the dead. It wore also rusty shoes and mildewed stockings. The head, neck, arms, and such portions of the form as were exposed to Clara's view, seemed to be of transparent skin, encasing bones and sinews entirely fleshless. In speech it was always mild and gentle, with at times a touch of earnest persuasion. It gave the name of L'zzie Davie, in writing, on two occasions. It is singular, to say the least, that a child of that name was once an inmate of the building, and died there in 1861,—so we are informed by old citizens, one of whom, a prominent telegraph operator, claims to have recollection of much talk some years ago, condemning the title to the estate.

It is impossible to convey more than a faint idea of the sensation created by this singular affair since the first publication, which brought about the following letter to the Avalanche, dated March 7th, 1871:

Editor Avalanche: In your issue of Sunday, March [illegible], I noticed an unwarranted use of my name in connection with the Brinkley Female [illegible] ghost story. I write this to correct the [illegible] made in the statement that I have at any time seen even the shadow of a ghost, or heard any unaccountable sound about our usually quiet college. Miss Robertson at one time came into the music-room, apparently very much excited, but having never given credit to the story of the ghost, I neither went back with her to her practice room, or sent any one else; and the only wish that I have heard expressed by the pupils of the Brinkley College, is, that the citizens of Memphis would stay at home and allow us to go on quietly with our own affairs, and not undermine us.

We do not believe in ghosts, and as the statement limited our number of pupils to fifty, I think I can safely say that forty-nine out of the fifty are disbelievers.

MISS JACKIE BOONE.

Mr. Meredith's letter which, like Miss Boone's, was written before the finding of the glass jar, is as follows:

BRINKLEY COLLEGE, March, 5th, 1871.

Dear Avalanche: Please let me speak for myself about "ghosts." I have lived in this college two and a half years, and have seen no ghosts worse than a "lien" creditor, from time to time; nor is there an "inmate" of this house who has seen or heard anything strange, except what we have learned from persons outside of our lot, and from your "visionary" reporters. Miss Robertson, who lives in the city, did see "sights" here, and she can see them anywhere, for she takes her ghosts with her, and I leave medical men to dispose of her case scientifically. A "spirit" in the city ordered a stump to be dug up in our garden, which was badly done up" this morning by "enterprising" men. I do not believe in ghosts, mediums, or anything the devil can get up,—though getting up stumps is rather uncommon for him. But gentlemen, this rumor is well-calculated to injure a college, which has many enemies simply because it has low prices, and because it believes the Bible should be the first and last text book in every pupil's hand; and hence we hope that every newspaper in the city to which we are indebted, will follow out their noble impulses, and send our bills receipted, to indemnify us for this late "unpleasantness."

Your obedient servant,

J. D. MEREDITH.

The following is an anonymous letter published in the Appeal March 5th, 1871:

Editor Appeal: I wish to ask your pardon for intruding this letter on your valuable space. I am the more particularly induced to do this, because it happens to be a subject that you have very properly, and with becoming dignity and decency, passed silently over during the female excitement of the last four or five days. This communication is about that "ghost."

I bought a pamphlet at Mansfield's this evening, which gives an account of that revelation(?) from beginning to end, if the end is yet. I read it through carefully, and must confess that the excitement in the female community had some excuse after pondering on that sort of a "get up."

I was out of town, thank Providence, during those exciting days; but as I was passing Grenada, Miss., coming home, I met a friend, and he asked me in astonishment, "Why, you are not going to town, are you? The people are all crazy there; they have gone wild about a ghost; my wife has had the doctor attending her ever since Sunday evening, and she has swallowed about a quart of Dovegs powders."

I smiled at this, but when I reached the city I found my own wife sick, and my two eldest girls writing poetry about pink ghosts and Elected lightning. I found it necessary to look into this business a little, and with all proper deference to every body's feelings, I must say the affair is a shame and a disgrace to those who originated this big bugbear.

From the best information I can get,—and I am in a position to learn something of the inside history of this event,—I believe there was an abnormal condition of the nervous system in the [illegible] of the [illegible] when Dr. Earle held forth at the Greenlaw some time ago, this little girl got religion, and since that time has been sympathetically affected, by a power not altogether celestial. Two weeks ago before anything publicly was known about this thing, that girl had been seeing daily and nightly visions of all sorts, at home, as well as in school. She would not sleep alone in the night. At one time she saw the ghost of Mr. Peabody, the philanthropist, who told her that he intended to endow the Brinkley College with a yearly revenue of twenty-five thousand dollars, and that he had made out the papers, but his physician gave him a dose of hydrate of chloral, took the papers out of his hand, and has them yet. The physician's name is White, and he lives at 390 Hyde Park, London. He is a little florid man, with high cheek bones, a small black eye, and grey bristly hair, and has a family of ten children. This was the first serious vision that I have heard of as coming through the astonishingly piercing ken of this child. After that, she had various tabulated visions of a religious character, and finally came to the pink infant with its marvelous revelations about documents. Those revelations came first full thirty days ago. I was in town at the time myself, and heard about it. Plenty of people knew of it, but every one of my acquaintances, without any exception, looked upon this as a peculiar aberration of mind. A Spanish-fly blister was prescribed for the back of the child's neck, combined with an internal mercurial treatment. But this was considered too severe, and would not be adopted. Then, as a sort of compromise, the doctor recommended perfect quiet, with a diet of mash and milk, but the young lady continued to go to school and to see visions. Now, to show you that this thing is purely a sort of physical weakness, it is only necessary to say that the teacher of the girl's brother in the Linden street school, will attest the truth of the fact that he is subject to a sort of nervous derangement unlike anything that I have ever had under their observation. The manifestations of this derangement are not unfrequent, and often take the form of "fits," which was the name his schoolfellows gave his little idiosyncracies, though the doctors say they were nothing of the sort.

Those pink visions concerning the stump and the "documents," were old at the time the midnight excavations commenced. I told you about the strange child in the office of the Appeal, in the first part of the week, the night before I went to Mississippi. I also mentioned to you how these things, which we all consider infirmities, were sought to be kept private until the young lady should "get over" her complaints. What has induced this operation of Saturday night, I cannot say. Why they were not commenced ten days before, is unaccountable to me unless the Mrs. Nourse, the old woman from St. Louis, commenced operations on older heads than the child's or whether it was a masterly stroke to put an end to the whole series of visions in the mind of the child; but then as long as the "jar" happened to be in the female public mind, I may be pardoned for demanding answers to the following queries:

Was not that peach preserve jar bought at Jack's china store at nine o'clock on Monday morning? Did not the colored woman who was sent for that jar get an old one dollar bill, with a rent in it, to pay for her purchase? Was one not told, when she brought home, that the old five cents was too much for it? Was it not "fixed up" at the hour of twelve, on Monday, in a certain back parlor? and was not the sealing-wax purchased at Young's bankrupt sale? Does not that jar, as it is now, weigh about two avoirdupois? Is there not a small package of No. 2 shot in it? Are not the papers composed of the following documents: five blank forms for attachment; three sheets of legal cap, upon which is written an old case in the Chancery court; a "wish bone," done up in tissue paper, overlapped with note paper; an old compatition of the child's, covering four pages of letter paper; a little box for holding a gold ring, covered in white tea paper, and a sheet of music—"Lay me in my little bed"—folded four times? Did not Mrs. Nourse carry that jar down to the hole, under her cloak? Were not the colored excavators instructed to say that they saw the jar while it was digging for it, and that it moved away from them, and then they jumped out of the hole in apparent fright? Did not the programme—whatever was the object of it—include the moving of the crowd away from the hole, while the previously appointed finder should go in and get it? What was all this done for? As soon as the ceremonies had been properly gone through with, according to ghostly rite, was not the little visionary sent from home? Why not before?

I just make bold enough to ask these questions, because the matters touched upon, have become subjects of public discussion, without a word of protest or condemnation from the parties behind the scenes. A number of our weak-minded population have been imposed upon, and as it is the chivalrous duty of the strong to protect the weak,—whether the assault be aimed at their minds, their affections, or their persons,—in their behalf I speak. A public ghost of indignation has been invoked, which will not down under the influence of bottled, or any other sort of spirits.

Perhaps the diligent searchers into the "angel world" could tell what it was that moved the child's chair in Townsend's house the other night, when she sat with her little feet upon the cross-bar, and her hands meekly folded upon her breast, and the chair with its gentle burden stepped from the wall over to the table in the middle of the room. Was the pink ghost under that chair, or did the "medium" from St. Louis manipulate the transaction? What was done by the "medium" at Robertson's last night? I received a verbal "invite" to attend that seance—"for the purpose of seeing with your own eyes what she can do"—to recieve ocular and auricular and nasal demonstration. I suppose, that she can do a thing or two in the way of calling up "spirits" from the vasty deep. Was this delving at the stump, by the pale, silvery light of the moon, a sort of clever advertising dodge for the regular operations of the "medium," which are now regularly to follow?

The arrangements for thirteen meetings, to take place between now and the appointed time of the big parturition have been perfected, and the persons, to the number of four hundred, who are to be invited, are noted down. Some of those thus fixed upon would be astonished to know that they are the objects of so much attention and consideration. They are not to be notified until it is thought that the proper impression is made.

I have merely glanced at a little part of the inside machinery of this thing. I may write you more of the "lying wonders" in a day or two. In the meantime permit me to suggest to your female readers to possess their souls in peace, and, when you are engaged in the womanly occupation of cooking, not to put too much lard in the biscuit, for it has an astonishingly bad effect on the diabolical apparatus, and through that upon the brain, and through the brain upon the ghost cognizing powers.

The above correspondence elicited the following from Mr. J. R. Robertson:

To the Editors of the Appeal:—Allow me, through the columns of your excellent paper, a reply to the knowing correspondent who [illegible] in this [illegible] but [illegible] etc.

[illegible] word, at least every proposition, in said communication so far as the same relates to my little daughter, Clara,—who, by the way, has been entirely prominently connected with the "Brinkley College Ghost" story,—is utterly false and unfounded in truth. I, however, do not say that your correspondent is the originator of those falsehoods, or that he has wantonly or maliciously perpetrated them, and before I shall have done with this article, I will give him a full and fair opportunity to make good the many statements made by him.

He starts out by saying:

"I believe there is an abnormal condition of the system at the bottom of it."

In reply to this, I would simply ask Mr. Anonymous, who are you? what are you? from whence came you and whither are you sending? Are you a disciple of Erriascopilus, and have you gone down into the depths of physical science so as to enable you to form, mature, and deliver an opinion as to the physical condition of a patient whom you have never seen, much less examined? or have you read Dr. Gunn's work or Thompson's treatise of Lobelia and Wake Robbin? Who are you? I assert that the public may know whether or not the voluntary opinion you so freely offer is worthy of reliance.

You also say that this little girl attended Dr. Earle's revival and got religion, etc.

This is not so. Long before Dr. Earle came here, she was a member of the M. E. Church, at Asbury Chapel, as is known to that whole congregation, and especially to the excellent pastor of that church, Rev. L. D. Mullins, and I refer to him and to every member of the church, that she has at no time since her connection with it, manifested any unusual interest on the subject; simply attending the regular meetings of the church, in the still, calm, and dignified way characteristic of her deportment in all the varied walks of life.

You say for one whole month she had been seeing ghosts and refusing to sleep alone, etc.

How in the name of all that is sacred did you get into the private affairs of my family? Have you secreted yourself in some private corner, and watched, like the ghost of Hamlet's father, the movements of my children when they are retiring to their beds of straw? or have you, like the Witch of Endor, sprung up in the midst of the family circle, and taken notes of what you say is true? Surely, this is news to us. We now learn for the first time, that Clara had ever seen or heard anything like a ghost, until some three weeks since, which was the commencement of the wonderful development at Brinkley College.

You say that the ghost of Peabody, who told her that he, with his great heart of hearts, was going to endow Brinkley College with $25,000, visions of Hyde Park and the little florid man, etc., all of which is, no doubt, the fruitful imaginations of the wonderfully productive brain of the Lewis Doctor. It is utterly false. No such thing has ever occurred, as Clara, herself, who never speaks at random, will fully attest; and as to the medical prescription of Spanish flies, that is also false, no physician having been called to see Clara, or to prescribe for her since September, 1867, at which time she had chills, and was treated by Dr. W. B. Jones, now of Caledonia, Arkansas.

As to the affliction of my little son, whose misfortunes are to be attested by the teacher of the Linden street school, I have only to say, [illegible] he was six months old, owing to a [illegible] of a nurse, or some [illegible] but physicians have as yet failed to discover, he is subjected to spasm at irregular intervals, from the effects of which his mind is to some extent impaired. But accidents happen in the best regulated families, and my anonymous friend is unfortunately the husband of a wife that gets sick from the effects of hearing ghost stories, sends for the doctor, and drinks Dover's powders. He also has two promising daughters, who look through the damask clad windows of his stately mansion in the direction of Brinkley College, dream of little specters in pink habiliments, and become mournfully inspired with poetic effusions, and, perhaps, it is these "rapt" hallucinations that have so assiduously been attempted to be kept secret, for I am sure we have no such secrets in our family.

And now to the queries, which I propose to answer categorically, as near as I am able.

Q. Was not that peach preserve jar bought at Jack's china store, at 9 o'clock Monday morning?

A. I do not know.

Q. Did not the colored woman who was sent for the jar get an old one dollar bill with a rent in it to pay for the jar?

A. I do not know; but will state that I have no colored woman at my place or under my control, nor have I had since last fall.

Q. Was it not fixed up at twelve o'clock on Monday, in a certain back parlor, and was not the sealing-wax purchased at Young's bankrupt sale?

A. We have no back parlor, and neither myself, nor any person for me, has bought anything at Young's sale, except some paper and envelopes presented to me by a friend.

Q. Does not the jar as it now is, weigh about two pounds avoirdupois?

A. I have not weighed it.

Q. Is there not a package of No. 2 shot in it?

A. I can not tell, not having seen the contents except through the jar's covering.

Q. Are not the papers composed of the following documents: five blank forms for attachments, three sheets legal cap, upon which is written an old case in the Chancery Court, etc.

A. No such things are visible through the jar. The papers appear to be old printed matter, and a yellow envelope well nigh decayed.

Q. Did not Mrs. Nourse carry that jar down to the hole, under her cloak?

A. She did not. She had no cloak; simply a light shawl over her head and shoulders. I was with her from the time she started until the jar was found, and if she had had the jar, I could and would have seen it.

Q. Were not the colored excavators instructed to say that they saw the jar while they were digging? that it moved away from them, and that they jumped out of the hole in apparent affright?

A. No; after the jar was found, one of the negroes said that while he was digging on Sunday night, he saw the same jar, but failed to get it.

Q. Did not the programme, whatever was the object of it, include the moving the crowd away from the hole, while the previously appointed finder should go and get it?

A. No; nor was there any programme of which I have any knowledge, nor did I expect to see any person there. When Mrs. Nourse saw the crowd, consisting of some forty or fifty persons, crowding close around the diggers, she was frightened, and refused to go to the place until they were requested to get back, which was done, and all except the three diggers withdrew a few steps from the place.

Q. As soon as the ceremonies were gone through with according to ghostly rite, was not the little visionary sent from home?

A. I am not familiar with the ceremonies of which you ask, if there be such. I did send Clara away some few hours before the finding of the excitement as possible, fearing that she might see the pink specter again, and become poetically inclined.

Q. Why not before?

A. I saw no necessity for it.

If I am the party alluded to as being behind the scenes, and whether I am or not, I assume the responsibility to reply, and place myself prominently before the public under my own proper signature, and defend my child and all others attacked, from the scurrillous and unprovoked abuses contained in said letter; and inform your correspondents, that from the incipiency of this mysterious proceeding, I have stood in the front rank, and battled for the celestials of the public mind, as I could. But public sentiment was too strong for me. Excitement seized the reins and drove off the chariot.

And now in conclusion, Mr. Editor, I propose to ask your correspondent a few questions; and you having vouched for him as a gentleman, surely he will not refuse to answer us fully and faithfully as I have done:

1. Are you a physician? If so, what is the meaning of abnormal, when applied to the human system, and what are are its effects?

2. Have you ever examined my daughter Clara to see if she was then affected? If so, when, where, and at whose request?

3. Have you present or Dr. Earle's revival when she got religion? If so, where was it?

4. Has she been strongly affected for two whole months prior to the present excitement? If so, how do you know? Give names, etc.

5. Did you ever see, or report to have seen, the ghost of Peabody? If so, when, and who is your authority?

6. Did any physician recommend a blister of Spanish flies to be put on the back of her neck? If so, what physician? Were you present, or how do you know?

7. Have you ever seen her in your life? If so, when, and where?

8. Are you not some quack employed to counteract the excitement now prevailing in the city?

Answer the foregoing questions satisfactorily, or write no more.

Respectfully,

J. R. ROBERTSON.

Editor Avalanche:—I had hoped and most ardently desired, that nothing should occur connected with the Brinkley College ghost story, now so fully before the public, that would render it necessary for me even to explain, my name being closely connected with the affair from the beginning, most of which has been faithfully detailed in the Avalanche. But I see a letter in this morning's Avalanche from Mr. Meredith, in which he refers to me in the following language:

"A spirit in the city ordered a stump to be dug up in our garden, which was badly done up this morning by enterprising men."

I wish to state in reference to the digging up of the stump, that after the excited operations of Saturday night—in which a few gentlemen participated, and several excited ladies were looking on—had proved unavailing; after the excitement of Sunday, consequent upon the narration in Sunday morning's Avalanche of the proceeding of the previous night had caused thousands of the citizens to visit the spot, where, doubtless, many of them expected to see the ghost, loaded down with treasures of gold and platters of silver; after I had been interviewed, examined, catechised, interrogated, and even questioned by at least one thousand men,—including newspaper reporters, editors, doctors, lawyers, preachers, merchants, tradesmen, mechanics, laborers, to say nothing of two thousand women, children, and negroes of all shades, from the saffron to the darkest ebon color, and endeavored to answer civilly at least ten thousand questions,—I did think it was time to dig up the balance of the old stump, and so reported to Mr. Meredith. I told him I thought public sentiment demanded it, and while I had no faith in the operation, that the question would not be satisfactorily settled until it was done, to which he replied that he was of the same opinion, and had intended to go and see me in reference to it, and with this mutual agreement and understanding between us, in the presence of Mrs. Meredith and others, I did send some negroes to complete the work, with instructions to report to me at my house if they made any discoveries, but they have not yet reported. I make this statement to place myself in a proper light before the public, and to show that I was acting in concert with Mr. M., trying more to satisfy the public mind, and, if possible, pour oil on the troubled waters, rather than gratify a curiosity I really did not have.

As to his insinuation in the same letter, that my daughter was influenced by the devil, I leave the public to judge as between her and Mr. Meredith.

J. R. ROBERTSON.

Memphis, Tenn., Mar. 8, 1871.

J. R. ROBERTSON, ESQ:—DEAR SIR—Having learned that the health and quiet of the nervous system of your daughter, Miss Clara, is being rapidly restored, and that the opening of the mysterious jar found at Brinkly College may be looked for at an early day, and feeling a deep and abiding interest in the wonderful results that may follow, we take the liberty respectfully to request that the jar shall be opened publicly, in the presence of all who may desire to see the same. We leave it for you, however, to make your own arrangements, but simply suggest that the largest house in the city will be too small to accommodate the multitude who await the farther developments of this wonderful mystery. Hoping that in considering this request you will be governed by the same spirit that has characterized your course through this terrible excitement up to the present, we are your most obedient servants, T. W. Miller, A. Mateo, G. W. F. Cook, B. F. Boon, W. Chase, Francis Foster, J. W. Fagate, John C. Mills, A. W. Newsom, E. Golden, R. S. Capers, John Ingalls, Robert Peplow, John Linkhauer, Frank Bras, J. B. Hays, Peter Townsend, Thomas Fox, W. J. Chase, W. W. Hinkle, E. Marshall, W. S. J. Adams, T. P. Chambers.

Memphis, March 14, 1871.

Messrs. T. W. Miller and others: Gentlemen—Your request through Sunday's Avalanche that the mysterious jar should be publicly opened, was duly noticed, but I have delayed answering until now, not through any discourtesy on my part, but to enable myself to give you a full and satisfactory answer. From the commencement of this wonderful excitement, it has been my constant desire to give to the public every thing within my knowledge, that would contribute in the least to the settlement of the many perplexing questions connected with the affair, and for this purpose have subjected my little daughter and also myself, to the most rigid and thorough examinations, answering all questions, whether legal, journalistic or otherwise, as fully and satisfactory as we were able. And now, believing that you represent the wishes of a very large majority of the citizens of Memphis and surrounding country, whatever my individual preference may be in the matter, I must comply with your request. I propose to open the jar at the Greenlaw Opera House on Thursday evening, the 30th inst. But as this exhibition must necessarily be attended with considerable expense, no part of which are we able to pay, we propose to sell tickets at one dollar, and appropriate the proceeds as follows:

1st. The payment of all expenses necessarily incurred in the exhibition.

2nd. Divide the remainder equally, and appropriate one-half for the benefit of the Orphans' Home, and the other half to Miss Clara. With this proposition, should it turn out that the jar contains nothing valuable, one-half of your money, at least, is well spent, and the other half will not poorly compensate Clara for her suffering and annoyance during this excitement. Hoping this arrangement may meet your entire approval,

I am, very respectfully,

J. R. ROBERTSON.

Memphis, March 23d, 1871.

After I had received this communication, I determined to comply with the request, but then another question arose as to how I could defray the expenses necessarily incident to such an exhibition, without charging an admission fee, not having funds sufficient to devote to that purpose. Just at this juncture I was visited at my office by two of the most estimable ladies of Memphis, angels I might say, in human form, messengers of love and mercy, good Samaritan's who bind up the wounds of the afflicted, mothers in fact, looking after the interests of the desolate, going into the highways and hedges, and caring for the poor and forsaken; with hearts deeply impressed with the importance of their mission, and hands ready to perform the work, they informed me that they had under their care about thirty orphan children, aged respectfully from ten months to ten years, for whom they must necessarily provide, and desired to share the proceeds of the opening of the jar, that they might appropriate it to that purpose; proposing at the same time to share the responsibilities of procuring a hall and other incidental expenses. To have refused them, would have been to have revolted against every principle of humanity, which I might have been my purpose before such a request, coming from such a source presented with such earnestness and power, must and will prevail. I consented to give them half of the proceeds, and after arranging a few necessary preliminaries, addressed to the Avalanche the following note:

Editors Avalanche:—Having made my proposition as published in yesterday's Avalanche, to divide the proceeds of the Ghost Jar opening with Miss Clara, meets with some opposition, I herewith withdraw the same, and place the entire proceeds in the hands of the lady managers of the Church Orphan Home, subject to their disposal. During the exhibition, Miss Clara, assisted by Mrs. Nourse, and other well known mediums, will give a seance on the stage for the purpose of testing her wonderful powers as a clairvoyant.

J. R. ROBERTSON.

March 25th, 1871.

On the next day I was again visited by those ladies, and after having duly considered the arrangement of the previous day, and finding some objections thereto, determined to give them the entire proceeds, they addressed to the Avalanche the following note:

Editors Avalanche:—Will you be kind enough to announce in your paper that Mr. Robertson, father of Miss Clara, has generously concluded to devote the whole of the proceeds of admission at the opening of the Brinkley College Ghost Jar, on Tuesday night next, at the Greenlaw Opera House, to the Church Orphan's Home, and that the donation is accepted on behalf of the institution.

MRS. W. S. PICKETT, President.

MRS. A. K. TAYLOR, Vice-President.

The arrangements being perfected, it only remained to secure the Opera House, procure tickets, and proceed at the appointed time to open the mysterious jar. But, alas! our troubles are not yet ended, although we had passed through the fiery ordeal of the most fierce and unrelenting persecution, while the voice of the vilest slanderer had ceased not to echo from the sea-bound shores of the East, to the golden valleys of the West. .

Although we had perfected our plans thus far, and the hope of speedy deliverance from our troubles was inspiring us to still nerve more. Yet we were doomed to learn that behind the throne was a power that even woman, with all her loveliness and virtue ministering, as only WOMAN can, to the wants of the living, cooling the fevered parched lips of the dying, and following to their last resting place the remains of the dead, dare not come in contact.

The Bishop disapproves the entire programme, and with one fell swoop of his mortal pen, disorganizes the whole ghost fraternity, and does not so much as call at our sanctum, and pass his hands over us, or direct us to wash our hands in the river Jordon, or send his man Friday to apprise us of our horrible fate, but notifies the world in general, and mankind in particular, through the Appeal, that the contribution proposed would not be accepted.

Editors Appeal:—Will you kindly inform the public that the exhibition announced for Thursday night next, at the Greenlaw Opera House, not being approved, no part of the proceeds will be accepted by the Church Home.

C. T. QUINTARD,
Pres't Board Managers.

Episcopal Residence, March 27.

To relieve us, however, from this dilemma, that great and noble physician, that true patriotic spirit that bows only to the God that gave it, Dr. A. K. Taylor, assumed the responsibility on behalf of his excellent wife, and undertook to distribute the funds for the benefit of the suffering of the city. From the time the communication requesting the opening of the jar in public appeared, he was in daily receipt of letters, warning him not to attempt such a proceeding, least his life and the life of Clara should pay the forfeit. In addition to this he was repeatedly admonished by friends, that a deeply concerted plan had been concocted, which was to result in the capture of the jar before it reached the Greenlaw Opera House, to all of which, however, he gave but little credence, and still persisted in carrying out his published programme. And now, without stopping to notice the many vague undefined theories that have been advanced, relative to the ghost, the jar, the Brinkley property, etc; we must close this little narrative after adducing our proof as to one or two points. And, first, as to the finding the jar, that it was found as heretofore published in the Avalanche.

We assert, without the shadow of a fear of successful contradiction, but for the benefit of skeptics and unbelievers, insert the following affidavits:

STATE OF TENNESSEE,
SHELBY COUNTY.

Personally appeared before me, John E. Burke, J. P., for said county, William Taylor, Joseph L. Pierson, and Ransom Christopher, who, being duly sworn, deposes as follows to wit: States, that on the 8th of March, inst., they were employed by J. R. Robertson to assist in digging up a stump near Brinkley Female College, in the city of Memphis, that they did so assist and finished the work as directed but failed to find the treasure supposed to be there. That on the evening of the 6th, which was the ensuing evening, they were again employed by said Robertson to dig against at the same place, but were instructed to dig over a certain brick work that had been discovered while making the excavation the previous evening, that they went to the place and commenced to dig as instructed, that when they had gone down about two and a half feet, said Robertson, accompanied by Mrs. Nourse, came to them; that Mrs. Nourse remarked that the instructions were for Mr. Robertson to dig himself. Whereupon said Robertson took off his coat, got into the place already dug out, and commenced to dig, and after he had descended about one foot, found a glass jar under a portion of said brick work, and dug it out. It was picked up by Mrs. Nourse, and the whole crowd, consisting of some fifty persons, proceeded to Robertson's house, where quite a number, including ourselves, examined said jar. Affiant states that from the time said Robertson took the spade out of Taylor's hand until the jar was dug up, they were within four or five feet of him, watching every spade full of dirt that was taken up, and knows that there was no deception, on the part of Robertson as to the finding of the same. Affiants further state that they were also within a few feet of Mrs. Nourse during the time that Robertson was digging, and knows that she had on no cloak or other garment with which she concealed said jar. That she wore a light shawl over her head; and could not possibly have concealed the jar under it, and beside that she had no possible chance to have deposited said jar under the brick, from where it was taken after she came. Affiants further state that they have no interest in the jar or its contents.

JOSEPH L. PIERSON.
WILLIAM TAYLOR.
RANSOM CHRISTOPHER.

Sworn to and subscribed before me, this 27th day of March, 1871.

JOHN E. BURKE, J. P.

This is to certify that I was called to see Mr. J. R. Robertson on the night of the 28th of March, and found that he had a wound, I think an incision, on the forehead, also saw bruises on the abdomen from which he seemed to suffer very much; also was called some days afterward, and found that he was suffering from gastric troubles. H. J. SHAW, M. D.

I am a policeman; went to the house of J. R. Robertson, at No 261 DeSoto street, on the night of the 28th of March, some time after he was hurt, found him on the bed with a cut on his head. Went into his back-yard, in company with Mr. McAliff, another policeman, examined the premises; found in the back lot, near a stable, the tracks of three men, who had come in at the back end of the lot and passed out the same way. One of the tracks was that of a large boot or coarse shoe, very broad; another looked like a common boot track, and the other a fine boot. We got a light and examined the tracks carefully. Saw no persons and made no arrests.

PAT. MCELROY.

I was present at the house of J. R. Robertson on the night of the 28th of March, seated in the parlor; heard an excitement in the back yard; went out in company with several others; met several parties conveying him into the house; he was in a state of entire insensibility. I examined for pulse, found none; administered restoratives; examined a cut on his head that was then bleeding; after some time he was partially restored. I helped him up, and he vomited blood. Dr. Shaw was sent for and came before he was fully restored to consciousness.

J. B. HAYS.

And now, reader, it only remains for us to give the contents of the mysterious jar, and there is a prospect of securing its captors, as revealed to Miss Clara while in an entranced state with a view solely to that object. The jar contained two thousand dollars in gold, one set of gold jewelry and diamond necklace. The paper envelope contained valuable papers, the contents of which we deem unimportant to publish at present. The portraits of the four captors were portrayed to her mind with such vivid, life-like accuracy as to enable her at a glance to recognize one of them, and write his name with unmistakeable certainty. The name of one other has since been obtained, and every possible means are being employed to bring the thieves to justice.

ON THE DEFENSIVE.

By J. Tinney.

It is asserted as a matter of history that the early Christians considered it justifiable to propagate any amount of falsehood for Christ's sake, but we did not expect to see Spiritualists accept that doctrine as necessary to sustain their cause. A few years since, a zealous brother would have expelled us from the columns of the JOURNAL for doubting the existence of a Supreme Being, and still later we are accused by the same, of asserting that the being whose existence we had doubted, was developed from the lowest forms of matter. And now comes a sister, and after admitting all for which we ever contended, that nature is in perfect balance—we quote her own words—and drags in a Deity to destroy it, and then accuses us, in company with others, of the horrid crime of opposing dark circles, when we never have knowingly written one word for or against circles of any kind, but have ever directed our feeble efforts against that which has made the female a secondary personage, the slave and plaything of the male, with but few rights that he is bound to respect; an aristocracy of one over the other, of the positive over the negative; or in religious parlance, of spirit over matter. This we deny, and have exhausted what little ingenuity we possess, in trying to get Spiritualists to point out our errors, only to be misrepresented, when the sum total of our offense consists in asserting that existence is based on a balance of powers represented in the sexes, and that balance produces by interchange, each sex being an inversion of the other, and that existence is derived from the elementary ocean in which worlds float, instead of being the product of supreme power. As well assert a supreme drop in an ocean of water, as a Supreme Being in this elementary ocean.

What we do claim is that the universe is a perfect balance of opposing forces, and that belief in a Deity destroys that balance wherever it obtains, and is the producing cause of untold mischief. If we are wrong, why not give the evidence, instead of accusing us of that we never thought of? If we are rightly informed, the cable that unites Europe with America, is worked by a dark circle. The operator who receives the messages being in a dark room, and transmitting them to the sender outside. The visible and invisible are ever interchanging, and become one by interchange. It is this principle that we contend for, Mrs. Wilcox—we do not lead or be led. It is for us to demonstrate that the base on which the despotisms and monarchies of this world are founded—belief in a supreme power—is insufficient to sustain a government founded on the inalienable rights of man, and whether sensible or not, we are ready to meet all opposition on this issue, not religion on our own, but the strength of our position. If you think that is weak, assail it—we shall ever be found ready to stand or fall with it.

Westfield, N. Y., May 15th, 1871.

The Hollow Globe.

FRIEND SHERMAN:—I have not my former mutual power to read any book, but have read "The Hollow Globe" with more than common interest, that is, several chapters of it. Shall read it through by and by—can't read much at a time. It is probable the main idea of the book will soon be proved or disproved. Late discoveries have made the north pole a great mystery to me. I can not understand on old principles, how an open sea is possible there, yet it has been proved.

The book does blow up the igneous theory. I do not believe the center of our earth is a mass of fire. Volcanoes and earthquakes do not come from such a source. So I think.

The work is strong in exposing the folly of those old ideas. The priests must find some other place to send sinners than through the craters into the center of the earth. But I am not able to form any opinion on many of these subjects. Am too broken in mind. Many thanks for the book.

The chapter on forces is too deep and intricate for my weak memory. Much of it is new, and requires much steady thought to form an opinion on it. Have read it with increasing interest, but am more and more incompetent to do justice by the work, either in eulogy or criticism. I hope it may be extensively read by stronger minds than mine. I would like to write on its idea of eternal progression, but am wholly unable at present. May refer to it in a line to Mr. Jones. Have read over three hundred pages—will mail this.

AUSTIN KENT.

The book referred to is for sale at this office. Price two dollars, postage twenty four cents.

—The benevolent man is a seed sower. He strews his seeds into the deep, rich soil of the human affections, under the burning rays of the sun of love. They shall spring up and bear much fruit.

—The man who possesses the divine attributes of love, wisdom, justice, mercy, benevolence, patience, kindness, is thereby elevated to become a citizen of the universe, all whose inhabitants are by these divine principles being drawn toward a universal brotherhood.

—Enter not the house of thy friend to destroy his images and idols. Rather open it gradually to the influx of the light, and when he sees clearly, he will himself enter and destroy them. By the first method thou will profane the loftiest sentiments of the soul. By the last thou will remove only his errors.

—We are all placed on board the same vessel, bound on a very long voyage together, and it is the part of wisdom for each one of us to place himself on the most agreeable relations with all the passengers.

—Be patient with thy neighbor's error, and it shall not appear half so great.

—Charity, not tolerance, is the true rule of our conduct. Tolerance is unexercised judgment. We pass sentence, but merely suspend the execution of it. But charity says, "It is possible my neighbor may be right and I wrong, or both of us may be partly wrong and partly right. At all events, it is far better that he be honestly wrong than dishonestly right in his opinions. Therefore I will not seek to persecute him in his exercise of them lest I thereby subjugate rather his honesty than his errors, and he become a worse person than before."—J. Merrill.

AN EYE-OPENER.

"CITATEUR PAR PIGAULT."

LE BRUN,

DOUBTS OF INFIDELS.

Embodying Thirty Important Questions to the Clergy; also, Forty Close Questions to the Doctors of Divinity.

BY ZEPA.

For sale at the office of this paper.

Price, in cloth, 75 cents; postage, 12 cents. In paper, 50 cents; postage, 6 cents.

HESPERIA:

AN EPIC OF THE PAST AND FUTURE OF AMERICA.

By Mrs. Cora L. V. Tappan.

 PRICE: $1.75; postage, 20 cents. For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING House, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

MEDIUMS' DIRECTORY.

The Religio-Philosophical Journal being an especial friend to all true mediums, will hereafter publish a complete directory, giving the place of all professional mediums, so far as advised upon the subject. This will afford better facilities for investigators to learn of the location of mediums, and at the same time increase their patronage. Mediums will do well to advise us from time to time, that we may keep their place of residence correctly registered.

☞ It is a lamentable fact that some mediums so far forget their self respect as to speak evil of other mediums, not unfrequently even of those who are far their superiors. The names of such persons will be dropped from this Register, so soon as we have evidence conclusive of their indulging in such unkindness.

It should be borne in mind that disreputable visiting mediums carry conditions with themselves—so to speak—which aid or destroy the power of spirits to control the medium visited: because it is that on mediumship as manifested in certain persons, another better or others—all having their friends, and justly so, too, and all equally honest and useful in their sphere.

CHICAGO.

Sarge children, 217 S. Morgan St. †
Mrs. Ellen Brown, 126 W. Washington St.
Dr. W. Cleveland, 75 West Harrison st.*
Mrs. A. Crocker, 179 W. Madison St. *
Dr. D. C. Dake, 211 Wabash Av., Chicago *
Dr. R. Dewey, 232 West Madison St. Chicago.
Dr. L. P. Griggs, 239 W. Madison street, cor. Peoria.*
Mrs. Jorgenson, Parlors 25 and 29 Honore Block ‡
Mrs. Lovering.†
Drs. J. T. Lewis and wife, 73 Third Ave.*
Dr. S. L. McFarland and Wife, 345 W. Madison St.*‡
Mrs. A. H. Robbins, 148 Fourth Avenue *†‡
Mrs. M. Smith, 141 S. Clinton St *
Dr. Sargent, 76 Third Ave.†
Dr. M. L. Sayer, Wife and Wife, 306 South Clark St.*†
Dr Sam'el Unde Hill, 199 S Clark street.*
Mrs. S. J. Viber, 249 Indiana Ave*‡
Dr. J. Wilcox, 161 W. Randolph st *
A. D. Willis, Cor. Clark & Madison st. ¶
Mrs. M. M. Weeks, Rooms 60 & 61 Larsen Block, Chicago.

BOSTON.

Dr. H. B. Storer.*‡
Mrs. Julia M. Friend, 116 Harrison Ave.
Mrs. S. J. Stickney, 383 Tremont St.
Dr. Main, 826 Harrison Ave.
Mrs. A. C. Tatman, 302 Washington St.
Freeman Union, 8 Beaver Place.
Mrs. L. W. Felton, 14 Dover St. †
Mrs. Marshall, 89 Edinboro St.
W. H. Mc.ster, 179 W. ap ingfield street. ¶
Mrs. Ellen J. Eldridge, Tremont St. †
Mrs. M. M. Harey, 134 W. Concord St.‡
Samuel Grover, 25 Dix Place.
Mrs. F. O. Hyzer, 181 Tremont St.‡
E. G. Littlejohn, 28 Hanson street, Boston, Mass.

PHILADELPHIA.

Mrs. S. A. Anthony, S. E. Cor. of 7th and Catharine
D. B. Cadwallader, 1005 Race St.
Wm. H. F. French, 1124 Ridge Ave.
Mrs. A. Goodfellow, 413 Haberrgtie St.
Mrs. L. T. Mann, 949 South 12 A st *‡
Mrs. R. Rowe, or 33 Broadway ine St.
Mrs. Reynolds, 1013 Parrish St.
Mrs. R. McNeil, 1346 Hanover St.
Mrs. Troy, 836 North 4th St.
DeWitt C. Hoosh, 813 Race st ‡
Mrs. Stoddard, 813 Race st.

NEW YORK CITY.

Jennie Danforth, 64 Lexington Ave.†
Miss Blanch Foley, 102 Sixth Ave.
Mrs. H. Seymour, 149 Bleaker St.
Mrs. J. Cotton, 247 E. 31st St.
J. William Van Namee, 420 Fourth Ave.*‡‡

BLOOMINGTON, ILL.

Mrs. Helen Grover.
Mrs. M. E. Gotchell, 413 N. Main St. ‡
Dr. Mary Lewis, Bloomington, Ill.‡

CLAYONIE CITY, N. J.

Mrs. R. Wallis.

GREEN GARDEN ILL.

Mrs. Calkins.*‡

GENESEE, WIS.

Mrs. E. W. Balcom. * ‡
Mrs. F. A. Logan.

ROCKFORD, ILL.

Samuel Smith, Box 1321 Rockford, Ill. *
Mrs. M. J. Gibson S. Rockford, Ill. ‡

SAN FRANCISCO.

Wm. H. Hatch, 126 Kearney St.‡

ST. CHARLES, ILL.

Mrs. Leonard Howard.*‡
D. P. Kayner, M. D.*

SAN JOSE, CAL.

Mrs. Mary B. Bemis.

WHITEWATER, WIS.

Mrs. A. B. Severance.*‡

MISCELLANEOUS.

Mrs. Orrie Abbott, Minneapolis, Minnesota. *
Lizzie Annie Cole Rapid Rouse. ‡
Jonathan Allen, Geneseo, Ill.
Lydena Atwood, Lake Mills, Wis.
Miss M. A. A. philat Dayton, Ohio. *
D. Atkinson, Morris in log ‡
Mrs. Jennie Adams, Box 1909, Kansas City, Mo. *
Mrs. E. G. Bond, Box 1, Station A, Salem, Mass. †
Dr. H. Butler, Baldwinsville, N. Y. *
M. E. Cassico, 155 Bank street, Newark, N. J.*
Mrs. F. F. Carver, Cincinnati, Ohio.†
J. W. Ellis, Atlanta, Ga. †
Mrs. R. K. Everett, Sparta, Ill. Mo. ‡
David S. Fuller, Davenport, Iowa. *‡
Alvin C. Farnsworth, Lansingburgh, N. Y. *
J. B. Fayette, Ottawa, N. Y.‡
Dr. S. W. French, 116 High st, Columbus, Ohio. *
Mrs. W. L. Gill, Canastota, New York *
Dr. J. M. Holland, 206 Upper Broadway, Council Bluffs Iowa.
Judge D. L. Hoy, Mobile, Alabama.
U. S. Hamilton, Beloit, Wis.*
Dr. B. Heal, 83 Whitehall st., Atlanta, Ga.*
Mrs. Jessie Ferris, Traveling.†
Minnie Jefferson, Traveling.†
Mr & Mrs. G. M. Leland, Wyrtlesville, Mass. †
A. H. Nolan Waterville, N. Y. *
Mrs. A. Nesbit, Commissioner, Mich.*
Dr. Abba Lod Palmer, New Boston, Ill. *‡
Mrs Nail. Pine 8 nth Read Ind. *
Mrs. M. Robbins, Evansville, Ind.
R. B. Star, Fort Huron, Mich. *
A. B. Severance and Mrs. J. H. S. Severance. M. D.
497 Milwaukee street, Milwaukee, Wis.‡‡
Mrs. P.W. Stephens, east side of 4th street, between I & J, Sacramento.
R. R. Sherman, Gahanna, Ohio. ‡
Annie M. Terry, Houston, Texas ‡
M. C. Vander Cook, Niagara, Michigan.
Mrs. J. A. Danks, 24 Hudson Block, Cleveland, Ohio.
J. W. Kenyon, Watertown, Wis.
Lizzie Jackson Sloan, Covington, Ind.‡
A. Thomas London Station, Ohio.
Warren Wight, Waterloo, Seneca, Co., N. Y. *

* Healer.
‡ Spirit Artists.
† Psychometrist
‡ Business and Test.
¶ Writing and Drawing.
Answering Sealed Letters.
Solemnizing Marriages and Attending Funerals.

ARCANA OF SPIRITUALISM.

A MANUAL OF

SPIRITUAL SCIENCE AND PHILOSOPHY

By Hudson Tuttle.

WITH PORTRAIT OF THE AUTHOR. PRICE $2.00; Postage 16c.

This work embodies the results of the author's researches and experience during the past twenty years, and is, without doubt, the most thorough presentation of the subject of Modern Spiritualism before the public.

Dealing, as it does, with a question in which the interest of all mankind is centered, it cannot fail to command universal attention.

While the experience of thousands will repudiate some of the conclusions the author arrives at, they will still be able to obtain much invaluable information from the book. It is a good book to place in the hands of every person who would know more of what it is that is waking the world to new hopes and aspirations, and planting a tree of life beside every man's door.

 Price, $2.00; postage, 24 cents. For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING House, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

EXPRESS!

THE "EXPRESS" and other Rubber Goods, for

The Use of Ladies and Gentlemen.

Send stamp for circular. Address: "EXPRESS" Co. 160 Clark St., Room 10 Chicago.

Spermatic Positive and Negative Powders. For sale at this office.

Speaker's Register.

We are sick of trying to keep a standing Register of Meetings and list of speakers without a hearty co-operation on the part of those most interested.

To MISSIONARIES we shall register such meetings and speakers as are furnished to us AT THE TIME PARTIES INTERESTED with a pledge on their part that they will keep us posted in regard to changes and in addition to that, REPEATEDLY indicate a willingness to aid in the circulation of the JOURNAL, both by words AND DEEDS.

Let us hear promptly from all who accept this proposition and we will do our part faithfully.

J. Madison Allen, Ancora, N. J.
C. Fannie Allyn, Steuben, Maine.†
Dr. H. Asely, 194 South Clara st., Chicago.
Addie L. Belling. Address Chicago, care of RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL.*‡
Rob't A. Beales, Versailles, N. Y.†
Dr. J. H. Bailey, box 294 Laporte Ind *
Mrs. J. O. Bent, Glen Beulah, Wisconsin
Mrs. A. P. Brown, 6 Jamesbury Center, Vt. †
Dr Wm. D. Bate, Cor. State & Madison st Chicago†§
Rilla Brown, Address 18 West Washington St., Chicago.†
Henry A. Beach, Spring Valley, N Y
Mrs. Bell A. Chamberlain, Medford, Minnesota.†
Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Coolidge, Green Bardeen, Ill ††
H. T. Child, M. D., 634 Race St., Philadelphia, Pa.*
Mrs. A. H. Colby. Winchester, Randolph Co., Ind.†
Y. B. Dean, Tuttletown, Davenport, Iowa.*
Lewis F. Cummings. Address care of the Journal.*
John Corwin, Five Corners, N. Y.
Andrew Jackson Davis, Orange, N. J.
Dan T. Edwards, Stevenson's Mill, Mo.
Rev. J. Francis, Ogeensburg, N. Y.
I. H. Garrison, Richland, Iowa.
K. Graves, Richmond, Ind.*
Miss Helen Grove, Bloomington, Ill.
Mrs. M. Hull, Waterloo, Wis.*
Lyman O. Howe, Fredonia, N. Y. *
Joseph F. Hamilton, Le aire, Iowa.
Thomas Harding, Battle Creek, Mich.
Samuel S. Harman, Goshen, Ind.
O. S. Hamilton, Beloit, Wis.*
Miss H. Hardinge, St. Louis, Mo.*
W. H. Holmes, Grass Valley, Cal.
L. D. Hay, Mobile, Ala.†
S. S. Jones, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago. §
Dr. Wm. S. Josselyn, address him in care of this Office *
Dr. P. Kayner, M. D., St. Charles, Ill. ‡‡
L. P. Lewis, Valparaiso, Ind.
F. R. Lawrence, Ottumwa, Iowa.*
Geo. W. Loss, Ko ou Rapids, Mich *
Wm. F. Lyon, 306 S. Clark St., Chicago.§*
O. S. Lout, Pine Island, Minn. §
Mrs. A. P. Logan, Geneseo, Wis.
J. Macfarlin, Berlin, Ohio. ‡‡
F. C. Main, North Weymouth, Mass. §
Joel Moody, Mound City, Kansas.
J. S. Mercer, Olympia, Washington Territory.
Mr. John J. Odell, Waterloo, N. Y. *
Mrs. S. A. Pearsall, Plano, Ill.*
Mrs. D. A. Pierce, Kansas City, Mo. *‡
Dr. S. Perkins, Kansas City, Mo.
Harriet E. Pope, Morristown, Minn.*
M. M. H. Perry, Beloit, Wis. †
J. S. House, Casey, Ill.
Dr. P. B. Randolph, 89 Court St., Boston, Mass.
Mrs. S. A. Rogers. Address in care of A. J. Grover, Rockland, Ill.*
Samuel Smith, Rockford, Ill.*
Warren Sloat, Address, Madison Co., Ind.
Job Smyth, Hallsport, N. Y.
Mrs. J. H. Stillman Severance, M.D., Milwaukee, Wis.*‡‡
Mrs. Fannie Seppe Pond, care of this office, Chicago, .
E. W. Stevens, Drawer 40, Janesville, Wis
M. L. Sherman, M.D., 308 S. Clark st, Chicago.*
Mrs. L. A. F. Swain, Union Locks, Rice Co., Minn
D. C. Seymour, Lawrence, Kansas. *
Benjamin Todd, Portland, Oregon.
Mrs. Benjamin Todd, Portland, Oregon.*
Mrs. Sarah M. Thompson, Cleveland, Ohio. *
M. M. Toomy, Lake Mills.
Mrs. E. S. C. Trego, Oil City, Pa.*‡
J. S. Tupper, Watertown, Wis †
Hudson Tuttle, Berlin Heights, O.*†
Dr. Samuel Underhill, Tonica, Ill.*
E. V. Wilson, Hammond, Ill ‡
Mrs. M. J. Wilcoxson, Care of Journal, Chicago, Ill.*
J. C. Wilkerson & John A. Foote, Ohio. *†‡
E. V. Wilson, Hammond, Ill ‡
A. B. Whiting, Albion, Mich.*
Elijah Woodworth, Leslie, Mich.
E. H. Wheelock, Shairestown, Iowa*
Mr. Fanny Wheelock, Shairestown, Iowa.‡
Mrs. Emma Hardinge lectures in London for the next six months. Address 9 Vessel Terrace, Kensington, W., London, England. No unpaid letters received.*†

* Inspirational.
† Trance.
‡ Clairvoyant.
§ Solemnizing Marriages and Attending Funerals.

UNDERHILL ON MESMERISM.

WITH

Criticisms on its Opposers,

AND A REVIEW OF HUDSON AND BUSHNELL.

GIVING, WITH PRACTICAL INSTRUCTIONS FOR EXPERIMENTS IN THE SCIENCE—FULL DIRECTIONS FOR USING IT AS A REMEDY IN DISEASE—HOW TO AVOID ALL DANGER.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF ITS CURATIVE POWERS;

How to develop a good Clairvoyant

THE PHILOSOPHY OF

SEEING WITHOUT EYES.

THE PROOFS OF IMMORTALITY DERIVED FROM THE UNFOLDING OF MESMERISM—EVIDENCE OF MENTAL COMMUNION WITHOUT SIGHT OR SOUND, BETWEEN BODIES FAR APART IN THE FLESH—COMMUNION OF SAINTS, OR WITH THE DEPARTED.

BY SAMUEL UNDERHILL, M. D., L. L. D.,

LATE PROFESSOR OF CHEMISTRY, ETC., ETC.

Price $1.25. Postage 12 cents. The Trade supplied. Address S. S. Jones, Chicago, Ill.

FLORENCE SEWING MACHINES.

Wm. H. Sharp, & Co., General Agents.
42 Madison Street.

This machine is recommended to any who desire a first-class Family sewing Machine; and is noted for its quiet, rapid motion, regularity of tension and ease of management. Four different stitches, and reversible feed-motion—features peculiar to the Florence Machine, and claimed by no other in the world.

Samples and terms to agents furnished on application.

TEN DOLLARS!

($10) GIVEN AWAY!! ($10)

We will give to every one buying a FLORENCE SEWING MACHINE through our House TEN DOLLARS' worth of any of the books advertised in our book-list, or of the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL, or a part of each as a premium or inducement.

The Florence Machine is one of the very best manufactured, and ranges in price from sixty-five dollars to one hundred and fifty.

We will furnish descriptive circulars and samples on application.

We have sold a large number of these machines, and they have given the most perfect satisfaction in every case.

Call on or address:—
RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE,
187 and 189 South Clark street, Chicago.

THE MAGNETIC TREATMENT.

SEND TEN CENTS TO DR. ANDREW STONE, TROY, N. Y., and obtain a large, highly illustrated book on this system of vitalizing treatment.

[PAUL and JUDAS Entering the Cave of JOHN THE BAPTIST.]

JESUS OF NAZARETH.

BY

PAUL AND JUDAS,

Through Alexander Smyth, Medium.

This work has been read with intense interest by thousands, and is universally pronounced the most in the whole line of Spiritualistic Literature. It is the only true and reliable history of the remarkable medium called Jesus, ever written. After waiting eighteen hundred years, PAUL and JUDAS, finding the times propitious, and an excellent medium through whom to communicate, have given to the world a book of lasting interest, by taking possession of Mr. Smyth about one hour in every twenty-four, carrying all his powers, giving a continued series of well-connected scenes, presenting scenery, characters and personages, dialogues and actions in their regular order and succession, embracing all the most important personages and incidents which occurred during the sojourn of Jesus upon earth. There was, probably, no book ever written in which such perfect life-pictures occur; every city and country village, every river, brook and mountain, and scenery in general, is so vividly portrayed that an actual journey through the country could hardly be more interesting. The characters in this unexampled drama are so faithfully portrayed, that, as you are introduced to each in turn, you seem well acquainted and delighted with your company, and the many points of interest you are called to visit. The book is replete with interest from beginning to end, and contains 319 closely printed pages.

WONDERFUL BOOK

PRICE, $1.50; postage, 20 cents.

☞ For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING House, 187 & 189 South Clark St. Chicago.

The Great

MAGNETIC CURE.

SEND FOR CIRCULAR TO DR. E. SMITH, BURNHAM, ILLINOIS.

A WONDERFUL NEW BOOK.

JUST PUBLISHED.

STRANGE VISITORS!

A REMARKABLE volume, containing thirty-six original contributions by the spirits of such famous authors as IRVING, THACKERAY, Charlotte Bronte, Byron, Hawthorne Willis, Humboldt, Mrs. Browning and others now dwelling in the spirit-world. These wonderful articles were dictated through a Clairvoyant while in a trance state, and are of the most intensely interesting and thrilling nature.

☞ Elegantly bound in cloth, Price $1.50. Postage 20cts.

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

Author.	Subject.
Henry J. Raymond,	To the New York Public.
Margaret Fuller,	Literature in Spirit-Life.
Lord Byron,	To his Accusers.
Nathaniel Hawthorne,	Apparitions.
Washington Irving.	Visit to Henry Clay.
W. M. Thackeray,	His Post Mortem Experience.
Archbishop Hughes,	The Immoral Religious.
Edgar A. Poe,	The Lost Soul.
Jean Paul Richter,	Invisible Influences.
Charlotte Bronte,	Agnes Reed. A Tale.
Elizabeth B. Browning,	To Her Husband.
Artemus Ward,	In and out of Purgatory.
Lady Washington,	Distinguished Women.
Professor Olmstead,	Local Map of the Spirit-World.
Adah Isaacs Menken,	Hold Me Not
N. P. Willis,	Of Heart Sketches.
Margaret Fuller,	In Spirit-Life.
Gilbert Stewart,	Conversations on Art.
Edward Everett,	Government.
Frederika Bremer,	Flight to My Starry Home.
Rev. Lyman Beecher,	The Sabbath—Its Uses.
Prof. Charles Brocken,	Marriage in Spirit-Life.
Junius Brutus Booth,	Acting by Spirit Influence.
Rev. John Wesley,	Church of Christ.
P. P. Willis,	A Spirit Revisiting Earth.
Anonymous,	Alone.
Baron Von Humboldt,	Earthquakes.
Sir Bulwer Brewster,	Mechanisms of Spirit-Life.
H. T. Buckle,	Mormons.
W. R. Burton,	Drama in Spirit-Life.
Charles E. Elliott,	Painting in Spirit-Life.
Comstinan's Poetry,	Rollicking Song.
Lady Hester Stanhope,	Prophecy.
Professor Mitchel,	The Planets.
Dr. J. W. Francis,	Causes of Disease and Insanity.
Anonymous,	The Spirit Bride.

☞ The sale of this extraordinary work will be of the most unprecedented nature. Price, $1.50, postage 20cts.

For sale at THE RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL Office, 187 & 189, South Clark street, Chicago, Ill.

Criticism on the THEOLOGICAL IDEA OF DEITY,

Contrasting the Views Entertained of a Supreme Being by the Ancient Grecian Sages, with those of Moses and the Hebrew Writers; and blending Ancient Judaism, Paganism and Christianity into a Common Original.

BY M. B. CRAVEN.

12mo., 317 pages.—Price, $1.50; postage, 16 cents.

 For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING House, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

WOOD'S HOUSEHOLD MAGAZINE contains in every number one complete Prize story valued at $100. Forty pages of other matter. Yearly, $1. Sold by news-dealers at 10 cents per copy. Splendid premiums. $500 cash to be awarded for prize stories. Specimen copy free. Address H. R. WOOD, Newburgh, New York.

REPLY OF WASH. A. DANSKIN, ESQ., PRESIDENT of the First Spiritualist Congregation of Baltimore, to Rev. Thomas E. Bond, M.D. Price, 10 cents; postage, 2 cents. For sale at the office of this paper.

Religio-Philosophical Journal.

S. S. JONES, EDITOR, PUBLISHER AND PROPRIETOR.
R. FRANCIS, ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

Office 187 and 189 So. Clark Street.

Religio-Philosophical Publishing House.

☞All letters and communications should be addressed to S. S. JONES, 189 South Clark Street, Chicago, Illinois.

TERMS OF THE
Religio-Philosophical Journal.

$3.00 per year, $1.50—6 months, $1.—3 mo.
☞ Fifty cents for Three Months on Trial TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS.

In making remittances for subscriptions, always procure a draft on New York, or Post-Office Money Order, if possible. Where neither of these can be procured, send the money, but ALWAYS IN A REGISTERED LETTER. The registration fee has been reduced to FIFTEEN CENTS, and the present registration system has been found by the postal authorities to be virtually an absolute protection against losses by mail. All Postmasters are obliged to register letters when requested to do so.

All subscriptions remaining unpaid more than six months, will be charged at the rate of $3.50 per year.

PAPERS are forwarded until an explicit order is received by the Publisher for their discontinuance, and until payment of all arrearages is made, as required by law.

Mr. [illegible] without the [illegible] it is [illegible] der

1. Any person who takes a paper regularly from the post-office—whether directed to his name or another's, or whether he has subscribed or not—is responsible for the payment.

2. If a person orders his paper discontinued, he must pay all arrearages, or the publisher may continue to send it, until payment is made, and collect the whole amount,—whether the paper is taken from the office or not.

3. The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers and periodicals from the post-office, or removing and leaving them uncalled for, is PRIMA FACIE evidence of intentional fraud.

LOOK TO YOUR SUBSCRIPTIONS.

Upon the margin of each paper, or upon the wrapper, will be found a statement of the time to which payment has been made. For instance, if John Smith has paid to Dec. 10th, 1870, it will be mailed, "Smith J.—10 Dec.—0." The 0 means 1870. If he has only paid to Dec. 10th, 1869, it would stand thus: Smith J.—10 Dec.—9, or perhaps, in some cases, the last two figures for the year, as 70 for 1870, or 69 for 1869.

☞ The remaining money to this office for the JOURNAL, should be sent at once to show whether it be a renewal, or a new subscription, and write all proper names plainly.

CHICAGO, JUNE 10, 1871.

A SEARCH AFTER GOD.

NUMBER XLII.

The Activities of Matter—A Spark of Fire Literates Force—The Three Positions—A Retrospective View.

Questions are more easily asked than answered. In all ages of the world, even in those dark times when the ignorance, superstition, and cruelty of mankind sent forth an influence that overshadowed, as it were, the whole world with a power that seemed to be detrimental to the best interest of all, the query was no less urgently asked: Who conceived this order of arrangements, and why is it that we cannot emerge from the dark cloud that envelopes us? Now, as then, the human mind is groping in a certain degree of darkness. So long as mysteries exist, and man cannot comprehend them, in that proportion will the human mind be enshrouded in darkness.

It is easy to ask who made the first world, or through the instrumentality of what laws it was brought into existence. Time being of infinite duration, in the past, never having had a beginning, it would be impossible to tell who conceived and set in motion the first world, but to explain some of the laws connected with world-making, would not be so difficult.

We do not wish to pass over this question by giving expression to a few glittering generalities, leaving the reader, as it were, with no staff to lean upon, with no strength to sustain him in the belief that the theory we advance is correct.

We have made our statements, advanced our theory, presented our platform, and now while standing there certain questions are wisely propounded, and we are expected to answer them. Questions are countless in number. No sooner is one answered than others stand ready to be advanced. This will always remain the case until ignorance is banished and progression ceases. We, then, fully appreciating the situation, desire our readers to be patient, and follow us along in the line of our remarks, carefully watching the positions we assume.

To solve this intricate problem, certain premises must be assumed, and the truthfulness thereof acknowledged, or the attempted solution of the problem in question, will prove a failure.

If man is a world-builder, who made the first earth? We recognize in matter certain inherent laws, which we term its activities. In regard to the laws of matter, we know comparatively nothing. We know that it does, however, possess certain activities, which are under the control of man. So far as this earth is concerned, that is true; but there are certain activities which he while here cannot manage. He cannot control the lightning, the thunder, the formation of clouds, the dispensation of rain, the revolution of the earth, the production of earthquakes and volcanoes, and the generation of winds. He is powerless as a babe to influence them. Try, puny child, to control the lightning's flash, the furious tornado, the water spout, the dashing breeze, the dense fog, the growth of vegetation,—and your efforts will accomplish nothing. Your power here is circumscribed. Your progress has just commenced. You are on the first round of progression's ladder, and your power is so exceedingly limited that you imagine that God does what you cannot.

Now bear in mind that certain activities—not laws, connected with matter here, are entirely, in a negative condition, and through the instrumentality of certain simple contrivances the same can be liberated. We desire to stand in Chicago, and move a piece of iron in England. How can we do this? We are powerless to accomplish this wonderful feat, until we finally hit upon the happy expedient of liberating certain qualities of matter. So we form a cup of certain metals—zinc and copper—and fill it with water containing a certain portion of vitriol, and instantaneously certain activities of the same are liberated, and through the medium of the wire they are transmitted to England, and move the hammer of the battery there. This you recognize as a truth, and it will not be necessary to elaborate further on that point. We desire still further to move a rock that the combined efforts of ten thousand men could not stir. How shall we do so? Why, we will bring to our aid certain activities of matter. We will liberate certain forces therein. We obtain a few simple compounds. Unite them, and therefrom we obtain powder. We penetrate the huge rock for a hundred feet, and fill it with the powder. Still the rock remains there,—it does not stir or move in the least. Where, Mr. Powder, is your boasted strength? The lightning, the volcano, the earthquake, the tornado, man on earth cannot control, but, ah, he has control of certain activities almost as powerful. That powder reposing so quietly in its bed, is powerless to accomplish any thing. Its activities are there, sleeping quietly as an infant. How shall we arouse them? How shall we liberate them? Why, we will apply a spark of fire thereto no larger than a grain of mustard seed, and with that insignificant instrument we will move the huge rock. It is applied,—and what a noise! The earth for many miles feels the shock, and the huge rock is torn in pieces.

We can liberate activities from a few pounds of powder that can move almost any object. On all sides we see objects at work, liberating the latent forces of matter. The acorn liberates certain qualities, and they form the gigantic oak. The little seed, so small that it escapes the notice of the eye, will produce the majestic pine, for it possesses the power to liberate certain activities of matter. Now, it would be useless to sow seeds if no power were inherent in them, to liberate certain activities of the material world, and those, too, especially adapted for its purpose. The sheep, for instance, eats grass, and within its organism is an apparatus that releases certain qualities therefrom, and straightway blood, bones, flesh, wool, and milk are formed therefrom.

The activities of matter must be aroused before they will act. Now, can these inherent activities of matter control themselves?—if so, wherein? Set one wing of your house on fire, with the anticipation that the whole building will not be burned, and watch the result; you know that too well.

You find certain conditions of the world existing. It possesses certain activities—eternally possessed them, and always will. These activities some term the inherent laws of nature, and claim that through their instrumentality worlds are made and launched in their orbits; while others, equally as earnest and honest in their convictions, assert that connected therewith, and influencing the same, is an infinite God, invisible to the senses,—while we assert that neither position is strictly true.

Now has matter inherent laws? Law implies a mode or rule of action. But laws should act independent of man, independent of his agency or assistance. If the laws of matter can form a world, evolve a comet, and set them in motion in the regions of space, in just the position required for them, then they may possess a certain degree of intelligence, and may well be regarded as a God. If this position is true, worlds are of spontaneous growth, unfold without the aid of personal intelligences, just the same as the mist, and different currents of atmosphere, etc., can unite and form the hailstone, making a perfect sphere of it. Now, one of these three positions you must all assume:

1. That the inherent laws or activities of matter, form worlds, launches them in their orbits.

2. That matter, impelled by a universal essence,—God,—omniscient, omnipresent and omnipotent, does the same work, or,

3. That matter in portions of space is entirely in a negative state, until its activities are aroused through the instrumentalities of individualized intelligences.

One of these three conditions, humanity, today, recognize as true. Now, supposing no God, and admitting the first position to be true, matter certainly possesses a degree of regularity that is truly astonishing, and we can not otherwise than ascribe intelligence thereto. It certainly understands mathematics in all its intricate branches, and performs numberless marvelous operations. In regard to these three positions, the world has kept up a constant warfare of words, and will continue to until some reasonable conclusions are presented on which mankind an rest.

If our position be true, however, the great query is in regard to the first earth, or to present some reasonable conclusions in regard to its origin, is now necessary.

A RETROSPECTIVE VIEW.

And now our mind seems to be wafted back in ages past. Time is passing on in ceaseless tides. We step forth to witness the operations of the material world, to catch a glimpse of the morning sun that first dawned, of the globe that first revolved, of him who first breathed and witnessed the rising glories of infinite space; back, back! eons of ages fly past us in a moment's time; nations are formed and wrecked, armies fighting, deluges rising, famines, pestilence, the horrors of religious persecution, the rack, the gibbet, the pile of burning faggots—oh, what scenes greet us! What dull sounds fall upon our ears! What frightful cries! On we go! go!! go!!! Still back! Cities have passed away; the presence of, civilization has faded off the earth; the works of science and art are no longer seen. Still on! on!! Duller sounds strike upon our ear, and grosser scenes greet our vision. On all sides we see different nations or tribes of men. The panorama passes along, and we view the scene. We see all classes with the rude implements of husbandry, living in a savage condition. Their dark, sullen countenances, fierce and features moulded in hideous shape, almost frighten us. In war, they eat their prisoners, kill the aged father and mother, and possess really none of the feelings of true humanity. But here we must not stop. Back! back!! the undulating waves of the past sweep on, and gradually human beings cease to exist on the surface of the earth, and then huge fish, snakes of great length, and animals of huge proportions, greet us. How wild nature looks! How upturned the scenes! How disorderly! Animals fighting! The huge monsters of the sea contending for the mastery; land animals engaging in deadly conflict. On all sides is wild disorder. The very air seems thick, and we can hardly breathe. But on! on!! we must go. This scene fades away, the earth becomes a barren waste, and gradually it, too, is dissipated, and we find ourselves standing in an immense plain "of nothing." On all sides we see no evidences of life. No genial breezes, no heat, no cold, no sound—all is quiet—it was from this condition of matter that this world was eliminated. Where are its inherent laws? Where is the God that is omnipresent? Where is some master mechanic who can explain to us the reason of all this? There is "nothing," you might declare. Is there matter there? We can not see a drop of water, can not detect the smallest grain of earth, or perceive the presence of atmosphere there. We look for oxygen, hydrogen, electricity, magnetism, gaze around us for some place where we can detect its nature. The activities of matter are there, but are in a latent condition. Arouse them, and it then becomes visible to the senses. Really, then, the Bible did hint a grand truth when it said the earth was in condition a void, for from the regions of space where this earth was made, there was nothing visible to the keenest vision, or could be felt by the most delicate organism. Now, this is strange, but nevertheless true! The moment the activities of matter are rendered latent, dormant, or negative, that moment it disappears. Take for example the lamp. Apply a spark thereto, and potent forces are eliminated therefrom, and a flame is produced. Now, you can see the flame, and feel it. Place the activities of the flame in a negative condition, by extinguishing it, and can you see it then? Why, of course not! Now we will proceed on with our comparison. The flame was a part of the lamp, intimately connected with it so long as these activities were aroused, but we have only rendered certain elements negative. We could proceed step by step, and render the forces connected with the oil, glass, etc., entirely negative, and you would no more sense their presence than you could the flame which we just extinguished. The oil, the glass, in fact, everything can be extinguished, the same as the flame by just rendering the activities thereof negative,—still a substance remains.

In the barren fields of space, where matter is in a negative condition, to the senses, there is nothing. There is no disorder there, no violence, no breezes, no action of any kind whatever. There we stand. The mariner standing on a lone rock on a desert coast, could not be more lonely, than we are reposing there. No sound greets us, no approaching footsteps fall upon our ear. Dark, yes, dark! an interminable darkness surrounds us. Oh, how appalling the scene! Enchained, there we stand. We can turn neither to the right or left. Fearful night. We can not move from our position. Chained, bound as with a thousand cords, no strength to move, to speak, and the very blood still within us, and we ask, who made the first earth?

To be continued.

LETTERS OF FELLOWSHIP.

Letter from Bro. J. M. Peebles.

BROTHER JONES: It gratifies me exceedingly, that you are authorising so many of our speakers to officiate at the marriage altar. Sectarian clergy have quite too long monopolized this business. Now to the point. Will you grant a Letter of Fellowship to Rev. J. H. Harter, of Auburn, New York, a Universalist clergyman, who voluntarily left the denomination some three years since? Causes:

1. He became liberal.

2. He failed to get his ministerial brethren to deal justice to one Mr. Austin, with other society and social matters, deeply grieving him. There was never a breath against Mr. Harter's reputation. He voluntarily withdrew, but continues to preach for the more liberal of the Universalists, and to lecture frequently for Spiritualists. He also continues to marry. In this line he is quite popular, and accordingly, the anxious and jealous, frequently there out the sneer, "He can't marry legally," etc. Were you to grant him an official paper, it might relieve him from annoyance. He has asked no aid of me in this direction, and does not know of my writing to you upon the subject.

Another matter. I see you are to publish the Bhagvat Geeta. Of this I am glad. I have long had a copy in my library, and know it to be very valuable. When from the press for sale, I shall take great pleasure in recommending, through the American Spiritualist, all Spiritualists to buy it. As soon as I make arrangements with the publisher,—or, rather, complete the arrangements,—I shall proceed with the publication of the Anacrypsis. Subscriber's names have come in beyond my most sanguine expectations. One man has subscribed for six copies, or sets; another for four, etc., etc. Have you mentioned my purpose to publish this work in the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL? If not, will you please to so do. You may have so done—I do not see, being so constantly on the wing, one half of our Spiritualist papers.

I am having a grand time this month in Baltimore. Fully one half of the [Universalist society—so the people say—attend my lectures. Sunday evening, I counted over thirty of my old Universalist friends—among them, two of their trustees,—one, the treasurer. Both Spiritualist societies are doing well in the city, though bitter in their discussions.

Baltimore, Md., May, 28, 1871.

We will with pleasure present the application to the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL SOCIETY, and doubt not they will grant the Letter of Fellowship to the brother on your recommendation, but it will be necessary for him to make the application in writing, as our society receives none into fellowship but such as make a personal application therefor. A like application gives any one a right to withdraw from fellowship, at any time desirable.—ED. JOURNAL.

"In the Deep Waters."

Brother Hull, of the Crucible, pays the following tribute of respect to "Lotta," a servant girl, who lately died from the effects of a lamp explosion:

We are sad to-night, Oh, so sad, so lonely. This world looks dark to us. Our good, our beautiful philosophy fails to render us any comfort we need. We are under such a cloud that it can not find us as it should. Never mind, the sun will rise in the morning. We have just received a letter from our good wife. The last words in the letter were, "Lotta sends love." Lotta was our servant, her skin was as black as our hat, her soul as pure, as white as the driven snow. We rejoiced to receive the tender regards of our dear, good, black Lotta. We did not know she was black, she was so faithful, so pure so good, we almost forgot the color of her skin. The letter we have just quoted from had a terrible postscript. Here is a part of it:

"11 o'clock P. M. Little did I dream of putting such a terrible postscript to any letter of mine. As we were just coming up stairs laughing and joking, Lotta picked up a lamp to go and fix M——'s bed, when it exploded, setting her all on fire, and before the flames could be extinguished, she was burned from crown to heel, her skin hanging in loose strings. Oh, such a commotion, the girls screaming and clinging to me, Lotta screaming, and in flames in the midst of the room, I rushed to the kerosene burning in the hall. In a few moments hundreds were gathered around her, and finally succeeded in extinguishing the flames. I hope I may never be compelled to witness another such a scene. * * * * *

Poor, good, faithful, patient Lotta, she scarcely murmurs."

Another letter written the next day, says: "The kind angel, Death, came to the relief of poor Lotta to-day at 12 o'clock."

We seldom weep, but we did shed tears of sorrow over the first letter, and tears of gratitude over the second.

Lotta was a slave; was made free as one of the results of the war. She had just begun to really reap the benefits of her freedom. We had taken her into our family as one of us. Our daughters were teaching her to read. Whether she or the little girls enjoyed it most was hard to tell. She is gone; she will find teachers on the other side, but none that will relish their task more than did our little folks, nor teachers to whom she will feel more grateful or repay more fully. We are now led to ask, where is she? Did death come to relieve her, or to bind her hand and foot and cast her into the flames that shall eternally burn with a thousand times the fury with which her spirit was burned out of her body here? She died out of the church, knowing nothing experimentally of its religion. Where is she? We believe she still lingers near the scene where she spent her last earthly days; that though she is gone, we can still bless her: we can teach her; we can and will lead her to fountains of living water. Though no monument may mark the spot where her crisped body sleeps, she has erected one in at least four young hearts, and two older ones, more durable than granite rock. Rest, dear Lotta! you leave a vacuum in our home, not easily filled. We who appreciated you will hail you on the sunny side.

Dayton, Ohio, Thursday, May 11th, 10 P. M.

Friday A. M.—The sun has arisen, the air is balmy, the birds are singing, and all nature smiles and bids us the most kindly good morning. The clouds, too, have lifted from our mind and we are thankful that God has kindly placed death in life,—has fixed it so near life's threshold. How kindly death comes to the relief of poor humanity. "Death is but a kindly frost which cracks the shell and leaves the kernel room to germinate."

THE BODY.

Its Relations to the Resurrection—"With What Body do they Rise?"

Tilton, of the Golden Age, is gradually allowing liberalism to diffuse itself in his veins, and occasionally he gives expression to ideas that meet the approval of Spiritualists. The day is not far distant when he will admit the truthfulness of spirit communion; indeed, we believe that his paper cannot correctly represent the golden age, until he becomes a confirmed Spiritualist. He says:

We do not pretend to understand the providence of God, or the economy of the universe, or the condition of spirits in the next world. Nor do we know what satisfactory answer to give to a query addressed to us in these words: "What is your opinion as to the resurrection of the body?"

It is easy to refer our inquirer to St. Paul's views. But what are St. Paul's views? He thought a human body in the grave was like a seed of wheat in the ground. There is a sense in which this view, which was meant to be theological, is also scientific. The body once buried shall rise again. That is, it shall decompose in the earth; it shall mingle with the soil; it shall become part of nature's mould; it shall receive the rain from heaven; it shall quicken and revive, when by atoms it shall struggle up, re-germinate to the surface; and finally it shall appear again to human eyes —here in a blade of grass, there in a head of clover—here in a trailing vine, there in a spreading oak. This is the only resurrection of the body in which we have any faith.

Now, this explanation may not satisfy the spiritual yearnings of our inquiring friend; but after all, rightly looked at, there is something very beautiful and satisfying in that eternal round of nature's transmutation, which brings death and mortality to light. Thaddeus Stevens, by a clause in his will, bequeathed a sum of money to be annually expended in covering his mother's grave, as he quaintly phrased it, "with roses and other cheerful flowers."

Our idea of the resurrection of the body is, that if this bequest shall be executed according to the testator's filial intent, there will be a gradual rising of the sacred dust which he wished to honor, into the very substance and body of the flowers with which he sought to keep it in fragrant and perpetual memory. So death everymore is life; neither is there any grave that shall not be opened, nor any dead that shall not be raised.

C. E. Woolley & Co.

We take pleasure in calling the attention of our readers to the advertisement of this firm, to be found in another column. We are well acquainted with them to be square, upright business men, and have examined the article which they wish to employ agents to sell, and believe it to be a good thing.

The Brinkley College Spirit Manifestations.

By reference to the 2nd page of this number of the JOURNAL, our readers will find the much desired information in regard to the stolen JAR and contents.

The report we published was truthful. It is now published in pamphlet form, and is for sale at this office, for thirty cents a copy. We send it promptly by mail to any part of the country. Everybody should send for it without delay, so as to have it to circulate among their neighbors. It contains the full history of the whole affair.

Address S. S. Jones, 189 South Clark street, Chicago, Ill.

Clairvoyance.

D. P. Kayner, M. D., of St. Charles, Ill., the well-known Clairvoyant Physician, late of Erie, Penn., is diagnosing disease clearly, by a lock of the patient's hair; and is treating cases in all parts of the United States.

Dr. K. is thoroughly educated in the different systems of medical practice; superadded to which his natural clairvoyant powers makes his treatment a positive success. Our friends in all parts of the country should remember these facts. Terms: examination and prescription $3.

R. S. Spaulding

Returns a copy of the paper to this office, writing on the margin a request to stop his paper In each issue of the JOURNAL we publish a notice to subscribers, that when they wish their address changed they should send both the old and new address, and when they wish the paper discontinued to be careful and give their full address and pay up all arrearages. Please fulfill these terms, and your request will be complied with.

BHAGVAT GEETA.

The Hindoo New Testament.

The above-named very neatly executed book, on fine tinted paper, embossed in gold, is now being delivered as fast as orders are received. Price only $1 25; postage, 16 cents. Everybody should have this wonderful book.

Pay Up.

We are in earnest with those who are a long while in arrears. Pay for your newspaper, if you never pay any other debt.

You do us great wrong by such negligence. We need our honest dues, and expect them to be promptly remitted.

The Spiritual Analyst.

This is the name of a new monthly just started,—J. H. W. Toohey, editor. It is nicely printed, and all the articles bear evidence of deep research, and are very interesting.

Caution!

To our exchanges and newspaper publishers generally:

A decided swindle is being perpetrated upon publishers and the public by a concern styling itself the "American Publishing Company," purporting to be located at Rutland, Vermont, Postmaster of Rutland, states that the concern is FICTITIOUS. Their advertisement was inadvertantly inserted in the JOURNAL, contrary to our established rule,—as we always decline publishing for parties unknown to us, unless we obtain proof of their integrity and the genuineness of the article advertised.

Books Received for Review.

We have received from Horace B. Fuller, Boston, through Messrs. S. C. Griggs & Co., of Chicago—

Historic Americans, by Theodore Parker.

Thoughts for a Young Man, by Horace Mann.

Battles at Home, by Mary G. Darling.

In the World, a sequel to "Battles at Home," by the same author.

From James R. Osgood & Co., Boston, we have received—

The Heathen Chinee, by Bret Harte, with illustrations by S. Eytinge, Jr.

Jim Bludso, of the Prairie Bell, and Little Breeches, by John Hay, with illustrations by S. Eytinge, Jr.

TESTIMONIAL.

Mrs. A. H. Robinson's Mediumship.

Mrs. E. L. A. Hand had been suffering for some months with chronic rheumatism, in shoulders, arms, back, loins and hips, together with dyspeptic symptoms, shortness of breath, palpitation of the heart, poor appetite, and general debility; nervous and restless at night, so much so, from palpitation, that she often failed to sleep half the night. She had taken the usual prescriptions for such affections, with only temporary relief, and growing impatient of drugging, I proposed to consult Mrs. A. H. Robinson, which we did; and under the treatment advised by her, Mrs. Hand has been relieved of the most distressing symptoms that she was suffering from. She has now only a little soreness of the right shoulder, and relieved of all the rheumatic symptoms, very little of the palpitation or the difficult breathing, rests well, good appetite, and strength is improving very much; stomach occasionally slightly disordered.

As an evidence of the confidence that her treatment of Mrs. Hand inspired, I consulted Mrs. Robinson in relation to my own health, and am decidedly benefited.

J. H. HAND, M. D.

Milford, Baker Co., Ga., May 24th, 1871.

—NOTHING LIKE IT.—We refer to Nature's Hair Restorative, advertised in another column. It is in one bottle, and as clear as ice. No gum, no filth, no poison. Examine it. See advertisement.

—We can have no true conception of any condition, until we have ourselves been in that condition.

Personal and Local.

—Bros. Rawson and Quick, of Chesterton, Indiana, called on us this week. They are wide awake gentlemen and working Spiritualists. Each had the good fortune to secure a very fine spirit likeness at Mr. Willis' Photographic Gallery.

—Edward S. Wheeler will lecture in Springfield, Mass., during June.

—Mr. Jesse B. H. Shepard, the musical medium, has just returned to London from Boston, says the Medium and Daybreak. His address is 3 Charles street, Berkeley Square, W.

—Emma Hardinge's lectures in England have created a profound interest. The Marylebone newspaper speaks of her Exeter oration thus: "This is an eloquent address, adapted to the season; it is full of earnest feeling and genuine moral and religious sentiment."

—The sale of "The Voices," by Barlow, is steadily increasing, and there has always been a good demand since its first publication.

—An exchange truthfully says: "We want an intelligent pulpit. The demand is everywhere for intelligence and power. If the people are to listen to a teacher, they expect him to bring such a message as will instruct not only, but impress them at the same time. Mere exhortation and rhapsody are no more in place. The religious mind has grown beyond these. It is the intellect of the pulpit which at the present time secures to it its hearers."

—Mrs. M. Jenks, residing at 173 West Van Buren street, has an excellent reputation as healer, clairvoyant and test medium.

—Mrs. M. J. Wilcoxson has been laboring efficiently at Decatur, Ill., during the past month. She will soon be in Chicago, where she proposes to remain a short time.

—Mrs. F. W. Calkins gave us a call last week. She is an excellent clairvoyant and test medium.

—D. B. Edwards writes to us from Orient, N. Y., stating that several persons in that town have grown up to manhood without ever having seen a person intoxicated.

—Dr. F. Emery writes: "Five weeks ago, I was the only believer in the Harmonial Philosophy, in a family of ten. To day we have no doubters, and in addition, four writing mediums."

—All lecturers will meet with a cordial reception at Kulpsville, Pa. Brother J. C. Rouse writes that the hall there will seat three hundred.

—Thank you, Brother Henry D. Smith, of Whately, Mass., for sending us new subscribers.

—Ross Winans, the great steamboat man, has shown that a business man, with immense responsibilities and undertakings to engross his time and attention, can still find leisure to read and think deeply on other subjects. His book, "One Religion; many Creeds," is a work of great research and much ability, put up in splendid shape and retailed at less than first cost.

—We learn that Harry Bastian has been holding seances with great success in Buffalo, N. Y. He goes from there to Moravia, N. Y., then to Charlestown, Mass. We take great pleasure in recommending Mr. Bastian as a physical medium,—well worthy in every respect, of the confidence of the people.

—An exchange says that "in Elmore County, Alabama, last Saturday, William Bragg, a minister of the gospel, on trial before the Baptist Church, charged with seducing a sister of his brother-in-law, Harper James, was dismissed from the church, when, a few moments afterwards, and while yet inside the church building he drew a knife and stabbed James in the throat, killing him almost instantly. Both parties were highly respectable."

—"Bible in the Balance," by Brother Fish, has had a large sale.

—A clergyman at the bed of a sick man said, "Have you made your peace with God?" To which the sick man replied, "I never had any difficulty with him."

—Joseph B. Johnson, a graduate of the Theological Seminary, and for some time a preacher, and recently a grocery dealer in Boston, was sentenced to eighteen months in state prison lately for seduction and adultery.

—Next to the works of A. J. Davis, those of Hudson Tuttle are the most in demand.

—S. W. Todd, of Wisconsin, writes: "Samuel Underhill, M. D., has been lecturing in this county for the last ten days, to full houses. He is doing a good work wherever he goes. The minister and presiding elder at Delton asked him to occupy the desk of the M. E. Church, which he did. They now are alarmed for their flock, and the elder says he would like to discuss the question of Spiritualism with Dr. Underhill. He has accepted the challenge. Now, if the elder comes to time, we will have a treat."

—Mrs. H. B. Stowe is amusing the readers of the Christian Union with a story chiefly composed of watered ideas, in which she arrays the Bible against the modern view of woman's rights, and makes a feeble effort to be sarcastic at the expense of her sisters, who are honestly seeking what they deem their rights.

—Julia Dake Casterline, M.D., has opened an office at 641 N. 12th street, Philadelphia. Naturally gifted and talented, renders her success complete. Her specialty,—diseases of women. Mrs. C. is a relative of the noted healer, Dumont C. Dake, M. D.

—Mrs. E. A. Williams lectures once in two weeks at Oriskany Falls, N. Y.

—Mrs. R. K. Stodard's residence is now 813 Race street, Philadelphia. Mediums visiting Philadelphia can find pleasant rooms at her house, with or without board.

—F. A. Hull, of Belvidere, Ill., writes: "We are pleased to announce through your columns to our friends, that we were favored with a visit from Dr. Kayner, of St. Charles, Ill., on the 21st inst. He gave a close and searching diagnosis of several cases,—much to the satisfaction of those 'looked through,' for his examinations are made, not by touching, but by his power of clairvoyance. On Sunday, he lectured twice, morning and evening, in Adelphic Hall. Subject of morning discourse, "The Pathway of Life," which was beautifully and scientifically handled, to the satisfaction of all present. Theme of evening lecture, "Universal Progress." It was well illustrated, giving a livelier hope to the friends and lovers of a broader theology, and a higher and better civilization. Also we noticed that when he paid his compliments to a few points of the old theology, some few were afraid he would break their ancient idols, as evidenced by a little nervousness, and contracted eyebrows. Our friends here enjoyed the day much, and we trust that we shall have the doctor with us at some future day, not far distant."

—...ie, Ky., has a fine and rapidly growing ...'s Progressive Lyceum. Spiritualism is ...pace with the enterprise of that energetic ...

—It was Brother W. T. Smith who wrote from Council Bluffs, Iowa, and whose name was omitted from a letter published in "Voices from the People."

Philadelphia Department.

BY ..... HENRY T. CHILD, M. D

Subscriptions will be received, and papers may be obtained at wholesale or retail, at 634 Race street, Philadelphia.

Spirit Communications.

THROUGH A. E. D.

All through life we are called upon to minister to spirits. One stands here now who suffers deeply from the thought that he has been branded as a murderer—for in the true sense it was not a murder.

Oh, how one kind word lifts such a soul! The conduct of some who should have been true to him, grieves him very much. As he comes to you, however, some of those spirits who have given their experience through you, will be able to aid him.

I now see George Twitchel and Gerald Eaton standing close beside you. The latter is not so unhappy as the former, and this thought comes to me: that it is not always the roughs that are the worst part of creation. He says when they do stab, they stab in the daylight, and they stab with steel—they don't use the tongue, as many do who move in what they call high life, and call themselves liberal and progressive, and also religious. There are many dark deeds done in the church, that the roughs would blush to own, because they are done in secret and under the garb of friendship and religion. When we fight we do it openly and above-board. I would scorn to stab any one in the dark or in the back, and so I feel that I am better than many a one who preaches reform, or religion, or whatever you choose to call it. He sees the spirit of things, and feels that he does not belong to the worst class of humanity; he does not mean to hide his sins, but one of the worst and most despicable characters is the hypocrite. He says, "I am not in sackcloth and ashes, as my friend is who stands at my side."

Believe me, there are no darker deeds done in the Catholic Church than in the Protestant.

Here comes an old woman. She holds out her hand; it is shriveled. She says, "Child, I was that boy's grandmother,"—pointing to Twichel; "I had the gift of seeing,—or rather knowing—coming events. I saw the trouble that was coming on this boy, and I did cry aloud for help. I asked God to send some one in the form to speak to that poor boy, and could you have reached him at that time, his soul might have been comforted. I know that you are not to blame; it was not in your power to reach him. But if you should ever be moved in that way again, do your best, and in all probability you will save others."

[The medium said, "It is a very little old woman. I saw her nearly three years ago; she appeared to me in great agony. It was three months before the murder. She was calling upon some one in the form to try to reach him."]

I can feel a change in Twitchel; there seems to be a sort of a shade of sadness passing away; it is scarcely perceptible, and yet I feel it. I feel as if he could almost smile. There is a ray of gladness in his heart that he has not felt anything like since he passed away. He says he "hopes there is a time coming when the roses shall bloom for him, and the birds shall sing, and he will be able to hear joyous sounds. It is in the distance, but this day there had been one ray of gladness rippling upon his soul."

Two years ago, my friend, I spoke to you that I was in deep sorrow. I told you then that I heard the singing of the birds and the ringing of the bells, but to me they brought no joyous sounds. I saw the beauty of the roses, but to me they could bring no joy, because my soul was in darkness, but now, by this one ray of gladness I know that peace will come to this soul in due time.

I will come to thee and tell thee of my progress in spirit-life. I will yet sing to thee a joyous song, and bring to thee a pleasant memory.

These spirits are standing here listening, and are much pleased that he could thus communicate. It will do him a great deal of good.

Dr. Slade.

We visited New York recently, and called on our friend, Dr. Slade, at No. 207 West Twenty-second street.

The manifestations in the Doctor's presence, are becoming more wonderful every day. We were told that a pencil was taken from the table, in the presence of Dr. North and the medium, and carried to the ceiling, which is about fourteen feet high, and there we saw the name of Dr. Rush had been plainly written. The Bible readers may have heard of handwriting upon the wall. This day was this scripture fulfilled.

Seating ourself with the Doctor, we soon had the raps. He informed us that recently, several persons had been enabled to see the forms of spirits in the room; that the spirits could so far materialize their forms, that they become visible and tangible. The Doctor saw Owasso, his Indian guide, pass around the room, and stand behind the chair we were sitting in. "Why," said he, "he is going to move you." Presently the chair was raised at the back, and we were drawn back some six inches. This was in the afternoon, in broad daylight, and the Doctor and we were the only persons in the form in the room. He sat some two feet distant from us, where we could see every movement he made, and we know he did not touch our chair. Soon it was moved forward a distance of a foot, pushing the table before us. The table was moved in various directions, and raised from the floor, without visible contact.

We held a slate with a small fragment of pencil upon it, under the corner of the table, the Doctor's right hand at one end, and our left hand at the other, while his left and our right hands were upon the table, in contact. We heard the pencil writing, and found the following on the slate:

"Doctor Child: Give my love to all my dear ones at home. A. W. S."

The initials of our friend and sister, Mrs. Slade.

The Doctor said, "Owasso is standing by a chair on the opposite side of the room,"—some four feet from us. Soon it moved up to the table, and then was drawn back a foot or more.

We felt something touch us several times. We now held the slate close in the left hand, under the corner of the table, both of the Doctor's hands and our right hand being in contact on the table. The sound of writing was soon heard, and we found these words:

"You can say Ed. Lane is living. E. L."

Mr. Lane is a brother-in-law of Mrs Slade, and a personal friend of ours, who passed over the river called death, a short time since.

The Doctor had an accordion that was broken into three pieces. The keys, the plate with the springs, and the bellows were separated. We held it up, and laid the plate on the bellows, and the keys on top of that, but as soon as we turned it down laterally, they fell apart. The Doctor held that under the table, and there was a beautiful tune played with it. We could see the instrument moving, while he held the bellows with one hand, the other being upon the table in contact with ours. As soon as the music ceased, the keys were thrown upward, and fell upon the table. The plate fell to the floor, and the Doctor held the bellows. A silver fruit knife was thrown across the room some six feet, and as it passed through the air, we saw the blade gradually opened. There must have been a power to hold the handle of the knife, and another to move the blade. There must also have been a power to unfold the scoordeon together, and another to play it. Comment is unnecessary. Let those who think there are not "more things in heaven and earth than are dreamed of in their philosophy," explain these things.

Every one who knows Dr. Slade, is satisfied with his frankness and candor, and not only willingness, but desire that there should be the fullest scrutiny and investigation,—a feeling which does much to satisfy the most skeptical. The facts and phenomena of Spiritualism are as well established as those of chemistry or geology, and the philosophy based upon these, is being accepted by the best minds all over the world.

We are glad to know that the spirits are developing and unfolding mediums everywhere, and that the good work goes forward rapidly.

Starting Newspapers.

This is a disease which attacks some persons only once in their lives; others, periodically. It reminds us of a little man who laid a wager that he would throw his wife, who was a small woman, over a river. Trying with all his might he surprised himself, and her also, by lifting her from the ground and tumbling her into the water. The good spouse, on coming up out of the water, soiled and wet, began to remonstrate with him. "Oh," said he, "I bet I could do it, and I mean to keep on trying till I succeed." We have known men who have thrown their friends into the water sometimes where it was very deep. One after another have thus been treated, until finally they fall in themselves. In this, as in all other things, it is not the amount of exertion that is made, but the success that gives you the credit, and if worthy persons do fail, it is not to be wondered at that unprincipled and dishonest "editors-in-chief" would fail and disgrace themselves.

Obituary.

Nathan E. Daggett, of Elgin, Ill., aged sixty-one years, four months, and eighteen days, passed to the higher life, on the 21st day of May.

Bro. Daggett was a firm believer in spirit communion. In early life, he was a skeptic. Soon after the ushering in of Modern Spiritualism, at Rochester, his eldest daughter became a very good medium. Through her mediumship Bro. Daggett was, over twenty years ago, advised of most phases of mediumship which have since been developed. Bro. Daggett has ever stood in the front ranks of radical Spiritualists. As a result, he has been a target that the devout church members have loved to aim their shafts at,—not openly, but covertly, behind his back.

As he has been in this life bold and positive in promulgating the truth, so we expect he will be in the spheres above. We hope and expect to hear from, and know of, him as a dweller in the land of spirits.

NOTICE OF MEETINGS.

Hillsdale Co., (Mich.) Society.

The First Religio-Philosophical Society, of Hillsdale Co., Mich., will hold their fifth annual Festival on Saturday and Sunday, June 17th and 18th, at Bloomer's Grove and Hotel, Clear Lake, Indiana.

Speakers engaged: Mrs. M. J. Fowler, Prof. D. M. Farr from Minnesota; and several others are expected to occupy our free platform.

Mr. St. Lawrence's brass band and choir will enliven the meeting with choice music. A grand set dance will be held for the benefit of Mr. St. Lawrence (he being blind), a Bloomer's spacious hall, on Saturday afternoon and evening

All are invited to meet with us and enjoy a feast of reason and flow of soul

Ample provisions are made for friends from a distance. Carriages will be at the State Line Station, on the F. W. & S. R.R., to convey passengers to the Hotel or Grove free.

CLARA E. CONEY, Sec'y. WM. BRYAN, Pres.

Farmington, (Mich.) Society.

The third annual meeting of the First Society of Spiritualists of Farmington, Mich., will be held in the village of Farmington, the third Saturday and following Sunday, 17th and 18th days of June, 1871. A. B. Whiting, of Mich., and Sude M. Johnson have been engaged for the occasion, and other speaker's are expected.

A cordial invitation is extended to all. Homes will be provided for those from a distance. Platform free. Please give us a crowd.

BANNER OF LIGHT please copy.

NORTON LAPHAM, Pres.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

SPIRITUALISM.

DR. S. L. McFADDEN AND WIFE, Magnetic Physicians, Spiritual Test Mediums, Business Clairvoyants, etc., have located at No. 943 W. Madison St., corner of May, up stairs, Chicago.

They invite all who wish the benefit of their mediumistic powers, to call and see them. They hold developing circles, diagnose disease without any previous knowledge of the patient, tell of the past, present and future, give news from absent and departed friends, etc. They also explain the laws of life and death, good and evil, the cause and cure of inharmony, etc., thereby enabling persons to be a law to themselves,—to be their own thinkers, teachers, doctors, and preachers. ALL MEDIUMS ARE INVITED TO ATTEND FREE OF CHARGE. The contradictions of the Bible, lying spirits, and false communications philosophically explained. Situations for the examination of diseases, and private communications, from 9 A. M. to 5 P. M. Circles each evening; Sundays not excepted.

N. B.—Can accommodate a few Boarders.

v10 n12 12t

813 RACE ST.

DR. R. STODDARD, of 813 Race St., PHILADELPHIA, can accommodate MEDIUMS visiting that city with free rooms for business purposes, at reasonable rates.

v10 n19 tf

WANTED AGENTS

In every Town and City, to sell an article needed in every household. SELLS RAPIDLY. Large PROFITS to AGENTS. Send Stamp for Circulars. C. E. WOOLLEY & Co., Room 12, No. 131 Lasalle St., Chicago.

v10 n13 tf

IT COSTS

Only about one-third BOOKBINDERS' prices to do binding handsomely by the use of Aldenpfe Handy Bookbinder. Most useful to our publication, from the smallest MONTHLY to the largest WEEKLY. Price circular free. Send 50 cents for samples of both STYLE and BINDER. Size for the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL, No. 18; price $1.20 and $1.50. Address, RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

DELINQUENTS.

The following named persons owe for this paper. They have either removed from the town or post office where they formerly took the JOURNAL, without requesting the address to be changed, and paying arrearages; or they have requested some pious postmaster to notify us that the paper was not called for, thinking thus to evade payment. Such of these as remain unpaid four weeks, without reasonable explanation, will be placed in the Black List. Our subscribers who know the present residence of either of these persons, will confer a favor by informing us of the same.

S. M. Argo, Clinton, Ill., $2.25; J. H. Mears, Lincoln, Va., 50 cts.; J. P. Tuttle, West Lebanon, Ind., 75 cts.; J. M. Wilson, Camden Mill, Ill., $2.00; W. M. Bischell, St. Louis, Mo., $7.00; Mrs. M. Strong, Rochester, Mich., $5.00; John Hanlon, Harrisburg, Pa., $5.75; A. Mills, Simmonsville, Vt., $8.25; R. Roby, Bridgeport, Ind., $5.25; Geo. Roberts, Sergeant's Gap, Cal., $4.25; Wm. Simms, Curran, Ill., $2.50; Mrs. Emma Cook, Rock Island, Ill., $9.25; D. A. Grambling, Atlanta, Ga., $2.75; G. W. Orth, Rockford, Ill., $5.75; Wm. A. Hardiman, Jackson, Ohio, $5.00; Miss F. Robinson, Two R ers, Cal., $1.50; N. A. Clark, Two Rocks, Cal., $2.25; O. H. McNamee, Edinburg, Ills., $5.50; W. Woodward, Guildsboro', N. C., $4.25; Mrs. Brisbin Pilot, Mich., 75 cts.; John Hastings, Lexington, Mass., $3.50; A. McCord, Troy, N. Y., $8.25; B. R. Matthews, Mt. Vernon, Mo., $5.75;

H. Brevoort, No. 4 Fourth Ave., New York City, $9.25; John Bertrist, Illyria, Iowa, $5.00; R. Healey, Herman, N. Y., $1.75; A. B. Cole, Pingle, Mo., $1.10; C. P. Bracon, Salem, Oregon, $2.00; Eastman, Monroe, Wis., $4.50.

CHRISTIANITY;

Its Origin, Nature and Tendency, Considered in the Light of Astro-Theology.

By D. W. Hull.

THIS book is, so far as it goes, a thorough review of the Origin of the Christian system, showing it all to be plagiarism from ancient heathens. being unlike almost any other work ever written on the subject, it cannot fail to be deeply interesting to all. Its explanations of Scripture are lucid, and so self-evidently correct that no one can gainsay them.

 For sale, wholesale and retail, at the office of this paper. Price at retail, 25 cents; postage, 2 cents.

THE Descent of Man, AND Selections in Relation to Sex;

By Charles Darwin, M.A.F.R.S. With Illustrations.

2 Two Vols., over 400 pp. each, Price $2.00 per Vol.; postage 24 cts.

 For sale by the RELIGIO PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

ABSTRACT OF COLENSO ON THE PENTATEUCH.

A comprehensive summary of Bishop Colenso's argument proving that the Pentateuch is not historically true, and that it was composed by Samuel, Jeremiah, and other prophets, from 1100 to 624 B. C. The substance of five volumes in 45 pages. Price 25 cents. AMERICAN NEWS Co., N. Y.

v10 n8 6m

MRS. E. MANIFOLD

Medical, Clairvoyant, and Healing Medium. Parties at a distance examined by lock of hair. Fee, $1.00. Prescriptions, $1.00. Magnetic Remedies sent to all parts of the country. Address Mrs. E. C. Manifold, P. O. Box 1024, Rockford, Ill.

v10 n7 tf

MRS. C. H. LELAND,

Wonderful Psychometrist, Soul Reader, and Business Medium, will, upon receipt of photograph, lock of hair, whether married or single, send to any person a correct delineation of character, with leading events in the past and future life, for one dollar. Advice concerning business, two dollars. Written communications from friends in spirit life, two dollars. Satisfaction guaranteed. Inanimate fee mediumistic development, one dollar. Address, Myrickville, Mass.

v10 n10 tf

Dr. J. Wilbur's MAGNETIC PAPER

HAS cured all sorts of complaints, from cancer to mild. Send 3-cent stamp and receive one paper free. Dr. J. Wilbur, 460 W. Randolph St., Chicago, Ill.

n10 v.0 tf.

Artificial Somnambulism.

The author of the above named book, is a philosopher of large experience and great merit.

In this work he treats of the philosophy of mind as demonstrated by practical experiments during the last twenty years. No work has ever been published which so thoroughly demonstrates many popular theories to be unfounded, and fallacious; and at the same time gives a rational theory for phenomena manifested.

DR. FAHNESTOCK is a thorough believer in spirit communion, and teaches in this work the modus operandi, by a demonstration.

The following is the table of contents of this valuable work.

CHAP. I.—HISTORICAL SURVEY. Mesmer not the discoverer of the state.—His theory of it.—Its examination by the French commissioners.—Their conclusions.—The author's remarks.

CHAP. II.—Of the causes which have retarded the progress of the science.

CHAP. III.—Of the conditions necessary for the production of the somnambulic state, with instructions how to enter it, etc.: I.—Of the instructor or "operator." II.—Of the patient. III.—Instructions. IV.—Of the sensations experienced by persons who enter this state. V.—Of their awaking.

CHAP. IV.—Theory of this state.

CHAP. V.—Of the somnambulic proper sleep. I.—Of a partial state of Artificial Somnambulism.

CHAP. VI.—Of Physico-Somnambulism.

CHAP. VII.—Of the senses: I.—Motion; or, the power to move.

CHAP. VIII.—Of the functions of the faculties. I.—Consciousness. II.—Attention, III.—Perception. IV.—Memory. V.—Association. VI. AND VII.—Likes and Dislikes. VIII.—Judgment. IX.—Imagination. X.—Will.

CHAP. IX.—Of the peculiar functions of perception in the different faculties while in a natural state. I.—Of the peculiar functions of perception when in a state of Artificial Somnambulism. II.—The functions considered when in a state of Artificial Somnambulism. 1.—Consciousness. 2.—Attention. 3.—Perception. 4.—Memory. 5.—Association. 6 and 7.—Likes and Dislikes. 8.—Judgment. 9.—Imagination. 10.—Will.

CHAP. X.—Of reading the mind. I.—Illustration. II.—Illustration. Theory of Dr. Collyer. Mental alchemy or electrifying.

CHAP. XI. I.—Of the identity of other mysteries with this state. II.—Of the mysteries practiced by the modern magicians of Egypt. III.—Of the "mysterious lady." IV.—Of the earth mirror. V.—First earth glass. Second earth glass. V.—Second sight. VI.—Phantasms.

CHAP. XII.—Transposition of the senses.

CHAP. XIII.—Natural sleep.

CHAP. XIV.—Natural Somnambulism. I.—Trance.

CHAP. XV.—Of intuition.

CHAP. XVI.—Of development or foreknowledge.

CHAP. XVII.—Of interior prevision. II.—Of exterior prevision. III.—Prophetic dreams. IV.—Witchcraft.

CHAP. XVIII.—Of sympathy. I.—Of clairvoyance. Clairvoyance at a distance.

CHAP. XIX.—Of the sense of hearing.

CHAP. XX.—Of the sense of smell and taste.

CHAP. XXI.—Of the sense of feeling.

CHAP. XXII.—Of the sense of motion. Of their physical strength.

CHAP. XXIII.—Of the influence of Artificial Somnambulism on the system. I.—Of its influence upon a healthy subject. II.—Of its influence of Artificial Somnambulism upon diseased subjects.

CHAP. XXIV.—Artificial Somnambulism considered as a therapeutical agent.

CHAP. XXV.—Of the kinds of disease cured while in this state. I.—Chorea or St. Vitus's dance. II.—Epilepsy. III.—Dyspepsia. IV.—Intermittent fever. V.—Amaurosis. VI.—Case. VII.—Inflammatory rheumatism. VIII.—Chronic rheumatism. IX.—Hysteria. X.—Melancholy from unrequited love. XI.—Case. XII.—Case. XIII.—Case. XIV.—Contraction of the muscles of the fingers. XV.—Case. XVI.—Case. XVII.—Case.

CHAP. XXVI.—Surgical operations.

CHAP. XXVII.—Obstetrical cases. Conclusion.

This valuable work is for sale at the office, at $1.50 per volume, postage 20 cents. See book list in another column. The trade supplied on reasonable terms.

Spencer's Positive and Negative Powders, for sale this office.

MEDIUMS.

SPIRIT PHOTOGRAPHS,

A. D. WILLIS,

CHICAGO, ILL.

Those who live at a distance from my rooms and wish to obtain spiritual pictures, can receive the same result as if they were here, by inclosing five dollars, with a picture or a lock of hair, and stating the day and hour they wish a trial to be made. If no likeness is taken, the money will be refunded. Address, 156 S. Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

v9 n26 13t.

PROF. A. GOODMAN,

Magnetic Healer,

ST. NICHOLAS HOTEL, Decatur, Illinois.

v10 n7 tf

MRS. LODEMA ATWOOD,

Healing Medium,

Has been before the public as a successful Healer the past fifteen years. We rely entirely on the controlling influences. We diagnose and give prescriptions by letter. Distance no objection. Will visit in person a reasonable distance those that desire, and can afford the expense. Delineation and advice in a variety of ways. Emblems we give gratuitously to all our patients, when presented by our guides. Our former custom has been to come in rapport with the applicant by the hand-writing or lock of hair; but to save time, and the unpleasant sensation of taking on the symptoms of the disease, we require the applicant to give age and sex, with one or two leading symptoms of the disease, written by the patient, if able to write—if not, send lock of hair. As the giving of tests is not the object which we seek, but to restore the patient to health by Nature's own hand, in the shortest time possible, we do not deem it necessary here to lumber up an advertisement with what we have done or what we can do, but prefer to be known by our fruits.

Terms, for diagnosis and prescription, $2; Diagnosis without prescription, $1; all subsequent prescriptions, $1 each. All letters should be accompanied with the fee, and addressed to MRS. LODEMA ATWOOD, Box 45, Lake Mills, Jefferson Co., Wis.

v10 n1 tf.

Dr. Abba Lord Palmer.

BOX 101, NEW BOSTON, ILLINOIS

WONDERFUL PSYCHOMETRIST AND CLAIRVOYAN PHYSICIAN, SOUL READER AND BUSINESS MEDIUM.

Can diagnose disease by likeness, autograph, lock of hair, without a failure, and give prescription, which, if followed, will surely cure.

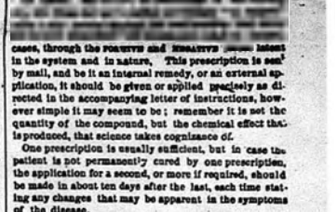
Can trace stolen property, tell the past, present and future —advise concerning business, and give written communications from spirit friends.

Diagnosis of disease, with prescription, $2.00. Communications from spirit friends, $3.00. Delineation of character with advice concerning marriage, $1.00.



n1 v10 tf.

MRS. A. H. ROBINSON,

Healing, Psychometric and Business Medium,

146 Fourth Avenue, Chicago.

MRS. ROBINSON, while under spirit control, on receiving a lock of hair of a sick patient, will diagnose the nature of the disease most perfectly, and prescribe the proper remedy. Yet, as the most speedy cure is the essential object in view, rather than to gratify idle curiosity, the better practice is to send along with a lock of hair, a brief statement of the sex, age, leading symptoms and cases, through the POSITIVE and NEGATIVE ... intent in the system and in nature. This prescription is sent by mail, and be it an internal remedy, or an external application, it should be given or applied precisely as directed in the accompanying letter of instructions, however simple it may seem to be; remember it is with the Quantity of the compound, but the chemical effect that is produced, that science takes cognizance of.

One prescription is usually sufficient, but in case the patient is not permanently cured by one prescription, the application for a second, or more if required, should be made in about ten days after the last, each time stating any changes that may be apparent in the symptoms of the disease.

Mrs. ROBINSON also, through her mediumship, diagnoses the disease of any one who calls upon her at her residence. The facility with which the spirits controling her accomplish the same, is done as well when the application is by letter as when the the patient is present. Her gifts are very remarkable, not only in the healing art, but as a psychometric, test, business and trance medium.

Terms:—Diagnosis and first prescription, $2.00; each subsequent, $1.00. Psychometric Delineation of Character, $3; answering Business Letters, $5. The money should accompany the application, to insure a reply.

J. G. W. ENTWISTLE,

CLAIRVOYANT PHYSICIAN.

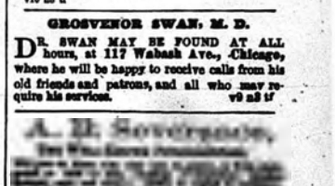
No. 194 South Clark Street, Room 3, Chicago.

He is prepared to treat any of the many forms of disease, and possesses a peculiar insight into the cause and character, and a controlling power over it which seems wonderful (even to himself). His medicines are purely vegetable. Invalids at any distance will be as thoroughly examined, and the means of cure (if curable) as definitely pointed out as if they were present, by sending a lock of hair, giving name, age, sex, and two leading symptoms of the disease. Insanity and fits not treated. Examination fee, by hair, $2.00.

v10 n8 tf

DUMONT C. DAKE, M.D.,

ANALYTICAL PHYSICIAN FOR CHRONIC DISEASES.



Patients at a distance successfully treated. Medicines sent by mail or express. Send a simple statement of condition, age, and sex, occupation, temperament, (if not known, send photograph). Address P. O. Box 98, Chicago, Ill. Send for ANALYTICAL HEALTH JOURNAL.

v10 n8 tf

GROSVENOR SWAN, M. D.

DR. SWAN MAY BE FOUND AT ALL hours, at 117 Wabash Ave., Chicago, where he will be happy to receive calls from his old friends and patrons, and all who may require his services.

v9 n8 tf

Original Essays.

Written for the Religio-Philosophical Journal.

FALLING STONES IN MEXICO.

By M. S. Knapp.

A brief account of stones falling during ten or twelve consecutive days and nights, around, upon, and in a house in this city, was sent you in September last, with a promise to give you a notice of another instance of the kind said to have previously occurred here. It was published in your JOURNAL of 27th November thereafter. I now fulfill my promise, premising that no further molestation has occurred to the family stoned. The father and son returned safely from their journey to the interior, and nothing has transpired since worthy of mention. No motive for the showers of stones has been made apparent, whether the work of boys or of spirits.

The particulars of the other disturbance of the kind have been given me by the family molested and friends who watched the premises, in order to detect the actors.

I called on the family and on certain of their friends, and find that as many as four or five times during the last decade of years showers of stones, old mortar, pieces of adobe, pieces of broken rocks, etc., have been precipitated into the back yard of the domicil of the family, continuing each time for several days and nights in succession, awakening great and general curiosity among the friends and neighbors but resulting in nothing, and gradually dying away. On various occasions, especially the earlier ones, the friends of the family, to the number of twenty or thirty men, patrolled the lots, streets, and alleys surrounding the premises, the adjoining yards and gardens within a stone's throw of the said yard, climbed the orange trees, stationed observers on the house-tops near the scene, but all to no purpose. No set of boys or evil-doers could be detected, while still the stones kept coming down, chuck, chuck, chuck, all about the yard, some rolling into the back door, and seeming to come from all points of the compass. The more the neighbors collected, the more lively the stones would fall—cobble-stones, brickbats, adobe-bats, hardened mortar, pieces of rock, entirely too heavy for any human being to project upward, or even outward from him to any distance; yet still these projectiles came down visibly in broad daylight, from heights far above any of the houses.

Such, succinctly, are the facts I have obtained from the family, and sundry persons who watched the phenomena, and who are truthful and reliable citizens.

Nobody was hurt. Nothing remarkable has ever occured to the family. The residence is less than one block from the public plaza. The phenomena were not witnessed by me, but I have no more doubt of their having occurred than of those I did witness, and that were detailed in my other communication. But qui bono?—this is the point. What is the utility of these stupid stonings? What benefit are offered, or may be supposed to be suggested to this people by these peltings with stones, admitting the phenomena to be the work of spirits? I will take leave to suggest what, in my opinion, may be the object of them anon, or before closing—the theory I have formed after some reflection.

In your issue of February 18th, in an article copied from Harper's Weekly, detailing similar—even more extraordinary — phenomena, the Groben disturbances, where stones were showered on the parsonage to an extent far exceeding the phenomena communicated by me, and repeated at intervals for a century of time, successive persons suffering the molestations, and receiving the visits of the "goblin" (spirit), supposed to be the actor in producing them.

[redacted] to those [redacted] arved here; and coming from the seat[redacted]er pause, the idea may not be considered a fabrication. I use it as a foil, therefore. These things occurred some two centuries ago, in the chaos of religious times, ere Spiritualism took form, and consequently no theory could be formed as respects the motives of the spirits actuating the phenomena.

The case is different now. It is well to bear in mind the religious excitements and revolutions of three days,—rampant condition of Protestantism—the faggot and the inquisition.

By your issue of February 11th, it appears that Father Hecker, Superior of the Paulist Fathers of New York, whose lecture you copy from the Washington Daily Patriot, believes in and endorses spirit intercourse for the whole Catholic Church,—hear, hear!—but holds that "there are two sides to this belief," of the intercourse of the spirits,"—"a light, angelic, and divine side, and a dark, diabolical and profane side,"—he Catholics having the former, and Spiritualists, whom he classes as Protestants, the latter;—"Revenge for their neglect of Catholic truth."

Cunning, surely! Yet how else but by this gratuitous, sectarian assumption of God's grace for Catholics, and hatred of Protestants, could he get over the difficulty of admitting spirit intercourse, and denying to Spiritualism all spiritual truth? The admission, however, that the Jacob's ladder is still up, and occupied by ascending and descending angels, is enough. This point will be remembered as a great truth in Father Hecker's lecture, while the sectarian claim will be set down to the weakness of human nature and soon forgotten.

Notwithstanding "He turned his bearers against the falsehood and wickedness of this 'dark side' of Spiritualism, and to beware of it, as of a poisonous snake," thousands of Catholics are going over—two of my own daughters among the number—and who are rejoicing in the light of this "dark side,"—and praising God that they are loosed from their bondage, that their shackles have fallen, that reason has triumphed, and this without one syllable of encouragement or persuasion from me. I never have felt myself competent or qualified to give one word of religious instruction to my children; left it all to my Catholic wife. If they fall from grace, it is not from my preaching or teaching. This is a lamentable confession—that a father can give no religious instruction to a child, but it is God's truth in my case; and yet, like the disciples who unconsciously walked with the risen Jesus to Emmaus, my heart has burned within me with religious fervor all the way from childhood to three-score years and ten; and if I had been educated under dogmas consonant with reason, in place of those that my childhood ignored as incredible, might have had a happy life, instead of one of religious hypocrisy and remorse.

Or, ye fathers of the "dark side" of spiritual [illegible], I appeal to you in behalf of the lyceums of tracts, in view of the spiritual needs of childhood. Don't teach children that God answers prayer, for this was my stumbling block. I broke my brother's slate, having taken it from the drawer to mark and play on, as children are wont to do, and child-like let it fall and broke it. Immediately after putting it back, I had recourse to prayer. I prayed in earnest that God would mend it, and before the family should come home from meeting. I had full faith that God was able to do it, and went into it with full faith that my petition would be answered. I prayed a second and a third time, nothing doubting but that the thing would be done, but on looking, there lay the broken slate just as I had placed it.

I went to my closet again and prayed most fervently, and made a long prayer to that omnipotent God, who, I had been taught, answered prayer, and then went and looked again,—the slate was not mended, and the first doubt came over me. Still I tried it a third time, but my faith was weakened, I prayed with less power and less confidence of a successful result.

Have commenced my doubts in the truth of the Christian scheme, and my struggles have been great. Taught that God loved pious children, and would reward early piety with signal benefits, I conformed under the counsels of pious parents, joined the church, prayed in meeting, frequently led in family prayer at my father's request, yet inwardly feeling and knowing that I was pretending to piety beyond the reality, or seeming to be what I was not—a great Christian, but inwardly a hypocrite, for now I doubted at every step. The burning hell for hypocrites was yawning to receive me. I was in the most horrid state of mind, for a year or more, that can be conceived.

I left New England and the scenes of my childhood at sixteen years of age, to which change I owe it that I escaped being a religious maniac. O ye fathers of the "dark side," don't forget the seed of the young. Teach truth, not sectarianism; reason, not morals; science, not Saybrook Platforms. Let your great aim be the young,—like Barnes of Indiana, or Stephen Girard. Disputations with the "elect" are of little avail—place-men are not easily convinced or converted. But the young and tender mind, is yours to mould to truth. It was a happy day for me when I married a devout Catholic, for the instruction of my children in any faith different from that horrid faith that had ground me to the dust, was a relief. I was married by the late Bishop of Charleston. I tried to conform to the Catholic faith, and a loved and loving wife's influence (now gone) went far to establish a resolve. I was baptized afresh by the late Bishop Quarter,—confessed and absolved by an eminent Jesuit father,—but before going to communion, that goblin hypocrite appeared to me again, and full faith and rational union suffer another hell on earth, the measure was abandoned. There was never any peace of mind or comfort in religion —practice or theory—with me until Dr. Hare's work on Spiritualism converted me to the "dark side" faith. Dr. Hare exchanged works with me. I gave him my work on Pathology, he gave me his on Spiritualism, then just published. In a few days, before I had even opened the book, for I considered it trash, I was prostrated with hemorrhage of the lungs—bled a pint in half an hour—hardly escaped suffocation. I did not expect to recover, although the late Dr. Goddard consoled me by the prognosis that "Old Scratch" had not come for me yet, though my lungs were filled with miliary tubercles." Hare's work as a dying man, and found comfort. It settles the matter of immortality as a natural law, and a progress in righteousness as the inalienable inheritance of all souls. This is enough for one to know about to cross the Styx.

Although my surroundings with bishops, priests and church associates, had brought me many moments of pleasure and comfort, still nothing ever equalled the soul-comforting influence of Hare's Spiritualism.

The climatic benefits received by a change to this far southern residence, have enabled me to hold on to life, and to be extensively useful to this people. True, my privations are great, in comparison with the spiritual privileges to be enjoyed in Philadelphia, New York, and Boston, but both self and humanity are [redacted] I am making [redacted] to the "dark side" before I die, not to Father Hecker.

But to return to the subject of the falling stones.

This ingeniously wrought key of Father Hecker for explaining, however nicely it may fit his church-lock for the medium of New York, fails to unlock the mystery of those Mexican manifestations. All of the people here are of the Catholic faith, or next to all. The families stoned certainly are.

Why do the spirits thus pelt good, quiet, honest, simple-minded Catholic families, when the fathers and brothers are away from home, frightening the women and children almost to death? Why wantonly wreak vengeance on them? Better bestow the "whacks on the noses," on Edmonds, Hall, Davis, Loveland, Newton, and others, that they may "fall prostrate and dead." Better stone to death the leaders of the "dark side" faith,—the Goliahs of the camp,—ye David spirits who can hurl stones straight. Better smash the Banner of Light office, the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL'S sanctum, and other organs, temples and book-stores of the "dark side" literature and communion.

This would illustrate the holy "revenge," the "light side" of spirit faith is hoping for, and would be glad to see—not the Catholic light side merely, but the whole Protestant light side —Protestant as well as Catholic.

More plausible to me is this theory. The Catholic Church is prostrate in Mexico. Toleration is the order of day. Every form of religion is placed on the same level, theoretically at least. Protestant societies—Presbyterian and Baptist—are organized here in Cadereyta. It is a time of religious revolution here, and the spirits are awakened, and are joining in the religious fray—chanting their choruses and hallelujahs, as best they can attract attention, probably hoping to show that "God is able of these stones to raise up children unto Abraham," or any how call attention to the spiritual needs of this priest-ridden, church-oppressed people. One illustration will be sufficient.

I was summoned to the bedside of a lady bleeding at the lungs but just a few days since. She was greatly alarmed, and wished to confess. The Cure was called. He would not confess her, because she was married by the civil judge and not in the Church! Her husband is a liberal-minded gentleman, and in this case will be carried up to higher authority for a decision. I am assured me that if a journal advocating the Spiritual Philosophy, in the Spanish language, could be circulated here, it would receive extensive support.

He has gleaned from knowledge of the philosophy. There are other inquiring minds here also—and Monterey some are receiving light through the French and Spanish Spiritual books and Journals. An ably conducted weekly Spiritual Journal ought to be printed in Spanish in New York for circulation here, and mediums [illegible] that out. The object of those showers of stones by the spirits, would then be answered, or would be begun to be answered, at least, as the signs of the times are discovered by me. Other motive there is none apparent. No theory but this can be rationally deduced from the facts and premises.

A large field is [illegible] Mexico, Cuba, and [illegible] publics. A spiritual [illegible] Father Hecker's goo[illegible] nursing with the mi[illegible] one reported,—would doubtless prove a success. If the hint here given should be carried into effect by some one capable, the spirits who have essayed to awaken an interest in their operations here, on finding their efforts seconded, would, doubtless, put forth exertions commensurate with the importance of the undertaking, and conquer a success.

No people in the world are more easily acted on than this credulous, primitive, simple-minded race, and with suitable mediums for physical manifestations, they would go over by hundreds and thousands. This is my opinion. For myself, the physical phenomena are useless, if not repugnant. I dislike the marvelous wherever encountered—that which the reason can not clear up. For this reason have been a skeptic in the marvelous in Spiritualism as well as in all other religions. Dr. Hare should have dug to the depths of the things, and explained the laws of the forces by which tables are turned, and not imposed it on the Association. The onus probandi rests with Spiritualists, who assert that spirits exert this force. This is the problem to solve. This solved, the world is converted and scientists disarmed. They can no longer take refuge at Spiritualism, or oppose it. Science and religion are then one.

Another thing in Spiritualism is very oppressive, the threats continually made at scientific medicine. Spiritualism prides itself in being a rational philosophy. Is there any one of the many spirit healers who can explain the law of spirit healing? Spiritualism claims that all operations are effected through natural laws. Will some spirit healer or amateur who is down on scientific medicine, please to unfold and explain the science of spirit healing, —give its rationale? The way should be made clear before extinguishing the old line science of medicine and art of healing; before blotting out all physic and surgery, and committing ourselves and families to the custody of assumed Christs and apostles whose prescription is, "Si-hold the man," or, "Sing on the cow-horn," and who, by "laying on of hands" grasp clever fees.

Every science has its elements. If spirit healing has not, wherein does each case cured, differ from a Catholic miracle? Free enlightened men, answer. And you, pure journalists, why do you publish secret nostrums? But not to mix up subjects too much, I desist for the present. I may have something to offer in the future on the law of healing. I do not wish now to divert attention from the one practical point of this hasty communication, viz., the establishing of a spiritual journal in New York in Spanish, for the immense field open in the South American republics, where the "stones are crying out" for the light of this philosophy, the disciples have held their peace so long.

In your issue of Feb 25th, a correspondent asks you if "Raising stones in Mexico" and certain other articles named, equally marvellous, published by you "wear the face of truth?" I answer, the phenomenon related by me, of "Falling Stones in Mexico," does not wear the face of truth at all. I asked nobody to believe it—could not—did not believe. I saw it, and therefore know it, but your correspondent can not believe it, because he did not see it. When I heard the Rev. Mr. Fishback assert in a spiritual conference in New York, in 1859, I think, that he was in Dr. Redman's office that morning, when a lot of his (Redman's) negroe's bones come tumbling in at the back window, the upper sash being let down, brought from Hartford by the negro's spirit, I did not believe the story of it. He saw it, and knew it. I can appreciate and respect your correspondent's incredulity, and that of every other unbelieving Thomas, and his desire to have you publish, in light of such things, "news from Europe, or the Chicago markets." Your reply commands my admiration:

"We desire it to be distinctly understood that the RELIGIO PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL caters to no preconceived opinions whatever; they are positive; it bows to the ipse dixit of no would be leaders. It respects no man who is infested with vanity, and assumes a position which intrinsic merit does not reward him, and yet it treats, with all proper respect every person, believing each and every one to be true to his or her own organism, internal forces and external surroundings."

Your enterprise, Mr. Editor, will not be likely to fall of support, so long as you are true to principles thus independent and just. Add my name, please, to your list of subscribers, and find inclosed three dollars, the amount of one year's subscription.

MISSIONARY EXPERIENCES IN WISCONSIN.

By J. O. Barrett.

DEAR JOURNAL:—When I read Swedenborg's statement that hyenas, snakes, toads, reptiles, and all filthy insects are manufactured into nests, it seemed at first absurd, but the more I think of it the stronger is my conviction that it is true. We know that chemical and electrical conditions are the parents of corresponding forms of life; that filthy beds, filthy sewers, filthy cellars, filthy rooms, filthy habits—the true hells—spontaneously produce filthy, preying creatures and worms.

In this sense, a human being may be a "child of hell," that is, of lustful, repellant affections and the character corresponds and so remains until there is a higher growth.

I am reminded of this law whenever I travel. What unhappy specimens of religionists the churches are manufacturing! Their characteristics are universally the same, where the church has the supreme control, namely,—bigotry, fashion, aristocracy, monopoly, hypocrisy, unbelief, and spiritual orphanage. It is most astonishing to what a spiritual deadness the churches are sinking.

Patch Grove.

Lectured here the 7th inst. The people are thoughtful, and earnest and inquiring. The Free Society has lately purchased a large and valuable library, containing substantial books. They have organized or mostly merged under the missionary enterprise. What is most needed there now is a good test medium.

Years ago liberal tracts and books were scattered among the people, causing thought, and an agitation from sectarian breakdown. All the free-minded are becoming warm supporters of the Spiritual Philosophy.

The first introduction of Spiritualism here was by G. W. Rice, now a brother ascended higher, a brother whose name sheds a lingering aroma along human walks.

About two years since, I there "held forth," in a series of lectures, which, by the aid of this kindled new interest. Then we were all morally shocked at the low vulgarisms of the Methodist minister still living there, when he attempted to reply. Whenever an "unregenerated" man is at a loss for an argument, he resorts to wicked ridicule and slander. The whole community, even his own people, were ashamed of him, and he was obliged to make a confession to his church, to hold his position. So I am informed. It is hoped his "conversion" is genuine.

Not long since, E. V. Wilson visited this "part of our Zion," and with his bold blows cracked the orthodox shell, hopefully giving satisfactory tests. He challenged our Methodist brother to debate, but he was wise enough not to venture into such a battle, knowing the peril and loss that would befall him.

Last winter, Brother A. A. Wheelock went there under the missionary auspices, and showered lightning upon the old fortification of Satan, and made successful war, saving souls. Scattering mentally he was to his former brethren, he found no place to speak in, accepted the dernier resort, a saloon, and there did his duty well. Bless his name, Rogue costed, velvet cushioned church, spit contemptuously now, and get off my bile! Jesus sat with publicans and sinners. Even that was better company than ecclesiastic pharisees.

I had a fine meeting in Bloomington, also in Mt. Hope. We all feel that the spiritual standard is planted in Grant county. At the latter meeting, after closing the lecture, a young daughter of Brother Youngjohns, of Woodman, gave initiatory tests of spirit presence. She is a rapping medium, and with judicious culture can be an instrument of great good.

Boscobel.

On the evening of the 10th lectured in Boscobel. This is one of the largest towns in the county, a [illegible] place, but unfortunately is socially diseased [illegible] orthodoxy and liquor saloons. A mixed audience gathered and listened very respectfully. This is the first of the kind here. Money out of my pocket, but pay to the soul, for it "breaks the ice." There is talk about it, good is done, for it "thunders all round."

When you can shock people till elated with church pestilences, there is hope.

At the close of the lecture a young up-start, who has had his soul tainted unfortunately by association with some theological discipline, came forward, and with Bible in hand, "reviewed the gentleman." He had a few Sabbaths before lectured against Spiritualism, "very cogently," in an orthodox church. The audience evinced a high degree of patience in listening to this gaseous egotist, so well fitted for such dirty work under the employment of the church. His appeals were to the passions and prejudices of the community, his language abusive and insulting.

I make it a point never to pause in my journey to whip a hireling car, for it hinders progress. It is no moral glory to banter words with a vain man. Let him run himself out and learn wisdom. I was obliged to leave for the car just as he closed, and had no time for even a few words of counsel to the youngster. He paid his mother rather an unhandsome compliment by saying that she is a "Spiritist," that "Spiritists refused to marry," "broke up families," and are all "free lovers." For the sake of his mother, who no doubt weeps for her misguided son I will withhold his name. Doubtless the churches will puff him up to action to be another specimen of a Leland. I am satisfied that this obscured Spiritist feels that it is time to play —criticism with pity. You had a notice from him, "the vile RELIGIO PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL!"

May the risen angels yet reach all such, and deliver them from the hells into which they have fallen.

The fact is patent that the church is running mad,—that its light is extinguished by this opposition of believing Spiritists, that it is the time of pity

Price-List of Books.

LIST OF BOOKS FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

All orders by mail, with the price of books desired, and the additional amount mentioned in the following list of prices for postage, will meet with prompt attention.

	Price.	Postage.
Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies	.75	16
Artificial Somnambulism. By Dr. Pabasecki	1.50	20
A Revelation of Departed Spirits among the Shakers	.25	02
Alice Vale, a Story for the times, by Lois Waisbrooker	1.25	16
American Crisis, by Warren Chase	.25	02
Answers to Questions Practical and Spiritual. Demy 8vo.	4.00	60
Apocryphal New Testament	1.25	16
A Test into Sacred Tradition, by Rev. Orrin Abbot. Paper	.50	02
Age of Reason, by Thomas Paine. Cloth	.50	06
A Woman's Secret, by Mrs. G. L. Goodin	1.75	20
A Lesson in Rhyme—The Past, Present and Future, by Mrs. P. A. Logan	.15
Account of Nature, or History and Laws of Creation, Vol 1, by Hudson Tuttle	1.25	20
Arcana of Nature, or the Philosophy of Spiritual Science, and of the Spirit-World, Vol 2, by Hudson Tuttle	1.25	20
A B C of Life, by A. B. Child	.25	02
Arabula, or the Divine Guest, by A. J. Davis	1.50	20
After Death, or Disembodied Man, by Randolph	1.50	20
Cloth	1.50	20
Approaching Crisis, by A. J. Davis	1.50	16
Appeal to Reason, (translated from the French) by Renan	1.75	16
A Stellar Key to the Summer Land by A. J. Davis	1.50	16
Astro-Theological Lectures by Rev. Robert Taylor	2.00	24
A Kiss for a Blow, a Book for children by H. C. Wright, small edition	.60	12
Large do. do.	1.50	16
Antiquity and Duration of the World by G. H. Tousley, M. D.	.25	6
An Eye Opener, by Zepp. Cloth,	.75	12
Paper	.50	.04
A Roman Lawyer in Jerusalem in the first century by W. Wirt Sikes	.15	2
Address on Spiritualism, by T. G. Forster.	.15	.02
Analogy Between the Facts of the Bible and the Facts of modern Spiritualism, by T. G. Forster.	.15	.02
Arcana of Spiritism, by H. Tuttle.	2.00
Biography of Satan, By E. Graves' Price 35 Cents
Better Views of Living, by A. B. Child	1.50	16
Elements of Our Spring, (a Poetic Work,) by Hudson Tuttle	.25	16
Beyond the Breakers, a Tale of Village Life in the West, by Robert Dale Owen	2.00	24
Beauties of Nature, by Mrs. Van Hamon. Cloth	.75	16
Branches of Palm, by Mrs. J. S. Adams' book for every Spiritualist	1.25	16
Bethlehem, Professor W. Denton	1.50	20
Bhagvat-Geeta, or Hindoo New Testament	1.25	16
Zoological Sins against the Laws of Life and Health, by A. B. Child, M. D. & M. D. Cloth	1.00	06
	1.50	16
Gardner Constitution of Man	1.75	16
Common Sense Thoughts on the Bible, by William Denton	.10	02
Cosmology, by G. W. Ramsey, M. D.	1.50	20
Christ Idea in History, by Thomas Paine	1.50	20
Christ Idea in History, H. Tuttle	1.25	16
Clarke Family, or the Curse of the Drunkard's Appetite, by Judge M. Friend, with an introduction by H. C. Wright	1.00	12
Christ and the people, by A. B. Child, M.D.	1.25	16
Christianity in Relation to Civilization, and its relation to Nature's Religion, by Caleb S. Weeks	.25	02
Christianity No Finality or Spiritualism Superior to Christianity	.10	02
Criticism on the Theological Idea of Deity, by M. S. Craven	1.00	16
Descent of man, by Darwin. Two Vols., ($2.00 per Vol)	4.00	40
Davenport Brothers, their Rise—Progress and Triumphs	1.50	20
Day of Doom, A Poetical Description of the Great and Last Judgment with other poems, from the 13th edition of 17th	1.00	12
Devil's Pulpit, by Rev. Robert Taylor, with Sketch of the Author's Life	2.00	20
Dealings with the Dead, by P. B. Randolph	.75	12
Death and the After Life, by A. J. Davis, paper 50, postage 4, cloth	.75	12
Errors of the Bible. Uncontradicted by the Treasurer of Holiness, by Hon. J. G. Wright. Paper, 35 cts; postage, 4 cts. Cloth	.50	8
Easter Hall, a Theological Romance	.50	06
Errors of the Mother, over the Character and Destiny of the Race, H. C. Wright paper	.50	04
Cloth	.75	12
Fables and True Revival of Religion, by Theodore Parker	.10	02
Footfalls on the Boundary of Another World, by Robert Dale Owen	1.75	24
Familiar Spirits and Spiritual Manifestations, by Dr. Heath Read	.20	2
Great Work on Concerning Religion, or Nature v s Theology, by A. J. Davis	.20	2
Fugitive Wife, by Warren Chase. Paper	.25	4
Festival Night, an Inspirational Poem, Mrs. M. J. Wilkinson, Medium	.25	4
Guide, a Tale of the Great Rebellion, by Emma Tuttle	1.25	16
Gist of Spiritualism, by Warren Chase	.20	04
Great Harmonia, by A. J. Davis. 5 vols. viz: Vol 1 The Physician; Vol 2, The Seer; Vol 3, The Reformer; Vol 4, The Thinker. Each	1.50	20
Gymnastic Manual for Teachers and Students	1.50	20
God Idea in History, by Hudson Tuttle	1.25	16
God Dealing with Slavery, by Thomas Richmond. Paper, 75 ct; postage, 10 cts. Cloth	.75	06
Hierophant, or Disunings from the Past, by G. C. Stewart	1.00	.06
Guide to Good Living W. W. Hall M. D.	1.00	20
Harbinger of Health, by A. J. Davis	1.50	20
Harmonial Man, or Thoughts for the Age, by A. J. Davis, Paper	.50	6
Cloth	.75	12
History and Philosophy of Evil, by A. J. Davis Paper	.50	8
Cloth	.75	12
Hayward's Book of all Religions, including Spiritualism	1.50	24
Holy Bible and Mother Goose, by H. C. Wright	.38	02
How and Why I become a Spiritualist	.75	12
Human Nature, by Lois Waisbrooker	1.50	20
How to Write, by S. P. Miller, M. D. Paper	.50	06
Cloth	.75	12
Hedged In, by Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, author of Gates Ajar	1.50	16
Hollow Globe	2.00	.30
History and Philosophy of Marriage, or Polygamy and Social Monogamy	1.25	16
History of the Intellectual Development of Europe by J. W. Draper, M. D., L. D., 2 vols.	5.00	60
Human Relations to Diseases and Dynamical, or the Conditions and Course of the Life of Man, by J. W. Draper, M. D., L. D., 600 page, cloth 1.50 cheap 6.50	60
History of all the supernaturals, (8 Vols., 840 pages each)	2.00	.16
Hell, by Rev. Mary A. Walker	1.25	.16
Institutes, by Mrs. F. Kinsley	1.25	16
Important Truths, a book for every class	.30	4
Is the Bible Divine? by S. J. Finney, Paper	.30	4
Is there a Devil? The argument Pro and Con	.30	4
Inquirer's Text Book for Earnest Seekers	1.25	16
Instructions Communications from Spirit Land, Mrs. M. H. Park, Medium	1.25	16
Institute in my Life, by Dr. D. D. Home, Introduction by Judge Edmonds	1.25	16
Ideal, or Inquirer's Text Book by Robert Cooper	1.25	16
Is it the Despair of Science? by W. D. Gunning	.15	2
Jesus of Nazareth, by Alexander Smyth	1.50	20
Johnston Controversy, or the Character of the Jewish Bible Delineated	.25	4
Jesus of Ate—A Biography, translated from the French, by Sarah M. Grimke	1.00	12
Kiddle or Boston Boy Reasoning. Price, paper bound 50 cents. Board bound	.75	08
Koran, with explanatory notes, by George Sale & ors. 600 pages, leather bound, marbled edges	1.50	60
Koran, with Life of Mohammed, Translated by George Sale, Gent. 12 mo., 475 pages	1.50	.24
Life Line of the Lone One, by Warren Chase	1.00	12
Life and Labors of Robert Dale Owen	.50	8
Life of Thomas Paine, with critical and explanatory notes, and a review of his writings, by G. Vale	1.50	16
Life of Jesus, by Rev. Joseph Cook	1.75	20
Love and its Hidden History, by P. B. Randolph	1.00	.08
Life in the Depths, or Undeveloped Spirit's History, by P. B. Randolph	1.50	16
Lyrics of the Golden Age, by Lizzie Doten	1.50	20
Lessons in Psychometry, or Mesmerism as it, and as it is	.50	8
Lecture on Creation, by H. C. Wright, M. D.	.10	02
Life and Moral Actions of Confucius, by M. S. R.	.25	02
Letters to Elder Miles Grant, by Rev. Moses Hull	.25	02
Living Present, Dead Past. H. C. Wright. Cloth,	.75	12
Paper	.50	.04
Lyceum Guide. Cloth cover	.25	02
Paper cover	.15	02
My Love and I, by Abby M. Laffin Power	.50	8
Magic Staff, an Auto-Biography of A. J. Davis	1.75	20
Mental Medicine, by Dr. Haddock	1.50	20
Marriage and Parentage, by Henry G. Wright	1.00	12
Memory of Angels, and other Poems, by A. B. Norton	.50	8
Mediumship Prayer	.10	02
Moses and the Israelites, by Marcus Mosaner	1.50	16
Mrs. Packard's Prison Life	1.50	16
Manual of Freemasonry	1.00	08
Memoirs of the Island of Life, by D. S. Cadwell	.50	.06
Mother Goddess, (the Ideomia) by A. J. Davis	.50	8
Mediumship, and other Poems, by Lizzie Doten	1.50	20
Nature's Laws and Gospels, or the Foundation of Spiritualism	.50	8
Nature's Divine Revelations, by Andrew Jackson Davis	5.00	60
New Testament Miracles, and Modern Miracles, by J. H. Powier	.10	4
Night Side of Nature, by Crow	1.50	.20
Ordeal of Life. Through Dr. J. G. Grimes, Medium,	.25	04
Orthodoxy False, since Spiritualism is True, by Rev. Denton	.10	20
Our Planet, Geology by Denton	1.50	20
Optimism, The Lesson of Ages	.75	10
Origin of Species. Darwin	2.00	.24
Origin of Civilization and Primitive Condition of Man, by Sir J. Lubbock	2.00	.24
Our Religion, Man's Creed, by Miss Winsor	1.50	.20
Origin of Species, with Notes and References, by G. F. Kittredge	.10	.02
Persons and Places. J. Davis	20.00	100
Pre-Adamite Man, by Randolph	1.50	20
Physiology of Woman by G. Morril, M. D.	1.00	10
Parables—The Gospels of Science, by Epes Sargent	1.25	16
Pamphlets of Spiritual Intercourse. A. J. Davis. Paper 60 cts; postage 8 cts. Cloth	1.00	.16
Principles of Nature, by Mrs. M. M. King	1.75	.24
Poems from the Inner Life, by Lizzie Doten	1.25	16
Philosophy of Creation, by Thomas Paine, through Miriam Wood, Medium. Cloth,	.50	06
Paper	.25	.04
Real Life in Spirit Land given Inspirationally by Mrs. Maria M. King	1.00	12
Rules for forming Spiritual Circles, by Susan Sargent	.05	01
Sexual Physiology, by R. T. Trall, M. D	2.00	20
Strange Visitors, Dictated through a clairvoyant	1.50	20
Spiritual Harp	1.50	.20
Self-Contradictions of the Bible	.25	2
Soul Affinity, by A. B. Child, M. D.	.20	02
Sexology as the Philosophy of Life, by Mrs. R. G. Willard	2.00	24
Six Lectures on Theology and Nature, by Moses Hardings, Paper	.75
Cloth	1.25
Soul of Things, by William and Elizabeth Denton	1.50	20
Spirit Manifestations, by Adin Ballou	.75	12
Spiritual Harmonies Explained, by A. J. Davis	1.50	20
Supremacy of Reason, by Moses Hull	.10	.02
Social Evils by Mrs. M. M. King	.35
Spiritual Philosophy versus Diabolism, by Mrs. M. M. King	.25	02
Sense and Nonsense, S. M. Landis, M. D.	2.00	20
Scraps of Life.—S. W. Tucker	.25	02
Spiritual Songs.—S. W. Tucker	.15	.02
Spirit Life of Theodore Parker, through the Medium ship of Miss H. Randall	.40	02
Seven Hour System of Grammar, by Prof. D. P. Howe	1.00	.06
Paper	.50	.04
Science of Evil, by Joel Moody	1.75	.20
Seership, Randolph	2.00	.20
Spiritual Manifestations, by J. R. Rymer	.10	02
The Fountain, by A. J. Davis	1.00	12
The Irreconcilable Records, or Genesis and Geology, by Wm. Denton,	.25	04
Cloth,	.40	.06
The Bible in India,	2.00	20
The Faithful Guardian, an Inspirational Story, by J. J. Williams. Van Horn	1.50	16
The Bible in the Balance,	1.50	16
That Terrible Question, by Moses Hull	.10	02
True Love. What it is, and What it is not, by A. B. Davis	.5	02
The Dynamic Cure, by Leroy Sunderland	2.00	12
Tale of A Physician,	1.75	20
The Future Life, by Mrs. Sweet	1.50	20
The Question Settled, by Moses Hull	1.50	16
The Spirit World Open, by Moses Hull	1.50	16
The Gates Ajar, by Miss. E. P. Phelps	1.50	16
The Orphan's Struggle, by Mrs. H. H. Green	.15
The Pearl Diver by Dr. G. Kitz	.25	2
The Gospel of God and Evil, by Silver	1.50	16
The Trance, by Leroy Sunderland	2.00	16
The Great South-West, by T. Hinsley	1.00	10
The Merits of Jesus Christ and the Merits of Thomas Paine as a substitute for merits in others. What is the difference between them? E. G. Wright	.25	2
The Philosophical Dictionary of Voltaire. Fifth American Edition, 876 octavo pages, two steel plates, largest and most correct edition in the English Language. Contains more matter than the London Edition, which sells for $10.00	5.00	60
The Devil, and Other Discourses, Robert Taylor, written by him while imprisoned for blasphemy. This work is a history of the origin, evidence, and early history of Christianity	1.50	20
The Gates Ajar, by Miss. E. P. Phelps	1.50	16
The Orphan's Struggle, by Mrs. H. H. Green	.15
The Pearl Diver by Dr. G. Kitz	.25	2
The Gospel of God and Evil, by Silver	1.50	16
The Trance, by Leroy Sunderland	2.00	16
The Great South-West, by T. Hinsley	1.00	10
The Merits of Jesus Christ and the Merits of Thomas Paine as a substitute for merits in others. What is the difference between them? E. G. Wright	.25	2
The Philosophical Dictionary of Voltaire. Fifth American Edition, 876 octavo pages, two steel plates, largest and most correct edition in the English Language. Contains more matter than the London Edition, which sells for $10.00	5.00	60
The Devil, and Other Discourses, Robert Taylor, written by him while imprisoned for blasphemy. This work is a history of the origin, evidence, and early history of Christianity	1.50	20
The Inner Mystery, Inspirational Poem by Lizzie Doten	.10	02
The Three Voices	1.25	16
The Ignorant Philosopher, Voltaire	.25	2
The Woman who Dared	1.50	20
Theological and Miscellaneous Writings of Thomas Paine	1.50	24
Tuttle Pulse's Pilgrimage in the Spirit World	.75	08
The Mystery of Heaven, or Laws of the Moral and Physical World, by Baron D'Holbach	2.00	24
The Philosophy of Life, by J. S. Adams. Paper cover, Board cover	.50	06
Cloth	.75	16
Tobacco and its Effects, by H. Gibbons, M. D.	.30	02
The Penetralia, by A. J. Davis	1.75	24
The Fish o, a Satirical Poem	.10	.02
The Reformer Steam Book, compiled from all languages, by P. B. Randolph	.50	.04
Underhill on Mesmerism, Post-paid	1.50
Unhappy Marriages, by S. Child	.25	2
Unwelcome Child, by Henry C. Wright, Paper	.35	4
Cloth	.60	12
Voice of Prayer, by Barlow	1.50	20
Vestiges of Creation,	.75	.06
What Force, how wasted and how preserved, by R. T. Hallock, M. D. Paper, 50 cts.; Cloth,	1.00	12
Volney's Ruins; or Meditations on the Revolutions of Empires, with Biographical notice by Count Dare	1.00	12
Voices from Spirit-Land through N. F. White	.25	12
What is Right, William Denton	.10	2
What is Spiritualism, and Shall Spiritualists Unite in a Creed? by Mrs. M. M. King	.25
Whatever is, is Right, A. B. Child, M. D.	1.50	16
Writings of Omahne	.75	08
Wolf in Sheep's Clothing, or God in the Constitution. Moses Hull	.10	02
Year Book of Spiritualism. Cloth,	1.50	20
Paper	1.00	06

WE ARE ALSO NOW IN A SITUATION TO FURNISH Miscellaneous books of any kind published at regular rates, and, on receipt of the money, will send them by mail or express as MAY BE DESIRED. If sent by mail, one fifth more than the regular cost of the book will be required to prepay postage. The patronage of our friends is solicited. In making remittances for books, buy postal orders when practicable. If postal orders cannot be had, register your letters.

H. SNOW,

819 KEARNEY ST., (Up Stairs,) SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.,

Keeps for sale the

RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL,

And a general variety of

Spiritualist and Reform Books,

At Eastern prices. Also, Orton's Anti-Tobacco Preparation, Spence's Positive and Negative Powders, Adams & co.'s Golden Pens, Planchettes, Dr. Storer's Nutritive Compounds, etc. Catalogues and Circulars mailed free. ☞ Remittances in U. S. currency and postage stamps received at par. Address, HERMAN SNOW, P. O. Box 117, San Francisco, Cal.

WARREN CHASE & CO.,

No. 601 NORTH FIFTH ST., ST. LOUIS, MO.,

KEEP constantly on hand all the publications of the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, Wm. White & Co., J. P. Mendum, Adams & Co., and all other popular liberal literature, including RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNALS and BANNER OF LIGHT, Magazines, Photographs, Parlor Games, Golden Pens, Stationery, etc.

First Enlarged Edition.

Death and the After-Life.

EIGHT LECTURES ON THE SUMMER

LAND.

By Andrew Jackson Davis.

THIS edition contains more than double the amount of matter in many previous editions, with only a small advance in price. Bound in cloth, 75cts, Postage, 16cts; in paper, covers, 50cts, Postage 4cts.

For sale at the Office of the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL, 187 & 189, South Clark street, Chicago, Ill.

Rail-Roads.

SUMMER ARRANGEMENT.

ARRIVAL AND DEPARTURE OF TRAINS.

Chicago and Northwestern Railroad—Council Bluffs and Omaha Line—Depot North Wells street

Ticket Office, south-east corner of Clark and Lake streets.

	Leave.	Arrive.
Cedar Rapids Passenger	8.30 a. m.	9.00 p. m.
Pacific Fast Line	*10.45 a. m.	2.50 p. m.
Rock Island Express	10.30 a. m.	*2.50 p. m.
Pacific Night Express	11.00 p. m.	7.00 a. m.
Rock Island Night Passenger	*10.00 p. m.	7.00 a. m.
Dixon Passenger	*4.00 p. m.	*11.15 a. m.

Freeport Line.

Freeport and Dunleith Pass	*9.00 a. m.	*7.15 a. m.
Freeport and Dunleith Pass	*4.45 p. m.	*2.00 p. m.
Rockford, Rigin, Fox River and Elgin Line	*4.00 p. m.	*11.10 a. m.
St. Charles and Elgin Passenger	*6.15 p. m.	*9.45 a. m.
Junction Passenger	5.30 p. m.	8.30 a. m.
Lombard Accommodation	*6.15 p. m.	*8.30 a. m.

Milwaukee Division—Depot corner of Canal and Kinzie street.

Milwaukee Mail	*9.00 a. m.	*10.10 a. m.
Day Express	*8.45 a. m.	*4.40 p. m.
Evanston Accommodation	*1.00 a. m.	*2.00 p. m.
Rose Hill, Evanston, and Highland Park	1.00 p. m.	3.40 p. m.
Afternoon Express	*6.15 p. m.	*7.40 p. m.
Kenosha Pass	6.15 p. m.	*9.10 a.m.
Waukegan Passenger	*6.15 p. m.	*9.35 a. m.
Waukegan do	6.00 p. m.	*7.55 a. m.
Milwaukee do	11.00 p. m.	5.00 a.m
Wilcoxha and Waukegan trains leave from Wells street Depot.

Wisconsin Division—Depot corner of Canal and Kinzie street

St Paul Express	*10.00 a. m.	*7.15 p. m.
Night Passenger	*6.00 p. m.	*6.00 a. m.
Janesville Accommodation	4.30 p. m.	*9.30 a. m.
Woodstock Accommodation	*3.30 p. m.	*10.10 a. m.
Barrington Accommodation	6.15 p. m.	7.45 a. m.

GEO. L. DUNLAP, General Superintendent.

H. P. Hanscomb, General Ticket Agent

Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Rail-Road,

Depot corner Van Buren and Sherman streets. (Ticket Office 66 South Clark street.

Mail	*6.30 a. m.	*7.00 p m
Special N Y Express	*9.00 a. m.	*8.40 p. m.
Hitchcock Accommodation	*3.30 p. m.	*10.20 a. m.
Atlantic Express	6.15 p. m.	7.00 p. m.
Night Express	*9.00 p. m.	*6.30 a. m.

Detroit and Grand Rapids Line.

Day Express	*7.30 a. m.	*7.00 p. m.
Night	*9.00 p. m.	*6.30 a. m.

P. S. MORSE, Gen'l Pass. Agt., 84 Clark st., Chicago.

Michigan Central Railroad—Union Depot, foot of Lake street

Ticket Office Lake st., cor. Dearborn—Passenger trains of this company leave and arrive at Chicago as follows:

Mail Train	*8.30 a. m.	*6.00 p. m.
Mail New York Express	*9.00 a. m.	*6.00 p. m.
Atlantic Express (daily)	12.15 p. m.	*7.00 a. m.
Night Express	*9.00 p. m.	*6.30 a. m.
Kalamazoo Accommodation	*4.40 p. m.	*12.00 m

Cincinnati and Louisville Trains

Day Express	*9.00 a. m.	*2.20 p. m
Through Express	4.30 p. m.	*6.30 a. m

for St. Joseph via New Buffalo.

Day Express	*9.00 a. m.	*11.30 a. m
Accommodation	*4.30 p. m.	*8.05 p. m

HENRY G. WARNWORTH, General Passenger Agent.

H. B. RAMSEY, Gen'l Superintendent, Chicago.

Chicago, Burlington and Quincy.

Ticket Office 63 Clark St., opposite Sherman House. Union Depot, foot of Lake St.

Hinsdale Accommodation	*7.05 a. m.	*5.15 p. m
Mail and Express	7.30 a. m.	3.40 p. m.
Pacific Fast Line	*10.45 a. m.	*4.15 p.m.
Hinsdale Accommodation	*1.45 p. m.	*5.30 p. m.
Hinsdale Accommodation	*5.30 p. m.	*9.45 a. m.
Evening Express	*6.00 p. m.	7.30 p. m
Aurora Passenger	*6.30 p. m.	*8.30 a. m.
Hinsdale Accommodation	*6.15 p. m	*8.50 a. m.
Pacific Night Express	12.00 p. m.	7.30 a. m

ROSSIE HARRIS, Superintendent.

SAMUEL POWELL, Gen'l Ticket Agt. Office in Gt. Cent. Depot

Illinois Central—Depot, foot of Lake street.

Cairo Mail	*9.30 a. m.	*7.45 p. m
Cairo Express	10.15 p. m.	*7.00 a. m.
Kankak Day Passenger	*9.30 a. m.	*7.45 p. m.
Kankakee Night Passenger	*5.30 p. m.	*7.00 a. m.

On Saturdays this train will leave at 4.45 p. m.

Chicago Express	4.00 p. m.	*9.00 a. m.
Hyde Park and Oak Woods	*9.00 a. m.	*7.00 a. m.
" " " "	*12.00 m.	*10.00 a. m.
" " " "	*2.30 p. m.	*12.30 p. m.
" " " "	*4.30 p. m.	*2.30 p. m.
" " " "	*6.00 p. m.	*3.15 p. m.
" " " "	*8.00 p. m.	*5.15 p. m.
" " " "	*9.30 p. m.	*7.00 p. m.
Day Express	*9.30 a. m.	*6.15 p. m
Fast Line	10.15 p. m.	*7.00 a. m.

H. HUNTER, Gen'l Supt.

W. P. JOHNSON, Gen'l Passenger Agent.

Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne and Chicago—Depot, Corner of Michigan and Canal Streets.

Mail	*6.30 a. m.	8.10 p. m.
Fast Line	*9.00 a. m.	8.00 a. m.
Atlantic Express	6.15 p. m.	1.00 p. m.
New York Express	9.00 p. m.	9.00 a. m.
Valparaiso Accommodation	5.30 p. m.	8.30 a. m.

W. C. CLEMANS, Gen. West'n Pass. Agt., 65 Clark st.

Chicago and St. Louis—Depot, corner Madison and Canal sts

Express Mail	*9.15 a. m.	*3.00 p. m.
Joliet Accommodation	*4.00 p. m.	*9.15 a. m.
Night Express	10.30 p. m.	*6.05 a. m.
Lightning Express	† 9.00 p. m.	*8.30 a. m.

*Except Sundays. †Runs through to St. Louis every night. ‡Saturdays and sundays excepted. ||Except Monday.

T. B. BLACKSTONE, Pres. & Gen'l Superintendent.

A. NEWMAN, Gen'l Pass. Agt., Office 86 Dearborn st.

CHICAGO, DANVILLE AND VINCENNES RAILROAD.

Milwaukee Depot—Corner Canal and Kinzie Sts., West Side. Freight Office at C., C. & I. R. R. Co.'s Office, corner Halsted and Kinzie sts.

Mail Train Chicago time, 3.45 p. m. 9.15 a. m

Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad.

cor Van Buren and Sherman Streets.

Pacific Day Express	10.00 a.m.	6.15 p.m.
Fast Accommodation	*2.30 p.m.	*9.50 a.m.
Pacific Night Express	10.00 p.m.	*7.00 a.m.

An elegant parlor sleeping car is attached to the 10 a. m. train, running through to Council Bluffs and Omaha.

A. H. SARGENT, Gen'l Passenger Agent.

R. R. JOHNS, Gen'l Ticket Clerk.

P. A. HALL, Asst'n Gen Superintendent.

Pittsburg, Cincinnati, & St. Louis R. R.—Cincinnati Air Line.

Cincinnati Express	*8.45 a. m.	3.00 a. m.
Columbus Express	*8.45 a. m.	*2.30 p. m.
Columbus Night Express	11.45 p. m.	*2.30 p. m.
Crestline Night Express	11.45 p. m.
Lansing Accommodation	5.45 p. m.	9.15 a. m.

H. E. SARGENT, Gen'l Pass. Agt., Ticket Office Corner Randolph and Dearborn streets.

Goodrich's Passenger Steamers.

For Milwaukee and West Shore ports *daily at 9.00 a. m. For Grand Haven and East Shore ports *daily at 7.00 p. m. For St. Joseph and Benton Harbor, *daily at 12 m. Green Bay Ports, Tuesdays and Fridays at 7 p. m.

*Sundays excepted. †Mondays excepted. ‡Saturdays excepted.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF CREATION

Unfolding the laws of the Progressive Development of Nature, and embracing the Philosophy of Man, Spirit, and Spirit World.—By Thomas Paine, through the hand of Horace G. Wood, Medium.

Price 75 cents, postage 4 cents. For sale at this Office

The Biography of Satan;

or an Historical Exposition of the

DEVIL AND HIS FIERY DOMINIONS,

Showing the oriental origin of the belief in a Devil and Future Endless Punishment. All about the

BOTTOMLESS PIT, KING OF HELL, Chains of Darkness, Casting out Devils, etc.,

By H. GRAVES, author of "Christianity Before Christ."

Price 1—35 cents. The Trade Supplied at Liberal Rates.

PUBLISHED BY

RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL Publishing House, 187 & 189 S. Clark St, Chicago.

THE FUTURE LIFE

As Described and Portrayed by Spirits.

Through Mrs. Elizabeth Sweet.

WITH AN INTRODUCTION BY

JUDGE J. W. EDMONDS.

CONTENTS.

Chapter I.—The Holy City.
Chapter II.—Spiritual Message.
Chapter III.—The Spirit Echo.
Chapter IV.—Powers and responsibilities of mind
Chapter V.—Communication from a Spirit.
Chapter VI.—Spirit-life.
Chapter VII.—A picture of the Future.
Chapter VIII.—Margaret Fuller.
Chapter IX.—Reasonable Words.
Chapter X.—Interview with Fellows.
Chapter XI.—New Desires.
Chapter XII.—John C. Calhoun.
Chapter XIII.—Interview with Webster.
Chapter XIV.—A Second Visit.
Chapter XV.—Another Interview.
Chapter XVI.—Reformation.
Chapter XVII.—The path of Progression.
Chapter XVIII.—Valley of the Shadow of Death.
Chapter XIX.—The Mirror.
Chapter XX.—The Book of Life.
Chapter XXI.—A Beautiful Lesson.
Chapter XXII.—Retrospection.
Chapter XXIII.—The Mechanic.
Chapter XXIV.—The Preacher.
Chapter XXV.—Reception of Spiritualism.
Chapter XXVI.—The Drunkard.
Chapter XXVII.—The Organ-Boy
Chapter XXVIII.—The Man of Ease and Fashion.
Chapter XXIX.—The Self Satisfied.
Chapter XXX.—Natural Development of the Soul.
Chapter XXXI.—Retrospection and Waiting.
Chapter XXXII.—The Cynic.
Chapter XXXIII.—The Second Birth.
Chapter XXXIV.—The Dying Girl.
Chapter XXXV.—The Queen.
Chapter XXXVI.—A Dance in Spirit-Land.
Chapter XXXVII.—The Miser.
Chapter XXXVIII.—Spiritual Influence.
Chapter XXXIX.—The New City.
Chapter XL.—The Spirit's Home.
Chapter XLI.—The Idler.
Chapter XLII.—The Beggar.
Chapter XLIII.—Insignificance of Man.
Chapter XLIV.—Capabilities of the soul.
Chapter XLV.—The Skeptic.
Chapter XLVI.—Realities of Spirit-Life.
Chapter XLVII.—The Convict.
Chapter XLVIII.—The Soul's Aspiration.
Chapter XLIX.—The Dying Girl.
Chapter L.—The Inner Temple.
Chapter LI.—The Foolish Mother.
Chapter LII.—The Disobedient Son.
Chapter LIII.—Cardinal Richelieu.
Chapter LIV.—Practical Nature of Spirit-Life.
Chapter LV.—Glimpse of a Higher Life.
Chapter LVI.—Communication.
Chapter LVII.—A Word from Voltaire.
Chapter LVIII.—Hosts of Unhappy Spirits.
Chapter LIX.—Experience of Voltaire.
Appendix.

Price $1.50; postage 20 cents. For sale at this office.

Prof. Wm. Denton's Works.

THE SOUL OF THINGS; OR PSYCHOMETRIC RESEARCHES AND DISCOVERIES. By William and Elizabeth M. F. Denton.

This valuable and highly interesting work has become a part of the standard literature of the country.

Price, $1.50cts. Postage, 20cts.

LECTURES ON GEOLOGY, THE PAST AND FUTURE OF OUR PLANET. A valuable scientific work.

Price, $1.50cts. Postage, 20cts.

COMMON SENSE THOUGHTS ON THE BIBLE. For Common Sense people. Twelfth thousand, revised and enlarged.

Price, 10cts., Postage, 2cts.

THE DELUGE, IN THE LIGHT OF MODERN SCIENCE.

Price, 10cts., Postage, 2cts.

WHAT IS RIGHT. Price, 10cts., Postage, 2cts.

BE THYSELF. Price, 10cts., Postage, 2cts.

For sale at THE RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL Office.

Address S. S. Jones, 187 & 189, South Clark street, Chicago Ill.

NEW WORKS BY PROF. DENTON.

"ORTHODOXY FALSE,

Since Spiritualism is True."

Price, 10 cents: postage, 2 cents.

THE IRRECONCILABLE RECORDS,

OR GENESIS AND GEOLOGY.

160 pages. Price: paper, 25 cents, postage, 4 cts cloth, 40 cents, postage 8 cts.

For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 187 & 189 S. Clark Street, Chicago.

CONJUGAL SINS

AGAINST THE

LAWS OF LIFE AND HEALTH,

AND

THEIR EFFECT ON THE FATHER MOTHER AND CHILD.

BY AUGUSTUS K. GARDNER, A. M., M. D.

Late Professor of Diseases of Females and Chemical Medical Midwifery in the New York Medical College.

CONTENT

Frontier Department.

BY.....E. V. WILSON

Settled Speakers, Once More.

Some time ago we penned an article for the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL, which appeared in the Frontier Department of that paper. It was particularly directed to an article in the editorial department of the Present Age, written after the Richmond Convention of so-called American Spiritualists. That article ignored mediumship, and insulted every medium and itinerant speaker in the field; advocated settled speakers having charge of societies, and advised societies and communities of Spiritualists to get rid of all such as gave public tests when in the desk, or took pay at the door, or were not in favor of settled speakers.

In this article we called no names, but repelled the slander, reviewed the claims of the advocates of settled speaking, exposing their fallacies completely. Subsequently there appeared several articles in the American Spiritualist Banner of Light and Present Age, of a threatening character, but not personal. Finally Brother Wheeler bolted over, struck out straight from the shoulder, and planted a sockdolager under the "Lyg" of our article. We read it, and laughed, and felt glad that our brother had got rid of so much bile at our expense. It did us no harm, and we trust it did him good.

We did not yet feel that we had offended our fellow brother. Again he sent for us, and was very personal, bitter and hard. He summoned our salutatory to the people on the first day of January, 1870 in which we voluntarily held out the olive branch of peace, and which we have faithfully kept until this writing. Again Brother Wheeler's bitter article appeared, Brothers Peebles, Hull, Graves, Lyon and others have had their say,—and now it is our time to have ours.

1st.—Dr. Brother Wheeler in Vineland, N. J., on Tuesday evening, Feb. 14th, where he had been speaking for some time for eighty per cent of the collections at the door. After the lecture, we went straight way to him, holding out both hands, offering a warm-hearted greeting, a brother's love. He took our hand, reluctantly, coldly; treated us publicly offensively—and to with abusing him, and the next day sent us the following bitter-sweet letter. It speaks for itself. We publish it, that there may be no misunderstanding.

E. V. Wilson—Dear Sir :—You need not imagine that because I felt hurt and offended by the violence of your attack upon all who differed with you, in regard to the blessing of Itinerancy, I cherish malice, or ill will against you. I have no wish to hurt or hinder you at all, but regard your treatment of your co-workers as abusive, and therefore to be condemned. I am no hypocrite. You know my opinion. I am ignorant what provocation you had, but in your reply you denounce all who even favor settled speakers,—much more those who have been so, as "played out materialists," "shining for high places," wanting big pay, and "the favor of the elect." They are "drones," "spiders," etc., etc., ad nauseum.

Can you expect to denounce and misrepresent in this manner, without qualification, many of our best friends, and find them pleased at your course? Even if all you wrote were true, as you gave it color, the manner is offensive, since you, through avoiding names, disparage in all ways, the character of those who are in every way as good as yourself.

I wish, for the sake of all, and for the sake of the cause, you had left those slurs and slanders unpublished. I have never written anything in this way of you—never shall, even though you make doubly good your threat to "throw sticks."

I have no time or vitality to waste in recrimination. I am only sorry that in your desire to be strong, you condescend to be very rough and violent, and so make a careless and unwarranted use of epithets; and I think, on reflection, your own sense of justice will lead you to share my regret.

Respectfully,

E. S. WHEELER.

Vineland, N. J., Feb. 15th, 1871.

This is not the first attack our brother has made on us, but on the contrary, it is the third or fourth. He attacked our New Year's salutatory in a bitter spirit, calling forth several reproofs from his friends. The American Spiritualist of 1870, all of which we paid no attention to.

2nd.—Brother H. Frank White, at Troy, Pittsburgh, Washington, in New Jersey and other places, made false statements in regard to us, misrepresented us, cautioning people not to encourage us, thus causing societies to cancel their engagements with us; all of which, like chickens, come home to roost in their own local nest.

3d.—Brother Lyon, writes up the beauties of settled speakers, by citing the influence of our good brother, J. M. Peebles, as settled speaker over the society of Spiritualists in Cleveland, falsely stating that the society had been increased, and partially lifted out of debt under his fatherly manipulations.

Now, the facts of this Cleveland settlement of Brother P. are as follows:—When Brother Peebles returned from Europe, he cast about for a place in which to rest his weary soul. His eyes fell on the Cleveland Society of Spiritualists. Now this society had been ministered to by Brother Wheeler as settled speaker, and under Brother W.'s fatherly care had dwindled down to a corporal's guard, the members, many of them, at loggerheads with each other, the society heavily in debt, many members refusing to listen to their settled speaker, or help sustain the society under his ministrations.

In March, 1869, we were called to fill the desk for a month, and for the first time in many months, the receipts of the society were in excess of the expenses.

Brother Peebles, we believe, asked to be located in Cleveland; was not called as settled speaker; was not settled over the society by the society, but proposed to attend with other speakers, filling the Cleveland desk a part of the time. This understanding was in August or September, 1870; we at the time were engaged in Cleveland for November. In September, paffe appeared in the Banner of Light, the Present Age, and American Spiritualist, heralding to the world the important fact that the Hon. J. M. Peebles, late United States Consul to Trebizond, had been called to fill the desk of the Cleveland Society of Spiritualists for a year. This appeared article after article in favor of settled speakers. We were at that time speaking in Iowa, with headquarters at Council Bluffs. We wrote at once to Brother Gillson, Secretary of the Cleveland Society, withdrawing our engagements for Nov., 1870,—giving as our reason the notice in the Banner of Light, of Brother P.'s settlement in Cleveland as the speaker of the society. Mr. Gillson wrote us at once, begging to release us, stating that Mr. Peebles was not settled over the society as the society's speaker, but engaged to speak in October, December, (which we had refused) and January, and for no longer time. Brother P. filled the desk in Oct. 1870—receipts less than the expenses. E. V. Wilson filled the desk during November, and the receipts were in excess of the expenses. Brother P. filled the desk during December and January, 70—71, and the receipts were considerably less than expenses. Sister Colby filled the desk during Feb., E. V. Wilson during March, Brother Howe during April and May.

In March, 1871, Brother Lyon came through Cleveland, &c., and in the "Western Locale" appeared a puff in favor of settled speakers, in contrast with the "ragged itinerant system,"—every sentiment of which was untrue and false in fact. The dept of the society has not been reduced by Brother Peebles's management as settled speaker, but increased some fifty dollars during his three months's ministration. Mr. P. was not, at the time of Brother Lyon's puff, engaged for June, nor were the pious souls of Cleveland anxious for his return. Judge, nor do we believe that he was engaged for June, [illegible] expected by the officers or society of [illegible] in Cleveland.

[illegible] what the result of this much boosted [illegible] of Mr. Peebles in Cleveland has been: [illegible] morning lectures of thirty minutes each; [illegible] evening lectures of forty minutes each; a [illegible] visits to the Lyceum in session, and the balance of the time this settled speaker a part of passage. Advocates of settled speakers, cast your eyes back into the past, and in every case, with one single exception, the whole thing has been a failure, and ended in the reception of the society, and the suspending of meetings.

With a few exceptions the advocates of settled speaking have been reformed clergymen and it is equally true that the better set characters in our ranks have been some of those who were ministers in the church.

Now, the following diagnosis is a sure sign of accession from our ranks.

1st.—A desire to rule Spiritualism, and be President of the A. A. of S.—Pope.

2 d.—To be a settled speaker over a nice society.

3 d.—To expose physical mediumship.

4 th.—Anti sensational, and denouncing Davis.

5th.—Abusing the itinerant system.

6th.—Misrepresenting their superiors.

7th.—Denouncing the system of itinerancy as "a vagabond system," comparing speakers to "quack medicines, that need to be shaken before taken," "old nonsense."

8 th.—Leave our ranks, hire out the churches to lie for them, or take orders under the protecting wing of the church, or leave with somebody's wife, get a diploma for selling calomel, be elected to an office, and petition the state legislature to suppress all healers from the actual world, that those who were ciphers yesterday, and by spirit influence made men of thought now, turn and spurn the power that lifted them out of the dirt into the field of progress, may be protected in the bleeding, blistering, pill-selling operations of the moldy past.

We desire peace; let us have it. You that wish to be settled and settle,—don't shove the itinerant. We will let you alone if you will hold your peace. There is not one of you that can pay your way as settled speaker. There are not ten ministers of the gospel in the United States that do it. The settled minister is a dig on the hands of a few, and Spiritualism is no exception to the rule.

Brother, let us have peace. You pursue your course; we will ours. You are frequently idle; we are never.

We call your attention to those speakers who were settled, and never produced a bauble while settled. Turned loose, they kick up quite a dust.

Accept the regards of our itinerant, sometimes called "egotistic," "iconoclastic," "vulgar," "cross," "abusive fellow," who reads obituaries, visits graveyards, and listens at key-holes for family histories, "advocating a vagabond system of itinerancy, like quack medicine, needs to be well shaken before taken," etc., etc., ad nauseum.

The Blue Laws of Connecticut.

Everybody has heard of the famous blue laws of Connecticut, and are familiar with their odious character, though they may never have had an opportunity of perusing the famous code. The statutes copied below, form an ancient volume relating to the history of the American colonies, were enacted by the people of the "Domision of New Haven":

The governors and magistrates, convened in general assembly, are the supreme power under God, of this independent dominion.

No one shall be a freeman, or give a vote unless he be converted, and a member in full communion of one of the churches allowed in this dominion.

No Quaker, or dissenter from the established worship of this dominion, shall be allowed to give a vote for the election of magistrates or any officer.

No food or lodging shall be offered to a Quaker, Adamite, or other heretic.

If any person turn Quaker, he shall be banished, and not suffered to return but on pain of death.

No Catholic priest shall abide in the dominion; he shall be banished, and suffer death on his return.

Priests may be seized by any one without a warrant.

No one shall cross a river without an authorized ferryman.

No one shall run on the Sabbath day, or walk in his garden, or elsewhere, except reverently to and from meeting.

No one shall travel, cook victuals, make beds, sweep house, cut hair, or shave on the Sabbath day.

No woman shall kiss her children on Sabbath or fasting day.

The Sabbath shall begin at sunset on Saturday.

To pick an ear of corn growing in a neighbor's garden shall be deemed theft.

None shall buy or sell lands without permission of the selectmen.

No minister shall keep a school.

Every rateable person who refuses to pay his proportion to support the minister of the town or parish, shall be fined by the court two pounds six shillings per month every quarter, until he or she pay the rate to the minister.

Whoever wears clothes trimmed with gold, silver, or bone lace, above 2s. per yard, shall be presented by the grand jurors, and the selectmen shall tax the offender three hundred pounds estate.

A debtor in prison, swearing he has no estate, shall be let out and sold to make satisfaction.

Whoever rises a fire in the woods, and it burns a house, shall suffer death; persons suspected of this crime shall be imprisoned without the benefit of bail.

Whosoever brings cards or dice into this dominion, shall pay a fine of five pounds.

No gospel minister shall join people in marriage. The magistrates only shall join them in marriage, as they may do it with less scandal to Christ's church.

When parents refuse their children convenient marriages, the magistrates shall determine the point.

The selectmen, on finding children ignorant, may take them away from their parents, and put them in better hands, at the expense of the parents.

Adultery shall be punished with death.

No man shall court a maid in person, or by letter, without first obtaining consent of her parents; five pounds penalty for the first offense; ten for the second, and for the third, imprisonment during the pleasure of the court.

Married persons must live together, or be imprisoned.

Every male shall have his hair cut round, according to a cap."

The above laws were originally printed on blue paper, on which account they were called the "Blue Laws."

Laws equally as bad as these have been instituted in New South Wales, and one man imprisoned for insinuating that the teachings of Moses were not of the most elevating character.

To the Citizens of Cincinnati, Ohio.

The consumptive and sick will be taught to ladies, for the cure of all diseases of a nervous, inflammatory, or painful character, whether of the head, lungs, uterus, or abdominal viscera, etc., by Dr. Wm. B. Fahnestock, of Lancaster, Pa., who can be consulted on and after the 5th of June next (for a few weeks), at the dental rooms of Dr. T. C. Fahnestock, No. 154 West 4th street.

Dr. Fahnestock will visit Chicago and Aurora, Ill., for the same purpose the latter end of June or the beginning of July.

TRACTS.

Now is the time for our friends to send for as many copies of JUDGE EDMONDS' Tracts as they can afford to, for the purpose of distributing them among the people. Or, to sing lustily, bound in neat paper covers, good style to be preserved and distributed among the neighbors.

The following subjects are tracted, viz:

No. 1. An appeal to the Public on Spiritualism.
No. 2. Bishop Hopkins on Spiritualism. Reply of Judge Edmonds.
No. 3. The Newsboy.
No. 4. Objections of Spiritual intercourse.
No. 5. Certainty of Spiritual intercourse.
No. 6. Speaking in many tongues.
No. 7. Intercourse with spirits of the living.
No. 8. False prophesying.
No. 9. Spiritualism as demonstrated from ancient and Modern history.

The volume sent single by mail on receipt of TWENTY CENTS.

JUDGE EDMONDS has a volume of the same as the foregoing with a supplement of more than double the amount of matter that will be sent to any address by mail on receipt of thirty cents.

☞ Any person sending Five Dollars, will receive by express either kind of, or part of each, at a discount of fifty per cent from the above prices.

Terms Tracts are newly gotten up, and such as any gentleman or lady will be proud to place in the hands of a neighbor. Address, S. S. JONES, 189 South Clark St., Chicago.

Health by Good Living.

BY W. W. HALL, M. D.,
Editor of Hall's "Journal of Health."

This book is to show how high health can be maintained and common diseases cured by "good living," which means eating with a relish the best food, prepared in the best manner.

The best food includes meats, fish, poultry, wild game, fruits, and the grains which make bread.

The best cookery preserves the natural tastes and juices.

As there can be no "good living" without a good appetite, how to get this great blessing without money and without price, is pointed out, and, it is hoped, in very clear and plain terms.

Some of the subjects treated are:—

The object of eating: Power to work: Early breakfast: Dinner-time: Luncheon: Eating "down town:" What shall a man do? What shall fat men eat? How to get fat: Bad blood: Diet for the sick: Spring diseases: Children's eating: Forcing children to eat: Young ladies' eating: Cold feet and headache: Biliousness: A lazy liver: Mischievous tonics: The out-door air: Why are we dyspeptic? Discomfort after eating: Cole slaw: Cereals cure of neuralgia: Nervous debility: Air and exercise: Food cure, etc., etc.

It tells

How to cure dyspepsia: How to cure neuralgia: How to cure biliousness: How to cure nervousness: How to cure exhaustion: How to get a good appetite: How to get lean. How to get good sleep: How to maintain high health. How to avoid disease: And all these without medicine: without money; without price.

It tells about

Luncheons and how to take them: Late dinners and how to take them: How drunkards are made at eating-houses: How girls are spoiled at boarding-schools: How health is lost: How bones have to be made over: Bad blood: How love of dress is instilled: How young men are talked about: How bad matches are made: How good wives are made at home: How home influences purify.

Price $1.50. Postage 10 cents. For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189, So. Clark Street, Chicago, Ill.

THE LYCEUM GUIDE,

A Collection of
SONGS, HYMNS, AND CHANTS,
Lessons, Readings and Recitations,
MARCHES AND CALISTHENIS,
(With Illustrations)
TOGETHER WITH
Programmes and Exercises
FOR SPECIAL OCCASIONS,
The Whole Designed for the Use of PROGRESSIVE SUNDAY LYCEUMS,
By J. M. Peebles, J. O. Barrett, and Emma Tuttle.
The Musical Department by James G. Clark.

THIS NEW BOOK FOR SUNDAY LYCEUMS CONtains all the excellent features of previous works, with such improvements as the practical experience of Lyceums during the past six years have suggested.

In appendix, contained a large number of letters from Conductors of Lyceums and friends of the Institution, illustrating its beneficial influence, and giving much valuable information pertaining thereto.

This book is complete in every particular, and is illustrated with THIRTY FINE ENGRAVINGS of Banners Emblematic to Standards for Groups, Calisthenics, &c.

PRICE: In paper cover, 60 cents; postage, 6 cents. In boards, neat, strong and durable, 75 cents; postage, 12 cts. In cloth, extra, gold-lettered side, $1.00; postage, 12 cts From which prices liberal discount will be made on quantities for Lyceums.

For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 187 and 189, South Clark street, Chicago

THE PSALMS OF LIFE,

A COMPILATION OF PSALMS, HYMNS, ANTHEMS,
CHANTS,
ETC.,

Embodying the Spiritual, Progressive, and Reformatory Sentiment of the Present Age. By John S. Adams.

This work has been prepared with special reference to the large and increasing demand for a volume expressing the sentiments and views of the advanced minds of the present times and meeting the requirements of every session of Reform. It is entirely free of Sectarianism, of all the fossilized ideas of the past, and fully responds to the progress and aspirations of Spirit, in every condition of life on earth.

The book contains five hundred and twenty-two choice Selections of Poetry, with suitable music on each page from Handel, Hadyn, Mozart and Other Distinguished Composers.

It combines the advantage of "Hymn" and "Tune" Book. It is furnished with a Classified Table of Contents, and Complete Indexes of First Lines, Tunes and Metres; and being of convenient size, is generally accepted as the Standard Music Book of Spiritualism, Radical Law and General Reform.

alike desirable for the LECTURE-ROOM and the HOMES OF THE PEOPLE.

"I think there is in the book a great proportion—as I think I ought to say a greater amount—of beautiful and truly spiritual poetry than in any other collection I have seen, whatever the size of the volume."

Rev. John Pierpont.

PRICES:—Paper cover, 50 cents; Postage, 6 cts. Board cover, 60 cents; Postage, 12 cts. Cloth-bound, 90 cents, Postage, 16 cents.

☞ For Sale at the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL BOOK STORE,
187 and 189 South Clark St.,
Chicago, I

HOW AND WHY I BECAME A SPIRITUALIST,

BY
Wash. A. Danskin.
FOURTH EDITION.

SEVENTH EDITION.

POEMS

FROM THE INNER LIFE,

BY LIZZIE DOTEN.

This is by far the finest edition of these Poems ever yet issued—printed on heavy paper and elegantly bound.

Price $1.25, Postage 20cts.

For sale at the Office of the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL, 187 & 189, South Clark street, Chicago, Ill.

IS THERE A DEVIL.

The argument pro and con, with an inquiry into the Origin of Evil, with a review of the popular notion of Hell and Heaven, or the Ghost of the Past. Price twenty-five cents, postage two cents. For sale at the Religio-Philosophical Journal Office, 189 So. Clark Street Chicago.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

The Bible in India.

HINDOO ORIGIN OF
Hebrew and Christian Revelation.

TRANSLATED FROM
"LA BIBLE DANS L' INDE."
BY LOUIS JACOLLIOT.

EXTRACTS FROM AUTHOR'S PREFACE:

"I come to show you humanity, after attaining the loftiest regions of speculative philosophy, of untrammeled reason on the venerable soil of India, was trammeled and stifled by the altar that constituted for intellectual life a semi-brute existence of dreaming impotence.

India is the world's cradle; hence it is that the common mother in sending forth her children even to the utmost west has, in unfading testimony of our origin, bequeathed as the legacy of her language, her laws, her morals, her literature, and her religion.

To religious despotism, imposing, speculative delusions, and class-legislation, may be attributed the decay of nations.

.....Aware of the resentment I am provoking, I yet shrink not from the encounter.....We are no longer burnt at the stake."

—o—

. PRICE $2.00; postage 24 cents. For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark street, Chicago.

"MODERN AMERICAN SPIRITUALISM,"

A TWENTY YEARS' RECORD
OF THE COMMUNION
BETWEEN
EARTH and the WORLD of SPIRITS.

ONE VOLUME, LARGE OCTAVO, SIX HUNDRED PAGES, ENGLISH MUSLIN, BEVELED EDGES, SUPERBLY AND PROFUSELY ILLUSTRATED WITH PORTRAITS, Etc., ON STEEL, WOOD IN TINT, LITHOGRAPHY, Etc., Etc.

BY EMMA HARDINGE.

This work has been prepared by the author

Under the Direct Supervision and Guidance of the Spirits,

who have inaugurated the movement.

It contains extracts from rare pamphlets, private journals periodicals now out of print, and various other sources of talnable only to the author.

The collection of these records has cost many years of incessant research, and altogether it forms one of the

MOST COMPLETE, ASTOUNDING AND THRILLING HISTORIES.

that has ever issued from the press.

The first cost of the work will considerably exceed the sale price which has been fixed by the author, with a view of rendering it attainable to all classes of readers,

SUBSCRIBERS AND THE TRADE SUPPLIED

at the Office of the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL.

Address, S. S. Jones, 187 & 189, South Clark street, Chicago, Ill.

PRICE $3,75 POSTAGE 44 CENTS,—$4,19

THE HIEROPHANT,

OR
Gleanings from the Past.
BY G. C. STEWART.

"Being an exposition of Biblical astronomy, and the symbolisms and mysteries on which were founded all ancient religions and secret societies, with an explanation of the dark sayings and allegories that abound in the Pagan, Jewish and Christian Bibles, also the real sense of the doctrines and observances of the modern Christian churches."

The above is a good deal to promise the reader that he will find done up in a neat little 16 mo. book of 264 pages, but we assure our readers that they will find all the subjects mentioned treated in a clear, concise, and satisfactory manner.

The book has already passed through several editions, and the demand, of late, has greatly increased.

For sale at the office of this paper. Price, $1; postage, 16cents.

THE HOLLOW GLOBE;

Or, the World's Agitator and Reconciler.

A Treatise on the Physical Conformation of the Earth.

PRESENTED THROUGH THE ORGANISM OF
M. L. SHERMAN, M.D.,
AND WRITTEN BY
PROF. WM. F. LYON.

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

"This book is addressed to the reasoning intelligence of Humanity,—to all inquiring and reflective minds, everywhere upon the earth.

We earnestly request the reader to suspend his judgment concerning the ideas advanced, until he has carefully perused its pages; when he may be better prepared to form his opinions, and offer his criticisms.

We do not claim that the teachings contained in this work are infallible, neither are they given as an authoritative manner. But we do claim that it contains more original, natural and startling ideas, which are of great interest to civilized humanity, and which seem to be entirely irrefutable, than any book of its size that has made its appearance in modern times.

We, therefore, commend it to the careful consideration of the modern thinker, being fully persuaded that its pages contain a large fund of thought which may open to his mind new fields of research, thus tending to enlarge his understanding, and enlighten his intellect."

EXTRACT FROM INTRODUCTION.

"The central idea contained in the following work, and the one that runs of these chapters are designed to substantiate, is, that this globe is constructed in the form of a hollow sphere, with a shell some thirty to forty miles in thickness, and that the interior surface, which is a beautiful world in a more highly developed condition than the exterior, is accessible by a circuitous and spirally formed aperture that may be found in the most circled open Polar Sea, and this opening affords easy navigation by a broad and deep channel leading from one surface to the other, and that the largest ships or steamers may sail or steam either way, with as much facility as they can pass through any other winding or somewhat crooked channel. And we have endeavored to show as clearly as possible, that the physical formation of the globe is such as to be perfectly compatible with an outer and inner world, or two worlds instead of one."

12mo., 447 pp. Price $2.00; postage 20 cents.

. For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

THE LAW OF MARRIAGE,

BY C. L. JAMES.

An exhaustive argument in favor of liberal divorce legislation. For sale by the author, Louisiana, Mo Post paid for 25 cents.

New Books.

MEDICINA PSYCHICA! ANIMA MEDICA!!

☞ "Deo hominem externum esse animal: Internum vero non animal sed imaginem DEI VERAM!"—VAN HELMONT.

—o—

THIERS' ODYLLIC WAFERS,

The most safe, salutatory, and effectual Nervine Medium Developer and Curative in all

DISEASES OF THE NERVES,

including Neuralgia, Epilepsy, Hysteria, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Gout, Lumbago, Sciatica, Chorea, (St. Vitus' Dance) Depression of Spirits, Melancholy, etc.

Sent per mail, in letter form. Price $1.00 per package. Test or trial packages mailed free for 25 cents.

Address, W. F. J. THIERS, M. D., NEUROPATHIST, No. 74 I St., Washington, D. C.

v10 n11 tf

THE Science of Evil;

OR
FIRST PRINCIPLES OF HUMAN ACTION.
BY JOEL MOODY.

—o—

THE SCIENCE OF EVIL is a book of radical and startling thought. It gives a connected and logical statement of the FIRST PRINCIPLES OF HUMAN ACTION, and clearly shows that without Evil there can be neither Morals, Science, Knowledge, or Human Action on earth. In fact, without Evil, man could not exist. This work fully solves the PROBLEM, and unveils the MYSTERY of Evil, giving it a scientific meaning, and shows it to be THE LEVER WHICH MOVES THE MORAL AND INTELLECTUAL WORLD.

The book is a large 12 mo., of 363 pages, printed from large, clear type, on fine, heavy paper. Price, $1.75; postage, 20 cents.

. For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 187 & 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

SECOND EDITION.

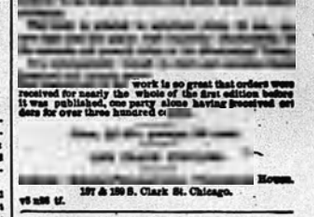
A WORK OF GREAT RESEARCH.

ONE RELIGION: MANY CREEDS.

BY ROSS WINANS.

"We object to what the Church demands, an unbounded and unquestioning belief in the infallibility of the writings of Moses and the prophets, and the Evangelists and the Apostles. We dissent from all sentimental attachments to the supposed inspiration of the compilers of said books. We affirm that Christian theology, as we have it, is not taught by God himself, nor by Christ himself, nor is it consistent with established facts, and the knowledge possessed by our race. We would show you that Christianity, as taught among us is no better than other systems taught in other than Christian countries, and in some respects not so good.

The historic part of the Bible, in relation to the creation of the World, has no counterpart also in the several systems of theology here mentioned. The Bible has their origin and board on equally good authority and equally wide of the truth, as the rose bed to the Bible. The time and manner of the creation, and the cause of evil is known, by our word, in this life; not in such knowledge of importance in preparing us for the life to come."—EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.



This book is a large 12 mo. of nearly 400 pages, printed on fine, heavy-tinted paper, and is sold at much less than the actual cost. Price, $1.50; postage, 20 cents.

. For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

THE BIBLE IN THE BALANCE,

A Book for the Age and the Times,

and one that should be in the hands of every Member of Congress, Senator, Governor, Legislator, Statesman, Lawyer, Judge, Editor, Author, Minister, Teacher, Mechanic, Farmer, Merchant, Manufacturer, Banker, Broker, Doctor, Lecturer, Student, Man, Woman, Boy, Girl, Reader, Thinker, Inquirer, Skeptic, Believer, Unbeliever, Liberal, Conservative, Radical, Reformer, Spiritualist, Materialist, Infidel, Christian, Heathen, Jew, Gentile, Catholic, Protestant, Universalist, Unitarian, Methodist, Baptist, Presbyterian, Episcopalian, Quaker, Shaker, Mormon, Rich, Poor, Bond, Free, Black, White, Red, Yellow, Old, Young, Middle-aged, Male, Female, Married, Single, Widow, Widower, Orphan, Child, Parent, Guardian, Friend, Foe, Neighbor, Stranger, Citizen, Alien, Sinner, Saint, Devil, Angel, Man, Woman, Child, Infant, Babe, Fetus, Embryo, Germ, Atom, Molecule, Cell, Tissue, Organism, Animal, Vegetable, Mineral, Fish, Bird, Beast, Reptile, Insect, Worm, Mollusk, Radiate, Protozoon, Monad, Nothing, Something, Everything, Anything, Nobody, Somebody, Everybody, Anybody, Heaven, Hell, Purgatory, Limbo, Earth, Sun, Moon, Star, Comet, Nebula, Universe, Infinity, Eternity, Time, Space, Matter, Force, Spirit, God, Devil, Good, Evil, Right, Wrong, Truth, Error, Life, Death, Immortality, Annihilation, Resurrection, Reincarnation, Transmigration, Metempsychosis, Transformation, Transfiguration, Ascension, Translation, Miracle, Mystery, Revelation, Inspiration, Prophecy, Prophet, Priest, Preacher, Pope, Cardinal, Bishop, Archbishop, Deacon, Elder, Evangelist, Apostle, Disciple, Martyr, Saint, Sinner

RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL

CHICAGO, JUNE 17, 1871 VOL. X—NO. 11

Journal.

THE GHOST OF DIXBOROUGH.

The Supposed Re-appearance of a Mrs. M., with the Affidavit of Isaac Van Woert.

LETTER FROM W. E. WOOD.

BROTHER JONES:—The inclosed pamphlet was published at Ann Arbor in the early part of 1845. At that time I was residing there, and was acquainted with all the facts set forth. The thing had passed out of my mind until a day or two ago, when I came across this document in some old papers. Leaving there about that time, I have forgotten the result of the pending trials, but there are people in Ann Arbor who will be familiar with the results. The Dr. D. referred to was Dr. Denton, of Ann Arbor, a prominent citizen of the county, but since dead. At that time the corroborating testimony and circumstances were so strong, that people generally give full confidence to the statements in this pamphlet. Mr. Wm. R. Perry, the notary, was a highly respectable citizen, and afterwards went to Wisconsin, at Racine or some lake shore town near there, and he may live there yet, if alive. I think he was connected with some newspaper there. Dixborough was a small village, about three or four miles northeast of Ann Arbor, on the Plymouth road. Mr. Van Woert was a respected, candid, intelligent man. Judge Lawrence and other old residents of Ann Arbor will remember the full names of all the parties referred to. As this took place before the "Rochester Knocking," and Spiritualism had a history, what will be said of it?

Will the Ann Arbor paper please publish the account now, and thus revive this subject for new investigation and thought?

Detroit, Mich., May 29, 1871.

The following is an account of the recent appearance of a Ghost at Dixborough, which resulted in the disclosure of two awful murders; one of a peddler, who was murdered in the year 1836 and the other a Mrs. M. Her murder having occurred about the beginning of the year 1845. Her recent re-appearance nine months after she had been buried, to point out her murderers, is a truly strange and wonder-exciting incident. Nevertheless, we believe it true; as men of undoubted veracity have testified to these facts under oath, and as many vague rumors and contradictory reports have circulated abroad concerning the affair; we deem it our duty to give the public a correct account of the whole matter, the substance is as follows:

At the close of a sultry day in the summer of 1835, a peddler was seen approaching the little village of Dixborough; as he drew near, he slackened his pace, and walked slowly as if to take a leisure view of the town, and, from its aspect, to judge something of its inmates. It was one of those lonely, isolated villages, so characteristic of Michigan. At an early day it was surrounded by swamps and dark woods, which, together with the meanness of its buildings, thus refused in the gloom of twilight, presented nothing prepossessing to the eye of our traveler. His entrance into the town was greeted by the barking of dogs, and the hootings and scamperings of ragged children, which together with the squalid appearance of the inhabitants, as seen in the dim, uncertain light of departing day, presented a cheerless aspect, and the mind of the traveler was filled with evil forebodings. Having made his way to the only inn in the place, and, on entering the low, dark looking bar-room, his fears were in no way relieved by the reception he met with, from one who appeared to be the landlord. He was in stature about the middle height, thick set, and strongly made; with a very coarse and ruffianly look, and all together, of the most forbidding. In his appearance calculated to inspire fear and disgust. He is such a one as the traveler dreads to meet when alone on an unfrequented road. He saluted the new comer in a gruff voice, and made some inquiry as to what sort of goods he was vending, and what success he had met with; what amount of money he had made; where he was from, and whether he had any friends or relatives in Michigan. He was answered in as few words as possible, though perhaps, not very satisfactory. There was another individual sitting in the corner of the room, resting his head upon his hands, as if in deep thought; but in reality, he was a close observer of all that passed, and as the peddler busied himself adjusting his trunks and appendages, the aforesaid individual exchanged nods and glances with the landlord and retired. Supper being announced, the peddler was shown into an adjoining room where the hostess had spread a homely meal. He partook of it in silence, after one or two vain attempts at conversation with the landlady; her appearance was sluggish, and her deportment mysterious. As she continued to administer the affairs of the table in silence, with downcast looks, seldom lifting her eyes from the floor, or from whatever object appeared to engross her attention; and when she did so, she avoided the looks of the peddler. She neither appeared solemn or cross. On the contrary, her conduct seemed to be impelled by fear of some secret agency which made her appear very uneasy. She wore an air of mystery altogether inexplicable to our friend the peddler. Thus he became confirmed in his own mind that all was not right, and he had thoughts of shifting his lodgings. But, upon deliberation, he thought as he was among strangers, he would remain where he was for the night, thinking perhaps, he might not better himself by the change. He was a bold fellow, and besides, had a brace pair of pistols and a dirk, and he felt confident of being able to defend himself in case of an emergency. He resolved to be watchful, and to neglect no precaution that might be necessary to secure his safety. He now stepped into the bar-room and called for a bed. The landlord being absent, another person waiting, lighted him to bed in a room on the ground floor, somewhat remote from the front part of the house. The room in which he was to sleep having two doors. The one by which he entered, and the other leading into the back yard. The peddler requested that his trunks might also be brought into the sleeping apartment; which request was readily complied with by the man in waiting, a square-built, ruffianish looking fellow, not unlike the landlord.

After the trunks were brought, the fellow waited to see the peddler fairly in bed, and he departed not then without an admonition from the peddler, that he desired to be left alone, as he was fatigued and wished to sleep; whereupon he was left to his own meditation. He immediately arose, and taking his pistols and dirk from his coat pockets, he placed them in readiness for use. He next examined the door by which he entered the apartment; the door was closed, but not latched; he secured it by making a piece of cord which he had, fast to the handle or knob; then twisting a huge walking stick which he found in the room, into the cord in such a manner as to brace the stick across the doorway, so as to be secured from entrance in that quarter. He now examined the door leading into the back yard, and as it opened into the room, he moved his bed, and placed it against the door in such a way as effectually to barricade the entrance. He next secured the windows in such a manner as to guard against a surprise from without. He now retired to bed not to sleep, but to watch. About the hour of midnight, he heard some persons trying to force the outer door; he arose from the bed with as little noise as possible, and took his stand at a window with his pistols; he could now hear the voice of a female in low earnest tones, entreating them to desist, or she would inform the neighbors of their designs. Whereupon some low curses and mutterings were heard, and all was still, until about the break of day a knocking was heard at the inner door, and the cry of "breakfast! breakfast!" sounded through the house. The peddler now removed his bed back to its old position, unfastened the windows and untied the door; and, in a short time, his appearance in the bar-room with his luggage, where he washed and combed a reasonable length of time, and then made his way to the breakfast room, and seated himself at the table; whereupon the landlord, who appeared to have just finished his meal, arose hastily, left the apartment, saying, "He had best an early start that morning in order to be off on business, and that his wife would settle the bill with him;" and without further remarks he left the house. The peddler finished his meal with as little ceremony as possible, and taking a look at the landlady, he observed that she wore the same unsettled look as on the evening previous. She turned away her head, and appeared much distressed in mind; whereupon the peddler paid his bill and took his leave; and while it was yet early dawn, he left the place before any of the villagers were seen abroad. He took the road leading to Frain's Lake. After traveling about a quarter of a mile, he turned his head to look back, and saw two men just leaving the village and coming after him. They were walking very slow, and the peddler took but little notice of them, supposing them to be travelers or something of that sort. After traveling but a short distance, he turned to look back again, and he was much surprised to find that the two men had nearly overtaken him. They were two stout looking fellows; each having a large walking stick; their hats were so slouched and drawn forward, as nearly to cover all their faces. But now the peddler thought he recognized in one his late landlord, and the other bore a strong resemblance to the person he first saw in company with the inn-keeper. His suspicions were aroused, and he resolved to watch closely every movement as they approached, with his weapons at hand to defend himself if required. But as they came up with the peddler, they seemed not to notice him, but passed by him in a hurry, one on each side. They had made but one or two steps past the peddler, when one of them sprang backwards and struck him a blow on the head, which brought the peddler to the ground. They then each repeated their blows with their heavy canes until the peddler was dead. They then carried the body of the murdered man and hid it near to the lake. They also secreted the trunks, and returned to the village by nine o'clock, where they remained about their business until night, when they returned again to the lake, taking with them a box, in which they inclosed the dead body of the peddler, together with a sufficient quantity of stone to sink the whole, which they now conveyed on a float to a convenient distance, and sunk in the dark waters of Frain's Lake. So perished the unfortunate peddler. He fell by the hands of murderous violence, alone and unbefriended in a land of strangers; and his murderers, after carefully removing every trace or vestige that might lead to detection, returned to the town with their ill-gotten gains, which consisted in a rich booty of silks, laces and jewelry.

Years rolled on, and the murderers lived riotously, enjoying the hard earnings of the peddler, apparently at ease; but the close observer might detect in their looks the marks of care as well as of dissipation, for they were in reality often seen ely alarmed, lest some incidental circumstance might lead to a discovery of the murder and their detection; but the home and friends of the peddler being far remote from the scene of the murder, but little or no inquiry was made about him; and the poor peddler, with all his wrongs, seemed buried forever beneath the waters of the lake. Justice may slumber, but it never dies. Ten years have passed away since that dreadful deed occurred. Ten springs have clad the earth in her green habiliments, and as many autumns have seen the earth disrobed of all her bloom, and yet the murdered man has slept on.

Another murder is committed by the same hands. The dead body of the second victim is buried. All is quiet, the dead is perhaps almost forgotten, when lo! the ghost of the murdered woman arises from its dusty bed, and appears to point out and to identify the persons and names of her murderers, and to reveal their dark deeds to the world."

The following is a detail of the murder of the woman, together with the circumstances connected therewith. So far as the facts are developed, the report is this:

The aforesaid landlord had a brother, a near neighbor, and a confidant of his in many of his villainous schemes. He fell sick, and at or near his death, he felt disposed to make a confession of the whole matter, but his brother, the landlord, fearing that such a revelation would lead to his detection and ruin, attended him during the last hours of his illness, and by various means prevented such disclosure from taking effect, by getting up a plea that the doctor in attendance had forbidden him to speak giving as a reason, that the effort to talk would exhaust his strength and hasten his death. So he was led to be secured from making any disclosures, as some say of this fact, we are not certain; others again allege that he manifested great solicitude for the welfare of his brother, and prevented him from speaking in accordance with the doctor's wishes.

Be this as it may; it appears that some people had got an intimation of his desires to disclose to the world a knowledge of some awful secrets or crimes, as yet unrevealed. Before he died, and some persons visited him for the purpose of hearing what the dying man was about to reveal; and in the opinions of the persons that visited him, he was prevented by force from making any disclosure until he died; and his widow and son were left in possession of a considerable property for their support. The guardianship of the son at the death of the father, devolved on his uncle, the late landlord before spoken of, and he, true to his character as a zealous servant of his master, the devil, set immediately about trying to possess himself of the whole property left by his deceased brother. But the widow, knowing the character of the man she had to deal with, strove to frustrate his schemes; but he succeeded in getting possession of all the property but the house and lands that constituted the home of the widow; and not satisfied with robbing her in part, he resolved to possess himself of the whole, and failing in many fraudulent attempts to accomplish his purpose, he at last decided on putting her out of the way by criticising her life to gratify his avarice. He accordingly entered into an agreement with Dr. M., an accomplice of his, to remove the widow by poison, and himself and the before mentioned guardian would then divide the inheritance. This being agreed to, a favorable opportunity presented itself to carry their plans into execution, as the widow was in the habit of applying to the doctor for small favors in the way of medicine. She soon called upon the doctor, saying she felt somewhat unwell; and the doctor thereupon said to her that he feared from her looks that disease was fastening upon her; and further, that if she would remain with him a few days, he would prescribe something for her, and thereby remove all danger. She accordingly complied with his request, and he soon administered the fatal dose, which operated as slow poison, and after much suffering, the widow died.

For about two weeks previous to her death, she seemed to have a suspicion that she was living under the effects of poison, and she called upon a Dr. D., intimating the same to him, and soliciting advice, but he declined intermeddling with the patients of other doctors. She thereupon made the disclosure of the peddler to Dr. D., saying that she had been silent heretofore on the subject, because she feared that a disclosure would jeopardize her life.

Soon after the death of the lady in question, many evil surmises went abroad, that she came to her death by foul means, but as nothing certain was known, the matter was hushed up, and the property of the deceased came under the control of the author of her murder. The house on the premises was occupied by several families in succession, but each after a short occupancy abandoned the house, alleging as a plea for so doing, that the house was haunted by evil spirits.

Strange noises having been frequently heard in the night time, such as groanings and unearthly sounds of murderings, as of some persons in great distress, and further, that strange and ghostly sights were seen, insomuch, that the house and premises were abandoned altogether; as no person was willing to live in the house, rent free, although the building was large and commodious. About this time there arrived from the state of New York, a Mr. Van Woert, together with his family. Mr. Van Woert is a man of unblemished character, and a member of the M. E. Church. He had heard nothing of this murderous tale, nor any of the house-haunting stories in question; but on the day of his arrival, he inquired for a vacant house in which to lodge his family. This haunted house was pointed out to him without any remark. He moved his family into it the same afternoon. After supper on the evening of Saturday following, his wife had occasion to step into the house of one of her neighbors for a short time. Mr. Van Woert was standing a few rods from the house which was left in darkness and alone; on looking toward the house suddenly, he observed a very brilliant light to issue from the window; he proceeded immediately to learn the cause, and on placing his hand on the window-sill and looking in, he saw a woman standing in the middle of the room with a candle in her hand; her countenance was pale and death like, her eyes were much sunken in their sockets, and her feet were bare; and while she held the candle in one hand she clasped her stomach with the other; she appeared in deep distress, and Mr. Van Woert supposed her to be some sick person in a fit of derangement. She spoke in a faint, though audible voice, and said that she was the deceased widow M., and that she was there to request Mr. Van Woert to leave the house with his family, as she was the house to remain uninhabited, and further, that she had come to point out her murderers, and to bring them to justice. Mr. Van Woert followed her to a small room, where he testifies under oath that she vanished from his sight instantaneously, and also further testifies that she appeared to him nine times altogether, and we think it here advisable to insert Mr. Van Woert's affidavit, as sworn by him before Wm. R. Perry, of Ann Arbor, which is as follows:

ISAAC VAN WOERT'S AFFIDAVIT.

I, Isaac Van Woert, left Livingston county, New York, about the middle of September, 1845, for the purpose of moving to Michigan with my family, and I arrived on Wednesday the 24th day of September, and took lodgings the same night in a vacant house pointed out to me by Jackson Hawkins.

On Saturday night, the 28th of September, between seven and eight o'clock, I was standing in front of a window of said house, my wife had stepped into Mrs. Hammond's about two rods distant, my two boys were in the back yard, for I had just passed through the house, and was combing my hair, when I saw a light through the window, I put my hand on the window-sill and looked in—saw a woman with a candlestick in her hand, in which was a candle burning; she held it in her left hand, she was a middling size woman—wore a loose gown, had a white cloth around her head, her right hand clasped in her clothes near the waist; she was a little bent forward, her eye large and much sunken, very pale indeed; her lips projected, and her teeth showed some. She moved slowly across the floor until she entered the bedroom door, and all was dark. I stepped forward, and lighted a candle with a match, but saw no one nor heard any noise, except just before I opened the bed-room door, I thought I heard one of the bureau draws open and shut.

I spoke of what I had seen several days after, and then learned for the first time, that the house in which I then lived, had been previously occupied by the widow M., and that she died there.

The second time I saw her was in October, about one o'clock in the morning. I got up, started to go out of the back door, as I opened the bed-room door it was light in the outer room; I saw no candle, but I saw the same woman that I had seen before; I was about five feet from her; she said, "Don't touch me—touch me not." I stepped back a little, and asked her "what she wanted;" she said "she has got it. He robbed me little by little until they killed me!" "They kill me,—now he has got it all." I then asked her "who had it all!" she said "J., Jones J. has got it at last, but it won't do him long. Joseph! Oh, Joseph! [note 1.] I wish Joseph would come away." Then all was dark and still.

The next time I saw her was one night in October, know not what hour; I awoke, the bed-room was entirely light—I saw no candle, but saw the same woman—she said, "J. can't hurt me any more. No, he can't—I am out of his reach. Why don't they get Joseph away? Oh, my boy, why not come away?" All was dark and still.

The fourth time I saw her was one night in October, about eleven o'clock at night. I was sitting with my feet on the stove hearth; my family had retired to bed, and I was eating a lunch, when all at once the door stood open, and I saw the same woman in the door, supported in the arms of a man whom I knew. She was a ratched back, and looked as if she was in the agonies of death; she said nothing, but the man said "she is dying, she will die," etc., [note 2.] and all disappeared, and the door closed without a noise.

The fifth time I saw her, was one morning in October a little past sun rise. I came out of the house to my work. I saw the same woman standing in the front yard; she said, "I wanted Joseph to keep my papers, but they are——"

Here something seemed so stop her utterance. Then she said:

"Joseph, Joseph! I fear something will befall my boy!"

Then all was gone.

The sixth time I saw her, was one night in October, near midnight; it was the same woman standing in the bed-room. The room was again light as before, no candle was visible. I looked at my wife, fearing she might awake. She then raised her hand and said, "She will not awake;" she seemed to be in great pain; she then leaned over, grasped her bowels in one hand, and in the other held a phial containing a liquid. I asked her what it was. "The doctor said it was Balm of Gilead," [note 3.] She replied, and all disappeared.

The seventh time I saw her was in October. I was working at a little bench, which was standing in the room on which I worked on evenings. I saw the same woman.

"I wanted to tell James something, but I could not."

I asked what she wanted to tell. "Oh, he did an awful thing to me." I asked her who did. "The man they would not let me have," [note 4.] she answered. I asked her what he did. "Oh, he gave me a great deal of trouble in my mind," she replied. "O they kill me! they kill me!" She repeated this several times over. I walked forward and tried to reach her, but she kept the same distance from me. I asked her if she had taken any thing that had killed her; she answered, "O I don't. O I don't!" the froth in her mouth seemed to stop her utterance.

Then she said [note 5 b]. "O they kill me! they kill me!" This she repeated a number of times. I asked her "who killed you?" "I will show you," she said. Then she went out of the back door near the fence, and I followed her. There I saw two men whom I knew, standing. They looked cast down and subdued. I saw them begin at their feet, and melt down like lead melting, until they were entirely melted; then a blue blaze two inches thick burned over the surface of the melted mass,—then all began bubbling up like lime slacking. I turned to see where the woman was, but she was gone. I looked back again, and all was gone and dark.

The next time I saw the woman was in the back yard, about 5 o'clock P. M. She said "I want you to tell J. to repent! Oh, if he would repent. But he won't, he can't. John was a bad man," [note 6 b] and muttered something I could not understand. She then said, "Do you know where Frain's Lake is?" [note 7 b] She then asked another question of much importance, and said, "Don't tell of that." I asked her if I should inform the pub lic on the two men that had killed her. She replied, "There will be a time. The time is coming. The time will come," etc. "But, oh, their end, their wicked end!" And she muttered something about Joseph, and all was dark.

The next time I saw her was on the 6th of November, about midnight, in the bedroom. She was dressed in white, her hands hung down by her side, stood very straight, and looked very pale. She said, "I don't want anybody here." (note 8 b) "I want nobody here;" and muttered over something I did not understand, except now and then the word Joseph. She then said, "I wanted to tell a secret, and I thought I had," and all was gone and dark.

In all her conversation she used the Irish accent. Intermixed in all her conversation was the expression, very often repeated, "they have kilt me, oh, they have kilt me," and also the name of "Joseph."

Sworn and subscribed to before me at my office in Ann Arbor, Dec. 3, 1845 } WM. R. PERRY.

CONCLUSION.

We are informed, and from good authority that the murderer in question left an interesting wife in Ireland, and came to this country with a beautiful young girl; her affections being artfully ensnared by this arch deed and seducer of female innocence and virtue, and after having been induced by the earnest and apparently heart-felt solicitations of her pretended lover, to emigrate to America, and thereby placing an ocean between herself and her friends; she was abandoned to the cold charity of the world, and left friendless and alone in a foreign land to wander among strangers, and to shift for herself as best she might; while her seducer removed to a distant part of the country, and set up for a widower of great honesty and simplicity of manners, and he succeeded in practicing upon the affections of a young lady of good character and respectable connections until she consented to become his wife; but she was soon made sensible of the dark, mysterious character of the man she had married. His frequent absence for whole days and nights together with out any plea of business that might seem reasonable, together with the mysterious deportment of a gang of his associates that were often secretly his guests, revealed to his wife that her husband belonged with a band of desperadoes that lived by preying upon the property and rights of their fellow men.

Many of these facts, it is said, were lately revealed by a brother of the deceased widow in question who, it appears has long been kept silent with a promise of great rewards if he proved of good faith by keeping still, and death was to be his portion if he betrayed any secrets. But the citizens have agreed to stand by him and protect him from violence, and he will testify against the accused at the next term of court, when, we trust the country will be rid of those who have already lived too long fattening upon the spoils of their murdered fellows.

The stomach of the poisoned woman was taken to Ann Arbor, and examined by a chemical process before a board of physicians, and the stomach was found to contain poison.

As may be expected, the excitement which these strange events have given rise to, has started many reports, doubtless, entirely unfounded, and exaggerated things which may have some foundation in truth. Consequently they have been the basis of several prosecutions for slander, none of them, however, are leveled at Van Woert. Several trials, it is understood, are to take place, and at that time further developments most probably, some that will confirm or dissipate suspicion.

NOTES.

NOTE 1st.—Joseph, about whom so much solicitude is manifested, is an only son of the deceased, and her anxiety is supposed to arise from the fear that he may be unlawfully dealt with by his uncle J——.

NOTE 2d.—This is said to be the most singular case on record. Respecting the one first heard of the narration, J. confessed that such a scene had actually taken place, and that no man living but himself, could have given the deponent,

[Concluded on eighth page.]

A REVIEW AND DEFENSE OF ALEXANDER SMYTH'S "JESUS OF NAZARETH."

By P. T. Brown.

After waiting in vain between two and three years in expectation that some intelligent and liberal-minded person would give an analysis or review of Alexander Smyth's book, I have, at length, resolved to do it myself. Not that I consider myself fully competent to the task, for to do this wonderful work justice, it will require a man of great erudition, of liberal sentiments, and to be void of all theological trammels and prejudices. However deficient I may be in the first of these, I aspire to all the others; therefore, in the absence of a more competent person to do justice to the book and its author, and to enlighten the public as to the book's nature, which I consider is due to them, I impose upon myself the task and assume the responsibility of the following

REVIEW OF "JESUS OF NAZARETH."

This work, as given by the author, purports to be the biography and history of the said Jesus, and of all other persons connected with him during the last three years of his life, which he passed as a teacher and healer of the people of Judea and Galilee;—embracing all the incidents connected with him that ultimate in his tragical fate. It also gives a slight sketch of his life, from his infancy until he verges upon manhood when he leaves his country for foreign parts in search of knowledge. Then, after an absence of many years, he returns to his country and makes his advent among his people, from which point of time the narrative in this book begins.

Mr. Smyth has not been dependent upon any old records, as the Bible or Testament, for anything he has adduced as forming part of his narrative; he entirely ignores them as authentic, true or rational.

Though he acknowledges that Christianity received its origin from the true Jesus of Nazareth, yet he denies that the Jesus of the Testament bears any relation or resemblance to the true one; for the latter being a myth—neither God, man nor devil, an absurd non-existent thing, it will become inoperative and useless to make comparisons. Mr. S. denies also the doctrines and precepts as contained in the Testament, as not being those taught by the true Jesus, and all other matters related therein, as being equally unreliable. And as there is no other book or books extant pretending to historical information concerning Jesus, except these, he (Mr. S.) has not drawn upon them for the materials of his work.

From what source, then, does Mr. Smith obtain his information? we may ask. Mr. S. says it is of spiritual origin. Some spirits, to him unknown, for reasons best known to themselves, thought proper to make him their medium, to communicate to the world the important and interesting information given in this book. This they did, and in a very peculiar manner, which, if we inquire into the other various modes by which other media receive their communications, we may consider equally exact and reliable as any of theirs.

For many years preceding his spiritual influence, Mr. S. underwent many strange nervous influences, which were unaccountable to him, and at length, in 1860, he became susceptible of seeing visions, became clairaudient, and mentally impressive; then the communications began, by voice, by vision, and impression—he remaining conscious of external things all the time.

The spirits, after an introductory discourse with him, proceeded to the subject they had in view. The communications were divided into scenes, one of which was brought before the mental view of the medium every succeeding night, until the whole were completed. The personages of each scene seemed to act and speak as in real life, and independent of sound, were clearly understood by the medium, and their thoughts and emotions were sympathetically perceived.

All the scenes were given in a similar manner. When a communication required no scene, then clairaudience or impression were made use of. The day following the night on which he received his communication, he made a rough sketch of that which he had seen and learned, and when all were given, he proceeded to combine, arrange, and write the narrative as given in the book, according to the best of his judgment and talent, with the further assistance of the spirits, by impressement.

This statement of the origin of the book, if presented to any one whose mind is befogged with theological notions, or to one whose conceptions cannot go beyond the crude materiality of the earth, would be instantly denied as true. But to any one who has some conception of spirit existence and communication, he has no just reason or evidence to the contrary, and ought not to deny its truth.

There is nothing more impossible in this manner of spirit communication than there is in any other mode by which media are influenced; but there is this advantage, that the communications are more reliable; for the three ways by which the medium is influenced, assist and confirm each other.

"But," say some opponents, "Did the spirits evince great taste and judgment in selecting this medium? Why, not have chosen somebody of better circumstances, of better education, more refined and of greater influence, to carry out the important measure, than to select a poor craftsman, a tailor, with little education, and no wealth or friends?"

To this we may reply: It is generally known that the spirits do not think or act by any general conventional reason or rule. They are all independent of each other, acting according to what seems to them best. It is, therefore, useless for us to judge of their conduct by our limited conceptions, and presume to say what is right and best for them to do. As far as we have any knowledge of them, their maxim seems to be, "That is best which accomplishes the end in view."

Now, if they act according to this principle, you can judge of their wisdom in selecting poor, obscure men to accomplish their work, when they in their judgment consider them to be the very men they want, even if one should be a shoemaker, and the other a poor tailor at that. Do you think the spirits are such poor judges of humanity as to make choice of a man according to his social conditions—to select the titled, the highly refined and educated, and pass the poorer class by unnoticed, because the latter are obliged to toil for their bread? No; the spirits know better. They select a man for a medium who is capable of carrying out their designs, whether he be of great standing in society or not. It is true that Mr. Smyth is a poor man, of humble calling in society, and of limited education, who cannot boast of his college acquaintances or numerous tutors, but he has a well-stored mind, a true heart, and is an inflexible adherent to truth and justice, and all that is good in him, which is not inherent in his nature, he has acquired by his own perseverance.

Would it be wisdom, then, in the spirits to overlook such a man when they want one to be their medium, and select one of higher station and acquirements? No, the latter would be liable to swerve from truth and justice through the influences of social friends or party ambition. The spirits know what they are about. They have selected the right man for the office they want him to fill, for they know that he would not swerve from the course marked out for him.

There is another point upon which the opponents of the spiritual origin of this book seem to place great dependence, as an argument on their side. It is as follows,—they say:

"The connection, dependence, and sequence of events, the incidents occurring, and their results, are so rational, the descriptions of persons, their discourses and revealments of motives, so natural, simple and attractive, that they seem in the whole to be the constituents of a pleasing romance, being quite different from anything that has hitherto emanated from the spirits."

We agree with the objectors, that the book is as they state in this particular,—full of naturalness, rationality, simplicity, and attractiveness; but can that militate against its spiritual origin? Not in the least; but it shows a peculiar tact in the author, in rendering a subject very attractive which in ordinary cases is very dull and disinteresting. Had the spirits put this subject into the hands of any other medium than Mr. Smyth, that medium would have turned out quite a different book from this, as far as its attractive powers are concerned.

Let it be understood that Mr. S., in writing this book, did not aim in style to suit the tastes of the highly educated, refined portion of society, for had he done so, he would have excluded three-fourths of the community who are not of that class. His mission was of a broader cast, as the spirits expressly told him to write in that style as would be most easy of comprehension and most attractive to the mass of the people among whom he resided. In fact, he was to write the book for the million, and not for the exclusive few.

The author has performed his task to the letter, for there is not a man in this wide country, who can read any kind of a book written for adults, who can not read this one with ease and pleasure, as it is written with that genuine simplicity, naturalness, and rationality that everybody can understand it with the greatest of ease.

There is another feature to be noticed, and that a most important one. The author knew, from a long experience, that, though he lives in a country where the majority of the people consider themselves Christians,—where churches, Bibles, Testaments, and other religious books, are almost innumerable, yet the mass of the people, including three-fourths of the churchgoers, have a decided abhorrence to any book or discourse of a Christian religious nature. They seldom read or discourse upon religious topics, and are decidedly ignorant upon all of them; consequently, they know nothing correctly about that which they profess in the church, and blindly follow and advocate. If they open a book, not knowing what it is, and see the word "Bible," "Jesus," "soul," or "religion," they drop it instantly, with as much expression of aversion as though it were a big spider. Nearly every family has a Bible and Testament in the house, but nobody reads them, unless the person is moved by some other than religious devotion. There are many women, men, girls and boys, great readers, but in general they know nothing of the contents of the Bible or Testament.

Thus, it is evident that there is a great repugnance among the mass of the people of this Christian community to anything of a Christian religious nature. The author when writing this book was well aware of this, so he studied how to obviate it, as regards his production. He consequently strove to make his work as attractive as possible, so that the reader should be interested in it, and had on from end to end. This he has accomplished to a great extent, for, in truth, no book was ever written on the same or similar subjects that possessed one-tenth the attractiveness that this does.

The author does not endorse this book as being literally true; he gives it to the world as the spirits gave it to him in its main features, but he wishes the public to understand that it is true, as to its spiritual origin, as he states it to have been given.

On the 31 of June, 1865, the spirits at the Boston circle endorsed the truth of its spiritual origin, and spoke of it at various times to the same effect, but in spite of all the evidence that is adduced on this point, there are many persons who will insist that the whole is still but a myth, and is an imposition; such being the way of a skeptical world when they cannot see everything immediately in its true light. However, Mr. S. is more fortunate than media in general when their words are doubted, for he, when pushed to the necessity of defending his word, can produce strong evidence of the truth that the greatest skeptic must acknowledge his honesty. Suppose a man, A, engaged another man, B, to do a certain piece of work, and says to the latter, "Go on as well as you can by your own means, and if you want money to carry you through, you shall have it." B, relying on the words of A, proceeds to action. After a time B finds all his own funds exhausted, and he can find A to gain more. Then the work is discontinued. Shortly afterward A sends money to B, when the work is resumed and completed. Is not this evident, that B was employed to do a piece of work for A when the latter furnished in part the necessary means to accomplish it? Such is precisely the case between Mr. S. and the spirits who engaged him to write this book.

When he had written the work, he knew not what to do with it, he had no money sufficient to publish it, and neither friends nor credit to help him. He then hid the manuscript in a trunk, and said not a word about it to any one, where it remained three years.

In the month of December, 1863, the spirits told Mr. Smyth, through another medium, when several other persons were present, who are now living and can testify to the truth, to go and find a publisher for the book. Mr. S. protested against the command, telling the spirits that he had not the means to publish the book, and that he had neither friends nor credit to help him do it. Then the spirits made answer, and said, "Go and try, and if you should want money, you shall have it."

Then Mr. S., relying upon the word of the spirits, sought for a publisher, and found one, who engaged to go on with the book as long as the former could furnish money. The work went on until the month of August, 1864, when the funds of Mr. S. ran out, and he could get no more just then, as his business was bad at the time. Then the work was discontinued, and remained so for some weeks, leaving Mr. S. in great distress of mind.

In the first week of October following, unexpectedly, unforeseen, and without a thought of the kind, Mr. S. was put into possession of several hundred dollars through the wisdom and management of the spirits, whose promise he had entirely forgotten at the distressing crisis. Then the money was given to the publisher, and the work was pushed forward and completed. [illegible], among whom are Mr. Barrett, and H. T. Child, M. D., [illegible] require any more satisfactory evidence than this, when he shall ascertain its truth, that the statement made in the introduction of the book is absolutely true?

We will now proceed to examine

THE PLOT AND MACHINERY OF THE BOOK.

This book is written under the assumption of the spirits that through the true Jesus of Nazareth as the teacher and healer of the people of Judea and Galilee a few years after his death, a system of superstition and folly was founded, called Christianity. Yet in that system as handed down to us in the old records, called the Testament, there is not one sentence of reliable truth concerning the true Jesus, his character, works, history, or doctrines, except that he incurred the hatred of the priesthood, who sought and finally accomplished his destruction. The Jesus of the Testament, therefore, being in reality a myth, the works and history, as there given, are contradictory, false statements, having neither authority nor reason to support them, while the doctrines are mostly taken from the books of the Essenes or Therapeuts, and other ancient sources. Some of the moral teachings of the true Jesus were incorporated with some of the Essene doctrines, and finally, by Paul and some wandering Essenee monks, they were worked into a new system of religion, making the tragical fate of Jesus the founder and origin of it, and borrowing some of the fables and title from the Hindoo God Christna, they perfected their system as it is given in the gospels, calling it Christianity; therefore, was not the myth of the Testament. He did not receive this name until the commencement of his career as a teacher and healer of the people, which was given him by John the Baptist, his youthful associate and fellow-student. His true name was Yoseph, which means Joseph in our language, but his foster-parents and neighbors called him Yose, as a name of endearment among them, which last name the author has modernized by altering it to Jose, such as is used in the Latin languages of Europe at the present day.

THE TRUE JESUS

This Yose, or Jose, then, was not an incarnate Deity born of a woman. God was not his father, or the Holy Ghost either, for he had no more of a God in him than any other man; nor were Joseph and Mary his parents. He was obtained by them when an infant in arms, as they were travelling to the village of Nazareth, to settle, and was reared there as their child. He was schooled at the synagogue, and one of his schoolmates was the son of a priest, afterward known as John the Baptist. John and Jose became inseparable companions in and out of school, who one day, as they were wandering from their village, some miles distant, became acquainted with a recluse, who brought to the knowledge of Jose his latent power, which he afterward used in healing the sick.

Thus Jose passed his time at Nazareth, going to school, working for his foster-father, and occasionally visiting the recluse, or discussing religious and metaphysical subjects with John until he was twenty years of age, when old Joseph died. Then Jose, in company with the recluse, left Palestine for foreign parts.

Ten years pass, at the end of which Jose returns to his native country, in full maturity of physical manhood, and his mind well stored with the learning of the sages of those times. He walks the streets of Jerusalem and discovers his old companion, John, who proves to be a religious fanatic, whose home was a cave in the wilderness. He also finds one of his village neighbors, Lazarus, who had moved from Nazareth to Bethany. Here the main narrative of this work commences.

The scene opens with the first vision. Saul, a wealthy, ambitious man, of the tribe of Benjamin, in company with his servant and bondman, Judas, is riding on horseback along the banks of the Jordan, approaching the Lake Asphaltis, which they at length reach. Then they turn up a ravine, and reach a grassy spot, where they alight to refresh themselves. Here Saul makes a confidant of his servant and bondman, Judas, declaring his object in view, his wishes and motives, and finally offers the latter his freedom if he will join him in his designs and aid him. Judas assents, when they leave the spot in search of John the Baptist. The two ragged companions then travel up the ravine, when they find John the Baptist in his cave, of whom an interesting description is given. Saul and Judas become the guests of John until the next day, during which, by their subtlety, and a little wine, they make certain discoveries concerning the unknown personage whom John alluded to in his preaching, and Saul and Judas are invited to the baptism of the unknown, at Bethabara, on the Jordan.

The scene then changes to the home of Lazarus, where nothing in fictitious romance can exceed the beauties and interest of the incidents there depicted. The naturalness of the characters, the exciting events, and the beautiful dialogues, and all else combined form a fascinating network, which enthralls the reader, and holds him spell-bound. Not we can not venture to describe it; we must pass to another scene.

Vision the fifth presents the scene of Bethabara, a ford on the Jordan, where John the Baptist was accustomed to baptize his disciples, which is of unusual interest. When Jose first manifested his powers of healing the sick, it was in the presence of John, the latter considered his opinion as something more than human, and after revolving it in his mind for a time, he concluded that Jose was the Messiah as spoken of by the prophets. He suggested as much to Jose, but was rebuked for his folly, and made to promise that he would not mention the like again. John was silent on that point for years afterward, but he still believed it to be the truth. Time passed on. When Jose returned he found his old schoolmate a greater fanatic, and mystic in his religious notions than ever, and though he much lamented the state of John's mind, he could not divert himself of his sincere friendship and affection for him. John once more urged Jose to acknowledge himself to be the Messiah, but Jose positively refused. Then, John asked him to accept the title of baptism at his hands, which Jose agreed to do, upon conditions that John should again promise never to mention the word Messiah to him, or in his hearing, or to any one else in connection with him. John agreed to the proposal.

The day had now come when Jose was to receive baptism at the hands of John at Bethabara, and many others were to partake of the same rite at the same time. The ceremony commenced, and a good many were immersed before Jose arrived; then John looked among the crowd for Jose. Some officers of the Sanhedrim confronting John, demanded of him, by what right he did those things. An interesting discourse then took place between him and the officers, at the finale of which, John casting his eyes to the bank above, saw Jose descending the path, accompanied by a young man. Then, John pointing in that direction, shouted aloud, "Behold! the chosen of the Lord cometh! The savior cometh to the baptism, yet needeth no repentance!"

All eyes were placed upon Jose, and when he mingled with the crowd, he perceived that a greater respect and deference were shown him than was due or common. He then suspected that John had been saying something concerning him that he should not.

Jose is then immersed, and receives the name of Jesus by John. This is followed by a storm of thunder, lightning and rain, as Jose is kneeling upon the strand in prayer. A large cloud opens, when the sun shines down upon the head of Jose; then John gives vent to his religious phrensy, for he thought he heard a voice in the thunder [illegible] all the people, that Jose or Jesus was the Messiah, as spoken of by the prophets. Jose becomes indignant, and tells John that their friendship and companionship for the future was dissolved. Jesus then leaves the scene, followed by John of Z bodee.

In the mean time, Saul and Judas had been making observations in the back ground, and as soon as Jose had left, Saul sends Judas to follow him, giving the latter instructions what to do.

Then Judas followed Jose, now called Jesus, to his grotto in the white mountains, where by his cunning, assumed sincerity and offer of his bag of gold, he gains the confidence of Jesus, who accepts him as a follower, and gives him the office of stewardship. Then Judas after gaining all the information he could of Jesus and his young companions, returns to Saul and makes a report. Then follows a midnight scene, when the confederates take counsel with each other, to concoct their dark designs to their own aggrandizement, at the sacrifice of all honorable principles, innocence and virtue. Saul further imparts his wishes and advice to Judas, keeping hid as well as he could, the topmost role of the ladder of his ambition.

The plot of the confederates was as follows: Jesus had declared to Judas his intention of going among the people to enlighten their minds and heal their bodies. It was, therefore, decided by the two confederates, that Judas should be his follower and professed disciple, to encourage and guide him as far as it was possible, in accordance with the wishes of Saul, superintending his affairs with that economy and vigilance that they should not fall for want of means; and if assistance in money should be wanting, Saul should furnish it. The crazy idea of John the Baptist, considering Jesus to be the Messiah, was to be encouraged and propagated as much as possible, unknown to Jesus—and all the cures he should perform by the touch of his hand were to be magnified into miracles, and in all other respects, his powers and virtues were to be amplified to the fullest extent. He was to be induced to travel over the country as much, and as rapidly as possible, to make proselytes and gain admirers everywhere; and after a time, when his influence became great, he was to be induced to return to Jerusalem, where the plot was here to centralize him with the priesthood, or with the Roman powers of State, and a case made against him, by which he could be removed out of the way, that another man might come in to reap the harvest of his works. It is not necessary to state who that man was to be. This was the scheme of the two confederates, Saul and Judas. What is most singular, is that both these men had penetration enough to see the virtuous and amiable character of Jesus, whose simplicity, benevolence and intelligence gained their admiration above all other men; yet, one was so infatuated with his idea of worldly aggrandisement and thirst for power, and the other with the desire to free himself from bondage and obtain wealth, that they both conspired to destroy the very man, whose character they, in their consciences, considered the model of true manhood.

But Saul was resolved to achieve some eminent station, and gain power in society; and Judas was determined to free himself from bondage, whatever should be the cost to his conscience and feelings. Therefore, they both considered it a fatal necessity to make Jesus the stepping-stone to their highest aspirations.

Saul, though a learned man of those days, believed in soothsaying and fortune telling. When being desirous to know whether he should succeed in his enterprise, he desires Judas to recommend to him a wise woman or fortune teller. Judas recommends the Sybil of Sospus, who has in her service a young man of Judas' acquaintance. Judas has an interview with his young friend, with whom he makes arrangements for an interview between Saul and the Sybil, through whom he sends a claw to the Sybil, in what manner she should answer the questions of Saul.

The interview takes place. Saul is much astonished at the curious and grand apartment he is ushered into, and at the dignified appearance and deportment of the Sybil, and the satisfaction he receives at the manner his questions are answered. Thus the first act of Judas was to dupe the man who employs him to dupe others. This Sybil turns out to be a personage of great importance in this narrative, and the colic quy that takes place between her and Saul is interesting and dependent on the part she plays herself. Judas engages the Sybil's young man to join him, to perform a certain part, then returns to Jesus at his grotto, when they make preparations to go to Nazareth, where the latter intends to open his labors.

In the grotto scene, Jesus has an important dream, which seems to militate against his contemplated labors, and urges him to forego his designs. It foretells his ruin if he is persistent, and shows the evil institutions that will arise in his name, the results of which will be a deplorable state of society for many ages to mankind. Jesus is consoled by John of Zebedee and Judas, who start the report that Jesus was tempted by the evil one forty days, to abandon the salvation of mankind. They start for Nazareth, where Jesus arrives in time to witness the death of his foster mother, Mary; then after burying her, he commences his teachings in the synagogue. He is opposed by the Rabbi,—a contest and triumph for Jesus is the result in one respect, but the Rabbi triumphs in another. They intend to take the life of Jesus, but his followers rescue him. They then depart for Bethsaida. But it will be impossible to give in this limited article a correct idea of all that transpired in the various scenes,—much less to make quotations, therefore, the reader must be content with the slightest sketch that we can conveniently give to convey an idea of the whole.

After the experiment at Nazareth, it was found prudent that Jesus should have more followers, not only to learn his doctrines, but disseminate them, but to act as an escort at times of personal danger. Judas then took upon him the task of gaining recruits, which he did among the fishermen of Bethsaida, and much humor is displayed in this scene at the expense of the poor fishermen. Judas represented that Jesus was certainly the Messiah, and that he would become King of the Jews, and perhaps of the whole world—so that all those who should join him, would be enabled to obtain great wealth and station in course of time. He thus persuaded John, James, Nathaniel and Philip to join him. But Simon or Peter he found to be too cute a man to be cajoled in the ordinary way, but by subtlety, bribes, and expositions of gain, and only to learn his doctrines and we shall meet again. Should it prove so, Saul, then—"

On uttering the last word, Judas fell back a corpse. Then Saul expresses his pity that so good a fellow as Judas should meet such a fate, and coolly reasons upon the nature of man, and Fates that control him. He proves to himself satisfactorily, that he had no evil feelings within himself against Judas or Jesus; that all men were controlled and moved by a fate, to a certain end; that the fates of Jesus and Judas were preliminary necessities to bring out his own qualities and opportunities, by which he should be enabled to achieve a great and glorious career, to which he was destined.

All obstacles being removed, he was now ready to enter on that career, which he finally achieved, by transmitting to posterity his own character and estimate of himself, which has duped the world, as regards him and his works, for nearly eighteen hundred years, besides purchasing for himself fifteen hundred years of hellish remorse and anguish in another world, of which he preached, but did not believe. The plot and incidents of this extraordinary book terminate with this last act of Saul.

Whether we consider it in the light of a fiction, or as truth emanating from the spirits who influenced Mr. S., from all we know of this medium, we have no reason to doubt his sincerity and veracity in the statement he has made of its origin, and if we had no personal acquaintance with him, after reading his book, we should judge him to be an enthusiastic lover of the truth of all things, a man of sound mind, and of great moral bravery to bring this book before the public, at a time when theological ignorance, prejudice, and power predominated over the greater portion of the social mind. He could not help knowing, that such a work as this would highly offend and exasperate the Christian clergy, who style themselves the servants of God and the shepherds of the people, for they will be afraid that their docile flocks would go astray if they should hear a voice speaking truth and reason. They will, therefore, endeavor to counteract the influence of this strange book, and excommunicate its author from all society, as far as the Anathema Maranatha of their holy indignation will allow them. Nevertheless, the author fears nothing on that head,—he quails not, but resolves to do the biddings of the spirits.

He gathered together all his hard-earned means, and with further aid from the spirits, he gave all to the publisher of this book, that his fellow-men might gain the light it contains. And when the contents are made known, what is the result? The clergy and their pious flocks are struck with consternation, and shriveled up with horror, when they find that their mythical Jesus is converted into a rational and sensible man, who is benevolent, consistent, and sensible in his discourse and actions; who makes no pretensions to be a God, and entirely ignores the God of the Jews,—demonstrating that such a deity was no God at all, but only a myth of Moses' creation. In place of the Mosaical God, he endeavors to enlighten the people upon the true God of Nature, giving them good moral advice, and healing their diseases by his inherent magnetic powers. Intelligent, yet humble, and just, he is the model of the true man,—a perfect antithesis to the absurd, mythical character whom the clergy pretend to adore as a God, as given in the New Testament.

On the other hand, the liberal-minded reader, —the lover and seeker after truth,—when he shall peruse this book, will at first be impelled by a great curiosity, which, as he proceeds in his reading, will become an attractive interest, and as he dives deeper and deeper into its contents, he will finally become absorbed and bound to it, as by a spell of pleasing fascination. He will see thousands of things in that clear and rational light, of which at some former time he might have taken glimpses, when popular opinion and a priestly influence prevented him from investigating them. He will find every page teeming with an attractive interest,—the best of morals, fit to influence mankind under all conditions, and make them happy. Beautiful gems of thought will raise high his aspirations to all that is noble, and now and then an inkling of dry humor will cause him to smile. From page to page, and end to end, the reader will find a unity, a rationality and attractiveness, seldom equalled in any book, but never excelled.

THE PERSONAGES OR CHARACTERS.

It would be foolish and absurd for anybody to judge of the personages and their characters in this book, by any of the preconceived ideas which have been given to us by our theological teachers and advisers, for the design of this book is to show that all such standards of judgment are not true but erroneous; consequently, the personages in this book and the new Testament will present a great contrast. We have given some slight idea of the difference between the Jesus of the New Testament and the Jesus of this book, we will now speak of Saul, or Paul as he is generally known.

The commencement of Saul's career, as given in the New Testament, is that of being a persecutor of the Christians, and participator in the murder of Stephen, which is considered to be the most wicked of offenses committed, and goes forth to preach Christ crucified, then everything he does and says, is thought to be good. They consider him a changed man for the better, and though they say this change was produced by Christ, yet he receives the credit of it, and ever afterward, he is considered to be a man of wisdom, purity, and holiness. Poor infatuated ignorance! They think not that this conversion of Paul, was his first act of imposture and knavery, by which he introduces himself to the Christian party, over whom he designs to rule and dominate. Such was the end of ambitious views, for which he had labored during the preceding three years, in the commission of heinous crimes, which form the interesting tragical drama so beautifully exhibited in the book of Mr. S.

By the pretended conversion of Saul, he did not become changed for the better. It was all a whim of his own invention, such as has been practiced by knaves and hypocrites in all times and countries to the present day, when they wish to gain admittance among, and gain the favor of a class of religious dupes. Saul was the same man at heart and mind after his pretended conversion that he was preceding it, with the exception that he was obliged to be a greater hypocrite, to hide his villainy. Saul was just the man he represented himself to be, when relating his history, and confessing his follies and crimes to the medium, the author of this book. He was a learned man of his day, which is not much to say in his favor—he was ambitious to obtain power over the minds of his fellow-men.

There were two principal ways for ambitious men to distinguish themselves in ancient days: One was to become a great warrior, by slaughtering their fellows, and marching over their bodies to power. The other was to become a [illegible] invent a new religion, and enslave the [illegible] of mankind. Saul chose the latter, as it [illegible] to suit him best. He was subtle as the [illegible] as sweet as the dove or the song of the [illegible] but as callous at heart to all virtuous, moral sympathy, as a hyena when fastening on a corpse. Such is Saul, as depicted in this book, by his own representation and authority.

The other personages are well portrayed according to the part they perform, but they are greatly in contrast with theological conception and representation. Judas is not the heinous man of crime and sin that the Christian church represents him. Though guilty of crime and follies, he had some mitigating qualities. He was superior to Saul in virtue, and a greater admirer of a virtuous character. He was a man compelled to sin by adverse circumstances, and Saul was the demon that controlled him and them. Had it not been for Saul, Judas would never have proved a traitor to Jesus, for he admired the virtuous principles and intentions of the latter, but cruel fate compelled him against his will, to do what he did. The other personages are generally well portrayed. But there is one, which, we must confess, we do not understand, or, at least does not seem a natural one. We allude to Cybi. It seems to us, that this personage must be a fictitious one that the spirits have invented, into which they have concentrated several persons, and many incidents that transpired at different periods of time, and thus brought them in view in this manner, in order to preserve the unity of the drama. Whether we are right in our supposition, we will leave others to judge.

THE STYLE OF THIS BOOK.

is certainly a difficult point to criticise, for it is an unparalleled one in past or present literature. Many critics, perhaps, will be capable of finding exceptions to their own peculiar tasks, but the majority of readers must certainly confess that it is of a lofty, clear, and energetic diction. For one address each other in the second person all through the book, which gives it a quaint, serious, and impressive effect. The plainest words are used that the subject will admit of, so that all minds of a moderate literary calibre are enabled to take in the whole, and lose nothing. It is entirely free from the swarms of poetical figures and images, which obscure and destroy the sense to the reader's comprehension, that is common to some authors when they aim at the exquisitely refined; yet, there are many beautiful gems of thought, given under original, brilliant figures. The characters, incidents, and dialogues, are given with such natural simplicity, that the reader can not help being moved with a kindred sympathy, and partake of the joys, the loves, and indignations there described. The reader's time is not wasted by anything of a trifling, flip-flop, namby-pamby nature. There is nothing of the kind in the whole book. All that is presented, is given in a plain, serious, clear, and impressive manner—sometimes mounting to grandeur and sublimity, all of which being so full of attractive interest, that the reader never tires. The author can show several letters from persons who state that they have read his book through from four to six times in continuation, without finding it to flag in interest to them.

But there is one peculiarity in this book, that is not to be found in any other. It seems Mr. S. has written in a purely independent style of his own, for, from one end to the other, there is not a phrase, an idiom, a figure of speech, or an expression that is commonly made use of by authors, and yet, his diction possesses great spirit and energy. How he has managed to accomplish this is a marvel. There are some few faults and errors in his composition, which the general merits of the work will excuse.

THE DESIGN OF THE BOOK.

The spirits tell the medium, that this book was designed for the mass of the people, to give them information of the pure character of Jesus and his doctrines, to lead them from their errors and misconceptions of him, as impressed upon their minds by the old records of the Christian Church; that in course of time, when the circumstances shall be more favorable, this book shall be read at the firesides of both rich and poor, but especially the latter, then the mind of society shall be revolutionized for the better.

That is not all that may be said on this point. Whether the book is literally true or a fiction, it seems to our conception, that it was designed, not only to enlighten society on the idolatries and absurdities of the Christian church, which is now divided into many conflicting sects, and all apostates from reason and nature, but it was also designed as a model compromise, by which society may again become united as one people, with similar religious views and feelings, practicing one universal code of good morals, which shall establish a reign of general love, interest, and harmony among mankind on earth, and that being established, their future salvation would be secured for the hereafter. This idea may be laughed at by many who can not see farther into the future than to-day or to-morrow, but to others who have a further reaching sight, it will appear otherwise. Is it not true that the mind of society is in a transition state? Is not the public mind vibrating between darkness and the light which is daily dawning upon it, and gradually forsaking old institutions and embracing the new, that promises more worthy and happier conditions? Will it not relapse into the darkness and become immovable, or will it enter the light and progress forever? All nature gives evidence of man's gradual progress, and assures us that the latter will be the case. How, then, is it difficult to conceive that this meritorious book of truths and beauties, shall not supersede the old, mythical, and absurd records, called the New Testament, upon which the Christian church and all its mummeries is founded? It certainly will, and the time is not far distant, when compared with the great changes which nations have undergone in the past.

The author, Mr. S., has done his duty in producing this book under the guidance of the spirits, and has done it well, as mankind, in course of time, will be enabled to appreciate. Though the conditions of society are such that it can not immediately be spread before the people, yet, the time will come, when others will make it known, and do the work left undone to-day.

Then, the mass of the people will be enlightened and awakened, the foundations of priestcraft will be torn up, and the whole structure of the Christian church of to-day, shall topple over with a crash, burying from the light of day, the priesthood, and all their mythical records.

What, then, will be the result? The proneness of mankind to religious emotions, and the general intelligence, will necessitate a blending and harmonizing of their views and feelings, when they will settle down upon some general plan or system by which all may indulge their thoughts and feelings of a religious and moral nature, and, as the people for ages past, amidst all their superstitions, have been fascinated by the name of Jesus, that name will still have an influence in determining them to make "Jesus of Nazareth" the great book of compromise, or, as a model, by which some other book, plan, or system, may be constructed, that shall unite all conflicting parties in the bonds of brotherly love, rationality, equality, and peace, and produce general happiness, as far as human nature is capable of enjoying on earth. We, therefore, commend the book, and advise all who can, to buy it.

Philadelphia, June 2, 1871.

AGENTS! READ THIS!

WE WILL PAY AGENTS A SALARY OF $30 per week and expenses, or allow a large commission, to sell our new and wonderful invention. M. WAGNER & Co., Marshall, Mich. 19-23tf.

MEDIUMS' DIRECTORY.

The Religio-Philosophical Journal being an opposite friend to all true mediums, will hereafter publish a complete Directory giving the place of all professional mediums, as far as address upon this subject. To be will afford better facilities for investigators to learn of the location of mediums, and at the same time increase their patronage. Mediums will do well to advise us from time to time, that we may keep their place of residence correctly registered.

☞ It is a lamentable fact that some mediums so far forget their self respect as to speak evil of other mediums, not unfrequently even of those who are far their superiors. The names of such persons will be for ever spued from this Rostrum so soon as we have evidence conclusive of their indulging in such unkindness.

It should be borne in mind that individuals visiting mediums carry conditions with themselves—so to speak—which aid or destroy the power of spirits to control the medium visited; hence it is that one medium gives satisfaction to certain persons, another better to others—all having their friends, and justly so, too, and all equally honest and sincere in their opinion.

CHICAGO.

Bangs children, 277 S. Morgan St. ‡
Mrs. Ettie Brown, 126 W. Washington St.
Dr. W. Cleveland, 83 West Harrison St.*
Mrs. A. Crocker, 179 W. Madison St. *
Dr. D. G. Dake, 211 Wabash Ave., Chicago.*
Dr. E. Dwyer, 223 West Madison St. Chicago
Dr. L. P. Geiger, 250 W. Madison street, cor. Peoria.*
Mrs. Jorgen-on, Parlors 28 and 29 Honore Block ‡
Mrs. M. Jenks, 176 W. Van Buren street.*
Mrs. A. Mrs. G. A. Lehigh, 81 Clark street.*
Rev. J. T. Lewis and wife, 76 Cass Ave.*
Dr. S. L. McFadden and Wife, 348 W. Madison St.*‡
Mrs. C. Moody, 196 13th street. * ‡
Mrs. A. H. Hoonover, 146 Fourth Avenue.*‡‡
Madame Ritter, 301 S. Clark St. ‡
Mrs. M. Smith, 141 Michigan Ave.*
Dr. Sargent, 73 Third Ave.‡
Dr. M. L. Sherman and Wife, 206 South Clark St.*‡
Dr. Samuel Tadelbaum, 141 Clark street.*
Mrs. S. T. Viber, 69 Indiana Ave.*‡
Dr. J. Wilmer, 46 W. Randolph St.*
A. B. Wolfe, 561 North Clark street.*‡
Mrs. M. S. Weeks, Room 56 De Haven block, Chicago.

BOSTON.

Dr. H. B. Storer.*†
Mrs. Judge M. H. Priest, 116 Harrison Ave.
Mrs. S. J. Stickney, 332 Tremont St.
Dr. Main, 226 Harrison Ave.*
Mrs. A. G. Cattman, 393 Washington St.
Freeman Hatch, 8 Beaver Place.
Mrs. L. W. Leach 97 Salisbury St. †
Mrs. Ann Stevens, 24 Milborne St.
W. H. Mosier, 170 W. Springfield street. ¶
Mrs. A. S. Bridge, 1 Oak St.‡
Mrs. H. M. Hardy, 138 W. Concord St.‡
Samuel Grover, 25 Dix Place.
Mrs. P. O. Hexter, 321 Tremont St.‡
R. C. Littlejohn, 30 Hanson street, Boston, Mass.

PHILADELPHIA.

Mrs. S. A. Anthony, 4 S. Col. of 7th and Catharine
D. S. Cadwallader, 1009 Race St.
Mrs. H. J. French, 1235 Ridge Ave.
Mrs. A. Goodhue, 435 Fairmount St.
Mrs. L. T. Mann, 240 South 12th st.*‡
Keith B. Rosen on 9 25 Brandywine St.
Mrs. Reynolds, 1010 Pennsylvania St.
Mrs. R. Schell, 1346 Hanover St.
Mrs. Taylor, 506 North 10th St.
Dr. Wm. G. Hoegh, 812 Mole st ‡
Mrs. Stoddard, 1310 Mole St.

NEW YORK CITY.

Jennie Danforth, 54 Lexington Ave.†
Miss Hannah Foley, 634 Third Ave.
Mrs. H. Seymour, 109 Mercer St.
Mrs. J. Cotton, 247 E. 31st St.
J. William Van Namee, 430 Fourth Ave.*‡‡

BLOOMINGTON, ILLS.

Mrs. Helen Grover.
Mrs. M. A. Stanford, 313 E. Main St. ‡
Dr. Mary Lewis, Bloomington, Ill.‡

BAYONNE CITY, N. J.

Mrs. E. Wallis.‡

GREEN GARDEN ILL.

Mrs. Calkins.*‡

GENESEE, WIS.

Mrs. E. W. Balcom. *‡
Mrs. F. A. Logan.

ROCKFORD, ILL.

Samuel Smith, Box 1281, Rockford, Ill. *
Mrs. M. J. Colton. E. Rockford, Ill. ‡

SAN FRANCISCO.

Wm. H. Hatch, 128 Kearney St.

ST. CHARLES, ILLS.

Mrs. Leonard Howard.*‡
D. P. Kayner, M. D.*

SAN JOSE, CAL.

Mrs. Mary J. Beech.

WHITEWATER, WIS.

Mrs. A. B. Severance.*‡

MISCELLANEOUS.

Mrs. Orrin Abbott, Minneapolis, Minnesota. *
Lizzie Annis, Cedar Rapids, Iowa. ‡
Jonathan Allen, Ancora, N. J.
Lodema Atwood, Lake Mills, Wis.
Mrs. H. A. Blair, 140 Ridge st., Baltimore, Md. ‡
D. Atkinson, Marion, Ohio. ‡
Mrs. Jennie Adams, Box 1909, Kansas City, Mo. *
Mrs. E. A. Blair, 140 Ridge st., Salem, Mass. ¶
Dr. H. Bowen, Wellington, Lorain Co., Pa.*
M. K. Cassles, 135 Bank street, Newark, N. J.*
Mrs. J. P. Currier, Cincinnati, Ohio.*
Mrs. Dr. Wells, 84 Sterling Block, Cleveland, Ohio.
J. W. Ellis, Atlanta, Ga. †
Mrs. E. H. Everal, Springfield, Mo. ‡
David S. Walker, Box 2011, Elgin, Ill. *†
Alonzo Fairchil, Schenectady N. Y. *
J. B. Fayette, Gibson, N. Y.¶
Dr. S. W. Fenno, 124 Ridge St, Columbus, Ohio. *
Mrs. Wm. L. Gay, Canastota, New York. *
Dr. J. M. Holland, 306 Upper Broadway, Council Bluffs Iowa.*
Judge D. L. Hoy, Mobile, Alabama.
U. S. Hamilton, Beloit, Wis.*
Dr. S. Heal, 23 Whitehall St, Atlanta, Ga.*
Mrs. Jessie Hines, Gowanda, N. Y. ‡
Minnie Jefferson, Traveling. †
J. W. Kenyon, Watertown, Wis.
J. H. Nolan, Watertown, N. Y. ‡
Mrs. A. Nesbit, Ouneoseburg, Mich.*
Dr. Abba Loud Palmer, New Boston, Ill. *†
Mrs Hattie Pike, South Bend Ind. ‡
Mrs. M. E. Robbins, Evansville, Ind.
H. B. Starr, Fort Gaines, Mich. ¶
Jesse Jenkins Stone, Gowanda, Ind.‡
A. B. Severance and Mrs. J. H. S. Severance, M. D. 497 Milwaukee street, Milwaukee, Wis †‡
Mrs. P. W. Stephens, east side of 4th street, between I & J,

[illegible]

9 Solemnizing Marriages and Attending Funerals.

ARCANA OF SPIRITUALISM.

A MANUAL OF

SPIRITUAL SCIENCE AND PHILOSOPHY

By Hudson Tuttle.

WITH PORTRAIT OF THE AUTHOR. PRICE $2.00; Postage 24c.

This work embodies the results of the author's researches and experience during the past twenty years, and is, without doubt, the most thorough presentation of the subject of Modern Spiritualism before the public.

Dealing, as it does, with a question in which the interest of all mankind is centered, it cannot fail to command universal attention.

While the experience of thousands will repudiate some of the conclusions the author arrives at, they will still be able to obtain much invaluable information from the book. It is a good book to place in the hands of every person who would know more of what it is that is waking the world to new hopes and aspirations, and planting a tree of life beside every man's door.

 Price, $2.00; postage, 24 cents. For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

Speaker's Register.

We are sick of trying to keep a standing Register of Meetings and list of speakers without a hearty co-operation on the part of those most interested.

MR. HERSAFTER we shall register such meetings and speakers as are furnished to us BY THE PARTIES INTERESTED with a pledge on their part that they will keep us posted in regard to changes; and in addition to that, EXPRESS indicate a willingness to aid in the circulation of the JOURNAL, both by word AND DEED.

Let us see how many will respond to this proposition, and we will do our part faithfully.

J. Madison Allen, Ancora, N. J.
C. Fannie Allyn, Stoneham, Mass.†
Addie L. Ballou, Address Chicago, care of RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL.*‡
BOB A. Bates, Versailles, N. Y.†
Dr. J. E. Bailey, box 304 Logansport Ind.*
Rev. J. O. Barrett, Glen Beulah, Wisconsin.
Mrs. A. P. Brown, 6 Johnsbury Center, Vt. †
Dr. W. D. Bloss, Jor. Hart & Walnut sts at Chicago†
Hitty Brown, Address: 18 West Washington St., Chicago.†
Henry A. Beach, Spring Valley, N. Y.
Mrs. Bell A. Chamberlain, Medford, Minnesota.†
Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Colkins, Green Garden, Ill.††
H. T. Child, M. D., 634 Race St., Philadelphia, Pa.*
Mrs. A. H. Colby, Winchester, Randolph Co., Ind.†
F. B. Dowd, Restoration, Davenport, Iowa.*
Lewis F. Cummings, Address care of the Journal.*
John Crowell, Frost, Mercer Co., Pa.†
Andrew Jackson Davis, Orange, N. J.
Dan T. Edwards, Stevenson's Mill, Me.
Mrs. J. Frankenstein, Vincennes, Ind. ‡
I. H. Garretson, Richland, Iowa.
R. Graves, Richmond, Ind.*
Miss Hattie E. Huntley, Watertown, Ill.
Mrs. M. Hayes, Waterloo, Wis.†
Lyman C. Howe, Fredonia, N. Y.*
Joseph B. Hawley, Des-Moines, Iowa.
Thomas Harding, box 801, Sturgis, Mich.
Samuel S. Hartshaw, Goshen, Ind.
Dr. H. Hamilton, Beloit, Wis.*
W. H. Holcombe, Grass Valley, Cal.
L. D. Hay, Mobile, Ala.*
H. P. Jones, 139 S. Clark St., Chicago. ¶
Dr. Wm. H. Jocelyn, address him in care of this Office.*
D. P. Kayner, M. D., St. Charles, Ill. ‡
Mrs. M. M. Kling, Minneapolis, Minn.
L. Lewis, Valparaiso, Ind.
P. B. Lawrence, Ottumwa, Iowa.*
Geo. W. Lane, 8 Oak Maple, Milford, N. H.
Wm. F. Lyon, 306 S. Clark St., Chicago.*
O. S. Lost, Pine Island, Minn. ‡
Mrs. M. A. Lane, Watertown, Wis.
J. Mansfield-Smith, care of Mrs. Lane.*
F. O. Matts, North Weymouth, Mo.*
Joel Moody, Hansas City, Kansas.
J. S. Manjoy, Esq., Vancouver, Washington Territory.
Mr. John J. Odell, Waterloo, N. Y. *
Mrs. A. L. Pennell, Utica, Minn.*
Mrs. L. R. Perkins, Kansas City, Mo. ††
Dr. R. Perkins, Kansas City, Mo.
Hattie E. Pope, Morristown, Minn.*
Mrs. M. H. Parry, Beloit, Wis. †
J. S. Rouse, Caney, Ill.
Samuel Rinn, 3 Court St., Boston, Mass.
Mrs. S. A. Rogers. Address in care of A. J. Grover, Rockford, Ill.*
Samuel Smith, Rockford, Ill.*
Warren Smith, Alexandria, Madison Co., Ind.
Job Smyth, Hallsport, N. Y.
Mrs. F. Hillman Sorrance, M.D., Milwaukee, Wis.††
Mrs. Laura Cuppy Smith, care of the office, Chicago.
S. W. Stevens, drawer 40, Janesville, Wis.
M. K. Sherman, M. D., 208 S. Clark St., Chicago.*
Mrs. L. A. Swain, Union Lake, Lake Co., Minn.
D. G. Seymour, Lawrence, Kansas. †
Benjamin J. Todd, Portland, Oregon.*
Mrs. Benjamin Todd, Portland, Oregon.*
Mrs. Sarah M. Thompson, Glenwood, Ohio. *
M. M. Tinney, Lake Mills.
Mrs. S. F. Trego, Old City, Pa.††
J. B. Tupper, Jamestown, Wis. †
Hudson Tuttle, Berlin Heights, O.*†
Dr. Rachel Thrasher Tuttle, Ill.*
J. William Van Namee, Hamilton, N. Y.†
Mrs. M. J. Wilcoxson, Care of Journal, Chicago, Ill.*
J. G. Wilkinson, 3 Jan 4 To 800 Ohio. *†‡
B. V. Wilson, Lombard, Ill.‡
A. B. Whiting, Albion, Mich.†
Milton Woodworth, Leslie, Mich.
Dr. E. B. Wheelock, Pleasanton, Kansas.

* Inspirational.
† Trance.
‡ Clairvoyant.
¶ Solemnizing Marriages and Attending Funerals.

UNDERHILL ON MESMERISM.

WITH

Criticisms on its Opposers,

AND A REVIEW OF [illegible]

[illegible]

THE PHILOSOPHY OF ITS CURATIVE POWERS;

How to develop a good Clairvoyant

THE PHILOSOPHY OF

SEEING WITHOUT EYES.

THE PROOFS OF IMMORTALITY DERIVED FROM THE UNFOLDING OF MESMERISM—EVIDENCE OF MENTAL COMMUNION WITHOUT SIGHT OR SOUND; BETWEEN BODIES FAR APART IN THE FLESH—COMMUNION OF SAINTS, OR WITH THE DEPARTED.

BY SAMUEL UNDERHILL, M. D., L. L. D.,

LATE PROFESSOR OF CHEMISTRY, ETC., ETC.

Price $1.25. Postage 12 cents. The Trade supplied. Address S. S. Jones, Chicago, Ill.

FLORENCE SEWING MACHINES.

Wm. H. Sharp, & Co., General Agents.

63 Madison Street.

This machine is recommended to any who desire a first-class Family Sewing Machine; and is noted for its quiet, rapid motion, regulation of tension, and ease of management. Four different stitches, and reversible feed-motion—features peculiar to the Florence Machine, and obtained by no other machine in the world.

Samples and terms to agents furnished on application.

TEN DOLLARS!

($10) GIVEN AWAY!! ($10)

We will give to every one buying a FLORENCE SEWING MACHINE through our House TEN DOLLARS' worth of any of the books advertised in our book-list, or of the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL, or a part of each as a premium or inducement.

The Florence Machine is one of the very best manufactured, and ranges in price from sixty-five dollars to one hundred and fifty.

We will furnish descriptive circulars and samples on application.

We have sold a large number of these machines, and they have given the most perfect satisfaction in every case.

Call on or address:—

RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 187 and 189 South Clark street, Chicago.

HESPERIA:

AN EPIC OF THE PAST AND FUTURE OF AMERICA.

By Mrs. Cora L. V. Tappan.

 PRICE: $1.75; postage, 20 cents. For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

[illegible]

THE CELEBRATED

CRAIG MICROSCOPE

Is an optical wonder; reveals the thousands of hidden wonders of Nature; is of convenient size and practical availability, combining instruction with amusement, and never losing its interest. It magnifies a power equal to other microscopes of many times its cost. Reveals countless little worlds all around us, teeming with life, which, to the naked eye must forever remain a sealed book—as Eels in Vinegar, Animals in Water, Cheese Mites, Sugar and Salt Insects, Milk Globules, Claws and Hairs of Insects, Hundreds of Eyes in the Single eye of a Fly, Dust of a Butterfly's Wings to be perfectly formed feathers, the much talked of Trichina Spiralis or Pork Worm, which was first discovered in America with this Microscope.

TEN THOUSAND TIMES,

It is of infinite value to professional men, to teachers and to students, but nowhere is it of greater value than on the family table, within the reach of every member. It will delight yourself, your children and friends during the long winter evenings. It will show you adulterations or sophistications of various kinds in food, as sugar, tea, bread, meat, &c.

It is of Inestimable Value to the Farmer

in examining insects which prey upon his crops. The power of a $50 microscope, and so simple in its construction that any child can use it understandingly and with appreciation.

A Beautiful Present, Elegant, Instructive, Amusing, and Cheap. Over 60,000 sold.

During the past six years its worth has been testified to by Thousands of Scientific Men, Farmers, School Teachers, Students, Physicians, Heads of Families, and others.

PRICE $3.00.—Sent by Mail, Post-paid:

Every instrument is neatly boxed, and handsomely labeled with full directions for use. Thousands have been sent by mail.

Address:—RELIGIO - PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 South Clark St., Chicago.

DR. E. P. MILLER'S WORKS.

The Cause of Exhausted Vitality, or Abuses of the Sexual Function. Cloth $1.00, Postage, 12cts.

Every Young Man and every Young Woman, every Married Man and every Married Woman, Should read it.

A vast amount of suffering, as well as physical, mental and moral ruin would be prevented, if all were acquainted with the facts contained in this work and followed its excellent advice.

Vital Force, How wasted and How Preserved. Cloth $1.00, Postage 12cts; Paper Cover, 50cts, Postage, 4cts.

Mrs. Francis Dana Gage says: "I earnestly wish that it could be read by every mother in the country."

It is an invaluable work and should have a place in every family library.

How to Bathe, a Family Guide for the Use of Water in Preserving Health and Treating Disease.

Paper Cover, Price 40cts; Postage, 4cts

Important Truths, By Mrs. E. P. Miller, M. D.

Price, 20cts, Postage, 2cts.

This little work is written in a style adapted to the [illegible] Minds, and no parent should fear to place it in their [illegible]

[illegible]

THE TRADE SUPPLIED.

Address S. S. Jones, 187 & 189, South Clark Clark street, Chicago, Ill.

Exeter Hall! Exeter Hall!

HAVE YOU READ EXETER HALL

THE following are extracts from a few of the notices of Exeter Hall, the Theological Romance:—

"The plot and passion in Exeter Hall show an experienced hand in their delineation. Exeter Hall proves that the author has something to say and knows how to say it."—(Public Opinion, London, England.

"It is indeed a wonderful book."—(New York Mail.

"We commend it to the widest popular approval."—(Banner of Light, Boston.

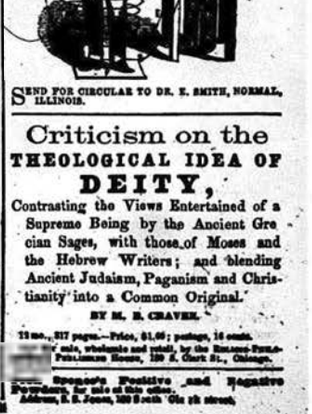
"We have no inclination in declaring this a great work."—(Universe, New York.

"The book is well and powerfully written. * * *

The most scorching work ever published in America since the 'Age of Reason.'"—(Liberal, Chicago.

"One of the most exciting romances of the day."—(Democrat's Magazine, New York.

"Convincingly illustrative of the errors of Theology."—(Investigator, Boston.



"The humane and charitable tendencies of the book must receive the approbation of every friend of humanity."—(Daily Telegraph, Toronto, Canada.

Price, 50 cents. Postage, 4 cents.

For sale, wholesale and retail, by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 187 & 189 South Clark st. Chicago.

The Great

MAGNETIC CURE.

SEND FOR CIRCULAR TO DR. E. SMITH, NORMAL, ILLINOIS.

Criticism on the THEOLOGICAL IDEA OF DEITY,

Contrasting the Views Entertained of a Supreme Being by the Ancient Grecian Sages, with those of Moses and the Hebrew Writers; and blending Ancient Judaism, Paganism and Christianity into a Common Original.

BY M. B. CRAVEN.

12 mo., 317 pages.—Price, $1.50; postage, 16 cents.

For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

[illegible] Spencer's Positive and Negative Powers. A pair of their [illegible] Address, S. S. Jones, 189 South Clark st. Chicago.

Religio-Philosophical Journal.

S. S. JONES, EDITOR, PUBLISHER AND PROPRIETOR.
R. FRANCIS, ASSOCIATE EDITOR

Office 167 and 169 So. Clark Street.

Religio-Philosophical Publishing House.

☞All letters and communications should be addressed to S. S. JONES, 169 South Clark Street, Chicago, Illinois.

TERMS OF THE

Religio-Philosophical Journal,

$3.00 per year, $1.50—6 months, $1.—3 mo.

☞Fifty cents for Three Months on Trial

TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS.

In making remittances for subscriptions, always procure a draft on New York, or Post-Office Money Order, if possible. Where neither of these can be procured, send the money, but ALWAYS IN A REGISTERED LETTER. The registration fee has been reduced to FIFTEEN CENTS, and the present registration system has been found by the postal authorities to be virtually an absolute protection against losses by mail. All Postmasters are obliged to register letters when requested to do so.

All subscriptions remaining unpaid more than six months, will be charged at the rate of $3.50 per year.

PAPERS are forwarded until an explicit order is received by the Publisher for their discontinuance, and until payment of all arrearages is made, as required by law.

We cannot interrupt on the subscription books without the first payment in advance.

SUBSCRIBERS are particularly requested to note the expiration of their subscriptions, and to forward what is due for the ensuing year, with or without further reminder from this office

NEWSPAPER DECISIONS.

1. Any person who takes a paper regularly from the post-office, whether directed to his name or another's, or whether he has subscribed or not—is responsible for the payment.

2. If a person orders his paper discontinued, he must pay all arrearages, or the publisher may continue to send it, until payment is made, and collect the whole amount,—whether he pays for it or not.

3. The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers and periodicals from the post-office, or removing and leaving them unsalled for, is PRIMA FACIE evidence of intentional fraud.

LOOK TO YOUR SUBSCRIPTIONS.

Upon the margin of each paper, or upon the wrapper, will be found a stereotyped date to which payment has been made. For instance, if John Smith has paid to Dec. 10th, 1870, it will be mailed, "Smith J.—10 Dec.—0." The 0 means 1870. If he has only paid to Dec. 10th, 1869, it would stand thus: Smith J.—10 Dec.—9, or perhaps, in some cases, the last two figures for the year, as 70 for 1870, or 69 for 1869.

☞Those sending money to this office for the JOURNAL, should be careful to state whether it be a renewal, or a new subscription, and write all proper names plainly.

CHICAGO, JUNE 17, 1871.

A SEARCH AFTER GOD.

NUMBER XLIII.

Pertinent Questions and Conclusions.

In the desert place alluded to in our previous article we stand enchained, as it were, meditating on the wondrous changes that are constantly being made in the regions of space. Here all the activities of matter are in a latent condition of negative state, and only through the instrumentality of individualized intelligences can they be brought forth, and until then no animation, no life, no light, simply one vast nothingness surrounds us.

Such is the condition of matter in some of the vast desert places of the regions around us.

THE LAMP.

Take again, for example, the lamp; apply a spark of fire thereto, and potent forces are liberated therefrom that produce the flame, and when all are exhausted, it will instantly be extinguished, but only certain qualities of the oil are rendered negative, and through the instrumentality of the flame it passes into the atmosphere, and you claim that it has merely changed its state, and still exists, only in a different condition. True, only certain distinctive characteristics are rendered latent by the change. The quality of the oil disappears, but the gasses into into which it passes, continue to exercise a potent influence, and answer a specific purpose. But we will proceed in our investigation. We have accomplished our object by liberating certain activities of the oil, which produced the flame. We will now follow the gasses generated through the instrumentality of the flame, and by a chemical process render each one in turn latent. Through the application of the spark of fire we produced the flame, and that caused the oil to disappear, but only destroyed its attraction of cohesion. Still the oil exists, but in a different condition. We have dissipated it, rendered its attraction of cohesion negative, and it is now invisible to the eye, but not invisible to all the senses in their operation.

THE ATMOSPHERE.

The air is a part of the earth, generated therefrom, and proceeds from it on principles somewhat analogous to the mist rising from the sea.

In the air we breathe are all the constituents of the earth beneath us. Certain characteristics of it are liberated, and through the instrumentality thereof our atmosphere is formed. In the grand progress of matter from one condition to another, we find many interesting revelations, and the chemists of the Spirit World are constantly experimenting therewith, in order to determine the nature of the activities contained therein.

Were there no water on the surface of the earth, there could be no atmosphere, for it is through the instrumentality thereof that it is produced. We have here a grand battery. The earth, peculiarly arranged, constitutes the plates; the water is the chemical solution, and acted upon by the sun, it is set in operation, and therefrom there rises forth, invisible to the eye, the atmosphere we breathe. But in this article it was not our intention to explain the action of this grand battery in which the intelligence of spirits is manifested, but to show how certain activities of the earth are liberated.

THE QUESTION.

Passing again in our Search to ask the question, how, when, and by whom was the first world created? our readers will anxiously wait for our conclusions. Taking them as we have, to the distant fields in space, where the activities of matter are all latent, the query arises, if there was not a time when all space was in that condition. Here, then, is the question, and we do not wish to avoid it, and although our answer may be somewhat indefinite when given, yet it will contain the only reasonable conclusions ever presented to the world.

THE OUTER COVERING OF THE SPIRIT.

Through our contact with matter we learn its laws. Being subject to its action, its activities, its unfoldment, we become familiar with them and learn lessons of wisdom thereby.

Now, bear in mind, that in this mundane sphere, your outer covering organization with it, for it is only through growth and development in the material thereof that you can become familiar with its nature. In the Spirit World your outer organization corresponds exactly with the material of the sphere in which you reside, and when you advance to one higher, that is dissipated, left where it belongs, the same as your physical body of earth is left with it.

THE GERM OF MAN, OR HIS SPIRITUAL ENTITY ALWAYS EXISTED.

You who believe in the presence of an infinite personality, we ask you if it is not more reasonable to believe that each one of us had an eternity of existence, instead of the one you worship. You can believe that an infinite being exists, and has lived through all eternity, but when the statement is made that man is co-eternal with matter, that his organization, as a sentient being, is co-eternal with its laws, you all at once cry, "Impossible!"

LATENT POWERS OF MIND.

What is true of matter in this respect, is also true of mind,—its activities are often in a latent condition. In the child and the idiot, such is the case. The child advances in intelligence just in proportion as certain faculties are aroused within it by growth or development. In certain children, the activities of their minds are prematurely quickened, and consequently are not in harmony with the body, and they are called precocious, and rarely live to mature age. The mind,—the sentient portion of each one,—should be in harmony with its outer covering. The child, sometimes at four years of age, exhibits wonderful mathematical powers that baffle the skill of old heads. The organs of its mind are aroused for a particular purpose, always accomplished through the instrumentality of a spirit circle operating on the germ when in the mother's womb. Zera Colburn was a wonderful mathematician. In other respects he was decidedly dull. There is equally as wonderful a mathematician now residing near St. Louis, Mo.

THE MATERIALIST.

The Materialist, too, has his peculiar doctrine. He believes that matter and its laws can not be annihilated, and that it has always existed. Now again, would it not be more reasonable, we ask every thinking mind, to admit that man has always existed, the sentient portion thereof, than to admit that matter and its laws, which can not think, can not see, can not hear, or conceive, so far as our knowledge extends, caused him to come forth? The Materialist, elated with the grandeur of his philosophy, quietly rests on matter and its laws, and while he admits that they are indestructible, and have eternally existed, he gives them, though deaf, blind, thoughtless, and sightless, the power to develop a sentient being. We would ask the Materialist, then, to ponder the question well, and ask, which is the more reasonable conclusion? Now, so far as a portion of our theory is concerned, all believe it to be correct, that our physical organization with its laws eternally existed, though in different conditions, but the mind, the sentient portion thereof, they may believe, was absolutely created. But the absolute creation thereof, would imply its absolute destruction sometime; but here, we defy the Materialist, and, stepping aside, point him to the soul, and say, "That is as eternal as matter and its laws." But he will declare that the physical system is organized, fully develops itself, and is then dissipated, and the probability is that like results follow the mind, or spirit. But the mind is not organized,—it is not an organism in the sense we use the term, any more than the laws, or activities of matter are. The position of the Materialist is, that matter and its laws are eternal, and through their operation an intelligent, conscious entity was evolved; but they give no information in regard to the germ thereof, but attribute to matter attributes of intelligence, and assign it the power to conceive. Which, then, is the more reasonable conclusion, that matter conceives each individualized intelligence, giving it the priority of action, or admitting the priority of action to individualized intelligences? If each individual germ has always existed, then it has the priority of action, for matter is subject to mind, and not mind to matter. The Materialist adopts a system of reasoning that is not based on common sense or reason. While he admits the eternality of matter, he attributes to it what the orthodox do to an infinite God, viz: the creation of sentient beings. The only difference, then, between the Materialist and the orthodox, is this, that what one attributes to God, the other does to matter and its laws, and while one believes that the sentient beings that the first created are immortal, the latter entertain the opinion that individualized intelligences unfolded through the instrumentality of matter and its laws, do no live after death,—but we take from matter and its laws, and from God, all agency in this grand operation, and claim that man, the sentient germ thereof, has always existed.

Thus onward in our search, we will give you an insight into the arcana of nature, unfold the laws of existence, and present a theory based on common sense, to the world, while it is actual knowledge to the wise sage of the spheres above. The future of man's destiny has never been correctly unfolded. Inspired persons have caught a glimpse thereof, and while contemplating thereon, they have feared to express what the senses realize as true.

Oh, the future rises before us in grand proportions, and therein we observe the substantial progress of sentient beings in understanding the nature of those things with which they are surrounded. Each step only gives additional strength to take the next, and reveals new fields of action, and while moving onward, the soul has its outer covering, or physical organism, made from the material where it is located, or the sphere in which it lives, and through the instrumentality thereof, it is enabled to push vigorously on, seeking new revealments, new fields of action.

To be continued.

Letter from E. O. Truehlood.

BROTHER JONES: May I ask you a question, and expect an answer in the column headed "Voices from the People,"—as I perceive you often give a reply to a "voice?"

Probably all your readers approve the very appropriate name you have given the paper we all take so much pleasure in reading,—at least, hitherto it must have appeared to them suitable, but latterly some of them seem dubious about it, and to set the question at rest, let me inquire what the meaning of the word "Religio," in this connection, really is. We all know the meaning of the word "Journal," and also the word "Philosophical." We do not know but that your readers may require to have the word "Religio" defined.

The meaning your obedient servant always applied to the word "Religion," was the science of ascertaining the will of God, and how to obey and obtain happiness, or, in other words, how to "flee from the wrath to come," but if there is no wrath to escape from, and no God to get angry with us, our meaning for the word must fall through; in fact, you would oblige by informing us whether, in your opinion, religion is a science at all, or is it merely an unprofitable sentiment, fostered by lazy or designing people?

You will please understand that my object in writing, is, that other readers of the JOURNAL, in this and other places, may see an answer to their oft-repeated inquiries and objections.

South Bend, Ind.

Religio—Latin; from relegere, to gather or collect again, to go through or over again in reading, in speech, or in thought.—Webster

"Religion" is derived from religio—Provincial.

The philosophy of life demands of the thinkers of to-day, the evening of the nineteenth century, that they should "gather or collect again" fresh thoughts, as they are from day to day distilled from the supernal spheres, from the minds of wise sages, who have for untold, aye, quintillions of eons of ages, dwelt in the world of spirits, to the end that light and knowledge may be impressed upon the benighted minds of the devotees of old and corrupt systems of theology—systems born of ignorance, credulity, and cruelty.

The angel world demands that the earth's thinkers of the present era should go "through or over again," in their reading, in spirit and in thought, the inspirations of the past and the present, and cull from the mass that which harmonizes with truth, with science, with demonstrated facts, and sound philosophy. To the end of aiding such thinkers, the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL has been established.

From the suggestions of our correspondent, it may seem probable that he and others doubt our faith in what is denominated religion.

Perhaps it would be wise for those who raise this inquiry, first to ask themselves for a strictly definite and certain definition of the phrase religion. In doing so, allow us to suggest to each that he, or she, come to a definite understanding with him or her self—devoid of all glittering generalities in the definition, before suspecting others of being heterodox in the eyes of so-called religionists.

We accommodate ourself to the sentiment of the age, in this: we recognize the Great Whole—so far as we can conceive of it—as the Great Positive Mind and Body—ourself as an infinitesimal particle of the Macrocosm. This negative self is limited, weak, and subject to the All-Power—the Great Positive Whole. As the infant loves the mother, and her bosom, from which it receives love and nourishment, so we love that which we conceive to be the Great Positive Mind—GOD—the central thought of which (couched in other language) the world may call religion, with unnumbered absurdities as appendages.

In the sense briefly set forth we publish a journal devoted to the philosophy of religion—called Spiritualism by the world—by us simply defined as the Philosophy of Life.

Change is common to all things is an inspiration that we received from on high many years since. It is the motto engraved upon our family monument, marking the sepulchres of our loved ones in spirit life. The motto forcibly teaches that there is no death in the unbounded domains of infinitude

All that now exists has ever existed, and will ever continue to exist—and yet is ever subject to change upon the physical planes of life.

The RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL is the name of a paper devoted the philosophy of religion, as we understand and define the phrase

Mediums in Chicago.

MRS. MAUD LORD continues to hold seances in Chicago from time to time, as her health and the hot weather will admit. No one goes from her seances dissatisfied. She is a most excellent medium for physical manifestations in dark circles.

CHARLES H. READ.

The mysterious man, as he is sometimes called, is astonishing everybody who attend his seances. They are dark circles, and yet the light is not extinguished for more than five seconds at a time, as a usual thing. The most remarkable feats are performed by spirits through his mediumship—feats that are contrary to every known law. The scientific man of the age, should not fail to improve the opportunity to investigate the phenomena manifested through Mr. Read.

MR. WILLIS, THE SPIRIT ARTIST.

Mr. Willis, from day to day, takes spirit likenesses of loved ones who have passed to the immortal plane of life. He talks strongly of leaving, and giving up the business, and confining himself exclusively to taking ordinary photographs.

His reason for so doing, is the ingratitude of those Spiritualists who object to paying for a spirit likeness, unless it be some particular spirit friend—of which he gives no assurance, he having no more control over that, than the sunlight which imprints the image upon the plate. When will Spiritualists as a class become philosophers? When they will do by mediums as they would, under like circumstances, like to be done by, they will have made a profitable advance toward it.

Remember, friends, that Mr. Willis, like other mortals, has to have the necessaries of life for himself and family. Patronize him if you have a desire to promote the great cause of truth, and secure likenesses of departed friends, but do not take up his time, and refuse to pay him because you do not get some particular friend, whose likeness you most desired. Mr. Willis is an honest spirit artist, and desires to be honestly dealt by.

THE BANGS CHILDREN.

The above-named mediums are convincing a class of skeptics that other mediums fail to reach—a class that suspect all mediums of practicing fraud. Indeed it is not to be wondered at, when we consider that old theology is based on fraud and deception, and every devotee, in his inmost soul knows the fact, but dares not to utter it for fear of losing caste with his fellow church-members. When they go to a spiritual seance, they somehow seem to think that they are going to a kind of religious meeting, where like fraud is to be practiced. For that reason we repeat, that the seances of the Bangs children are well adapted to people who are fully imbued with old theology.

Very many other mediums, whose names will be found in our Medium's Register, are doing an excellent work. Swangers coming to the city, and wishing to consult mediums, will do well to refer to the Medium's Register, and advertisements in this paper.

Mrs. Laura Cuppy Smith.

This lady, formerly known as Mrs. Laura Cuppy, after a successful and brilliant lecturing tour in California, has returned eastward as far as Chicago, and has been engaged to lecture before the First Spiritualist Society here, at the Hall at the corner of Jefferson and Randolph streets, on Sunday, June 10th. We congratulate the society on having secured her services, as she has just returned from the Pacific coast, after a long sojourn there, with the fresh, active, brilliant inspiration that the different magnetisms of that country can only fully develop. On her way hither, she stopped at Omaha, and delivered a series of lectures there, which created a profound interest, and gave a new impetus to the cause of the Harmonial Philosophy. Her inspiration is clear, concise, logical, eloquent, at times fascinating her hearers, holding them in breathless suspense. Her lectures at Omaha were highly complimented by the press of the city. The Republican says: "She is an educated, refined lady, and one of the best lecturers we ever heard. * *

"Her delivery is very pleasing, and her gentle, tender, and earnest argument, could not fail to impress themselves upon her hearers. * * * By her several lectures in Omaha, she has proved herself to be a lady of rare culture, added to great natural eloquence. To say that she ranks among the first who have addressed an Omaha audience, whether male or female, is but doing her justice. * * * Her prayers excelled all prayers I ever heard; they were the sublimity of divine thought." The Herald says: "She is a finest speaker, using elegant language, exceedingly happy in her illustrations, and with far more than ordinary argumentative powers. * * * The thanks of the Association are due her for her kind offer to give the proceeds of a lecture to relieve the necessities of the poor. * * * Fortunate in being one of an audience, and can not find language suitable to convey an idea of her talents, her oratory, her illustrations, her logic, her arguments all combined, * * * We have listened with unabated interest and admiration to several of her lectures." The Omaha Tribune says: "She is a lady of prepossessing appearance, a pleasing and eloquent speaker, and a good logician. She handled her subject, 'Out of the depths,' in a manner that displayed rare ability, and showed deep thought and heartfelt sympathy with the poor victims of shame and crime. * * * This estimable lady has gained a reputation among her hearers of being an able, eloquent, and fluent speaker, evidently a deep thinker. * * * * The Little Church around the Corner was crowded again last evening, by an intelligent audience, who listened with marked attention to her lecture. * * * * * her lecture last evening, was eloquent and interesting." Societies desiring her services can address her for the present, in care of the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL office.

Spirit Likenesses.

Mr. Willis, the spirit artist, desires us to say, that he will not longer try to take spirit likenesses for any one unless they are present in his gallery, and sit for the same. He says no one need write him, nor send him money for that purpose. His reasons for so doing, as he claims, are that people are continually writing, asking him for a second sitting. We regret the course adopted by him, and doubt the wisdom of it, but fully realize the trials of mediums, and sympathize with them. Mr. Willis is a good spirit artist, and will continue to take spirit likenesses for those who call in person.

Pay Up.

We are in earnest with those who are a long while in arrears. Pay for your newspaper, if you never pay any other debt.

You do us great wrong by such negligence. We need our honest dues, and expect them to be promptly remitted.

Notes from an Atheistical Spiritualist—What Does it Mean?

Orpheus B. Lyon, a correspondent of the Banner of Light, in a recent issue of that paper, in speaking of the Decatur Convention, makes use of the following language:

"The public mind is continually making new demands upon us. DOCTRINE, DOCTRINE—the people want it. Tell us what you believe, and why you believe it."

In response to this demand of the people for "doctrine," he claims that Spiritualists must give to the "waiting thousands" a theology of Spiritualism, and proceeds to give some of the cardinal points of faith in this proposed creed, as follows:

He says: "A belief in God, and a demonstrated immortality, and the saving virtue of a pure and holy life are among its fundamental ideas."

We are sorry to see such narrow and proscriptive ideas advanced by one who claims to be a friend of progress. What! Is the end so near? Has the harvest indeed come? Has the growth of thought already ripened into perfection, that you will shut up the barn, and thus close the field of investigation?

Why,—some of us have only recently become disenthralled from the bondage of the old orthodox creed, and have only begun to enjoy the exercise of our new-found freedom. Would you so soon invite us to put our necks under a new theological yoke?

Oh! no, Brother Lyon, don't approach us with those fetters you propose to manufacture for us to wear, for how can you hope to find us ready and submissive to having them placed upon our limbs? "Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty,"—then let us be on our guard, and repel the first encroachment upon our mental and spiritual freedom. Spiritualism is too broad to be contained in a narrow creed. The whole realm of thought, extended as the universe, is the legitimate field of investigation for Spiritualists. Let thought be free, is our motto. But write out your creed, as you say, tell the world what we believe, and you will find the Ranks of Spiritualism growing "small by degrees and beautifully less."

The fact is, we differ so widely in our opinions, that ninety-nine hundredths of us would be either too short or too long to be acceptable when measured by any creed you might invent.

For instance, you say a belief in God should be one of the cardinal ideas of the Spiritualistic faith. This article of your creed alone, would cut off the undersigned, and thousands of others, from communion in your church. Your unfoldment may possibly reveal to your perceptions a God. I must confess that my development has never shown me anything of the kind. But perhaps you will say that the belief in a God, or Superior Being is universal. Well, suppose it is an idea commonly accepted by mankind in general, does that prove it a truism? By no means. But it is not an accepted and settled fact. I am not alone in holding to a disbelief in the existence of any such a being. Among Spiritualists this is by no means a settled question; but one upon which there is a growing agitation of thought at the present time.

I hope, then, that no movement will be made by any convention of Spiritualists, anywhere, looking to the chaining of the mind by a written creed.

J. R. B.

Terre Haute, Ind., May 28th.

Dr. McFadden and Wife

Hold seances every evening, at 841 West Madison street.

Dr. McFadden has a very queer phase of mediumship, and if the investigator will listen attentively to what is said to him, he will be sure to go away well pleased with the phase of mediumship manifested.

Combat him or ask questions if you desire to keep him on the physical plane and get nothing satisfactory from the spiritual.

"The Bhagvat-Geeta" and "The Bible in India."

The inquiry has often been made whether the former book is included in the latter. We reply emphatically, No!

"The Bible in India" is a valuable book for the searcher after truth to have in his library, but it in no wise affords the knowledge of the teachings of Kreeshna,—as found in the Bhagvat-Geeta,—who was to the Brahmins an incarnate Deity, as Christ is to Christians.

The RELIGIO-P[illegible] SOCIETY granted a letter of [illegible] to BR. H. Henry Houghton, of [illegible], on the 21 day of June inst., constituting [illegible] in due and legal form, "a regular mi[illegible]" which authorizes him to [illegible] to law.

Clairvoyance.

D. P. Kayner, M. D., of St. Charles, Ill., the well-known Clairvoyant Physician, late of Erie, Penn., is diagnosing disease clearly, by a lock of the patient's hair; and is treating cases in all parts of the United States.

Dr. K. is thoroughly educated in the different systems of medical practice; superadded to which his natural clairvoyant powers makes his treatment a positive success. Our friends in all parts of the country should remember these facts. Terms: examination and prescription $3

Certificate.

To All Whom it May Concern:

Know ye, that the Army of Progress, reposing especial confidence in our Brother E. Dinkelspiel, as a public lecturer and test medium, desires warmly to commend him to the friends of Spiritualism everywhere.

At a meeting of Family A, Army of Progress, held May 15th, it was unanimously resolved:

That the irreproachable life, the zeal for truth, the kindliness of heart and the untiring labors of Brother Dinkelspiel to advance Spiritualism entitle him to our respect, our gratitude and our highest esteem, and we commend him to the friends of truth everywhere, as a man who has been ready to sacrifice himself to advance humanity.

Attest WM. M. CONNELLY,
Pres't of B. of C.

The above named brother's address is care of Benjamin H. Righter, Box 200 Decatur, Ill.

Personal and Local.

—Austin Kent sends the following report from Stockton, N. Y. : "I have received since my last report,—two months:

A. Green	$1.00
Mary Green	$1.00
Mrs. M. E Young	$3.00
Oscar Lamont	$4.00
S. U. W.	$ .50
Total
	$7.50

—Thanks to our numerous friends, who have sent us during the past week many new subscribers.

—Instead of being put down and crushed out by Prof. Zon, at St. Petersburg, Home was uncommonly successful in his spiritual demonstrations there, and the Czar was among his most enthusiastic patrons; more than that, Home left St. Petersburg engaged to the sister of the profe sor who was reported to have put his spirits to flight.

—A brother writes to us, speaking in high terms of the mediumship of Mrs. Atwood, who resides at Lake Mills, Wis. She is an excellent healer.

—Thomas Jones, of Piper City, Ill., writes that when he don't pay for the JOURNAL, we may know that corn is mighty cheap, and that he has got religion.

—Dr. Wm. B. Fahnestock, author of "Artificial Somnambulism," is on a professional visit to Cincinnati, where we learn he is having fine success.

—J. L. Potter makes the following report for May: "Places visited: Lake City, Pawsello, Plainview, Elgin and Eyota. Number of lectures given, twelve. Amount received in collections and dues, thirty one dollars, fifty-nine cents. Expenses, five dollars. Our joined the Association. Spiritualists of Northern Minnesota, after the Convention that commences Friday, I shall spend the summer and fall with you, holding grove meetings as often as we can arrange for them. Let me hear from you soon, that we may have no meander standing about the calls. Address us at Morristown, Rice County, Minn."

—Mediums are being developed all over the country. One recently brought forth, is startling the good people of Portland, Oregon. E. W. Cressey writes as follows in reference to him: "A new medium has within a few weeks been developed in Portland, Oregon, and he is astonishing every one who calls on him, by giving tests. It is greatly surprising even the "heathen Chinee," by delivering lectures to them in their own language. He is a young man, just out of the wilderness of Mole Alley Bottom, without any education whatever."

—W. B. Mayo has our thanks for sending the JOURNAL on trial to those whom he wishes to become familiar with the truths of our philosophy.

—M. Froude, the English historian, eloquently says, alluding to the Darwinian theory of the descent of man: "It may be true—I, for one, care not if it be so—that the descent of our mortal bodies may be traced through an ascending series to some gluttonous jelly, formed on the rocks of the primeval ocean. It is nothing to me how the maker of me has been pleased to construct the organized substance which I call my body. It is mine, but not me. The intellectual spirit, being an essence, will believe to be an immortable something engendered in us from a higher source."

—At Piqua, Ohio, last week, Rev. W. I. Fee picked a quantity of potato bugs off his vines and placed them in a tin can; then, pouring boiling water into the can, he stood over it to watch its effect on the enemy, but soon took as very ill, and it was concluded that the vapor had poisoned him.

In nearly every state of the Union laws have been enacted against cruelty to animals, and perhaps some humanitarian will enter his very solemn protest against the malignity manifested by this divine to ward potato bugs. We have no sympathy for a mosquito—none whatever—and when one attempts to tickle our nose, it does so at its peril. Bed bugs, too, stand condemned, and we take especial pleasure in torturing one. Indeed, we have tried the effects of glycerine, calomel, camphor, and sundry other poisons upon them, and never had our conscience stricken when we succeeded in placing one hors du combat. One time, after reading A. B. Child a book, "What is, is right," we allowed the bed bugs in an up town hotel to prey upon us for one night, but on realising our condition in the morning, we came to the conclusion that it would be better to "r eat evil."

—We can supply the orders for "Dialogues and Recitations," by Louisa Shepherd. It is a work admirably adapted for the use of Lyceums.

—J. M. Barnes, of Virginia, has entered the field as a lecturer. His address is Swanville, Virginia.

—Dr. A. B. Severance, of Milwaukee, is said to be a fine psychometrist. He is highly spoken of by many of our correspondents.

—J. H. W. Toohey is engaged to lecture for the Marlboro' Spiritual Association at half past one o'clock, and for the Hudson Liberal Lecturing Society at half past six o'clock, on the first and second Sundays in June.

—Mrs. F. O. Byzer is engaged to speak in Wilmington, Del., for a year. She has already commenced her labors.

—Dr. Samuel Underhill writes as follows from Decatur, Ill: "I reached here Tuesday night, and found a good home through the kindness of Mrs. C. O. Smith. I found here six letters, forwarded from the JOURNAL office,—one from a healing medium from Rodo, Ill., but she expected to leave there the 8th of May. Her letter is dated the 14th of April. I do not know where to address her,—so let this lie; go in print, and she will write again. The weather is intensely hot,—not a cloud or a motion in the air. The paper heaters are still. I have been kindly received. Mrs. Wilcoxon is here, and is quite ill. She has had a severe attack of erysipelas—is better now. I wish to say to your readers that there is perhaps not a better clairvoyant for medical prescriptions and for business, than Abba Lord Palmer, of New Boston, Mercer County, Ill. She will give good satisfaction to all, in those gifts spoken of in her advertisement in your excellent paper. I love the Banner of Light, and look upon the JOURNAL as fully its equal. I believe the seal monthly of Cleveland well conducted, but who can wait two weeks for a paper. Western people move fast, and the JOURNAL meets their wants. I thought the other day that at the rate people called at your office, you need more room."

—Frank M. Marks sent to Mrs. F. W. Calkins, of Fostone, a lock of hair and two dollars, and desired some tests. She wrote in reply that one spirit presented himself and gave the name of John Marks; another, that of Louisa Marks, while one who presented himself said that he had lost one of his arms in earth-life. Mr. Marks informed Mrs. Calkins that the tests were correctly given, and that John Marks died twenty-four years ago; Louisa Marks twenty years ago, and that her father had one of his arms amputated. Pretty good —[illegible] has removed from Lodi, Wisconsin, up a residence at Cossburg, Kansas. He will answer calls to lecture.

—We have received a full report of the proceedings of the Decatur Convention, which we shall publish next week.

Philadelphia Department.

BY.....HENRY T. CHILD, M. D

Subscriptions will be received, and papers may be obtained at wholesale or retail, at 634 Race street, Philadelphia.

Life—Its Origin and Objects.

We have presented several articles on this profound and deeply interesting subject—one which we know must be the grand study of the race—the grand problem of eternity.

We have asked again and again of our fellow-beings, young and old, learned and unlearned, What can you tell us of life?

We have gone forth into the realms of nature, and asked suns and stars amid the blue ether, and they have answered us that God is life, and life is God, whether in the blade of grass or in the archangel. We have called upon our earth with its teeming myriads of living forms, its vast cathedral forests, its mountains, and rivers, and oceans all abounding with expressions of life, and each one of these has answered us according to our own life and the standard of knowledge that we have attained.

All these prophets of the Lord—suns and stars, mountains and rivers, forests and vales—all nature, animate and inanimate, are speaking in voices of love and truth to man, just as he is prepared to hear and appreciate them.

We have asked the sages and philosophers of ancient days, who have only left their noble "time records," but who have been making their marks and writing their histories all along the ages as best they could; and now there stands beside us one of the bright-eyed, clear-visioned sages of the olden time, whose countenance beams with intelligence, one who drank from Pythagorian fountains, and walked with Plato in the groves of ancient Greece. He says:

"The grandest thoughts in the universe are expressed musically. The universe is yet to express not simply rythmical sounds, but grand and harmonious notes that flow out in musical cadences from the infinite Father throughout all departments of nature. There have been human beings whose unfolded intuitions have perceived something of the music of the spheres and the unbroken harmony of nature, but they have failed to express these intuitions clearly and satisfactorily to themselves."

For a long time we have recognized the existence of an infinite ocean of ether—using human language, as we must, to express our ideas, and material comparisons to illustrate our meaning. So we may speak of water as the symbol of life, the vast oceans of earth representing eternity, while its rivers and streams represent time, and each drop is the type of a living being. As these little drops unite to form streams and move onward on their journey, they gather strength by uniting their numbers, and at last roll onward toward the ocean they seem to lose their identity; but it is not so. Each drop in the little stream, as well as in the grand ocean, maintains its identity, and away out in the ocean they are the same individualities as when on the mountain-top they began to flow and sing. The spirit of the great ocean, which rises up in invisible vapor, represents the power of God that forms these new-born drops. I do not, however, intend to speak to you altogether in symbols and allegories.

The nearest approach to a conception of God that we can have, is in the recognition and appreciation of the great spiritual force that moves in and through all things. We may recognize it better in what is termed the vast fields of ether, that fill all the inter-stellar spaces, because where it is manifested in conjunction with its products, the various forms of matter, the attention is divided between the external and the spiritual.

The first form of its manifestation has been properly termed the "music of the spheres." Its expression is perceived in the revolutions of the planets and their retention in their orbits by fixed laws which are eternal and universal throughout all the vast domain of nature.

Another expression of this force is gravitation, which is the motor distinguishing expression of positive and negative relations, bodies attracting each other according to their size and height or density.

When the substances which constitute an earth are in a gaseous state, they occupy vastly more space than they do when they become solidified, and in proportion to their solidity, will be their attraction toward a central point.

Another expression of this force is chemical attraction. Gravitation was the attraction of masses to masses. Chemical attraction is that of atoms or particles to each other.

These are but modes of motion of the one great primal force of the universe. They are co-existent, though they express themselves distinctly.

It should ever be borne in mind that force is unit, and all its different manifestations are but modifications of one great central power. Chemical attraction is accompanied by a form of force known as electricity, of which there are various grades differing from chemical attraction in their manifestation between certain bodies, without having the primary control of the atoms or particles which are held by chemical attraction. Closely allied to this is terrestrial magnetism, the motion peculiar to certain metallic bodies, and the establishment of currents of motion along the direction of the lines of longitude, at right angles to those of latitude which latter give the rotary motion to all globes.

Each new expression of the force may be considered to be a development of it. Something added to or gained by it. The next expression is the od-force of Reichenbach, which is the pabulum of vegetable and animal magnetism. A combination of all these expressions of force, added to some higher expression constitutes the first forms of vegetable and animal life, which is a simple cell in which the centripetal and centrifugal motions that have formed a globe with all the other modes of motion that have been referred to, produce that most wonderful birth of life, a nucleated cell. The radiating lines of motion which go out from a central point to a certain distance and then return, when passing through the rotary or circular lines of motion, deposit matter there and form the ring which is visible in the field of the microscope. These cells always possess two properties, the power of maintaining an existence for a greater or less time, and the wonderful power of reproduction. These constitute the basic and universal characteristics of life. When the primal movements of the forces in and around any globe have progressed to a condition that enables them to give birth to or produce a living cell, a new era is introduced upon that world. The dawn of life, though feeble and imperfect in itself, marks an era in the history of any globe on which it is manifested.

Matter is but an expression of this one great all pervading unitary force. It is exceedingly gross in its first appearance, but through the operations of the same force which brought it into existence, it is being continually raised to higher and better conditions, and becoming more and more refined; and thus the creative work which is always an unfoldment from stage to stage, is going on forever, and all the endless and multifarious changes of seasons and chemical combinations, and each and every movement whether great or small upon any globe, are steps toward higher conditions.

The origin of species among plants and animals, is easily understood if you comprehend the idea that the great central primal force in its operations through matter, has been brought up to a condition to form the first living cells, and is continually going onward to higher states, and as each new cell changes, the conditions of matter, it prepares the way for higher organization.

Thus when any species has existed for a time, while it has been improving in the external plane of manifestation, the force within has been acquiring power to call into existence a species one step higher. Not that an old species ever becomes a new one; but the life force which has acquired power by acting through one species can and does produce a new one on a higher plane, giving out a better expression.

So step by step, the force produces new forms of life higher and better; related to each other, because they are the children of the same Father; the result of the same force operating through nature under different circumstances.

So man came upon the earth, low and uncouth, very different from the man of to-day, differing however from the animal creation in the fact that he is the possessor of an individualized soul, that finds in the human organization a shell in which it may be developed into a conscious identity, that shall not only remain throughout eternity, but shall acquire the power of recalling lost forms of conscious existence and linking them together in beautiful order in the great chain of eternal existence.

All below man are fragmentary in their identity, and will only be able to retain it for a time. Man, therefore, is the microcosm of the great macrocosm of the universe,—the head of creation, the crowning work of Deity; contains within himself, portions not only of the matter, but of the spirit, or force which has entered into all the various material forms, inanimate and animate, that have existed in all the stages of the past—the ultimatum, because of this fact, that all is within him, but subject to the law of progress, forever in a twofold sense, first in the fact that all the forms of matter and life that are combined in him, are subject to progression in themselves, and above all, in the grand fact that the entire compound as a whole, is capable of unfoldment and progression throughout all the cycles of eternity.

Over the gate of death, man should arch the rainbow of everlasting life, and bid his fellow-man walk through unabashed and not ashamed. —Theodore Parker.

Most persons are content to drift; but driftwood is not very valuable.—N. J. T. Brigham.

Some persons have their faith so well established, that they are exceedingly careful not to disturb it.—Ibid.

We tread the wilderness to-day, the promised land to-morrow.—Ibid.

The intuitions are not able to telegraph themselves clearly through the lips.—Ibid.

Earth's children have always been guided by invisible hands.—Ibid.

Sometimes when we ascend a high mountain, we will find a clear, crystal lake, the pure waters of which are cold and sparkling, and seem to be waiting there for men to lay a pipe, and carry them down to their dwellings, so that they may enjoy them.—Ibid.

I belong to a school that reverences the infinite perfection of God.—Theodore Parker.

"The space that man thinks devoid of life is all
One rich celestial hall,
Thronged by the deathless spirits of the free,
Members of one sublime humanity.

Man, clothed with immortality, revealing
Divine affections in divinest deeds,
Celestial pure in life, in thought and feeling,
Shall rise at last above all outward needs,
And hear the immortal trump loudly pealing,
And rise and dwell amid the Zelan meads.

Of the serene abodes of angels blessed,
Thou man, star-eyed, sun featured, golden tressed,
From heaven's clear lap outborn.
In immortality's white arms caressed,
Shall win a glorious form."

—T. L. Harris.

There is one
God—Father—pre-existent and alone;—
And the vast structure of the universe,
Is his own thought outsung in living verse.
—Ibid.

NOTICE OF MEETINGS.

Eighth National Convention.

The American Association of Spiritualists.—The Eighth National Convention will meet at Troy, New York, on Tuesday, the 12th of September, at 10 o'clock in the morning, and continue a session three days.

Each active State or Territorial organization of Spiritualists, within the limits of the United States of America, shall be entitled to one delegate for each fractional fifty members of such organization, and of each working local society, and each Progressive Lyceum within the boundaries of such State or Territory, provided that only one general organization shall be entitled to representation from any State or Territory. Each Province of the American Continent shall be entitled to one delegate for each working association within its limits, and the District of Columbia shall be entitled to two delegates.

Each active local Society, and each Progressive Lyceum of any State, Territory, or Province which has no General Association, shall be entitled to one delegate for each fractional fifty members.

These Associations are respectfully invited to appoint delegates to attend this meeting and participate in the proceedings.

HANNAH F. M. BROWN (Chicago, Ill.), Pres.
HENRY T. CHILD, M. D. (634 Race St. Phil.), Sec.

Basket Grove Meeting.

There will be a meeting in Franklin Grove, Lee Co., Ill. on Saturday and Sunday, the 24th and 25th of June. The friends of that place will make arrangements for lodging, but all who can will bring their provisions and baskets.

Mrs. H. F. M. Brown and other speakers will be present. The Committee will meet as early as convenient, at the residence of C. B. Bills.

Lowell (Mich.,) Society.

The regular quarterly meeting of the First Spiritual Society of Lowell, Kent Co., Mich., will meet in Union Hall, on Saturday and Sunday, July 1st and 2d, at the usual hours. D. W. Hull and others are engaged as speakers. Friends at a distance provided for. A free religion and a free lunch for all.

Miss M. N. PURPLE, Pres.
H. B. ALDEN, Sec.

Rockford (Mich.) Society.

The Religio-Philosophical Society of Rockford, Mich. will hold their quarterly Meeting on the 24th and 25th of June, [illegible] 24th, at one o'clock in the af-

[illegible]
WM. HICKS, Pres.

DELINQUENTS.

The following named persons owe for this paper. They have either removed from the town or post office where they formerly took the JOURNAL, without requesting the address to be changed, and paying arrearages; or they have requested some pious postmaster to notify us that the paper was not called for, thinking thus to evade payment. Such of these as remain unpaid four weeks, without reasonable explanation, will be placed in the Black List. Our subscribers who know the present residence of either of these persons, will confer a favor by informing us of the same

S. M. Argo, Clinton, Ill., $2.25; J. H. Mears, Lincoln, Va., 60 cts.; J. F. Tuttle, West Lebanon, Ind., 75 cts.; W. M. Getchell, St. Louis, Mo., $7.00; Mrs. M. Strong, Bechanan, Mich., $6.00; John Hanlon, Harrisburg, Pa., $6.75; A. Mills, Simpsonville, Vt., $8.25; B. Roby, Bridgeport, Ind., $8.25; Dorl Roberts, Emigrant Gap, Cal., $4.35; Wm. Bonnet, Curran, Ill., $2.50; Mrs. Emma Cook, Ish's Mills, Ill., $9.25; D. A. Grambling, Atlanta, Ga., $2.75; G. W. Orth, St. Louis, Mo., $8.50; Wm. A. Harshmar, Jackson, Ohio, $8.00; Miss F. Robinson, Two Rivers, Cal. $1.50; N. A. Clark, Two Rocks, Cal., $2.25; G. H. McNamee, Edinburg, Mo., $5.50; W. Woodward, Goddesses', N. C., $4.25; Mrs. Brisbane Pilot, Mich., 75 cts.; John Hastings, Lexington, Mass., $3.00; A. McCord, Troy, N. Y., $8.25; B. R. Matthews, Mt. Vernon, Mo., $3.15; H. Brevoort, 98 Fourth Ave., New York City, $9.25; John Bartlett, Hyria, Iowa, $5.00; R. Healey, Herman, N. Y., $1.75; A. B. Cole, Puget, Mo., $1.70; C. T. Yeaton, Salem, Oregon, $2.00; Emerson, Monroe, Wis., $4.50.

CHRISTIANITY;

ITS ORIGIN, NATURE AND TENDENCY considered in the light of Astro-Theology.

By D. W. Hull.

This book is, so far as it goes, a thorough review of the Origin of the Christian system, showing it all to be plagiarized from ancient heathens. Being unlike almost any other work written on the subject, it cannot fail to be eagerly interesting to all. Its explanations of Scripture are lucid, and so self-evidently correct that no one can gainsay them.

 For sale, wholesale and retail, at the office of this paper. Price at retail, 25 cents; postage, 2 cents.

THE Descent of Man,

AND

Selections in Relation to Sex;

By Charles Darwin, M.A.F.R.S. With Illustrations.

Two Vols., over 400 pp. each. Price $2.00 per Vol.; postage 24 cts.

 For sale by the RELIGIO PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

ABSTRACT OF COLENSO ON THE PENTATEUCH.

A comprehensive summary of Bishop Colenso's argument proving that the Pentateuch is not historically true, and that it was composed by Samuel, Jeremiah, and other prophets, from 1100 to 624 B. C. The substance of five volumes in 48 pages. Price 25 cents. AMERICAN NEWS CO., N. Y.

v10 n5 6m

CARRIAGE MANUFACTORY.

Waverly, N. Y.

THE UNDERSIGNED MANUFACTURES TO ORDER, and has on hand all varieties of Open and Top Buggies of the Best Styles; Platform Spring Wagons, with two or more seats, with or without top. This wagon is an improvement on the old two-spring wagon, and as a business wagon, or for family use, is unsurpassed. Best quality of stock used and first-class workmen employed, and all work WARRANTED.

Situated on the Erie R. R., we have good facilities for shipping, and are constantly sending work to all parts of the country.

N. KINNEY.

v9 n25 12t.

SPIRITUALISM.

DR. S. L. MCFADDEN AND WIFE, MAGNETIC PHYSICIAN, Spiritual Test Mediums, Business Clairvoyants, etc., have located at No. 342 W. Madison St., corner of May, up stairs, Chicago.

They invite all who wish the benefit of their mediumistic powers, to call and see them. They hold developing circles, Sunday, Tuesday and Thursday evenings. Knowledge of the present, both of the past, present and future, give news from absent and departed friends, etc. They also explain the laws of life and death, good and evil, the cause and cure of inharmony, etc., thereby enabling persons to be a law to themselves, to be their own thinkers, teachers, doctors, and preachers. All MEDIUMS ARE INVITED TO ATTEND FREE OF CHARGE. The contradictions of the Bible, lying spirits, and false communications philosophically explained. Sittings for the examination of business, and private communications, from 8 A. M. to 5 P. M. Circles each evening; Sundays not excepted.

N. B.—Can accommodate a few Boarders.

v10 n12 12t

WANTED AGENTS

In every Town and City, to sell an article needed in every household. SELLS RAPIDLY. Large PROFITS to AGENTS. Send stamp for Circulars. C. E. WOOLLEY & Co., Room 12, No. 131 Lasalle St., Chicago.

v10 n12 tf

IT COSTS

Only about one-third Bookbinders' prices to do binding handsomely by the use of Alden's Handy Book-Binder. Sizes suited to any publication, from the smallest Monthly to the largest Weekly. Price circular free. Send 50 cents for samples of both File and Binder. Also for the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL, No. 19; price $1.20 and $1.50. Address, RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

AN EYE-OPENER.

"CITATEUR PAR PIGAULT."

LE BRUN,

DOUBTS OF INFIDELS.

Embodying Thirty Important Questions to the Clergy; also, Forty Close Questions to the Doctors of Divinity.

BY ZEPA.

For sale at the office of this paper.

Price, in cloth, 75 cents; postage, 12 cents. In paper, 50 cents; postage, 4 cents.

MRS. C. H. LELAND,

Wonderful Psychometrist, Soul Reader, and Business Medium, will, upon receipt of photograph, lock of hair, whether married or single, send to any person a correct delineation of character, with leading events in the past and future life, for one dollar. Advice concerning business, two dollars. Written communications from friends in spirit life, two dollars. Satisfaction guaranteed. Instructions for mediumistic development, one dollar. Address, Myrickville, Mass.

v10 n10 tf

THE MAGNETIC TREATMENT.

SEND TEN CENTS TO DR. ANDREW STONE, TROY, N. Y., and obtain a large, highly illustrated book on this system of vitalizing treatment.

v9 n25 tf.

IS THERE A DEVIL.

The argument pro and con, with an inquiry into the Origin of Evil, with a review of the popular notion of Hell and Eternity, or the State of the Dead. Price twenty-five cents, postage, two cents. For sale at the Religio Philosophical Journal Office, 189 So. Clark Street Chicago.

v7 t 26 tf

Hannah's Positive and Negative Powders. for sale at this office.

MEDIUMS.

MRS. LODEMA ATWOOD,

Healing Medium,

Has been before the public as a successful Healer the past fifteen years. We rely entirely on the controlling influence. We diagnose and give prescriptions by letter. Distance no objection. Will visit in person a reasonable distance those that desire, and can afford the expense. Delineation and advice in a variety of ways. Emblems we give gratuitously to all or patients, when presented by our guides. Our former custom has been to come on rapport with the applicant by shaking hands, but in order to save time, and the unpleasant sensation of taking on the symptoms of the disease, we require the applicant to give age and sex, with one or two leading symptoms of the disease, written by the patient, if able to write—if not, send lock of hair. As the giving of tests is not the object which we seek, but to restore the patient to health by Nature's own hand, in the shortest time possible, we do not deem it necessary here to lumber up an advertisement with what we have done or what we can do, but prefer to be known by our fruits.

Terms, for diagnosis and prescription, $2; Diagnosis without prescription, $1; all subsequent prescriptions, $1 each. All letters should be accompanied with the fee, and addressed to MRS. LODEMA ATWOOD, Box 45, Lake Mills, Jefferson Co., Wis.

v10 n1 tf.

Dr. Abba Lord Palmer.

BOX 101 NEW BOSTON, ILLINOIS

WONDERFUL PSYCHOMETRIST AND CLAIRVOYANT PHYSICIAN, SOUL READER AND BUSINESS MEDIUM.

Can diagnose disease by likeness, autograph, lock of hair, without a failure, and give prescription, which, if followed, will surely cure.

Can trace stolen property, tell the past, present and future—advise concerning business, and give written communications from spirit friends.

Diagnosis of disease, with prescription, $2.00. Communications from spirit friends, $3.00. Delineation of character with advice concerning marriage, $1.00.

n1 v10 tf.

MRS. A. H. ROBINSON.

Healing, Psychometric and Business Medium.

148 Fourth Avenue, Chicago.

MRS. ROBINSON, while under spirit control, on receiving a lock of hair of a sick patient, will diagnose the nature of the disease most perfectly, and prescribe the proper remedy. Yet, as the most speedy cure is the essential object in view, rather than to gratify idle curiosity, the better practice is to send along with a lock of hair, a brief statement of the sex, age leading symptoms and duration of the disease of the sick person, when she will without delay return a most potent prescription and remedy for eradicating the disease and permanently curing the patient in all curable cases.

Of herself she claims no knowledge of the healing art, but when her spirit guides are brought "en rapport" with a sick person through her mediumship, they never fail to give immediate and permanent relief in curable cases, through the POSITIVE and NEGATIVE forces latent in the system and in nature. This prescription is sent by mail, and be it an internal remedy, or an external application, it should be given or applied precisely as directed in the accompanying letter of instructions, however simple it may seem to be; remember it is not the quantity of the compound, but the chemical effect that is produced, that science takes cognizance of.

One prescription is usually sufficient, but in case the patient is not permanently cured by one prescription, the application for a second, or more if required, should be made in about ten days after the last, each time stating any changes that may be apparent in the symptoms of the disease.

Mrs. ROBINSON also, through her mediumship, diagnoses the diseases of any one who calls upon her at her residence. The facility with which the spirits controling her accomplish the same, is done as well when the application is by letter as when the patient is present. Her gifts are very remarkable, not only in the healing art, but as a psychometric, test, business and trance medium.

Terms:—Diagnosis and first prescription, $2.00; each subsequent $1.00; Psychometric Delineation of Character, $3; answering Business Letters, $1. The money should accompany the application, to insure a reply.

J. G. W. ENTWISTLE,

CLAIRVOYANT PHYSICIAN.

No. 194 South Clark Street, Room 3, Chicago.

He is prepared to treat any of the many forms of disease, and possess a peculiar insight into the cause and character, and a controlling power over it which seems wonderful (even to himself). His medicines are purely vegetable. Invalids at any distance will be as thoroughly examined, and the means of cure (if curable) as definitely pointed out as if they were present, by sending a lock of hair, giving name, age, sex, and two leading symptoms of the disease. Insanity and Sin not treated. Examination fee, by hair, $2.00.

v10 n8 9t

DUMONT C. DAKE, M.D.,

ANALYTICAL PHYSICIAN FOR CHRONIC DISEASES.

Patients at a distance successfully treated. Medicines sent by mail or express. Send a simple statement of condition, age, and sex, occupation, temperament, (if not known), send photograph if convenient. P. O. Box 80, Chicago, Ill. Send for ANALYTICAL HEALTH JOURNAL.

v10 n5 tf

A. B. Severance,

The Well-Known Psychometrist,

Will give to those who visit him in person, or from autograph or from lock of hair, readings of character; marked changes, past and future; advice in regard to business; diagnosis of disease, with prescription; adaptation of those intending marriage; directions for the management of children. Advice to the inharmoniously married, etc.

TERMS—$2.00 for full Delineation; brief Delineation—$1.

A. B. SEVERANCE,
457 Milwaukee St., MILWAUKEE, WIS.

v7n18tf.

GROSVENOR SWAN, M. D.

DR. SWAN MAY BE FOUND AT ALL hours, at 117 Wabash Ave., Chicago, where he will be happy to receive calls from his old friends and patrons, and all who may require his services.

v9 n3 tf

Dr. J. Wilbur's MAGNETIC PAPER

Has cured all sorts of complaints, from cancer to cold feet. Send stamp and receive one paper free. Dr. J. Wilbur, 660 W. Randolph St., Chicago, Ill.

n10 v10 tf.

MRS E. MANIFOLD.

Medical, Clairvoyant, and Healing Medium. Parties at a distance examined by lock of hair. Price, $1.00. Prescriptions, $1.00 Remedies sent to all parts of the country. Address Mrs. E. C. Manifold, P. O. Box 1096, Rockford, Ill.

v10 n7 tf

813 RACE ST.

DR. E. STODDARD, of 813 Race St., PHILADELPHIA, can accommodate MEDIUMS visiting that city with board and rooms for business purposes, at reasonable rates.

10 n13 tf

"THAT MYSTERIOUS JAR."

Letter from J. D. Stillman, M. D.

BRO. JONES:—I have just finished perusing your issue of the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL of the 27th inst., with the full conviction that this one number is worth the price of a year's subscription. I am determined to secure its circulation in this section by personal effort. The freedom extended to free thought—the candor and want of sectarian interest, awakens in me a delightful feeling of brotherly regard, and the desire to see it successful. This spiritual growth which it so steadily cherishes, is grand when compared with the many journals who cater to respectable style, and yet encourage many known mercenary monopolies in the persons of notoriety and talent, who connect deception largely with spirituality, to the injury of spiritual philosophy and the earnest interest every where manifested in pure, unadulterated spiritual knowledge. Many prominent mediums have submerged their mediumistic power beneath the desire to make money, and are utterly unworthy of confidence or support. This very desire to make available spiritual gifts for personal gain, popularity, or ambitious objects, destroys the very simplicity of honest passiveness, through which the highest spiritual agencies, can only come to the living, and destroys, more than any other means, the desire and love of spiritual intercourse. Hence, when we see the most striking exhibitions of spiritual power, we are soon sadly disappointed in the future satisfaction which we as earnest souls have anticipated. If these manifestations occur among those who are ignorant of Spiritualism entirely, there is more importance given them, because they are disconnected from any apparent interest or design; still among those, from the ignorance of the laws of passive mediumship, there is often such a course taken as to destroy future development or the sequels of what had been imperfectly manifested. It is noteworthy easy thing for spirits to come to earth and take possession of people against the natural laws of mental development, for the identical purpose of satisfying the incredulous, however easy it might be in consonance with their general natures for development and general direction in life. I am here led to many scenes of mediumship which many sober Spiritualists who have been developed or convinced of spiritual facts under the severest trials of persecution, such as the martyrs experienced, before they were finally brought to the faggots; persecution among church members and priests, which are no fanciful tales of mental anguish and persecuted subjugation, or cruel torture or words, denunciations and threats, which have broken the sweet spell of a life, opened upon the honest truth-seeker through quiet aspiration for spiritual light and love. Letters have reached me from every direction courteously asking for information in regard to the mysterious jar of the Brinsley College treasure. The questions run something like Brother Maynard's in your last issue. Spiritualists sometimes are the most unreasonable and unthinking persons in the world, when they are possessed with one idea only, as is the case with those so anxious to have the finale of the jar ferreted out. You will recollect that Mr. J. R. Robertson was at first not a believer, nor did he know anything practically about spiritual or mediumistic conditions. He would have naturally put the lawyer's test to everything which he saw, until he was convinced, and when he was satisfied as to the facts of the spirit appearing to Clara,—still he could not, with his previous education and feelings, believe but what there must be something so uncommon and unnatural about it, as to give him much quandary about how it could be so. It was chiefly in this condition that he acted as an investigator to the further developments in digging for the jar—when at last the jar had been obtained, and excitement, chiefly as persecution, knew no bound—he still acted in the simplicity of his honest desire to satisfy those as well as he was then satisfied himself. The time given for the keeping of the jar was sixty days, or until Clara could be restored from the exhaustion of the excitement, which had kept her from her usual sleep, and prevented her eating well, as from the effects of the great fright which the ghost appearance had wrought, that had so completely powered her will. Mr. Robertson could not be induced to believe that any efforts would be made to take the jar by personal violence, and felt secure in concealing it where no one but himself knew where it was, though he admits that he was warned through Clara by the spirits, as well as by others who had learned the state of feeling that ran so high with persecution, as we should have burned at the stake, or when Christ was crucified.

Still Mr. Robertson, overcome by so many other reservations to the contrary by prominent lawyers and others anxious for the public exhibition of the jar-opening, seemed to yield to them in the idea of safety, even after a policeman had offered to be the one he would be taken from him before the exhibition, and this information had also reached Mrs. Robertson the night before the jar was taken.

You should all recollect that he had heard a noise in the back yard, and had just stepped out of his back door, to ascertain what it might be, when two men presented pistols to his head, and threatened to kill him if he made any noise, and marched him away into the yard where others appeared, and where he was made to divulge the hiding place of the jar.

At this time Clara was sitting in the trance condition, and unusual noise in all parts of the room,—the piano and furniture moving,—indicated an unusual commotion of spirit power to the crowded house, which was soon followed by the fact that Mr. R. had been assaulted and lay in a senseless condition. The fear and excitement prostrated the whole family for a number of days, with the expectation of further violence, especially as strange persons were repeatedly seen watching every movement of the family.

The police came that night and saw the tracks of the persons where the fence was torn down, but never again appeared to prosecute further inquiries, although prominent men appealed to the captain of the police for the purpose. Fear took possession of the family. Two weeks afterward myself, wife, and three mediums went to see them; the first time I had ever seen Clara. Some of the family cried when it was proposed for Clara to go into a trance, so fearful were they of further calamities. They had purposely omitted any and everything to attract notice, hoping by so doing to prevent molestation. Yet after she was entranced and various manifestations took place, directing those present in proceed in forming of the jar, the appearance of spirits in form,—corroborated by the other mediums present,—then notice about the house, began such a wild condition of fright, that none of us were permitted to leave the room, and sat till daylight. The directions given were never carried out, as the question of the personal safety of the family was considered paramount to the jar, and the possibility of outside persons attempting to create evidence by the admissions they might be able to obtain from the sources indicated. Still, previous to this, the spirits had informed Mr. R. through Clara, as had other circles, who were with those who had obtained the jar, and that it had been destroyed and the money and valuables appropriated.

Still, all Spiritualists ought to know the difficulty of identifying the contents of a jar never opened, or seen by any other than spiritual eyes, and that any legal steps taken upon such premises would necessarily fail.

Mr. Robertson's misfortunes and calamities, which have come upon him in succession, by fires, by sickness, by family afflictions, and also the loss of vision by his wife, are such as to entitle him to the sympathy of the community, rather than a continued persecution, or the prostration of his business by what was by him neither provoked nor sought. From Spiritualists, however, he is not only entitled to charity for his course, from the fact that he seemed at all times to act perfectly free from any design whatever, except to convince and satisfy the many who crowded his house until the jar was lost. Many who were not of his disposition and who were not surrounded by all these influences, might have acted more judiciously, especially Spiritualists, or those who would have secured for their own use the treasures of the jar, but he never anticipated anything whatever from it, because he knew that it did not belong to him, and expected that it would be replevied by the owner of the land where it was found. I speak of the private calamities of Mr. Robertson's family with no desire to wound their feelings or to portray the fact that they were once well to do, and are reduced to such a condition that they feel unable to give that attention to Clara's spiritual development that might be desired by Spiritualists, though he would be glad to do so were it not for his pecuniary embarrassments and misfortunes.

There were over two thousand letters of inquiry written to the editors of the Avalanche in regard to this jar. Mr. Robertson had prepared a pamphlet account of what appeared in the papers about it, with the full visits of those who took up the jar, few of which have been sold, to remunerate him for the expense incurred, though at the low price of 30 cents each.

The first of May, some parties, knowing of the suffering condition of the family, announced an inspirational lecture at the Greenlaw Opera House, thinking that the desire to see Clara to be so universal from her angelic appearance in a trance condition, that this would be sufficient to draw two or three thousand persons, which would pay the expenses, and give the family something to relieve their present necessities. I consented to give this lecture, which was written in the presence of one of the party thus most desirous to see them relieved—a prominent Spiritualist from a distant city, who happened to be here at the time.

A most terrific storm come on just before the lecture hour, which prevented an audience from assembling, and subjected this disinterested gentleman to a considerable expense, although an effort was made to prevent the lecture, by demanding licenses, by city and county officers. After a written permission had been given, I delivered it to about a hundred of the most appreciative and talented men of the city, who had braved the storm and appeared deeply interested for over an hour, when they finally gave a hearty applause at its close. The lecture was reported in the Avalanche of May 2d, in brief, and commented on by the editors of other city journals and too deep for the audience.

The lecture was authentative, and offended sectarian bigotry which manifested itself in a brutal attack upon me the next day, from a saloon keeper of Sunday business, whom I disarmed by physical power given me for the occasion. I took his club and drove him with his pistol presented at my head.

On the evening of May 3rd, a spiritual discussion came off by previous announcement, between the Rev. Dr. Samuel Watson, a Methodist Spiritualist, and Rev. Dr. J. R. Graves, editor of The Baptist of this city. The report of this discussion which lasted two nights, was most faithfully reported in the Memphis Appeal of the 4th and 5th, and was considered great gain to the advantage of spiritual freedom and spiritual truth. Mr. Geo. F. Train had prepared the way here, just before by a number of lectures, which had given liberal tendencies a bold front—so we now consider the way clear for future effort. The Spiritualists are a few and feeble band, and are willing to be "hewers of wood." Still there are many who are willing to come out to hear liberal sentiments. Notwithstanding the effort of some of our church-men in this city, who preach against tolerance as a religious cowardice, and believe when they do not resist insults against religion, they are religious cowards. Rev. Mr. Mitchell, however, a few weeks ago, on Sunday, preached a sermon on charity and tolerance in the 2nd Baptist church, which gives him a claim to be considered as a progressive Christian, at least. This was also reported in the Memphis Appeal the next day. He strongly opposed the fight against Spiritualism.

My letter is already too long, I fear, for publication, though hastily written for that purpose.

Memphis, Tenn.

☞ The pamphlet containing a full account of the whole affair, is for sale at this office. Address S. S. Jones, 189 Clark st., Chicago.

Written for the Religio-Philosophical Journal.

THE LAWS OF SPIRIT COMMUNION.

By D. P. Kayner, M. D.

NUMBER TWO.

In our former numbers we have endeavored to clearly define the powers of spirits, as such, and to show that spirit embodied could, under certain conditions, present itself so as to be recognized at a distance.

With our present limited knowledge of spirit forces and modes of action, it may not be possible to clearly define or describe all operations of the law through which these manifestations can and do occur, but of one thing we are certain—individualized spirit holds within its grasp the control of the magnetic forces through which it has become individualized, as those forces have been incorporated into its individuality, and therefore, when controlled by the enlightened spirit, and operating in concert with the magnetic conditions of some other spirit—whether consciously or not is not material, if the conditions of magnetic rapport exist—can and do manifest themselves and hold control of mediums, or hold converse with persons with whom they get en rapport, or do certain tangible acts—as we have seen in the facts presented in a former article—by which the fact of double appearance and action at a distance from the physical body becomes clearly demonstrated.

In these cases the spirit evidently is enabled to draw from its own physical body sufficient of its magnetic particles to enable it to appear and manifest itself within the sphere of the medium upon whom it exerts control, and when seen, it doubtless carries enough of the physical elements of the corporeal body along with it to reclothe itself as soon as it reaches the magnetic sphere of the individual or persons to whom it appears, or with whom it holds converse.

In all these demonstrations of spirit powers in this class of manifestations and facts, they are still connected with the corporeal body. The complete separation has not as yet taken place, and therefore may be considered as belonging to the earth-sphere of the spirit, for the spirit still retains its hold upon the body, and when it returns from its wanderings, takes at full control thereof as though nothing had transpired to suspend for a time, apparently, its positive connection therewith.

The manifestations of these powers of the spirit while in this rudimentary sphere, is comparable to the early efforts of the young fledgling as it first steps up on the edge of the nest, and looking out upon the wide world around it, spreads its pinions to soar through the ether vault of everlasting blue with the parent bird. Carefully, yet persistently it tries its wing, and at last boldly ventures over, and half flying, half hopping, it reaches an adjoining twig or crag, and so on from limb to limb, or crag to crag, until, at last, gaining more and more strength, it soars heavenward to salute the rising sun in the opening day, and warbles its carols of joy high above the storms and discords of earth; little has it the sympathy of that grander flight of the spirit when it launches out from the maternal home in the earth-sphere, leaving its cast-off shell in the old nest, and with powers wonderfully increased, soars into the bright and glorious realms of the land of perpetual bloom and everlasting radiance.

St. Charles, Ill., May 29th, 1871.

JULIA H. SCOTT.

Letter from O. H. P. Kinney.

"Death is but a kind and welcome servant who unlocks, with noiseless hand, life's flower-encircled door, to show us those we love."

BROTHER JONES:—In the JOURNAL of the 18th inst. I find the above quotation credited to A. J. Davis. True, Mr. Davis kept that beautiful sentiment for many years at the head of a column of the Herald of Progress, but he took it from the writings of my sister, the late Mrs. Julia H. Scott. I do not know how he obtained it, for I doubt his ever having seen her writings, but it is theirs. She died in 1843, at the age of 33 years, and it may seem a little strange that such spiritualistic sentiments should have been entertained at so early a day, and before modern Spiritualism had made its mark in the world.

Her writings abound in the spiritualistic idea of the future life—in fact, she entertained very many sentiments in common with the Spiritualism of to-day.

Having been on very intimate and even confidential terms with my sister during most of her life, and with her much while engaged in her duties as a teacher, I knew of her real sentiments, perhaps, than any other living person. A retrospect of our early times calls to mind many things which convince me that she was not only spiritualistic, but in some degree mediumistic. I will give one incident:

She lost by death a very dear relative and friend, Mary Spaulding, who exchanged worlds at the age of 20 years. She soon after saw her, in a dream, as the Scriptures would say, and talked with her face to face. She described her shining white drapery, and the beauty and loveliness of her person. Her departed cousin asked if she would not like to see the country in which she lived, and presented a long tube to her eye, through which she saw a world, not entirely unlike our own, but of marvelous beauty and splendor. She saw no city with golden streets, but landscapes of the most enchanting beauty and loveliness, and when her spirit friend departed with her spirit telescope, she felt that she had had a glimpse of the future world. In her next letter she wrote to her brother-in-law, Wilson Scott, and in my presence, she insisted she was more awake than asleep, and that she believed her friend Mary had contrived to make herself known to her. Scott asked, in a very jocular way, if she was not at times a little inspired, but she replied that it was a remarkable impression of reality.

I refer to this incident to show that there was something of Spiritualism in the country before it took definite shape at Rochester, and to remind your readers that the sentiment at the head of this letter, so often quoted by Spiritualists, is one of the evidences of the fact.

Waverly, N. Y.

Letter from Samuel Montrose.

ED. JOURNAL:—As it seems to be in order to inform the readers of the JOURNAL how Spiritualism progresses in different parts of the country, it may not be out of place to say that we too are favored with a powerful band of spirit friends, under whose guidance the dark veils of superstition are being rent, and the glorious light of immortality is shining brightly upon the forms of the dear departed, telling more plainly than tongue can, of the riches of that beautiful land across the shining river.

Twenty-seven months have flown since scarcely a person to be found here who dare say that they were Spiritualists, or dare give it a patient hearing. At that time a table was tipped in an obscure log house, by a few persons who met out of sport that their hands upon it, though without any knowledge how to make it intelligent. Since then we have found over twenty mediums who have been more or less developed, several of whom possess reliable gifts. We have a weekly developing circle, of from twelve to twenty members in attendance, while there is a large per centage of the surrounding country who are friendly to our cause. I think it safe to say that we include in the spiritualistic cause, the highest intelligence, as well as the highest moral standing of those in our vicinity,—which makes it a power not to be overlooked or unheeded.

The enemies of Spiritualism, through the pulpit, or Grundies, find no food, however keen their appetite for slander. With commendable pride we have access to high standing in society, which demands consideration, and we have just received lectures and labors from that great worker, Dr. Samuel Underhill, that have exalted our cause and raised the flag of spiritual liberty far above any former period.

Notwithstanding a well managed protracted meeting at Roodsburg carried many into the bosom of the churches last winter, yet one and all flocked to hear the Doctor until the seats of the hall were full, and he left with pressing invitations on all sides to come again, give scientific lectures, and form a mesmeric class.

Thus the light shines out upon the hitherto dark valley of the shadow of death, and reveals to those in desolate places a spirit friend and a glorious immortality.

Roodsburg, Wis., May 24th, 1871.

Letter from M. H. Abbey.

BROTHER JONES:—Please allow me a little space in your valuable paper to tell you and your many readers that away here in the northern part of Pennsylvania, on the head waters of the Sasquehanna River, in the County of Tioga, is a place called Mixtown, a small number of men and women who claim the right to do their own thinking, did on the second day of March, 1871, organize themselves into a society, to be called "The Mixtown Society of Free Thinkers." When we talked of organizing, we had no idea that we should ever number over a dozen members. It is not quite three months since we organized, and we now number over thirty,—a large share of whom are intelligent Spiritualists, while the rest, who do not acknowledge the truth of Spiritualism, are men and women of a high order of intelligence, and are honorably seeking for the truth. We hold a meeting every Sunday at a country school-house, known as the Beech School-house, and we take particular pains to invite our orthodox friends to come in and defend their pet theories against our attacks, but they choose to remain in ambush and fire at a distance. We often hear the report of a pop gun, but can hardly tell whence it cometh, or whither it goeth.

Some three or four weeks ago, one of the representatives of theological renown came in and made an attack on us. Arrangements were immediately made for a discussion. The time was agreed on, and everything made ready on our part, but when the day arrived, he woke up in the morning, and found himself in the state of Michigan. How happy he must have been that pleasant Sabbath morning! He thought that God would take care of his little children. Firmly, "he that fights and runs away, will live to fight another day."

A year ago last winter, we were treated to several lectures from Brother Charles Holt, of Titusville, Pa., and also from Brother E. E. Litchfield, of Hillsdale, N. Y., which were the first spiritual lectures we ever had in this vicinity. The opposition then had more courage than now, and of course, we had a glorious time.

Brother Hartford Butler, from Wellsboro, Pa., was with us for about seven months,—at that time giving us many tests as a personating medium, and healing the sick, which gave us a good start, and we have kept the ball rolling ever since.

Then again, last February, we had seven lectures from Elder S. E. Palmer, of Big Flats, New York, and Brother Litchfield was favored with us again that winter, and gave us a number of lectures. But since our society was organized, we have had no speaker from a distance,—so we have done our own speaking. Still, we think we have very interesting meetings.

We have a small library of liberal books, which are read quite extensively. Truly the work of reform goes bravely on. There are some who take a great interest in reading the JOURNAL, who do not belong to our society. To-day, at our meeting, we have made arrangements to have a grove meeting, to commence on the 10th of next month, and to last two days. Brother Litchfield has promised to attend and do the speaking, and we are expecting a good time.

Yours ever for the truth,

M. H. ABBEY.

Hector, N. Y., May 21st, 1871.

Dr. Kayner's First Experience as a Clairvoyant Medium.

I inclose you the following brief note of my early experience as a medium, for your valuable JOURNAL, if you deem it worth publishing.

In the summer of 1836, while residing in German Flatts, Herkimer County, N. Y., being eleven years of age, Dr. Harvey W. Doolittle, of Herkimer village, came to our house one evening, and said he had just visited Mrs. Brown, an intimate friend of my mother's, and that she must soon pass away.

The next morning my mother directed me to hitch the horse to the buggy and drive with her over to see the sick friend, which I accordingly did. On passing into the room, my mother went to the side of the bed, and I took my place at the foot, when the patient in a low whisper told her that she was glad to come, as it was the last time she would see her on earth, and both commenced weeping over the supposed nearness of the separation.

At this moment I was controlled by my spirit guides, and seemed swimming, with all in the room, in a strange light. The body of the patient became trans-parent—the conditions incident to a change of life causing unrestrained feelings, which was a sweeping away the patient's life in a purple flood, were at once made apparent, although previously entirely ignorant of any such conditions, and remedies were presented by the controlling influence to change those conditions and effect a cure.

I at once announced my discovery by assuring my mother that I could cure the patient, when she, not knowing of the spirit control, and supposing it was myself in a normal condition, ordered me out of the room, saying:

"What do you know about her sickness? Leave the room, and do not interrupt us again, or I will box your ears."

Nothing daunted, but more positive than ever, I was compelled to repeat:

"I can cure her!"

To this, she was about to renew her injunction, when the lady said:

"Minerva, do let the child tell. Perhaps God has sent him here to save my life"; whereupon I named the prescription presented, when they both agreed they believed it would do her good, and inquired how the remedies could be obtained. I told them I would gather the roots, and being directed to the place where they could be found, and the proper quantity to use, and my mother would prepare the syrup, which was accordingly done, and in three weeks the lady returned my mother's visit, a distance of three miles.

From that time until the present, with various changes in the phases, I have been a medium, and most of the time for the last twenty years, have been engaged in the clairvoyant practice of medicine, and the various questions of spiritualism.

At a future time I will give you further incidents of my life as a medium.

D. P. KAYNER.

St. Charles, Ill., June 1st, 1871.

REAPPEARANCE OF SPIRITS.

Letter from a Clergyman.

ED. JOURNAL:—The undersigned would communicate for your excellent paper the following for publication:

The funeral of Benjamin Pastor, of Hunterstown, Ind., was attended by the writer on the 2nd of May, 1871, when the bereaved children were assembled at the house of mourning, and had died, some years before, as guardian angels or ministering spirits would return and watch over them and take care of them.

The aged parent and family moved into the tenement house of the family, on returning from the cemetery.

The phenomena to which I refer, or the spiritual manifestations, occurred on Tuesday morning, the 16th ult. A second son, some twenty years of age, was taken sick on Sunday previous, and on said morning of the 16th ult., he saw on the wall of the room above his bed, the images of four persons, plainly visible. He called his brother and sister-in-law, when the three witnesses plainly recognized their father, life-sized, with three other spiritual visitants, not known to the family. These spiritual forms remained visible to the young man for one hour, in open daylight, but have not since appeared.

The undersigned was a Baptist clergyman for twenty-five years, and is now a progressive Universalist.

There is a strong free religious feeling at Hunterstown and vicinity. We welcome the day of progress when the shackles of the old iron bands of the orthodox dogmas. Light and truth are moving onward.

Fraternally yours,

F. H. STEWART.

Kendallville, Ill.

Letter from S. H. Todd.

BROTHER JONES:—We have had a discussion here between Samuel Underhill, M. D., and the M. E. Presiding Elder, Buchanan. Question:

Resolved: That Spiritualism is true, and in harmony with all truth.

The doctor affirmed with his usual ability and candor, proving from science and facts that spirits do return and communicate with their friends here after death. The elder admitted that the spirits came from many different directions, and some other; but when the doctor proved from science and facts that both good and bad could and did communicate, the elder was disposed to deny it altogether; but the doctor held him to the discussion, when, instead of argument, the elder turned to ridicule, and made a proposition to give one hundred dollars, and one of his church members three hundred dollars, if any medium would answer one question in one hundred correctly. The doctor told them in reply that he did not want their money, but he would take the one hundred questions, and they should give security for the money, and when the medium was tested the money could be taken for the use of the common schools in Delton.

The elder did not give the one hundred questions, but gave five as a specimen.—"Give the exact square of one acre of land." The other four were of a like character. The Elder's friends here think he tried to get out at a very small hole and failed.

The next Sunday, the M. E. preacher, Rev. Mr. Russell, preached against Spiritualism. The doctor heard him, and replied for about three minutes, and gave notice that he would review the discourse at length at two o'clock in the afternoon.—Which he did, doing justice to the cause and himself. We are sure that Spiritualism lost nothing by the debate.

We parted with the doctor with regrets that he could not stay longer here. We have one consolation; he promised to return again next year.

Delton, Wis.

—When thou surveyest the world, stand upon the mountain above the clouds and smoke, and thou shalt behold the wonders of creation with clear, unlimited eye; but do not abide there, lest thou become chilled. Vegetation, life, heat, ebbs in the vale.—S. A. Merrill.

—Some ladies suffer dreadfully with the headache, and this causes their hair to fade. Nature's Hair Restorative is a sure remedy for the ache, and will restore the color of thinched, gray, or faded hair. See advertisement.

Voices from the People.

RICHMOND, KANSAS.—Wm. Sandall writes.—Please find within one dollar, which you will credit on my subscription. Your paper is highly appreciated. I have learned more in reading it two years, than in the previous twenty-five of my life-time. I wish all the orthodox in Christendom were compelled to read your "Search after God." Think they would be much benefited.

PIERCETON, IND.—M. Norris writes.—I wish to pen a few thoughts on the great subject of individualized intelligences, or the "Search after God." How Brother Francis asks the question, "Is there any work in nature that does not point significantly to individualized man as its author?" I answer, yes; for man himself is a work in nature, and he certainly is not the author of his own original existence. Now I shall start out by asking, what is man, from whence did he spring? I contend that individualized man is spirit, and spirit is intelligence, and by progression he sprang from the earth, and the earth and, as all other matter, being progressive, sprang from some other greater planet, and so on, back through the link to the great center of the eternal circumference of the original matter composing the great whole.

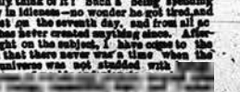
NEW MADISON, OHIO.—C. B. Northrop writes.—You will find inclosed five dollars, which you will please put to my credit on "general subscription book." I would have remitted long ago, but that God you are in search of is not very lavish in his showers of greenbacks upon your humble servant. I will try in future not to get so far behind.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH TER.—Iconoclast writes.—Continue your "Search after God," and when it has ended you surely must send it forth in book form. There will be no way of your evading this, not that I for a moment suppose that you wish to evade responsibility, but to all whose souls, as to sleep such a book out of the hands and hearts of the masses. I see a friend says in a late number of the paper, that when the book appears, which of course it will, he will send for a dozen for six copies. On reading that, I felt to say,—"well done, good and faithful," etc. Now, not to be behind, I say you can put me down for six copies too, and when the price is made known, the money shall be forthcoming, and think I may safely calculate on not only six, but sixty copies being sold among the Spiritualists of this city. I feel, as well as all who read the "Search" in its place, it is the grandest search of the age, and as far as finding a theological orthodox God is concerned, it will end in a wild goose chase! Then we shall want you, dear JOURNAL, to search after the orthodox devil, and then we shall be sure to "search" and "the keys of the bottomless pit" along in case you catch him, so that you may hold him fast.

HINGHAM, WIS.—Mrs. A. Tibbits writes.—Please find inclosed two dollars for renewal of my subscription. You will please pardon me for being so backward in keeping the account square. Can not for a moment think of getting along without your valuable paper. Am much interested in the "Search after God."

LAKE CITY, MINN.—I. R. Norton writes.—Am reading a "Search after God" in the paper, but that does not suffice. I want it in book form, for it is the best, most comprehensive and common sense, reasoning of anything I ever read on that subject.

FIVE CORNERS, N. Y.—Mary C. Young writes. As I am sending an errand to the JOURNAL office—though not just in order to send it to you especially, Brother P., I suppose,—it is a temptation to write with a line for daylight's sake, by my teacher—that was. Really you are my teacher yet, or angels through you—though both, I think it is, for I read all your articles in the paper, and always find them worthy and one's attention that would be to "live and learn" from other's thoughts. I think I am not often at fault when I say of an article, "Mr Francis wrote this," for, excepting your "Search after God," there is something in your writings that seems like your-self—pen or voice. The "Search" I have followed closely, in hopes that what I had almost given up as a hopeless search for me, was to be worked out to the quieting of my anxiety in that direction. I find it very interesting—because so new, and much of it within my comprehension, and seeming to me reasonable. But, during its progress, some questions have arisen in my mind on the subject that remain unanswered, though I hope they soon will vanish, for I think the spirit band that thus far has so ably conducted the "Search" can yet perform all that is promised, and I am with them with patience to see what more will be developed of what and how his power is we have called God, hoping it will not much longer remain hidden from the perception of earth's children. I think that they who study this "Search," and the "Bible of Experience," will see clearly, at least, that God is not just what and where he has heretofore been fancied to be.



OMAHA, NEB.—A. M. Yoaw writes.—I have put off writing to you from time to time, until I got a dollar to send along with my paper. I will not do without it so long as I can get a cent to pay for it.

FREMONT, OHIO.—B. J. Wall writes.—Please find inclosed one dollar, which you will apply on my subscription. I have been reading the JOURNAL since March 1869, and must confess that it has been the means of greatly strengthening me in my Orthodoxy had driven me into what some call infidelity, or what I understand as materialism—not knowing anything about Spiritualism at that time, having heard of it only in connection with the devil's business; but willing and anxious to investigate and satisfy myself I concluded to do so the first opportunity. During the winter of 1869, I read a few numbers of Modern Thought, and in March following saw an advertisement of the JOURNAL, and commenced taking it. Every number seemed to improve in entertaining the mind. That "Search after God" has been of benefit in clearing away the mist that shrouds my mind I will say, and I have great hope and confidence that its author is able to clear it up satisfactory,—not only to my mind, but to all who are not too bigoted and prejudiced to read it.

ANGOLA, IND.—Dr. Moore writes.—The JOURNAL is visiting my counties in the interest of this town where I live. The "Search after God," to me, is grand indeed.

FILLMORE, MO.—L. Larabee writes.—Please find post office order for three dollars, which puts us on the square up to date. Disappointment in getting dues, loss of hogs by distemper, and heavy taxes, have kept us up to the present. I trust you will continue the JOURNAL to me, I will transmit as soon as possible, for I am very much interested in the "Search after God." I hope when found, he will not be so far off as many of the old orthodox God, taking all the fatlings from the Jews, and a great many millions of dollars from the Christians. Then if he could only be endowed with will and power sufficient to save a poor man's cow, and children from orphanage, he would meet my approbation.

FINDLAY, OHIO.—F. C. Steingraver writes.—I notice in your truly valuable paper that the "Search after God" is calling out a great deal of thought and inquiry. One brother asks, who created the first planet? Another asks, by what process were the first human beings developed? etc. Now a great many people would find no trouble in answering these questions. They would simply say that a being that existed from all eternity, and that possessed all wisdom and power, created them; but this would imply that there was a time when there was no creation, and that this intelligent being that existed from all eternity, having all wisdom, but never showing any of it, and all power, but never exercising it, until but a few years ago, when compared with the endless duration of the past, he took a notion to create something. Only think of it! Such a being spending an eternity in idleness—no wonder he got tired, and needed rest on the seventh day, and from all appearances he has never resumed business since. After some thought on the subject, I have come to the conclusion that there never was a time when the boundless universe was not studded with

Price-List of Books.

LIST OF BOOKS FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

All orders by mail, with the price of books ordered, and the additional amount mentioned in the following list of prices for postage, will meet with prompt attention.

Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies.	.75	16
Artificial Somnambulism. By Dr. Pahnestock	1.50	20
A Revelation of Departed Spirits among the Shakers	.50	08
Alice Vale, a Story for the times, by Lois Waisbrooker	1.25	16
American Crisis, by Warren Chase	.25	03
Answers to Questions Practical and Spiritual. Device	1.50	20
Apocrypha; or, What is Gospel Truth?	1.25	16
A Peep into Sacred Tradition, by Rev. Orrin Abbott. Paper	.50	08
Age of Reason, by Thomas Paine. Cloth	.50	08
A Woman's Secret, by Mrs. O. V. Corbin	1.75	20
A Lecture in Rhyme—The Past, Present and Future, by Mrs. P. P. Pelham	1.50	20
Arcana of Nature, or History and Laws of Creation, Vol 1, by Hudson Tuttle	1.25	20
Arcana of Nature, or the Philosophy of Spiritual Existence, and of the Spirit-World, Vol 2, by Hudson Tuttle	1.25	20
A B C of Life, by A. B. Child	.25	02
Arabula, or the Divine Guest, by A. J. Davis	1.50	20
After Death, or Disembodied Man, by Randolph	1.00	08
Cloth	1.50	20
Approaching Crisis, by A. J. Davis	1.00	16
Apostles, (translated from the French) by Renan	1.75	20
A Medical Key to the Summer Land by A. J. Davis	1.00	12
Astro Theological Lectures by Rev. Robert Taylor	2.00	24
A Kiss for a Blow, a Book for children by H. G. Wright, small edition	.25	12
Large do	1.00	16
Antiquity and Duration of the World by G. H. Fontaine, M. D.	.25	2
An Eye Opener, by Expo. Cloth,	.75	12
Paper	.50	04
A Roman Lawyer in Jerusalem in the first century by W. Story	.15	2
Address on Spiritualism, by T. G. Forster	.15	02
Arcana of Nature, or the Philosophy of Spiritual Existence, and of the Spirit-World, Vol 3, by Hudson Tuttle	1.25	20
A B C of Life, by A. B. Child	.25	02
Arabula, or the Divine Guest, by A. J. Davis	1.50	20
After Death, or Disembodied Man, by Randolph	1.00	08
Cloth	1.50	20
Approaching Crisis, by A. J. Davis	1.00	16
Apostles, (translated from the French) by Renan	1.75	20
A Medical Key to the Summer Land by A. J. Davis	1.00	12
Astro Theological Lectures by Rev. Robert Taylor	2.00	24
A Kiss for a Blow, a Book for children by H. G. Wright, small edition	.25	12
Large do	1.00	16
Antiquity and Duration of the World by G. H. Fontaine, M. D.	.25	2
An Eye Opener, by Expo. Cloth,	.75	12
Paper	.50	04
A Roman Lawyer in Jerusalem in the first century by W. Story	.15	2
Address on Spiritualism, by T. G. Forster	.15	02
Arcana of Nature, or History and Laws of Creation, Vol 1, by Hudson Tuttle	1.25	20
Arcana of Nature, or the Philosophy of Spiritual Existence, and of the Spirit-World, Vol 2

Frontier Department.

BY.....E. V. WILSON

Items from our Tour to the Western Frontier, April 28th, 1871.

Left Chicago at 8:30 in the evening, via I. C R. R., for Du Quoin, Illinois—distance from Chicago, 339 miles. All western people are familiar with the old and reliable I C R R. It is a good road, with good rolling stock, and while we did not sleep in a berth on one of the Pullman sleeping cars, we had as good a berth, and in as good a car as one need ride in. We found the officers and men on the line affable and attentive to the wants of their patrons. At Centrelia, in the Railroad eating house, we enjoyed a first-class breakfast, after which, we went on our way rejoicing.

April 29 h.—Arrived at Du Quoin at 10:40 A. M., and found Brothers Lee, Durham, Johnson and others, at the depot awaiting our arrival. From the depot we went to the Lee House, kept by Messrs. Lee and Son,—an unpretentious, home like place, where the traveller can get a good meal and clean beds. It is a temperance house, and worthy the support and good license of the public.

We lectured to a full house in Du Quoin, to fair-sized and intelligent audience, giving some few facts of spirit-life, and readings of character, among which, the following will interest our readers:

No 1.—To a tall, spare man we said, "We see you in great danger—your life is not worth a fraction. You are wounded and hungry. The spirit who gives us this information is a Confederate or dearly sergeant"—fully describing him. We also gave other traits of his life, incidents of life, and last history of the past. The man asked: "When did this take place?"

We replied, "On 16th of May, 1863."

The man replied, "I was a Confederate soldier, and was wounded at Vicksburgh, on the 16 h of May, 1863. I recognise the cord fly sergeant. The description of him is as good as I could give myself, and other incidents and traits of my character are correct."

No. 2.—To a man we said: "Your sister is with you," fully describing her and giving time of death and incidents of life. This communication was fully corroborated.

No. 3.—An entire stranger was called on for test readings. We began at thirteenth year, and gave a correct reading of his life, to date

No 4.—To the daughter of an infidel,—one who was very sceptical: "We see you in trouble last December, and it is well you are rid of it." Then we went into a full recital minute history of the matter. This caused considerable excitement, and proved true.

No 5.—There came upon the platform a lieutenant colonel of the Federal army. We entered into a full description of him, giving age and time of death. Fully identified.

No 6.—In the rear of the house, and on our right sat Dr. B., an old and respected citizen of Du Quoin, and very skeptical. We said: "There stands by you a woman. She is frail of body, full of face, giving complexion, height, age, and stated, "This woman was your wife. Died nineteen years ago." This was fully corroborated by the doctor.

No 7. To a woman we said: "There is by you a settler or Indian, and so frequently controls you." Correct.

No. 8.—By Mrs. G. stood a beautiful girl, who has been in the spirit world but a little time. "I believe her to be your daughter." Correct.

No 9. To Mrs Lee: "There stands by you a young man and woman, your daughter. Your son was killed in the service. The daughter died a short time ago." Fully identified.

Tuesday, May 2d.—Went to Centralia, Illinois. Distance, 36 miles. Lectured three times to full houses, giving some few tests, of which the following may be of interest to the reader:

No. 1.—To Mr. Taylor: "We see by you the spirit of a man. He is spare, very sallow, and hollow cheeked. This man died last March, and thanks you for kindness tendered him during his last illness, and requests you to write to his family the fact of his being here this evening." Fully identified.

No. 2.—To a stranger: "We see by you a woman. She died six ears ago," fully describing her. "Sick in your sister."

No. 3. "There is here a man from spirit life. He is an old man, square built and heavy. His habits in life were slovenly. He was close-fisted and unmerciful. I should judge he have been a kind of preacher. He has been in spirit life some two years. His family are here in this city." The people said, "This is our old acquaintance, Father Leonard."

No 4.—A Frenchman, fully described and identified as one killed four years ago, near the depot, on the rail road.

We gave a séance here and at Du Quoin, at each of which we gave many readings of character and tests of spirit life.

We lectured on Thursday evening, and our readings and tests were failures; where-fore we can not tell. We suppose we were to blame,—had eaten too much.

The peach and cherry crop at Centralia, and for miles about Centralia, is a failure; the strawberries not over half a crop. There will be a fair crop of apples, and some pears. Wheat looks well.

Friday, May 5 h.—We left St Louis by morning train for Kansas. From St Louis to Jefferson City we passed through some fine farming country, and as far as we could see, the crops look well, as it we reached Jefferson City. After leaving the river above Jefferson City for one hundred miles, we passed through a country that has suffered terribly from drouth. Wheat fields are being ploughed up. Corn, late oats, and spring crops of small grain, must be a failure, unless rain falls in copious showers. At no time last season were we in Illinois more severely afflicted with drouth than that portion of Missouri lying between Jefferson City and Holden.

We reached Kansas City, Mo., on Friday night, May 5 h, at 10 20 P. M., putting up at the Gillis House,—a good house, with clean beds, and gentlemanly landlord and clerk, and what is better still, they are liberal.

On Saturday we went to our old friend's house, H. Fair, Esq., a man to love, and a medium of whom we shall have more to say in the future.

A New Religious Sect.

A new religious sect has made its appearance in Vienna, and has notified its existence and programme to the ministerial authorities. The new community will bear the name of "Confessors of the Message of Truth, Liberty and Love," and their creed is as follows:

First, we acknowledge the world to be a unity of infinite space and time, the creative energy of which we call "Weltgeist." (World-spirit.)

Second, we acknowledge that humanity is one of the innumerable forms in which the "Weltgeist" manifests himself in the series of his developments. We acknowledge that humanity is progressing in all ways, and we declare it to be every man's task to assist in this improvement with all his powers.

Third, we acknowledge the indestructibility of the Essence in all the phenomena of the "Weltgeist," and, consequently, also in men, and we therefore consider death to be only the translation into a new form of the spiritual existence.

Fourth, we acknowledge that there must be a retribution for all actions, but this is only of a temporal nature.

Fifth, we acknowledge that all those actions are good which are in harmony with the principles of the Essence, equality of all men, and which tend to the progress of humanity. All actions not in accordance with these objectionable.

Sixth, we acknowledge the notion of "God," as the idea of absolute perfection, to be a postulate of human reason.

The chief of the "messages" are: First, the commands of liberty are: To moderate, be calm, to grow be clean, be industrious, be economical.

Second, the commands of justice are, Offend not, ill treat not, kill not, cheat not, steal not, rob not.

Third, the commands of love are: Be courteous to all, be compassionate with the unhappy, be cheerful with the happy, assist the poor, tend the sick, protect the weak.

The head of the new sect is Dr. Hippolyt Tauschinsky, and the president the weaver, Herr K. Jetzo Schaffel, all Fanthasa, Vienna. Nothing is as yet stated regarding the form of worship to be adopted in the new community, or as to the number of its adherents.

"Dialogues and Recitations."

This admirable little work comes from the pen of Mrs. Louise Shepard, and was published by the American Spiritualist Publishing Company, of Cleveland.

It is dedicated to the spirits who originated the beautiful system of instruction, the Children's Progressive Lyceum; to that noble man and spiritually-developed soul, Andrew Jackson Davis, through whom it was given to mortals; to the faithful workers, officers and children of the Lyceum everywhere—and to childhood, as the flower-budding heart-center of pure exalting Spiritualism.

The following Opening Lyceum Song, an inversation by Emma Tuttle, is really a gem of thought:

O, ye who once were mortals
And who are now in clay,
Come down from Heaven's blue meadows,
And be with us to-day!
Inspiration, loving angels,
The way your glory came,
An' wreath about our foreheads
Truth's glowing ring of flame.

Bring down a breath of Eden,
And let us breathe it in,
Till life an' purely sweetness
Make us forget to sin.
Our hearts, our thoughts, our powers upward,
Like soaring birds in Spring,
An' every soul is willing
To learn the truths you bring.

Come down oh, blessed angels,
Make Earth and Heaven one,
And when our pains are shadowed,
Be ye our sunshine sun.
Unfold us in God's wisdom,
His beauty and his love,
And in ye earth-life fit us
To be like you above.

Then follow the dialogues and recitations, which contain lessons of wisdom for the old as well as young. It is well adapted for lyceums, and will afford a fund of entertainment for the members thereof that can not be obtained from any other source.

Decatur, Nebraska.

Morris G. Higbee writes that good mediums would meet with encouragement at the above-named city, situated on the western banks of the Missouri River. It is a fine, new city, some thirty miles south of Sioux City, but on the opposite side of the river. We have an interest in the town, and take pleasure in recommending to our friends who are emigrating to Nebraska, to give Decatur a visit, before locating elsewhere.

BHAGVAT GEETA.

The Hindoo New Testament.

The above-named very neatly executed book, on fine tinted paper, embossed in gold, is now being delivered as fast as orders are received. Price only $1 25; postage, 16 cents. Every body should have this wonderful book.

MRS. A. H. ROBINSON.

Testimonials—Extracts from Letters of her Patients.

MRS A. H ROBINSON: I hope you will excuse me for not writing you before this. You helped me in my sickness. I have had no spasms since.

Although our labor is hard, we thank God it is not in vain, for it is true that it is more blessed to give than to receive.

MRS R K. STODDARD,
Mother of De Witt C. Hough, the Boy Medium.
Philadelphia, Pa.

MRS. A. H. ROBINSON—Dear Sister: I received your prescription yesterday. After writing you, I was taken down with inflammatory rheumatism. I had to have relief. I used iodine and cold water. The pain was unbearable. As soon as your prescription came I applied the liniment you ordered, and found relief immediately.

Respectfully,
T. S. WELLINGTON.
Little Sioux City, Iowa.

DEAR SISTER ROBINSON: I take the syrup as usual which gives me a good relish for rare done porter house steak, which, unless you advise differently, I shall continue to use. I am getting well under your treatment.

W. W. MOULTON.
Cuyhoga Falls, Ohio.

MRS. A. H ROBINSON—Dear Friend: I have not had the neuralgia since applying your prescription.

Your true friend,
MRS. S. BRADBURY.
Paris, Ill.

Mrs. Robinson's success as a healing medium is truly wonderful. Her patients are scattered far and near, and in many cases those who have been given up as incurable by all classes of physicians, and yet in nearly every case the spirits through her mediumship cure by one prescription, sent by mail. The patients are not only relieved immediately, but gradually cured—restored to absolute health.

RECENT PUBLICATIONS.

Press Comments.

The Hi-Hoo Globe; or The World's Agitator and Reconciler. A Treatise on the Pantisal Uniformation or the Earth. Presented through the Organism of M. L. Sherman, M. D., and written by Prof. Wm. F. Lyon. Chicago: Religio-Philosophical Publishing House.

The above title is sufficiently full to be fairly descriptive of the character and objects of the volume under notice. It must be admitted by us that we have not ourselves been able to give its contents, which are very varied and provocative of speculative thought, that careful attention which would alone entitle us to anything like a just estimate of the scientific, and therefore harmonizing value of the work; but a cursory view of its pages, which has been attended with undeniable interest, authorizes us to speak of the general design and spirit of the speculation as deserving of the widest regard. Whether sufficiently well based or not, (and no one can positively deny unless it be in his power to as positively affirm), it is a series of suggestions, impressed from such sources, that may serve to dissipate many of the fogs that now cling about the subject of the structure and destiny of the planet we inhabit, and to breed a train of thinking that may result in more fixed notions of the physical being of the globe, and therefore of its probable relationship to external and exalted forces and influences. There are thirteen chapters to this book, as follows: Scraps of History; The Open Polar Sea; The Igneous Theory; Volcanoes; Earthquake; Material and Spiritual Forces; Gravitation; The Sun and its Influences; Interest Powers; Who are the World Saviours? The Moon; and Vision. Thus the reader will see, at a glance, that an immense subject has been herein presented, certain of the chapters embracing topics that really touch the vital points of creation and its unconsidered mysteries. This treatise is not so dogmatic as it is inquisitive. Its spirit is rather that of investigation than of instruction. Over its pages are scattered many rich seed thoughts that should germinate in the mind of every careful and reflective reader. The special theory sought to be evolved from this example of research, we leave the reader to approach and appreciate for himself, satisfied merely that its study will tend to the release of the human mind from the fetters of superstition, and its expansion in a new realm of knowledge and delight.—Banner of Light

Civilation of the Theological Idea of Deity. By M. B. Craven.

Some time ago we received from the author a copy of this book for notice, and although delayed in the reading and notice of the work, we are prepared to make the author our best bow, and acknowledge that he has furnished the public with one of the ablest works on a rational religion we have yet seen, and one we most heartily recommend to our friends. The work shows plainly, and by the best authority, the superiority of the religious ideas, and the ideas of God entertained by other nations over those of the Jews and early Christians, and traces out rationalism, and the most advanced ideas of modern Christians, to a better source than the Bible. The book is the result of much research, and has many collections from the best authority extant. It is free from superstition, and food for the best intellects and reasoners, and just such a book as the times demand for the young students and thinkers. We hope the author will find a ready sale for this book as he did for his able little work, "The Triumph of Criticism," which is among our best pamphlet literature, and has long been on our table and for sale by us.—Hon. Warren Chase in Banner of Light.

Hesperia. By Cora L. V. Tappan.

The Banner of Light says: "It is intended to trace the entire history of the Republic of the West, and to foretell its future. The structure of the poem is allegorical, but the characters employed to embody and illustrate its moving ideas and thoughts are human in their action and system, vividly related to the procession of ordinary events, and full of that animation which breathes purpose and plan. * * * It must be read by the sympathetic mind, which delights in the pictures and passages of rhythm of verse, to be enjoyed as its merits imply. There are entire pages in this new Epic that overrun with the finest and loftiest poetic suggestion. The entrancing power of verse is to be tested all the way through. The inspiration that vivifies the poem is not to be denied, because it everywhere proclaims itself. Mrs. Tappan's nature is itself exceptionally poetic, both in mold and fibre; and in this fresh and remarkable volume, that talent with such power and life, through two hundred and thirty five consecutive pages, she gives the world an interior, a spiritual, a realistic picture of the planting, the growth, and the agony of our beloved America. It is an Epic that will stand; eloquent, profound, soaring, strong, inspired. No American will read it save to be delighted, exalted and instructed."

To the Citizens of Cincinnati, Ohio.

The somnambulic art will be taught to ladies, for the cure of all diseases of a nervous, inflammatory, or painful character, whether of the head, lungs, uterus, or abdominal viscera, etc., by Dr. Wm. B. Fahnestock, of Lancaster, Pa., who can be consulted on and after the 5 h of June next (for a few week), at the dental rooms of Dr. T. C. Fahnestock, No. 154 West 4th street.

Dr. Fahnestock will visit Chicago and Aurora, Ill., for the same purpose the latter end of June or the beginning of July.

[Concluded from first page.]

information of it. This, however, he also denies.

NOTE 3d.—This too, is said to have been an actual occurrence before the death of Mrs. M—, and there are said to be witnesses of the fact that such medicine was administered.

NOTE 4th.—This was a man to whom the deceased during her widowhood, was engaged to be married; but broke off the match in accordance with the wishes of her friends.

NOTE 5th.—The nature of this answer is such that her hesitation to answer might fairly be imputed to womanly delicacy, and yet it is said to have been apparently corroborated by the appearance of the body after the inquest.

NOTE 6th.—Her husband.

NOTE 7th.—Frain's Lake is a small sheet of water not far distant from the scene of these occurrences, and has now become a spot of great interest. Suspicion has been aroused that at least one other murder has been concealed beneath its waves, and the people are only waiting the clearing away of the ice to examine its bottom.

NOTE 8th.—A great evidence of Van Woert's sincerity, is, that in obedience to this wish, he left the house immediately.

Since the above was written the case has been laid before the Grand Jury, and various witnesses have been examined, and their testimony as far as developed goes to prove the guilt of the aforesaid parties or persons, but the jurymen disagreeing on some important points in regard to evidence the case at issue, it thought best to adjourn the trial until the next sitting in June; a final decision will then be had. Some of the testimony in addition to what has before been given, is as follows:—It was proved that after the widow M—— had died and her body was lying in a room under the care of female friends prior to burial, the brother-in-law and Doctor in question, applied to those who had the care of the corpse for permission to examine the dead body, without any witnesses to annoy them in their operation. This was at first objected to, but they effected their purpose partly by force, and entered the room, and after exciting no further entrance all persons except themselves, and as they supposed covering every hole or crack so that no one could detect or in any way discover their proceedings, they then fastened the door and commenced operations. But the persons present found means to ascertain what they were about, without exactly knowing their object. They first examined closely the corpse, and then applied the stomach pump to extract if possible all the poison from the stomach; after they had been one hour or there-about, shut up with the corpse in the before mentioned manner, the persons in waiting thought best to interfere and put an end to their visit and intercourse with the dead. Much other testimony was given and many other statements were made in the course of examination, which accorded in substance with the above. Further in regard to the pedlar, it was proved that much of the property belonging to the missing man is known to have been in possession of some in question.

THE LAW OF MARRIAGE,

BY C. L. JAMES.

Positive argument in favor of liberal divorce law
For sale by the author, Louisiana, Mo Post

New Books.

[PAUL and JUDAS entering the Cave of Jose[illegible])

JESUS OF NAZARETH,

BY
PAUL and JUDAS,
Through Alexander Smyth, Medium.

This work has been read with intense interest by thousands, and is universally pronounced the most in the whole line of Spiritualistic Literature. It is the only true and reliable history of the remarkable medium called Jesus, ever written. After waiting eighteen hundred years, PAUL and JUDAS, finding the times propitious and an excellent medium through whom to communicate, have given to the world a book of lasting interest, by taking possession of Mr. Smyth about one hour in every twenty-four, usurping all his powers, giving a continued series of well-connected scenes, presenting scenery, characters and personages, dialogues and actions in their regular order and succession, embracing all the most important personages and incidents which occurred during the sojourn of Jesus upon earth. There was, probably, no book ever written in which such perfect life-pictures occur; every city and country village, every river, brook and mountain, and scenery in general, is so vividly portrayed that an actual journey through the country could hardly be more interesting. The characters in this unexampled drama are so faithfully portrayed, that, as you are introduced to each in turn, you seem well acquainted and delighted with your company, and the many points of interest you are called to visit. The book is replete with interest from beginning to end, and contains 319 closely-printed pages.

WONDERFUL BOOK

PRICE, $1.50; postage, 20 cents.

☞ For sale, wholesale and retail, by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 187 & 189 South Clark St. Chicago.

THE HOLLOW GLOBE;

Or, the World's Agitator and Reconciler.

A Treatise on the Physical Conformation of the Earth.

PRESENTED THROUGH THE ORGANISM OF
M. L. SHERMAN, M.D.,
AND WRITTEN BY
PROF. WM. F. LYON.

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

"This book is addressed to the reasoning intelligence of Humanity, and to all inquiring and reflective minds, everywhere upon the earth.

"We earnestly request the reader to suspend his judgment concerning the ideas advanced, until he has carefully perused its pages; when he may be better prepared to form his opinions, and offer his criticisms.

"We do not claim that the teachings contained in this work are infallible, neither are they presented in an authoritative manner. But we do claim that it contains more original, natural and startling facts which may open to his mind new fields of research, thus tending to enlarge his understanding, and enlighten his intellect."

EXTRACT FROM INTRODUCTION.

"The central idea contained in the following work, and the one to which most of these chapters are designed to substantiate, is, that this globe is constructed in the form of a hollow sphere, with a shell some thirty to forty miles in thickness, and that the interior surface, which is a beautiful world in a more highly developed condition than the exterior, is accessible by a circuitous and spirally formed aperture that may be found in the unexplored open Polar Sea, and this opening affords easy navigation by a broad and deep channel leading from one surface to the other, and that the largest ships or steamers may sail or steam either way, with as much facility as they can pass through any other winding or somewhat crooked channel. And we have endeavored to show as clearly as possible, that the physical formation of the globe is such as to perfectly accommodate within an outer and inner world, or two worlds instead of one."

12 mo., 447 pp. Price $2 00; postage 20 cents.

. For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 187 & 189 S. Clark st., Chicago.

Reprinted from the London edition of 1733 by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, Chicago.

THE BHAGVAT-GEETA,

Or Dialogues of

KREESHNA AND ARJOON.

In eighteen lectures, with notes. Translated from the original Sanskreet, or ancient language of the Brahmins.

BY CHARLES WILKINS,

Senior merchant in the service of the Honorable, the East India Company in their Bengal Establishment.

The antiquity of the original and the veneration in which it has been held for so many ages by a very considerable portion of the human race, renders it one of the greatest curiosities ever presented to the literary world.

Our edition of the BHAGVAT-GEETA (sometimes called the Hindoo New Testament) is printed on heavy tinted paper and beautifully bound. It is in great demand, orders for nearly all of the first edition having been received before it left the binder's hands.

Price $1.25; postage, 12 cents.

. For sale, wholesale and retail, by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 187 & 189 S. Clark st., Chicago.

JETS! JETS! JETS! JETS! JETS!

A New Book by Andrew Jackson Davis,
ENTITLED,
"THE FOUNTAIN,
WITH JETS OF NEW MEANINGS,"
ILLUSTRATED WITH ONE HUNDRED AND FORTY-TWO ENGRAVINGS.

[illegible]

For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 187 and 189, South Clark street, Chicago

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

MEDICINA PSYCHICA! ANIMA MEDICA!!

☞ "Dico hominem externum esse animal: Internum vero non anima sed imaginem DEI VERAM!"—VAN BELMONT

THIERS' ODYLLIC WAFERS,

The most safe, salutatory, and efficient Nervine Medium Developer and Curative in all

DISEASES OF THE NERVES,

Including Neuralgia, Epilepsy, Hysteria, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Gout, Lumbago, Sciatica, Chorea, (St. Vitus' Dance) Dependents of Spirits, Melancholy, etc.

Sent per mail, in letter form. Price $1.00 per package. Test or healing wafers mailed free for 25 cents Address, W. F. J. THIERS, M. D., NEUROPATHIST, No. 72 (St.), Washington, D. C.

v10 n11 tf

THE

Science of Evil;

OR

FIRST PRINCIPLES OF HUMAN ACTION.

BY JOEL MOODY.

THE SCIENCE OF EVIL is a book of radical and startling thought. It gives a connected and logical statement of the FIRST PRINCIPLES OF HUMAN ACTION, and clearly shows that without Evil there can be neither Morals, Science, Knowledge, or Human Action on earth. In fact, without Evil, man could not exist. This work fully solves the problem, and unfolds the MYSTERY OF EVIL, giving it a scientific meaning, and shows to what LAWS IT BELONGS AND HOW THEY MOVE THE MORAL AND INTELLECTUAL WORLD.

The book is a large 12 mo., of 343 pages, printed from large, clear type, on fine, heavy paper. Price, $1.75; postage, 20 cents.

. For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 187 & 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

SECOND EDITION.

A WORK OF GREAT RESEARCH.

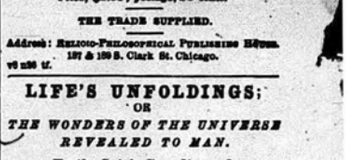
ONE RELIGION: MANY CREEDS.

BY ROSS WINANS.

"We object in that the Church demands, an unbounded and unjustifiable confidence in the infallibility of the writings of Moses and the prophets, and the Evangelists and the Apostles. We claim from a rational standpoint, such an impossible compound of God and man. We protest that Christian theology, as we have it, is not taught by God himself, nor by Christ himself, but is in consonance with established facts, nor is it comprehensible by our reason. We would show you that Christianity, as taught among us is no better than other systems taught in other than Christian countries, and in many cases not so good.

The historic part of the Bible, in relation to the creation of the world, the human race, also in the several epochs of theology here mentioned. They all had their cosmologies based on equally good authority and equally void of the truth, and we have no faith in the facts. The time and manner of the creation, no man has ever known, or ever will know, in this life; nor is such knowledge of importance in preparing us for the life to come."—EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

This book is a large 12 mo. of nearly 400 pages, printed on fine, heavy tint d paper, and is sold at much less than the actual cost. Price, $1.50; postage, 20 cents.



. For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

THE BIBLE IN THE BALANCE,

A Book for the Age and the Times,

and one that should be in the hands of every liberal man and woman in the land.

You want it for your own instruction, that you may be furnished with acknowledged authority to meet th ar-

The book is printed in excellent style, 12 mo., on new type and fine paper, with beautiful illustrations of Spirit-Life and the mound-relics of the Mississippi Valley. It is substantially bound in cloth and contains three hundred and twenty pages.

The interest felt in this work is so great that orders were received for nearly the whole of the first edition before it was published, one party alone having received orders for over three hundred copies.

Price, $1.50; postage, 20 cents.

THE TRADE SUPPLIED.

Address: RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE. 187 & 189 S. Clark St. Chicago.

v8 n26 tf.

LIFE'S UNFOLDINGS;

OR

THE WONDERS OF THE UNIVERSE REVEALED TO MAN.

By the Spirit Guardians of

DAVID CORLESS.

A very entertaining and instructive little book. Price, 50 cents.

. For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

MRS. MARIA M. KING'S WORKS.

THE PRINCIPLES OF NATURE, as discovered in the Development and Structure of the Universe; The Solar System—Laws and Methods of its Development; Earth—History of its Development; Evolution of the Spiritual Universe. Price reduced to $1.75; postage, 24 cents.

REAL LIFE IN THE SPIRIT LAND, Being Life Experiences, Scenes, Incidents and Conditions, illustrative of Earth Life, and the Principles of the Spiritual Philosophy. Price, $1.00; postage, 16 cents.

SOCIAL EVILS: Their Causes and Cure,—Being a Brief Discussion of the Social Status, with reference to Methods of Reform. Price, 25 cents; postage free.

THE SPIRITUAL PHILOSOPHY VS. DIABOLISM. In two lectures. Price, 25 cents; postage free.

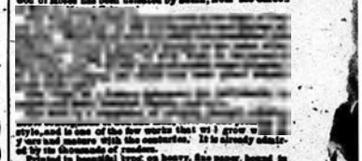
WHAT IS SPIRITUALISM? and SHALL SPIRITUALISTS HAVE A CREED? In two lectures. Price, 25 cents; postage free.

GOD THE FATHER and MAN THE IMAGE OF GOD. In two lectures. Price, 25 cents; postage free.

. For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

NEW EDITION—REVISED AND CORRECTED.

THE VOICES



Three Poems.

VOICE OF SUPERSTITION.
VOICE OF NATURE.
VOICE OF A PEBBLE.

By Warren Summer Barlow.

THIS volume is startling in its originality of purpose, and is destined to make deeper impressions among contemplative minds than any work that the hitherto separate efforts of the human mind have taken to reveal its truths.

The Voice of Superstition takes the records of their world, and proves by numerous passages from the Bible that the God of Moses has been defended by Satan, from the Garden style, and is one of the few works that will grow with years and mature with the centuries. It is already admired by the thousands of readers.

Printed in beautiful type, on heavy, fine paper, bound in beveled boards, in gold cover; nearly 200 pages. Price $1.25, postage 16 cents. Very liberal discount to the trade.

For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 South Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL.

HARMONIAL PHILOSOPHY. HOLY BIBLE. ZEND-AVESTA. SHASTER.

THE ARTS AND SCIENCES, LITERATURE, [illegible] ROMANCE AND GENERAL REFORM.

L. D. Drawer 5871 Box 146

$3,00 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.] Truth wears no mask, bows at no human shrine, seeks neither place nor applause: she only asks a hearing. [SINGLE COPIES EIGHT CENTS.

S. S. JONES, PUBLISHER AND PROPRIETOR. CHICAGO, JUNE 24, 1871. VOL. X.—NO. 14.

Original Poetry.

Written for the Religio-Philosophical Journal.

JESSIE TO HER FRIENDS.

BY D. F. KAYNER, M. D., MEDIUM.

Jessie has gone to the land of bright morning,
Blest home of the angels where night is no more.
Though 'mid these glories she now is sojourning,
She often is with you as was of yore.

Think not that your Jessie was in the grave laid,
'Twas only the garment she wore while on earth.
Her spirit is far brighter robes is arrayed,
And unseen can join in your sorrow and mirth.

The earth claimed its own when her spirit arose,
But Victory's garlands bloomed bright o'er the grave,
For the River of Life unceasingly flows,
And Progress eternal is borne on its wave.

'Tis Jessie that bids you to think nevermore
That she was entombed when she gave up the strife,
But look to that far-reaching evergreen shore,
Where Jessie has risen in newness of life.

Friends, weep no more, for your Jessie is near you,
For "gone is not gone yet, and dead is not dead;"
Whispers of soul-love she yet brings to cheer you,
With angel-wreaths woven to place on your head.

Listen, friends, now, to the voices of Reason,
Join in the choruses sung by our band,
Let us commune with your souls earth's brief season,
And then we'll receive you with joy in our land.

Spirit love greets you! and spirit hands waving,
Beckon you on o'er the beautiful river,
Where, in the founts of eternal truth laving,
The soul's march is on and upward forever.

Then sorrow no more that I have passed over,
For tongue cannot utter the joys of my home.
When earth receding your spirits shall sever,
To our bright Summer Land we'll aid you to come.

St. Charles, Ill., June 10th.

REV. T. J. BRIGGS ON THE ROSTRUM.

His Lecture at the Decatur Convention—Written out and Published by Request of Many Spiritualists.

FRIENDS—As the chairman has introduced me to you by name, it is no more than right that you should know who and what I am, on what platform I stand, and what is my belief.

Almost thirty years have rolled past since I commenced pioneering in central Illinois as a Universalist preacher, trying to aid in emancipating people from the thralldom of orthodoxy, and bringing them to the enjoyment of more exalted views of the Divine character, and of a hope as broad as the needs of humanity. I labored earnestly, faithfully, hopefully, for many years, whether judiciously or not. I fought too long under that banner to be willing to throw it aside now. I have sailed too long under that flag to think of deserting it now. I am a Universalist.

Some years ago, a Spiritualist lecturer asked me what my belief was. Upon my replying that I was a Universalist, I was met with the response, "Umph, haven't you got beyond that yet?" I replied that I had not, and never expected to. I never expected to get beyond the universe, and Universalism embraces the universe. My faith embraces a universal God—the universal brotherhood of all humanity; the universal triumph of life over death, knowledge over ignorance, light over darkness, righteousness over sin, and joy over sorrow, and happiness over misery. I never expect to pass beyond this, and I hope the time will come that you will get in sight of it.

A man, professing to be a Spiritualist, once disgusted me by saying he thought he was superior to Jesus Christ, because he was living on a higher plane. I told him that mankind had doubtless progressed, and the civilized world occupied a higher plane than it did when Christ was upon earth; but mag's superiority was not judged by the relative position of their feet, but by their purity of soul and the development of their moral and intellectual nature. And here let me add, I consider that the superiority of Christ's teachings over all that went before, consists mainly in this, the relative importance that he gave to truths and duties. We may take, for example, his moral code. We can find the most of this scattered along in the writings of the ancients. But Jesus' mind looked over the past, and seized upon the most important moral truths, and placed them in the foreground, giving to them a prominence and position that they never occupied before. They are summed up in the two great commands, and in the Golden Rule.

When I came into this hall for the first time, my eye readily caught the motto which has been commented upon by those who have spoken before me, "DEVOTED TO FREE SPEECH." This very principle of free speech, based, as it must be, upon free thought, is a stumbling to the orthodox churches. They do not understand what we mean by it, or how we can be progressive in order and trust and permit it. Every orthodox churches has its articles of [illegible] are considered to embrace all im[illegible]ths, so that there is not much relig[illegible] a person need know or believe out[illegible]. In all their social religions gath[illegible] that every church-member [illegible]k in conformity to them, so [illegible] speaking, not only for himself, but [illegible] of his demonstrations. He speaks in behalf of all, and all feel that he is accountable to them, and that they are, in a manner, responsible for his utterances. When such persons come into places like this, and hear one person speak upon one topic, and another upon another—one advancing one train of ideas, and another differing from those in the ideas he advances,—it still seems to them as if each one is speaking, not for himself alone, but for all, or, at least, that he should speak for all, and ought not to be allowed to speak unless the meeting generally endorses those views. It seems difficult for them to realize that each speaker individually, is alone responsible for what he or she may say; and that the purpose of this free speech is not to argue and confute, but to discuss and compare notes for mutual profit and improvement.

The paramount object of this meeting is, as I understand it, the development of our higher natures, the growth of the soul, that we may progress more and more toward the celestial and divine.

There is nothing really profitable but what tends to this result. It is to this view that I attempt to address you on this occasion. And I am happy to say, there is nothing present that jars upon my feelings; the currents flow evenly and smoothly.

The present calls my attention to a few thoughts, that I had briefly penciled down for my own entertainment at home, with regard to the general agreement of all religions. Before introducing these, however, I wish to preface them with this important reflection.

Moral principles are universal laws, designed to operate everywhere, where there are moral beings, just as physical laws are universal. I work everywhere, where there is matter. For, wherever matter exists, it is subjected to the same universal physical laws, as attraction, light, heat, etc. All these principles are working everywhere, in other worlds and other spheres throughout all the universe, as well as in this solar system and on this globe. So moral laws are the same in their principles for all spheres of moral intelligences, from the highest to the lowest. Take, for instance, the first and second commands, "Thou shalt love the Lord with all thy heart, and thy neighbor as thyself." We can not conceive of any moral beings in any sphere, but what are subject to this law, and must observe it to be happy and progress. The outward manifestation, or rather the special application of this law, must vary according to the different circumstances and needs of intelligences, while the principle remains the same. There always has been, as there must ever be, dependence among finite beings, and hence a necessity, in some way, to aid and assist. Jesus enunciated an universal and universal truth, when he said, "Ye have the poor with you always, and whensoever ye will, ye may do them good." In no world, in no sphere, do beings exist that are not in some way, in some respect "poor" in relation to others, and in some manner others "can do them good." And this will always be so long as there are finite beings. No one can be freed from the obligation of doing others good, or will be so isolated and independent that he can not receive good from another. Here it is done according to our circumstances and wants; in other worlds, other spheres, according to their circumstances and needs.

We come now to the subject of religions.

All the past generations have had truths and errors in their religions, as future generations will find in ours. And it is truly remarkable, that all religions in their fundamental principles embrace truths mostly, whilst their errors are mostly found in the details. The errors are grouped around, outside of the heart of all religions, so to speak.

1st. In all past ages men of all religions have believed in an overruling power. But they have differed, and differed widely, in details with regard to this power. These errors, however, do not matter much, so long as they do not contravene some of the great universal moral principles, and do not smother the hopes and aspirations, and retard the progress of man. Cruelty is the same in any being. The orthodox conceit that we must believe in a sort of three-headed Deity. With me it does not matter so much how many heads God has, if those heads are all right. I believe in an infinite intelligence. I do not believe that I know more than the first cause of my existence. I can not comprehend it. Neither can I comprehend infinite space or infinite duration. I believe in them, however, none the less firmly still.

2d. All the world has believed in gradations of being, or as Pope has poetically expressed it:

> "First chain of being, which from God began,
> Nature ethereal, human, angel, man;
> Beast, bird, fish, insect, etc."

But they have differed, and do differ, in details as to this gradation of being.

As every people have had different names for the lower orders of creatures, so all religions vary in their name, relatives of the superior orders of intelligences, and often differ in their views with regard to them. Nevertheless, they are all based on the great truth, that there are higher intelligences. The general names among the Greeks and Romans for their intelligences, were gods, goddesses, demi-gods, demons, etc. Hist, they used the same demon in a good sense. We have been accustomed to the Hebrew names. They called all dwellers in the spiritual realms, from the highest to the lowest, spirits; and when they came in communion with mortals, angels. They used epithets to distinguish their characters, and some appellatives and proper names for their office or orders.

We have now in review (hastily), two points of contact between all religions, or rather two principles upon which they all are founded.

31. We will notice only one other point of contact or principle, common to all religions, which is this:

THAT higher orders of beings controll to some extent, or exert influences in a greater or less degree on lower orders. Religions differ, of course, almost infinitely in the details, but the general truth is universally admitted and contended for.

This truth being admitted, it must be carried out consistently. Where is there a missing link in the chain? As physical laws bind all matter into one universe, from the smallest atom to the most ponderous globes; so the principles of truth, right and morality, units all intelligent and moral creatures into one moral and intelligent world, from the highest to the lowest, from the most illumined to the weakest and most darkened.

Heathenism's great defect was, it did not acknowledge this universal law of rights and obligations for all intelligences every where. It saw not the same bill of rights, the same Magna Charta for the high and the low, the strong and the feeble. Hence, their gods or celestial beings, might act upon principles in relation to the children of men, that deprived them of their rights, and poor humanity had no reason or right to complain. Rulers, and the higher classes and the priests, could act upon principles in relation to subjects, the masses and the laity, which would be wrong for them to adopt in their intercourse with each other, and it was all right. Christendom, too, in opposition to the teachings of Christ, adopted this abomination from heathendom, and has relentlessly carried it out. Hence, our privileged classes in church and state, who might do what others had no right to do, and for them it was all just and holy, for these others had no such rights that they were bound to respect. Their will and privileges were the law, and not the universal and eternal principles of right and truth. All this is directly the reverse of what Christ inculcated to Peter, in that much perverted and abused text. "Thou mayest bind on earth whatsoever shall be bound in the heavens, and thou mayest lose on earth whatsoever may be loosed in the heavens." Our translators, by rendering a Greek subjunctive, by the future indicative, have obscured the whole moral force of the text, to my nothing hereafter. Christ declared from Peter's answer to his question, that Peter received truths that no man had taught him. He received them by inspiration from the higher spheres, from his Father in the heavens. And, as a subject of inspiration, he joyfully told him, that whatever shall come from the heavens he might proclaim on earth. He should unite earth to the heavens, by giving heavenly principles and truth to earth. This fully coincides with what we are taught to ask for in that clause of the Lord's prayer, "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as in heaven."

Let heavenly truth illume our minds, and celestial principles raise us above the low, selfish and evil principles of earth.

The preceding makes me want to speak a little on MIRACLES, or I shall not be understood. But some of you say that you do not believe in miracles. Neither do I in the sense of their being violations or suspensions of nature's laws. You all will agree with me, that there have been certain phenomena that have been called miracles, however differently you may regard or explain those phenomena. It is my view of the nature of these that I want to explain.

A miracle is a force through spiritual law directed by intelligence. As to God, with him there can be, strictly speaking, only one eternal miracle. He is infinite activity—ever acting. The only Greek word for miracle, necessary for me now to notice, is dunamis, signifying power, and applicable, as I conceive, more properly to spiritual than physical power. As certain texts give my views exactly, I shall quote a few of them. "For the invisible things of him from the foundation of the world are clearly seen, being apprehended by the things that are made (visible) even his eternal miracle and divine energy." Rom. 1:20. The conclusion of the Lord's prayer is, "For thine is the kingdom, the miracle, and the glory forever," Matt. 6:13. When the Sadducees questioned Jesus—not about a literal resurrection as technically understood—but as to the truth of our spirits entering upon a spiritual existence after death, (which they denied), Jesus answered them, "Ye do err, not knowing the scriptures, nor the miracle of God"—that divine energy which stamps with immortal life everything spiritual, Matt. 22:29. Thus with God, there is only one miracle, infinite, endless.

Other miracles are the direction of spiritual forces by finite intelligences,—often acting on physical substances and our outward senses. Hence Paul taught with regard to our entrance upon that spiritual state—"It is raised in miracle"—that is, we are then in that spiritual sphere, where we are surrounded with, and use more immediately and mostly spiritual forces, as with these bodies, we feel to be surrounded more immediately by the physical, and employ mostly physical forces. So also inspiration is but the influence of mind upon mind without the employment of any physical means, as words, look, or gesture. It is a well established fact, that minds can and do influence minds directly, in accordance with certain spiritual laws, giving them ideas, without using words, for we think in ideas, not words, and often find words but very awkward things to convey clearly and correctly our ideas to others. There are minds also that read the thoughts of other minds. All this is inspiration, whether done by minds in the body or out, or by minds out of the body acting upon minds in the body.

And this is Spiritualism. I am a Spiritualist, and see nothing in all this that militates against Universalism. If any of my Universalist brethren are displeased with me on account of this—and I am happy to say I have found only a few that were—though they may disown me, they will not be able to shake me off. I am determined to stick closer to them than a brother. I am [illegible]

Such miracles, such inspirations have been in the world in all ages and among all nations. And the time never was, and never can come, when the universe will not be, as it ever has been, under the control of the eternal miracle of God. You may perhaps choose to call these spiritual facts by some other name. If so, all right, provided I have conveyed to you correctly my ideas. I care little about names—it is facts, truths that I am after.

In all ages of the world, man has received light, and instruction from the spiritual spheres. I can notice only a few instances among the numerous historical facts. Anaxagoras of Clazomene, though a heathen, and doomed by our orthodox creeds to eternal darkness and pains, was really an inspired person. Born rich, he left his city young, and went to Athens in pursuit of knowledge. But he was soon absorbed in the pursuit of more spiritual knowledge. And when reproved for not taking more interest in the political affairs of his country, he replied,—"My first care is for my country," pointing to heaven. Was he understood? Returning to his native city, he found that his estate had been gobbled up and wasted, upon which he remarked, "To this ruin I owe my real riches,"—his spiritual development and knowledge. But he was diffusing too much light, and, above all, he ridiculed the superstitions of the priests—the Athenians banished him, and he devoted his life to public instruction. When one of his friends attempted to sympathize with him for his banishment, he replied, "It is not I, who have lost the Athenians, but the Athenians have lost me." Being asked, just before his death, if he wished to be carried to his native city for interment, he replied, that it was unnecessary, as the way to the spiritual realm was alike open from every place. [After his death the inhabitants of Lampsacus, who protected and befriended the exile, erected a tomb to his memory on which they inscribed an epitaph, the purport of which was as follows:—Anaxacoras lies within, who, for most of truth, passed the confines of the heavenly world.]

Socrates was his scholar, and we all know that from his early youth, he was accustomed to hear a voice, and was attended by a spirit that he called his demon, (good angel), and also, in the Greek sense, his God; that he obeyed his spiritual monitor; taught without fee or reward to improve his people; and they recompensed him with hemlock and a grave.

Plato, his pupil, was more fortunate. He was thrown into prison twice, and sold into slavery once; and after all, died in quiet in a good old age on his own couch. He too (said he), when I say anything in the public assembly concerning divine things, and predict to them what is going to happen, they ridicule as mad; and although nothing that I have predicted has not turned out to be true, yet they envy all such men as we are. However we ought not to heed them, but pursue our own course."

Yes, to call those Spiritualists mad or hallucinated, whose integrity they care not to assail, is a very handy way to account for spiritual phenomena. We are not alike in the development of our gifts or faculties. If to you is given "the discerning of spirits," and I am blind to this, does it become me to say you are mad? If I can hear their voices spiritually, and you cannot, must you call me hallucinated? More than thirty years ago, when mesmerism arose into notice in the Eastern States, I walked on foot seven miles and back again for several days, on purpose to investigate the phenomenon. How little I thought, while doing this, that I was laying up a treasure in heaven by coming upon the means of connection between the natural and spiritual world. Many years rolled by, and my mother gave me the first information, that she had passed over, in a communication written on a slate with a pencil without physical hands. She passed away about 1 o'clock on Monday A. M. Tuesday evening about 10 o'clock she gave the message signed "Mother;" and the next Friday the letter came informing me of the facts. Call me hallucinated, a fool, or what you will, I will rejoice in my knowledge of spirit intercourse, and that my spirit friends are with me. But this is not for scorners,—this subject is too sacred for them to profane.

I hasten to the point I wanted to present before I closed. As history shows, spirit intercourse was believed in, and enjoyed by the primitive churches, and it was the universal faith of the rural people of all the North of Europe, who enjoyed this communion with their friends gone before. When the church sent missionaries to convert them, they were usually backed by the terror of the sword. Both sides appealed to Spiritualism. The Christians, to confound them, arrogated, that their doctrines and instructions were from God, and angels, spiritual orders of beings from a foreign sphere always disconnected with earth; and, with stern ferocity, ascribed all their communings to the devil and his imps,—a wicked order of beings, called by many frightful names, who never lived on earth, and only sought to diffuse heresy and sin. And, to cap the climax, repudiated the former faith of the church, and denied vehemently that departed friends ever did or ever could return. The struggle was severe, and the church and sword prevailed, and built up an adamantine wall between this and the spiritual world; claimed that none could learn anything of the unseen world, save from them; filled a portion of that world with indescribable horrors and monsters, seized upon children as in league with devils and fiends, tortured and burned them for witches; accused all heretics of witchcraft and leagues with the powers of darkness, and gratified their individual malice, by the most unwarrantable accusations. This storm carried down all before it. After the tenth century, for some four hundred or five hundred years, the church ran riot in cruelties, and held the people down in the most abject terrors. And she did this mainly by denying all communion with friends gone before, proclaiming devils and demons, and such terrors as they chose about the future.

And it seems to me, since Spiritualism has become a scientifically demonstrated fact, that many liberal Christians make a grave mistake by ignoring it. It gives the Orthodox sects the vantage ground, and they know it. They raise the old witchcraft cry, it is devils and evil spirits; this life is the day of grace; we can know nothing of the other world, it is all a matter of faith; endless damnation is in the future, etc. They fear nothing more than the prevalance of this demonstrated truth, for with it crumbles their power and superstitions. It breaks down that wall that they have built up between this world and the other. Spiritualism is doing more to convince unbelievers and skeptics of the immortality of the soul, than all the churches together. I distinctly remember, (for I watched him closely), that when Robert Owen became convinced of the future life, by spirit demonstration, he announced that he was still an atheist; he only believed in human immortality. I thought, we advance only a step at a time, I will patiently wait for your next step. Next he announced his belief in a Supreme Intelligence; and, before his death, that Jesus was a divine teacher. So Dr. Robert Hare, when he became a Spiritualist by scientifically demonstrating its truth, retained still his harsh infidel opinions. I carried on a spirited controversy with him in the Spiritual Telegraph, inoop. for, perhaps, a year and a half. A little while before his death, he told his old friend Judge Edmonds, "I believe in revelation, in a revelation through Jesus of Nazareth." There are classes of minds which the preaching of the churches fails to reach, that Spiritualism does convince of immortality and endless progression.

There is in Spiritualism, as in all systems of philosophy,—much that is theory, as well as demonstration. And all theories are doomed to be gradually changed, as new facts are discovered and demonstrations made. And it would be well to more carefully distinguish between demonstration and theory. Give facts for facts, and theory for theory. Do you embrace Spiritualism with former opinions, or catch up some new theory? Spiritualism is not responsible for those. We should beware not to confound in the minds of those who are listening to us, facts with theories, our opinions with demonstrated truth.

As I am not in the field as a public speaker, and have not been for some years, I did not come here with the view or expectation of addressing you. As it was desired earnestly by some of you, I complied; and may God grant that the interview shall be a benefit to you and a consolation to myself.

LITERARY.

Battles at Home, by Mary G. Darling; Boston: Horace B. Fuller, publisher. Chicago: S. C. Griggs & Co.

This story was first published in Merry's Museum being selected for that purpose by Louisa M. Alcott, author of several of the most popular books for young people ever published. Although written for young folks it will be found entertaining to all. The story extending over 330 pages, is briefly this: An over-worked clergyman leaves his family of four boys, Arthur, Bob, Geoffrey, and Jimmie, while he goes to Europe to gain new strength. Their grandfather, a crusty, wealthy old gentleman, receives them into his family together with an orphan niece Lillie. The little girl has been living with a wealthy aunt in New York, and is vain and selfish, yet she has many good points. Arthur has tastes which lead him into the company of fast young men, and he runs in debt. Bob sells his grandfather's Christmas present to pay Arthur's debts; is cruelly misjudged, but keeps the secret to himself, and finally comes off victor in the battle. Jimmie is a studious, gentle boy. Geoffrey, an inquisitive eager little fellow. The leading characters, Bob and Lillie, are pleasantly and naturally drawn, and the book is spicy and entertaining.

In the World, a sequel to Battles at Home, by the same author and publisher; uniform in size and style.

In the World carries the boys through college, where Bob distinguishes himself in the boat-race between Harvard and Yale, and we see them fairly in the world. Arthur becomes the elegant young man in society, and keeps up his expensive tastes. Geoffrey becomes a sailor, and is thought to have been lost at sea, but arrives safely at last. Jimmie is the same quiet student. Lillie a New York belle, but she forsakes her frivolous life for the straightforward, noble-hearted Bob. The books will be great favorites with the young folks, and we should be happy to see them in the libraries of our children's progressive lyceums.

CHARLES H READ.

Letter from R. E. Lake.

BRO. JONES:—Chas. H. Read gave a seance here last evening. Odd Fellows Hall was crowded to excess, and Mr. Read gave the best of satisfaction.

He gives another seance to-night, and I think the hall will hardly contain the people. He is doing a grand work; and it is a great pity that we do not have more mediums that can give as good satisfaction as Mr. Read does. We think there that he is the best physical medium in the world. He can not be excelled.

Westville, Ind., June 14th, 1871.

Mr. Read is giving the very best of satisfaction wherever he goes. He gave two seances at St. Charles, Ill., last Saturday and Sunday evenings.—ED. JOURNAL.

Reported expressly for the JOURNAL.

DECATUR CONVENTION.

Pursuant to the call, the Grand Mass Convention of the Northwestern Speakers' Fraternity, and the friends of liberal or free religion, met in the Opera Hall, at Decatur, Ill., on Friday, June 9th, at 10 o'clock A. M.

But few speakers were present, some not having arrived. The meeting was called to order, and proceeded to elect the officers of the day as follows:

Hiram Brown, Pres.; B. H. Righter, Vice Pres.; P. S. Riplogle, Sec.; W. H. Stevens, Ass't Sec. Business Committee: Dr. Sprague, J. S. Barney, J. Snarr, Mrs. Addie L. Ballou, Mrs. M. J. Wilcoxson.

The convention was opened by Mrs. Wilcoxson, who briefly but clearly stated the objects of the Speakers' Fraternity, and then read the following letter from Dr. B. S. Brown, the Chairman of the Councelling Committee:

MR. BENJAMIN H. RIGHTER—Dear Sir: It gives me pleasure to know your society are so active and hearty in the work of getting up the convention, and under the influences you have given, I have no doubt the Decatur Convention will be one of the most useful ever held.

I say "your getting up the convention," for notwithstanding I called it and others sanctioned the call, yet a good convention is made by the people where it is held to a much greater extent than is generally acknowledged.

The past conventions have proved a success by the living inspirations of Mrs. M. J. Wilcoxson, to a great extent, and I wish her put at the head of the committee to call the next one. She understands the objects of these gatherings better than any other one.

My opinion is that we should finally establish the church of humanity; that is, a church that will always plead with the government for the education and humane treatment of criminals, and the protection of society by the mildest punishment of offenders that will answer the purpose. In short, we should never ask for harsh laws to punish any one, as do the other religious churches. This I conceive to be one of the first duties of any church found in this age of reason. Bulls of vengeance and resolutions to get power to punish people by laws of man, should die with Christian churches; and that they will soon do is the prayer of yours for the Church of Humanity, established by the angels of heaven among the people of earth.

H. S. BROWN, M. D.

564 Milwaukee street, Milwaukee, Wis.

She then read a letter from E. V. Wilson addressed to the convention, as follows:

To the Brothers and Sisters in Convention Assembled, in Decatur, Ill.:

Greetings I send you from the green prairies of Indiana. I wish you Godspeed in all good work, and am with you in truth and in spirit, and regret I cannot be with you in person.

In your council be cool and just. In seeking a practical and scientific religion do not lose sight of the soul's emotional or love element. In calling for homes for superannuated speakers and mediums, be careful that you put the matter correctly before the public. In considering the various capacities of speakers and mediums, and the fields of labor, as well as compensation, avoid, the blunder made by the Mass Speakers Club or Association, of fixing a stipulated sum as pay for lectures and the services of mediums. Let the subject of settled speakers alone.

Reprobate evil, but deal gently with the wrong-doer. Remember that Jesus came not to the righteous, but to the wicked, and, came into the world in a stable, and left it in the company of thieves. Deal gently with the mediums. Remember that charity covereth a multitude of sins.

And now, brothers and sisters, in the name of the angels, and our co-laborers that have preceded us, work for humanity that our future may be brighter than our past. And in conclusion may I suggest the following subjects for your consideration:

1st, The purchase of a home for superannuated speakers and mediums, to be governed by trustees.

2d, A common school system of Spiritual education.

3d, The best method of developing reliable mediums for mental and physical phenomena.

4th, The science of Spiritualism.

5th, The emotional and affectional in Spiritualism.

6th, Urge upon all Spiritualists to patronize our papers; we need all the papers we have, and more.

7th, Let us throw off all applications, acceptances, and endorsements of any and all associations, with any liberal or discrete theology or doctrinal points that do not directly endorse, accept and advocate spirit influence, communication, contr l and testimony; for "should not a people seek unto their God for the living to the dead to the law and the testimony."

May a great cloud of witnesses gather around you. May you be led in wisdom to a righteous legislation, and your councils fully approved of the angel world and our brethren and sisters everywhere.

Remember the wanderers of our faith, in all parts of the world. Ask as one mind the noble phalanx of advanced brethren who have preceded us, to be with us in all we do.

Remember me for the testimony I bear of Spiritualism, as I remember you the workers in our cause, and when we meet in our First Convention in the Summer Land, we shall look back with joy to these reunions of this world, and feel that it was good for us to be together.

Truly yours,

E. V. WILSON.

A proposition was made to take up the business of the Speaker's Fraternity in the afternoon, as well as the consideration of objects named by E. V. Wilson.

A little time being left before adjournment of morning session, Dr. Underhill said:

"We are not to condemn others because their opinions are not as ours. Suppose a man of the Mohammedan faith should come to this country, would he not think the orthodox Christians foolish in their manner of worship? A Catholic priest was going to forgive the sins of a sick young man, who refused, and being told that he would go to hell, replied he wished to go there as all great men had gone there. Lincoln, Dickens, Paine, and those men who could not accept the dogmas of the church, were all infidels, and were sent to hell by these Christian priests. But these priests do not pour out their boiling hell-fire and brimstone as they used to, for they know the people are advancing—they know they will not receive it,—and so they and other preachers are stealing our thunder. They are working into their sermons a little more of the spirit of the age, and these spiritual ideas are becoming conspicuous in their literature. The world is progressing, and people will not sit under such preaching as they used to."

Dr. Sprague followed. He did not expect a man to believe as he did unless he has the evidence. There are many beautiful things in theology, but when we consider Spiritualism, we find it far in advance of theology.

Pursuant to report of Business Committee, the meeting adjourned till 2, P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Meeting called to order by the Chair.

Dr. Underhill spoke at considerable length on his experiences, Magnetism, Spiritualism, etc.

Dr. Sprague followed. Related his practice of psychology in making converts to the Methodist faith. He had cast the Holy Ghost out of a woman by putting his powers upon certain organs of the brain. He attempted to show that conversion was thus produced, as he had converted 2,700 people.

Mrs. Wilcoxson rose to a point of order, and earnestly plead the special objects of the call, and the order of the day. The intention was to transact business, and not to discuss magnetism or psychology; let all such questions go till another time; the time for business was being consumed, etc. They had all heard the objects of the call, and supposed that they already understood that it was for the protection of mediums and speakers,—and then to open the meeting for the co-operation of all who would assist in the cause of human freedom. We are much like the ministers of the primitive churches, as, for instance, the itinerants of the Methodist Church, who went over the country leaving all behind them—leaving the joys of home to preach to the people; and again, many had actually been driven from their homes, cast off by their nearest and dearest families, and feeling of the mission which had fallen upon them. She knew of more than one of those proscribed ones to be there in the convention. As for a "home in the hands of trustees," she had no faith in the movement in the present. There was something seductive in the touch of money. Especially when you begin to talk about collecting a sum of money sufficient for such an institution, and putting it into the hands of trustees, she could not think it well. We had seen too much of this collecting money out of the pockets of the people, which never was heard from,—as, for instance, look at the default in the Methodist Book Concern, and other institutions. And yet, as Spiritualists, had seen something of this temptation to appropriate funds in our own organizations. What we want we want now. Our mediums, our faithful workers, are failing often from hardship, and need a temporary rest. What we do must be done at once. In time, when the world knows us by our fidelity to the cause of truth and humanity, they will come to the rescue, and such men as Robert Barnes will build us a home, and bind the conditions of the will so firmly that no one shall run away with or spend the money otherwise than for the purpose intended.

She also made a zealous appeal to the liberalminded to awaken to the great peril that threatened our civil liberties in the attempt by the orthodox alliance to put "God in the Constitution," with their peculiar dogmas as a law for the people to be ruled by.

Mrs. J. M. Tefft remarked that they had many good places where the friends were kind and loved to have speakers with them; but they could not get out an audience or pay the prices speakers demanded.

Mrs. W. said, advertise for a circus or trapeze and they could get an audience.

Mrs. Ballou related the annoyances of mediums, and the impossibility of recuperating when they expected them constantly to give tests. We could not rest. We want a change when we are thus worn down by labor—a relief—a rest from that which is wearing us out. We want to breathe the fresh air, enjoy a release, and be free from this curiosity, etc. She continued her remarks at some length, in reference to the superstition of the age, which banished mediums from home and relatives, in consequence of their religious opinions; and referred to the relic of barbarism which exists in the nineteenth century, and which developed itself in Chicago through the influence of the Chicago Tribune, in the suit against mediums for practicing their healing powers and their gifts of clairvoyance.

She made a touching appeal for her children—wanted them to be educated; must be enabled to support herself and take care of her children. Those who had spoken "did not want homes for themselves, but others." She knew speakers could not live on air; they must have money as well as others; they had duties and obligations which must be met.

Mrs. W., having noticed the allusion to speakers' prices, said she did not exact a fixed price, but when able to do so always did her share of missionary work; that she had paid for halls, and all local expenses, running her own risk, to give these missionary labors.

Dr. Underhill stated that he knew of a man who had a million of dollars to use for the protection of mediums, and made other interesting remarks.

Dr. Sprague and others also made remarks and inquiries, when the meeting on motion adjourned till 7½ P. M.

EVENING SESSION.

Meeting called to order by the Chairman, who stated that the evening's exercise would consist of short addresses by different speakers.

Dr. Underhill recited a poem on "The True Preachers." He said, if Spiritualism is true, it will be of untold interest to the church. Tell a man a spiritual story, and he will reject it, unless he knows that it has been copied from the Bible.

He very ably compared the Bible and the position of orthodox believers with the truths of science and the philosophy of Spiritualism.

Rev. E. Sprague, of Brownsville, Neb., was next introduced, and discussed the question, "Why has Spiritualism come into the world?"

Mr. Levi Dinkelspiel, a Jewish lawyer, gave his experience as a Spiritualist, stating that one year ago, preaching his profession, some of his friends were holding circles, through which he became interested in this new religion, and adopted it as his faith. He stated that at the first circle he ever attended, he was very much frightened, and jumped through a window in order to get home. He went into circles for three months after that, and was not willing to acknowledge spirit communion, until his deceased mother appeared to him and told him of that future existence. Thenceforward he was a firm believer in spirit communion and braved the persecution of relations and friends who have driven him from them because he had manhood to openly avow what he believed was true.

The Convention then closed with music by the choir, to meet at half past nine o'clock next forenoon.

SATURDAY MORNING SESSION.

The business of the Speaker's Fraternity having been disposed of, the meeting was called to order by Vice President B. H. Righter.

Fifteen minutes' time was allotted to each speaker.

A few remarks were made by Dr. Underhill. J. D. Stoddard, while under spirit control, gave some encouraging words to the audience, admonishing them to go on in their good cause.

Dr. Stephens read a short address in favor of free thought as the birthright of man, and proposing as the basis of an organization in which all men could work for humanity, and not be bound by creeds, the sentiment of "Love to God and Love to Man."

Dr. Hull and others having been added to the Committee, a Committee on Resolutions was appointed, as follows: D. W. Hull, Mrs. WILCOXSON, L. Dinkelspiel, Dr. Stephens, and Dr. Brackett.

Also Committe on Finance, as follows: E. O. Smith, G. Heyworth and J. Snarr.

Mrs. A. L. Ballou read a letter of encouragement and co-operation from Moses Hull:

Fellow Laborers, one and all:—I send you kindly greeting. Would that I could be with you, but my body is forced by circumstances to be elsewhere. My spirit will be there at least a part of the time.

No one feels more sensibly than myself, the importance of the work before us. The Young Men's Christian Association set a trap for me, but were not fortunate enough to catch me. They are at the bottom of the movement against speakers and mediums, as well as the work of trying to make a National God. Let us be on the alert, or they are wily.

Our Association's Mass Conventions, and everything of the kind, should serve to bind us together. Let us drop all little personalities, and present one solid, formidable front to the adversaries.

Yours in warfare and peace, until called from the field of battle to wear the victor's crown.

MOSES HULL.

Mrs. Wilcoxson read letters from Dr. Brown and E. V. Wilson, and a motion was made to discuss certain questions he had proposed;

Dr. Underhill thought we had a school already—thought we were educating our children as fast as we can. Did not believe in separating our children from their parents, and send them away to a Spiritualist school, where they are made a mark, and ostracised by the religious world. We should spread abroad the truths of Spiritualism as fast as we can—but to put our children into a Spiritualist school, would not benefit them. Our schools have made great improvement, and are improving constantly.

Fannie Wright said, The school-house is the only green spot left to the children.

Mr. Dinkelspiel did not think exactly as his predecessor did. We all know that we live in a "free country," and have "free schools," and a free education, but we all know, too, that the orthodox influence is brought to bear strongly upon our free schools. We want our children educated to think, to act for themselves. Do our children have this plan of education? No. We want our children educated for men and women. I think our children should be taught to think for themselves. It is due to Spiritualists to lift up their voices, to insist upon a republican system of education. The Bible and the different creeds are brought into our schools. The welfare of this country, and the destiny of the rising generation, hinge largely upon this question, one of vital interest.

D. W. Hull said, Our system of common school education was originally based upon liberal principles, but had not become perfect. He opposed anything sectarian in these schools. Spiritualism will work its way into the hearts of the rising generation, when men and women professing to be Spiritualists, learn to live right; when they become positive, and strong in principle, and give to the child, first a good organization and home influences. Would not vote for party, for when you vote for party, you vote for creed and caste.

Mrs. A. L. Ballou said: Spiritualists have not had the same rights conceded them as others have. They are not anywhere granted the rights of the orthodox world.

Made remarks upon Robert Barnes' will, giving details.

After this discussion, the questions given by E. V. Wilson, were submitted to the Committee on Resolutions.

Convention adjourned till 2 o'clock P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The following resolutions were presented by the Committee on Resolutions, and adopted by a unanimous vote:

WHEREAS, An effort is now being made by various religious denominations to form an Evangelical Alliance for the purposes announced by Dr. Allen, viz.: To gain increased power and authority over the minds of the people, and the rising generation, and by religious threatdom and monopoly, subvert the original intention of our national charter and the priceless inheritance of civil and religious liberty, deeded to us by our fathers; therefore,

Resolved, That we will with voice, pen, and ballot, oppose such destruction of our constitutional rights, and do protest against the introduction of any clause into our Constitution which can lead to a union of Church and State.

Resolved, That crime is the result of the inherited passions of our ignorant ancestors and the lack of proper education in the present systems of society—that the Christian religion of the orthodox churches is no guarantee against crime, as it still insists upon murdering men by the rope in addition to its decrees of future punishment, and insane such as it does not practically recognize the humane teachings of the Nazarene, but discards them and insists upon the efficacy of blind belief and mere form.

Resolved, That the building up and supporting of any costly, luxurious temples and churches, engenders dangerous destructions in society, creeds and aristocracies, which is fatal to true democracy, and is subversive of the principles of universal justice and humanity. That it diverts large sums of money from the support of the laboring classes, increases the non-producing element in society by increasing a fat and salaried priesthood, as witnessed in the Roman Catholic church, established church of England, and the Greek and Mohammedan churches. It makes serfs and subjects and martyrs of the people, claims a temporal sovereignty of the earth, a sure slavery to the laboring and producing classes, pays no revenue to the government, claims, as an ecclesiastical body, exemption from all civil courts and trials by jury; claims office and the public funds; the regulation of our schools and universal law, and in fact the undisputed right to sit in the free thought of the people. It builds up a false and fraudulent morality, by accepting such practices as are not founded on republican principles, and instead of saving men in the sovereignty and strength of a liberated manhood, it chains them to the dogmas and decrees of and tyrannical priesthood. It has never founded a government on the true liberty of the Gospel, but it has defamed, ostracised, and foully misrepresented the cause of free thought, and those immortal heroes who gave to all nations and creeds of men the right to worship according to the dictates of the conscience,—Paine, Hamilton, Franklin, and those noble compatriots who now sit in the congress of our ascended heroes and martyrs.

Resolved, That Spiritualism has awakened more investigation in the last year than for several years before.

Resolved, That the wonderful increase of good mediums to meet the increased demand for light gives us much joy.

Resolved, That the progress of this cause is promoted by good mediums, and means for their growth and development should be encouraged.

Resolved, That we rejoice in the common school system of our land, and will labor to extend its usefulness by keeping it free from sectarianism, so that no one can complain thereof. That he who would intrude his religion upon our free schools, violates the spirit as well as the letter of our laws, and is guilty of an act of injustice and intolerance.

Resolved, That the recent effort to suppress Spiritualism by the arresting of mediums, and menacing our public speakers, only encourages us in renewing our efforts to its propagation.

Resolved, That our thanks are due those noble souls, Editors of the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL, Dr. Dake and others, who have come to the rescue of healers from persecution by law, in Illinois, Michigan, and Wisconsin, by preventing the passage of the infamous bill to protect empiricism called the Medical Bill.

Animated discussions were engaged in for a considerable time by Dr. Briggs, D. W. Hull, Dr. Underhill, Mrs. A. L. Ballou, Dr. Brackett, Mrs. Wilcoxson, Mrs. Tefft, and others, showing the life energy and purpose of the Convention.

Mrs Tefft said: the work of the angels is to individual se us; each should work in his own individual capacity.

Dr Brackett urged the cultivation of charity —all men are more or less honest in their labors, but do not comprehend the law of charity.

D. W. Hull made some playful, rather earnest remarks upon the "Reverend," attached to the ministerial character, which caused a little flutter with some weak-kneed representatives or worshipers of a sacred prefix, as was afterward discovered. Bro. Hull showed a little too much of the Luther, and the "barefooted Friar" in having confronted the Protestant Vatican by his own accession, to please the strait-coated gentry of the clerical order.

Rev. Mr. Briggs made very forcible remarks in harmony with the objects of the meeting. He spoke earnestly upon the origin of our American religion, how at the beginning of the American colonies, the aristocracy of the European priesthood was transported across the waters, and men fled from religious tyranny, and from priests and kings to become little priests, little kings, and little lords on this side of the water. Spoke eloquently upon the course of this new theocracy when it had gained a little power, in the Puritan persecution. Our government was created for the purpose of giving religious liberty to all classes of citizens, and to prevent the oppression and intolerance of the favored class. Efforts had been made before by different parties, to wrest from the people their rights—those efforts had failed; the present effort is made with the utmost shrewdness and sagacity. Spoke of the controversy commencing with the "Bible in the common schools." The Roman Catholics are at the bottom of all this movement. Truths of science are taught in our common schools, and our text literature. These truths are considered heresy by the Catholic church. Books that teach anything contrary to the Catholic creed are offensive to them, denounced as dangerous and heretical, and they would suppress them the moment they had the power. Mr. thought Spiritualists were too much divided, isolated, etc., could not or would not work together. What were going to do? We may talk, that does not change anything. How shall we unite? We are no organization—there is no unity as long we remain thus divided.

EVENING SESSION.

Convention met pursuant to adjournment, and called to order at 7:30. Thirty minutes time was allotted to each speaker.

Mr. Brown, Chairman, presented the complaint of some person or persons, not giving names, that the clergy had been abused in certain remarks made on the Reverend. Of course it took a Reverend to reply, and who could do it better? D. W. Hull was on his feet, and let loose his unchained tongue in a pleasant but effective manner. He did not deny that ministers as well as other human beings, were given to human frailty—they were, a portion of them, dishonest, etc., but he did not apply his remarks to any one in particular.

Mrs. Wilcoxson said our platform is free; all have been invited to it, and why should not our Christian ministers avail themselves of it? Is it not their duty to meet us honorably? As public teachers professing to save the world, we have a right to demand it of them; if anything is said unworthy of our cause, let them come here and rebuke us in the spirit of true fellowship; but I say, when a man comes to this convention, refuses our invitation, refuses to meet us fairly and honorably, and then slides out upon the street to misconstrue and misrepresent our language and our objects, he proves himself guilty of dishonesty and moral cowardice. He advertises his own sin. He carries his own bundle of cowardice out to the world, and will be known by it. We have such ministers come to hear us, but she would not by any means deny the existence of good and true souls among the clergy.

Mrs. A. L. Ballou spoke upon the tenderness manifested by complainants, and referred to the playful remarks of the Reverends, upon the platform, which proved the position of the wounded party.

The programme for to-morrow was read by the Chairman of the Business Committee.

Dr. Underhill delivered an address on mesmerism and clairvoyance, showing how they and Spiritualism were connected.

E. W. Huntington, of Charleston, was called to the stand, and remarked that he had never seen any spiritual manifestations, but that he could not see why he should not believe modern manifestations that he read of in the spiritual papers, as well as the manifestations recorded in the Bible.

D. W. Hull made a few remarks on the 8th chapter of Romans.

Mr. Stoddard, while under control, made a few eloquent remarks.

Adjourned until 9:30 A. M., Sunday.

SUNDAY MORNING SESSION.

Convention opened with conference, and short speeches by Dr. Underhill, D. W. Hull, Dr. Brackett, Dr. McFarland, Mr. Johnson and others.

At the hour appointed, Rev. Mr. Briggs delivered an able discourse, which it is hoped may be obtained for publication in the JOURNAL, entire. He eloquently and nobly defended the gospel of humanity and his belief in Spiritualism, and proved the worth of that liberated manhood which plants itself far above the petty distinctions of creeds and party. But no broken or detatched report can do justice to the merits of the discourse.

By special request, Mrs. Wilcoxson followed him. While listening to the discourse of her predecessor, she had felt animated with a deep joy, in the fact that we have such ministers who are not so attached to the title of Reverend as to yield up great truths. She was glad we have made our platform as free as we have.

"We are not trying to build up a sect, but we are working for humanity. If any one desired her to take back what she had said last evening, she had no intention of doing so. No! I believe in charity, and that we should cultivate kindness, and be careful in our speech, and strive to work in harmony with our angel teachers; but I repeat that any one refusing to fellowship with us in liberal convention, who stands back in this hour of our country's need, when so much falls upon the shoulders of all true teachers, and stoops to misconstrue our words, and peddle these misrepresentations outside to injure our cause and provoke discord, is not worthy the name of Christian, but is dishonest, and a moral coward. [Applause.] I want to drive the nails into this platform, and clinch them with an eternal purpose in the name of truth and humanity. And I say, as long as my weak body serves me, as long as my mortal life continues, as long as the angels reach to me their strong claspings in the great and noble work of freedom, I pledge everything, my life, my all, to this great and holy cause." [Applause.] I consider human titles and distinctions of no account. I have no respect for names. I consider the Reverends like the ruffles of the bishop and the robes of the priest, an artificial and superficial thing—a mere covering. But I am a Reverend, and others of us, and hold our titles by just as good a legal claim as any one, and though I have no respect for it, I am going to keep it for my own use, too. I intend it shall serve me, and we will have the same privileges that other clergymen have. Our object is to harmonize the world. I have great regard for the sentiments of those who differ from me, for we have not yet outgrown the effects of former education. How I love this platform, where the dear old man who is tottering on the verge of mortal life, may come to express his sentiments, and unbosom his soul, and tell us his honest convictions, and his hope for the higher life; and when the young brother, the noble boy, came forward upon this platform to pour out his testimony of love and reverence for that departed father, his strong, deep, yearning love for his dear mother, and told how deeply he felt it, told more than all! While I sat listening to our Reverend Brother, I beheld, in vision, the climbing over the mountains just above this hall. There, looking down upon us, were throngs of beautiful beings, our dear departed and glorified ones, looking down upon us, with happy, joyful faces. Dashing down the green, mossy descent, came a stream of clear, transparent water, and falling into a fountain, the spray came pouring over upon the audience, and then I knew that a new power should go forth from this meeting to bless the world. This, our brother, has stepped forward, and nobly given his testimony. He was not hurt by any remarks of last evening. When people are so easily hurt, there must be something rotten at the core. I propose to use the Reverend in a good cause. We should study to use the kindler forms of expression. Our position is invincible. People can not understand how we love the great cause which we have avowed. The first lesson is to begin to deal justly, to treat all men alike. We insist that we shall have the same right of way across the great ocean of life that others have. The farmer, the artisan, the scavenger, are all men. We are bound to respect their rights.

"All are alike needed—alike useful. The scavenger cleans away the filth and rubbish, and we cannot afford to lose him. He promotes the health of the community; he is our brother; he is a man.

"We are bound to respect all, and insist upon equal rights. Every one has something to do and some good to give us. Let us have unity.

"If that building were on fire, and a family exposed, and dear little children were about to be consumed, you would all forget your denominational differences and rush to the rescue as one man.

"Men are better than we think for. [A voice, "That's so."] Only let us leave these dissentions and work in a common cause. Discord and inharmony are the bane of society.

The Protestants are looked upon by the Catholics as 'going to pieces.' Father Hecker says:

"It is not a question now, whether Catholicism will rule America, but the question is how soon?'

'Spiritualism has come to the world to lead us to live better and nobler lives, and thus prepare us for the inevitable conflict which is to come upon this country. Be prepared for it. When a tax is imposed upon every square foot of ground you possess; when this power goes into your homes and takes possession there, you will awake to this terrible truth, and I appeal to you to stand by our glorious principles of freedom, and be true to your country. One gentleman asked, "How can we unite, being so divided? I will answer you. We will unite and vote for man, not for aristocrats and leeches who are sucking the very life out of society. O my brothers, be true! I can not vote—but I will stand beside you in this great work of redemption, and if my feeble frame will last me, I will go through the land, and with my earnest voice, I will use my influence as a woman, and exchange the vote of this cause for the side of justice and universal liberty." [Continued applause.]

Mrs. J. M. Tefft, of Atlanta, Ill., and D. W. Hull were appointed to fill vacancies on the Councelling Committee of the North Western Speakers Fraternity.

B. H. Righter, Vice President of Committee, who is a very promising young trance speaker, arose and closed the meeting in a most touching and eloquent invocation, and the meeting adjourned till 2 P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Convention was called to order by the Vice President, and Levi Dinkelspiel, a young lawyer of this city, who has just been disinherited by his family for his noble adherence to the truths of Spiritualism, delivered an eloquent discourse upon Fellowship and Fraternity. He urged the claims of truth, justice and love to the race, in a manner that we can not do justice to with the pen. "I stand up in my manhood and say, who has just as much fear, my opinions." It is good to see such men on our platform.

Mrs. Wilcoxson was again called to the stand, and spoke for some little time upon the current evils of the day which are patronized by our government, and permitted by our people, etc.

Adjourned till 7½ P. M.

EVENING SESSION.

Convention opened by B. H. Righter.

Mrs. Baker, of Chicago, spoke at some length upon the importance of the Children's Lyceum, and plead the proper cultivation of the youthful mind, as the children of to-day are to be the men and women of the future. Her remarks were very interesting, and added a pleasing feature to the work of the occasion. She closed by introducing the Lyceum Banner.

D. W. Hull gave one of his Bible expositions, in which he showed most learnedly the inconsistences of the orthodox interpretation, and the manner in which it has been warped from the plain intent of language.

Mrs. Ballou followed, describing a few spirits, among them Henry C. Wright, our risen co-laborer, and made some lengthy remarks, taking for her theme, "The Prodigal Son."

Mrs. Wilcoxson made a touching and earnest appeal to the young of her own sex, to avoid the follies of the day, and give their lives to noble and generous deeds.

The following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That our unanimous thanks are due the city press, and particularly the Magnet, for the liberality and kindness shown us in publishing the proceedings of this convention.

Resolved, That we extend our heartfelt thanks to the Spiritualists of Decatur for their kindness and hospitality in entertaining us during our stay at this place.

Resolved, That our thanks are due the owner of the hall, Mr. E. O. Smith, for his kindness in tendering to us the use of it.

Resolved, That the thanks of the convention be given to the Society of Decatur for the kind request that we meet here again another year.

A quartette enlivened the sessions with a selection of soul-stirring music, which added to the harmony of the assembly and the enjoyment of all.

At last our Convention has closed, proving a most successful one. The large Opera Hall was filled with the representatives of all religious denominations, apparently thirsting for spiritual food—and the first attempt at inaugurating our liberal alliance, looks most auspicious for the future.

Convention adjourned sine die.

P. S. REPLOGLE, Sec.

Letter from J. Russell Robinson.

BROTHER JONES: I hope you'll not fool yourself with the idea that I'm endeavoring to splash your editoriality with "soft-soap," when I tell you the JOURNAL is ascending to a gratifying standard of interest to all its readers. It begins to be decidedly manifest now, that "the Campbells are coming" unmistakably to the recognition of the most stupid intellects in our midst. It raises in us old wheel-horses of investigation of its manifestations, or pioneers, an impulse of exultation and joy at the grand strides that it is making, in all its departments, in the thought-world. The last three or four numbers are decidedly rich with manifestations of spirit power.

But really the Bangs manifestations nearly bangs out of countenance all precedentials. They used to come and help my dear old wife do her washing without fatigue, but never did any cooking. That is indeed superior to any show reported of D. D. Home, for in the Bangs case was combined with all practical housekeeping, while awfuldowy cries out, "What devil-ish doings!"

But let us rejoice that the "Campbells are actually coming" to us all.

I'm sometimes tempted, Brother Jones, to write you personally, and criticize some of the ebullitions of attempted science and philosophy that well up and bubble in the columns of the JOURNAL occasionally, for the reason—as you've said in one of your private communications to me—that the mass of minds require food less difficult of mental digestion at present

The principal object now is to convince the intellect of the communion of the two conditions of mentality, till that conviction supercedes the intellectual world upon this our planet. By that time—and it won't take long, by the way they're banging it into the heads of the people at Sister Bangs' and other localities, —the mind of man will be ready to investigate a new order of existence, that awaits development whenever mind is prepared for it by this very intercourse.

The guardian angels of our planet stand ready to take us in hand, and disclose to mind the positive and negative principles that underlie and develop all organic existence; and these guardians have already organized among us the grand germ of the new unfoldment of the true science and philosophy of all being, unfolding to us the cause that produces all effects.

The physical-mental order of mind upon our planet has culminated, and is ripe for the metaphysical science of soul-development, or laws of the inner-life unfoldings,—the development of self-existent, eternal principles.

Understand me: every organism in existence —from the great elementary system of all systems, down to the tiniest—is the result of an unfolded principle in its own special identical form, which has stood as such in the elements of life from eternity, and will immutably stand as such principle to eternity. Its work is to bring all elements into the divine order of its own self, for these principles are the primary, innate properties and qualities of all elements; hence, for e. g.: the dog-principle could never organize the man,—it takes the man-principle to do that. The dog may eat and convert the man-elements into the tissues of his own material organism; but it can't convert it into its native eternal principle—for there's an immutable gulf between the two. It writes itself, "Your Interior Guide," and signs at the end of its communications, "Wisdom."

Four years ago, through Mr. D. Corless, I was requested to fit a sciential subject they were going to give through his organism for the press. I objected, saying my hand had become so shaky. I could'nt write legibly any more. They then said, "Brother, will you permit us to assist you?"

I answered, "Of course I will." So I was requested to take the pen, and did it, when I felt my hand move, as it were, automatically, and write in the present style. My children and correspondents remark it as a wonder, and, say it's a better hand than I ever previously wrote; and I'm of that opinion myself, and hope by it to disclose through the columns of your useful journal a great many hidden secrets involved in life's unfoldings, during my brief sojourn upon this planet.

I'll take the responsibility of saying here, that error most egregiously abounds throughout all the science and philosophy of "spiritdom," in both conditions of it.

We shall, from time to time, offer contributions on the science and philosophy of being, founded upon the development of self-existent, eternal, positive and negative unfolding divine principles—a ground none seem to recognize, hence, in their researches after a "god," they have no legitimate starting-post.

I give all minds desirous to acquire, and who aspire to a knowledge of "God," as connected with the laws of being, fair warning that these laws are to be learned after the mode of learning the science and philosophy of the laws of literature, or, indeed, any other of the sciences, such as geography, grammar, chemistry, etc. Each and all have their fundamentals, by which their elements are reduced to the order of truth in the mind. How would we succeed in learning to read without the elementary principles of literature, and the science and philosophy of the laws of organizing it into syllables, words, sentences and discourses? Talk you this can be done with this great science of life's unfolding, and show your positions founded upon clear, certain and axiomatic demonstrations of principles by their development.

True religion spreads all over a man's life, forward and outward, too; it goes up to the tallest heights of the philosopher's speculations, down to the lowest depths of human consciousness; it reaches to the minute details of our daily practice.—Theodore Parker.

Letter from Detroit, Mich

BROTHER JONES—Dear Sir: The JOURNAL of this week (No. 12) has one article of great value—the closing of the "Brinkley College Mystery," in which the little girl Clara is proved to be truthful, while her persecutors are overwhelmed with shame.

The jar, when opened, contained articles of great value as she had predicted. It is clearly proved that the jar had been in its hiding place for a long time, and that Clara had all her knowledge and divination about it from spirit intelligence.

The correspondence connected with it is rich, —especially that of Miss Boone, J. D Merideth, and an "anonymous" sneak, who wrote wisely, only to be confounded by subsequent facts. They made a brave attempt to browbeat and sweep down the clairvoyant statements of Miss Clara Robertson, by mean insinuations and ridicule.

That brave anonymous writer in the Memphis Appeal (March 6th) must be in market very cheap now;—I mean the one whose dear wife drew so heavily on the market for "Dover's powders." It was a lucky incident in his domestic life, that the market supply was equal to the emergency, or he might have hurled eternal anathemas upon the apothecary, and went mourning up and down the doleful streets of Memphis, "Thou art lost to me forever; I have lost thee my dear," —all "on account of not having divers Dover's powders." The scene would have been heart-rending, especially for the "pink infant," if any had been so unfortunate as to survive the lack of Dover's powders. What a brilliant job they made of it, in the attempt to laugh, ridicule, brow-beat, and sneer down the assertions of Clara Robertson! How zealous they were in killing a heresy! But might undermine their profound wisdom and peradventure wash the sandy foundations from their creeds! But how perfectly reckless of truth and fair dealing in mean insinuations against Clara and others, were they in their bigoted zeal! Where can they hide their heads or conceal their shame from the light of subsequent facts?

I venture to predict that in the next "Brinkley College" excitement, the persecutors of Clara Robertson will not become the first volunteers to exhibit before the gaze of an admiring public as the champion of bigots and ignoramuses of Memphis, nor will they be the gallant and chivalrous knights to first show the brightness of their armor in a heroic raid to discredit and crush an innocent and truthful young girl.

They ought to make a public apology to Clara, but they won't do it, and probably may set their wits at work to show that they are not floundering in the worst kind of confusion and muddying flat on their backs.

Amends Honorable.

Since writing you about "Missionary Experiences," in which I reviewed a young man for his onslaught against Spiritualists, I recently, by invitation, had occasion to visit Bucobel again with another lecture. This place is open now for mediumistic work. The inquiry is earnest to know if these things are so. As well might we think of having a literary education without the alphabet, as success in our spiritual gospels without the manifestations "through media."

My friend above mentioned, finding the candid portion of the community there severly criticized his course, and that his attack was unprovoked and unwarranted, and discreditable to moral character, has been conscientiously quickened to reflection. He voluntarily sought me, and made a handsome apology, at the same time expressing a wish to be more self-possessed, a searcher after truth and spiritually minded. Better is it to forsake a dangerous path than to follow in it from mere willfulness. This repentant feeling is assurance of a susceptibility to brighter impulses than before evinced. I am so happy to mention this, after the publication of my article, and hope my former views, though severe, can be interpreted only in the light intended—love in criticism, reform in rebuke, forgiveness in counsel—I would not cause unhealthful grief for anything. I rejoice not in iniquity, but rejoice in the truth.

Our talk was pleasant and generous, and if that impulsive onslaught, so reactionary upon him, has a tendency to evoke a study into the laws of spiritual harmony, and thence a mediumistic growth, as conditions indicate, I, too have reason to thank God and take courage. How beautiful is justice tempered with love!

J. O. BARRETT.

Glen Beulah, Wis., June, 1871.

Letter from Mrs. S. T. Kinnaman.

BRO. JONES:—I have had the pleasure of reading your very excellent paper, the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL, now for some time. I feel as though it would be next to impossible for me to give it up, for I feel as though every copy of it was a message from the next world, to welcome me and guide me on my lone way. I have never paid you for but six months of it yet, and am sorry to say I have not got the money to send you now for it. I am a widow, with a family of six children to provide for, and have been seeing some pretty hard times. If you think proper to do so, you can withhold the paper until I am able to pay for it, though it will be very hard for me to do without it.

As a friend that I can rely upon, I will ask you if there is a good manual labor school in your place, or any where near. I am thinking very much of selling every thing I have next fall, and taking my children to such a school, if I can find one to suit me.

REPLY—We will continue the JOURNAL to you, dear sister. You are deserving the benefits flowing from the widows' and orphans' fund. It is occasionally replenished by benevolent men and women, who love to do good for goodness sake. We receive in such donations about one cent on a dollar of what we pay out. Will those who are able remember the poor?

We can not give the sister the desired information in regard to "manual labor schools." Will some one who has such knowledge, either write to her upon the subject, or furnish an article for publication in the JOURNAL?

JETS! JETS! JETS! JETS! JETS! JETS!

A New Book by Andrew Jackson Davis, ENTITLED,

"THE FOUNTAIN,

WITH JETS OF NEW MEANINGS."

ILLUSTRATED WITH ONE HUNDRED AND FORTY-TWO ENGRAVINGS.

Beautiful Paper, Fine Framework, Superior Binding.

Price only $1.00; postage, 16 cents.

This Book is Freighted with Thoughts for Men and Pictures for Children.

For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 187 and 189, South Clark st rest, Chicago.

MEDIUMS' DIRECTORY.

The Religio-Philosophical Journal being an unpaid friend to all true mediums will hereafter publish a complete Directory, giving the place of all professional mediums so far as advised upon the subject. This will afford better facilities for investigators to learn of the location of mediums, and at the same time increase their patronage. Mediums will do well to advise us from time to time that we may keep their place of residence correctly registered.

☞ It is lamentable fact that some mediums so far forget their self respect as to speak evil of other mediums, not as regularly organized societies who are far their superiors. The names of such persons will be dropped from this Register so soon as we have evidence conclusive of their infidelity in such unbecoming.

It should be borne in mind that mediums visiting mediums carry conditions with themselves—so to speak—which aid or destroy the power of spirits to control the medium visited; he calls it that the medium gives as in effect to certain persons, another better so to here—all having their friends, and family too, and all equally honest and useful in their place.

CHICAGO.

Bangs children, 237 S. Morgan st. ‡
Mrs. Miles Brown, 133 W. Washington St.
Dr. W. Cleveland, 75 West Harrison st.*
Mrs. A. Crosbie, 179 W. Madison St. *
Dr. D. D. Bates, 211 Wabash Ave, Chicago*
Dr. S. Dwyer, 252 West Madison st. Chicago
Dr. L. P. Grigg, 220 W Madison street, cor. Peoria,*
Mrs. Harris M. Parker, 24 and 26 Hooper Block ‡
Mrs. M. Jenks, 176 W. Van Buren street.*
Mr. & Mrs. O. A Leland, Taunton, Mass.†
Dr. J. E. Lewis and wife, 1- Cass ave.*
Dr. H. P. Mallory, 56 W. Madison St.*‡
Mrs. C. Moody, 106 12th street. *
Mrs. H. T. Moore, 1- Park Avenue *‡‡
Madame Ehler, 801 S. Clark St. ‡
Mrs. M. Smith, 441 S. Clinton st.*
Dr. Sargent, 75 Third Ave. *
Dr. H. L. Sherman and Wife, 208 South Clark St.*†
Dr Seamans Uncle Bill, 189 S. Clark street.*
Mrs. S. T. Viber, 624 Madison Ave.*
Dr. J. Wilbur, 460 W. Randolph st *
A. D. Willis, Jr., Clerk & Mediumist. †
Mrs. M. S. Weeks, Room 49 Revere House, Chicago.

BOSTON.

Dr. H. S. Storer.*†
Mrs. Julia M. Friend, 116 Harrison Ave.
Mrs. S. J. Stickney, 883 Tremont St.
Dr. Main, 24 Harrison Ave.*
Mrs. A. C. Yatman, 393 Washington St.
Freeman Hatch, 8 Bevier Place.
Mrs. S. W. Leigh, 97 Boylston St. †
Mrs. Marshall, 29 Hillsboro St.
W. H. Mosier, 170 W. Springfield street. ¶
Mrs. A. H. Bridge, 1 Oak St, Chelsea.
Mrs. M. M. Harry, 136 W. Concord St.‡
Samuel Grover, 25 Dix Place.
Mrs. F. O. Hyzer, 231 Tremont St.‡
R. C. Littlejohn, 26 Hanson street, Boston, Mass.

PHILADELPHIA.

Mrs. S. A. Anthony, S. E. cor. of 7th and Catharine
D. B. Gadwallader, 1004 Race St.
Mrs. D. A. Gadwallader, 1004 Race Ave.
Mrs. A. Goodfellow, 413 Rodgers St.
Mrs. L. P. Mann, 949 South 12 st *‡
Edith L. Mann 949 South 12 st *‡
Mrs. Reynolds, 1013 Parrish St.
Mrs. R. Mellell, 1346 Hanover St.
Mrs. Tappan, 806 North 9th St.
DeWitt C. Hoath, 813 Race st ‡
Mrs. Stoddard, 813 Race St.

NEW YORK CITY.

Jennie Danforth, 84 Lexington Ave.†
Miss Blanch Foley, 634 Third Ave.
Mrs. H. Seymour, 160 Bleeker St.
Mrs. J. Seaton, 367 E. 21st St.
J. William Van Namee, 430 Fourth Ave.*‡‡

BLOOMINGTON, ILL.

Mrs. Helen Grove.
Mrs. M. E. Stothell, 413 N. Main St. ‡
Dr. Mary Lewis, Bloomington, Ill.‡

BAYONNE CITY, N. J.

Mrs. E. Wallis.

GREEN GARDEN ILL

Mrs. Calkins.*‡ ‡

GENESEE, WIS.

Mrs. B. W. Belcom. *‡
Mrs. F. A. Logan.

ROCKFORD, ILL.

Samuel Smith, Box 1221 Rockford, Ill. *
Mrs. M. J. Olson S. Rockford, Ill. ‡

SAN FRANCISCO.

Wm. H. Hatch, 126 Kearney St.

ST. CHARLES ILL.

Mrs. Lemoore Bowers.*‡
D. P. Kayner, M. D.†

SAN JOSE, CAL.

Mrs. Mary E. Beach. ‡

WHITEWATER, WIS.

Mrs. A. B. Severance *‡

MISCELLANEOUS.

Mrs. Orvin Abbott, Minneapolis Minnesota. *
Lizzie Austin, Cedar Falls, Iowa. ‡
Josiahna Allen, Geneseo, Ill.
Lydian Attwood, Lodi Mills, Wis.
Miss M A A pbi st Dayton, Ohio. *
D. Atkinson, Marietta, Ohio ‡
Mrs. Jennie Anderson, 1206, Kansas City, Mo. *
Mrs. E. A. Blair 106 Bicknell, Salem, Mass. ¶
Dr. H. Butler, Wellsboro, Tioga Co., Pa.*
Mrs. Dentis Bates, 135 Bank street, Newark, N. J.*
Mrs. J. F. Carrier, Cincinnati, Ohio.†
Mrs. J. A. Drake, 34 Hoffman Block, Cleveland, Ohio.
J. W. Ellis, Atlanta, Ga. *
Mrs. S. E. Everett, Sprin Gold, Mo. ‡
David S. Fuller, Davenport, Iowa. *†
Alonzo Fitch, Schenectady, N. Y. *
J. B. Fayette, Oswego, N. Y.‡
Dr. S. W. Freeman, 116 High st, Columbus, Ohio. *
Mrs. Wm. L. Gay, Canastota, New York *
Dr. J. M. Holland, 208 Upper Broadway, Council Bluffs Iowa.*
Judge D.L. Hoy, Mobile, Alabama.
U. B. Hamilton, Beloit, Wis.*
Dr. R. Heal, 83 Whitehall st., Atlanta, Ga.*
Mrs. Jennie Ferris, Traveling.†
Mrs. Minnie Jefferson, J
J. W. Kenyon, Watertown, Wis
J. H. Nolan, Waterville, N. Y. ‡
Mrs. A. Nesbit, Genesee, Mich.*
Dr. Abbe Lord Palmer, New Boston, Ill. *†
Mrs Nelli Pise, Ninth Road Ind. *
Mrs. M. E. Riddle, Beverley, Ind.
N B Star, Fort Huron, Mich. ‡
Isaac Jackson Sloan, Covington, Ind.‡
A. B. Severance and Mrs. J. G. Severance. M. D. 497 Milwaukee street, Milwaukee, Wis *‡
Mrs. P.W. Stephens, east side of 4th street, between I & J, Sacramento.*
H. B. Sherman, Gahanna, Ohio. ‡
Annie C. Torrey, Houston, Texas. ‡
A. Thomas, Leeds Station, Ohio.
Warren Wright, Waterloo, Seneca Co., N. Y. *
Mrs. Fanny Wheelock, Pleasanton, Kansas. ‡

* Healer.
‡ Spirit Artists.
† Psychometrist
‡ Business and Test.
¶ Writing and Speaking.
‖ Answering Sealed Letters.
§ Solemnizing Marriages and Attending Funerals.

Exeter Hall!
Exeter Hall!

HAVE YOU READ EXETER HALL

THE following are extracts from a few of the notices of Exeter Hall, the Theological Romance:—

"The plot and passion in Exeter Hall show an experienced hand in their delineation. Exeter Hall proves that the author has something to say and knows how to say it."—[Public Opinion, London, England.

"It is indeed a wonderful book."—[New York Mail.

"We commend it to the widest, popular approval."—[Banner of Light, Boston.

"We have no hesitation in declaring this a great work."—[Universe, New York.

"The book is well and powerfully written. * * *
The most scorching work ever published in America since the 'Age of Reason,'"—[Liberal, Chicago.

"One of the most exciting romances of the day."—[Demorest's Magazine, New York.

"Convincingly illustrative of the errors of Theology. —[Investigator, Boston.

"The humane and charitable tendencies of the book must receive the approbation of every friend of humanity."—[Daily Telegraph, Toronto, Canada.

Price, 60 cents. Postage, 4 cents.

For sale, wholesale and retail, by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 187 & 189 South Clark st. Chicago.

Prof. Spencer's Positive and Negative Powders. For sale at this office.
J. B. Speer, 139 South Clark street.

Speaker's Register.

We are sick of trying to keep a standing Register of Meetings and list of speakers without a hearty co-operation on the part of those most interested.

☞ HEREAFTER we shall register each meetings and speakers as are furnished to us BY THE PARTIES INTERESTED with a pledge on their part that they will keep us posted in regard to changes; and in addition to that, REPEAL in distance will engage to add in the circulation of the JOURNAL both by word AND DEED.

Let us hear promptly from all who accept this proposition and we will do our part faithfully.

J. Madison Allen, Ancora, N. J.
O. Faunie Allyn, Stoneham, Mass.†
Addie L. Ballou Address Chicago, care of RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL.
Parker Pillsbury, Concord, N. H.
Dr. J. K. Bailey, box 324 Laporte Ind.*
Mary J. O. Brigham, Rice Lake, Wisconsin
Mrs. A. P. Brown, 6 Johnson Court, Cleveland, O.†
Dr. W. S. Bell, 158 West Washington St., Chicago.†
Hills Brown, Address 158 West Washington St., Chicago.†
Henry A. Beach, Spring Valley, N. Y.
Mrs. Bell A. Chamberlain, Medford, Minnesota.†
Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Coburn, Grand Gardens, Ill. ‡‡
M. T. Child, M. D., 634 Race St., Philadelphia, Pa.*
Mrs. A. H. Colby Winchester, Randolph Co., Ind.†
T. B. Dowd, Rockingham Davenport, Iowa.*
Lewis F. Cummings Address care of the Journal.*
John Corwin, Five Corners, N. Y.
Andrew Jackson Davis, Orange, N. J.
Levi Dinkelspiel, Box 299 Decatur, Ill. †
Dan T. Edwards, Stevenson's Mill, Mo.
Mary J. Fenwick, Ogonsburg, N. Y.
L. H. Garretson, Richland, Iowa.
K. Graves, Richmond Ind.*
Miss Nellie Hagaman, Farmington, Ill.
Mrs. H. Hayes, Waterloo, Wis.†
Lyman C. Howe, Fredonia, N. Y.*
Joseph F. Hamilton, Des Moines, Iowa.
Thomas Harding, box 301, Sturgeon, Mich.
Samuel S. Harman, Goshen, Ind.
D. G. Hamilton, Beloit, Wis.*
W. H. Holcombe, Grass Valley, Cal.
L. U. Hay, M. D. A. *
S. S. Jones, 139 S. Clark St., Chicago. ‡
Dr. Wm. B. Jocelyn Address him in care of this Office.*
D. P. Kayner, M. D., St Charles Ill. ‡
Mrs. M. M. King, Hammondsport, N. Y.*
L. Lewis, Valparaiso, Ind.
F. H. Lawrence, Ottumwa, Iowa.*
Geo. W. Lose, Box 1, Rapid, Mich.*
Wm. F. Lyon, 206 S. Clark St., Chicago.*
O. S. Loni, Pine Island, Minn.*
Mrs. F. A. Logan, Beaver Dam, Wis.
J. Mansfield, Rockford, Ill.*
P. C. Mills, North Ward Post Office.*
Mrs. M. J. Wilcoxson, Care of Journal, Chicago, Ill.*
J. S. Maulsby, Vancouver, Washington Territory.
Mr. John J. Odell, Waterloo, N. Y. *
Mrs. A. A. Pearsall, Geneseo, Ill.*
Mrs. L. H. Perkins, Kansas city, Mo. *‡
Dr. S. Perkins, Kansas City, Mo.
Harriet B. Pratt, Morristown, Minn.*
M. M. H. Parry, Beloit, Wis. †
J. S. Rouse, Casey, Ill.
Mrs. S. A. Rogers, 10 Court St., Boston, Mass.
Mrs. S. A. Rogers. Address in care of A. J. Grover, Rock Island, Ill.*
Samuel Smith, Rockford Ill.*
Warren Smith, Alexandria, Madison Co., Ind.
Job Smyth, Hallsport, N. Y.
Mrs. H. Tuttle Severance, M. D., Milwaukee, Wis.*‡
Mrs. Laura Cuppy Smith, care of the office, Chicago.
H. W. Stevens, Hanover N. H. Janesville, Wis
Mrs. H. Sherman M. D. 326 South Clark st., Chicago.*
Mrs. L. A. F. Swain, Union Lakes, Rice Co., Minn
D. D. Seymour, Lawrence, Kansas. †
Benjamin Todd, Portland, Oregon.
Mrs. Benjamin Todd, Portland, Oregon.*
Mrs. Sarah E. Thompson, Cleveland, Ohio. *
M. B. Tuttle, Ayer, Mass.
Mrs. E. A. C. Trego, Oil City, Pa.*‡
J. B. Tupper, Jamestown, Wis.*
Hudson Tuttle, Berlin Heights, O.*†
Dr. Samuel Underhill, Tonica, Ill.*
J. William Van Namee, Sumpter, N. Y. ‡
Mrs. M. J. Wilcoxson, Care of Journal, Chicago, Ill.*
J. G. Wilkinson 5 Jane st. Toronto Canada. *‡‡
R. V. Wilson, Lombard, Ill ‡
A. E. Whiting, Albion, Mich. †
Ellen M. Woodhull, Leslie, Mich.
Dr. E. B. Wheelock, Pleasanton, Kansas.

* Inspirational.
† Trance.
‡ Clairvoyant.
§ Solemnizing Marriages and Attending Funerals.

UNDERHILL ON MESMERISM.
WITH
Criticisms on its Opposers.
AND A REVIEW OF HUMBUGS AND HUMBUGGERS, WITH PRACTICAL INSTRUCTIONS FOR EXPERIMENTS IN THE SCIENCE—FULL DIRECTIONS FOR USING IT AS A REMEDY IN DISEASE—HOW TO AVOID ALL DANGER.
THE PHILOSOPHY OF ITS CURATIVE POWERS;
How to develop a good Clairvoyant
THE PHILOSOPHY OF
SEEING WITHOUT EYES.
THE PROOFS OF IMMORTALITY DERIVED FROM THE UNFOLDING OF MESMERISM—EVIDENCE OF MENTAL COMMUNION WITHOUT SIGHT OR SOUND, BETWEEN BODIES FAR APART IN THE FLESH—COMMUNION OF SAINTS, OR WITH THE DEPARTED.
BY SAMUEL UNDERHILL, M. D., L. L. D.,
LATE PROFESSOR OF CHEMISTRY, ETC., ETC.
Price $1.25. Postage 12 cents. The Trade supplied.
Address S. S. Jones, Chicago. Ill.

FLORENCE SEWING MACHINES.

Wm. H. Sharp, & Co., General Agents.
43 Madison Street.

This machine is recommended to any who desire a first-class Family Sewing Machine; and is noted for its quiet, rapid motion, regularity of tension and ease of management. Four different stitches, and reversible feed—are peculiar to the Florence Machine, and claimed by no other in the world.
Samples and terms to agents furnished on application.

TEN DOLLARS!
($10) GIVEN AWAY!! ($10)

We will give to every one buying a FLORENCE SEWING MACHINE through our House TEN DOLLARS worth of any of the books advertised in our book list, or of the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL, or a part of each as a premium or inducement.
The Florence Machine is one of the very best manufactured, and ranges in price from sixty-five dollars to one hundred and fifty.
We will furnish descriptive circulars and samples on application.
We have sold a large number of these machines, and they have given the most perfect satisfaction in every case.
Call on or address:—
RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 187 and 189 South Clark street, Chicago.

HESPERIA:
AN EPIC OF THE PAST AND FUTURE OF AMERICA.
By Mrs. Cora L. V. Tappan.

 PRICE: $1.75; postage, 20 cents. For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

EXPRESS!

For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 187 and 189 South Clark st., Chicago.

[PAUL and JUDAS Entering the CAVE of JOHN THE BAPTIST.]

JESUS OF NAZARETH,
BY
PAUL AND JUDAS,
Through Alexander Smyth, Medium.

This work has been read with intense interest by thousands, and is universally pronounced the most in the whole line of Spiritualistic Literature. It is the only true and reliable history of the remarkable medium called Jesus, ever written. After waiting eighteen hundred years, PAUL and JUDAS, finding the times propitious, and an excellent medium through whom to communicate, have given to the world a book of lasting interest, by taking possession of Mr. Smyth about one hour in every twenty-four, usurping all his powers, giving a continued series of well-connected scenes, presenting scenery, characters and personages, dialogues and actions in their regular order and succession, embracing all the most important personages and incidents which occurred during the sojourn of Jesus upon earth. There was, probably, no book ever written in which such perfect life-pictures occur; every city and country village, every river, brook and mountain, and scenery in general, is so vividly portrayed that an actual journey through the country could hardly be more interesting. The characters in this unexampled drama are so faithfully portrayed, that, as you are introduced to each in turn, you soon well acquainted and delighted with your company, and the many points of interest you are called to visit. The book is replete with interest from beginning to end, and contains 319 closely-printed pages.

WONDERFUL BOOK

PRICE, $1.50; postage, 20 cents.

☞ For sale, wholesale and retail, by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 187 & 189 South Clark St. Chicago.

DR. E. P. MILLER'S WORKS.

The Cause of Exhausted Vitality, or Abuses of the Sexual Function. Cloth $1,00, Postage, 12cts.

Every Young Man and every Young Woman, every Married Man and every Married Woman, Should read it.

A vast amount of suffering, as well as physical, mental and moral ruin would be prevented, if all were acquainted with the facts contained in this work and followed its excellent advice.

Vital Force, How wasted and How Preserved. Cloth $1,00, Postage 12cts; Paper Cover, 50cts, Postage, 4cts.

Mrs. Francis Dana Gage says: "I earnestly wish that it could be read by every mother in the country."

It is an invaluable work and should have a place in every family library.

How to Bathe, a Family Guide for the Use of Water in Preserving Health and Treating Disease.

Paper Cover. Price 40cts. Postage, 4cts

Important Truths, By Mrs. E. P. Miller, M. D.

Price, 20cts, Postage, 2cts.

This little work is written in a style adapted to children's Minds, and no parent need fear to place it in their children's hands as an opening to conversation and advice on points upon which their future health, happiness, and even life largely depend.

THE TRADE SUPPLIED.

Address S. S. Jones, 187 & 189, South Clark Clark street, Chicago, Ill.

The Great
MAGNETIC CURE.

MAL

Criticism on the
THEOLOGICAL IDEA OF DEITY,
Contrasting the Views Entertained of a Supreme Being by the Ancient Grecian Sages, with those of Moses and the Hebrew Writers; and blending Ancient Judaism, Paganism and Christianity into a Common Original.
BY M. B. CRAVEN.

12 mo., 317 pages.—Price, $1.00; postage, 16 cents.

 For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

IS THERE A DEVIL.

The argument pro and con, with an inquiry into the Origin of Evil, with a review of the popular notion of Hell and Heaven, or the State of the Dead. Price twenty-five cents, postage two cents. For sale at the Religio Philosophical Journal Office, 189 So. Clark Street Chicago.

Spencer's Positive and Negative Powders, for sale this office.

Religio-Philosophical Journal.

[redacted]

S. S. JONES, 189 South Clark Street, Chicago, [redacted]

TERMS OF THE

Religio-Philosophical Journal.

$3.00 per year, $1.50—6 months, $1.—6 mo. on Trial.

Fifty cents for Three Months on Trial TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS.

In making remittances for subscriptions, always procure a draft on New York, or Post-Office Money Orders, if possible. Where neither of these can be procured, send the money, but ALWAYS IN A REGISTERED LETTER. The registration fee has been reduced to fifteen cents, and the present registration system has been found by the postal authorities to be virtually an absolute protection against losses by mail. All Postmasters are obliged to register letters when requested to do so.

All subscriptions remaining unpaid more than six months, will be charged at the rate of $3.50 per year.

PAPERS are forwarded until an explicit order is received by the Publisher for their discontinuance, and until payment of all arrearages is made, as required by law.

No name entered on the subscription books without the first payment in advance.

SUBSCRIBERS are particularly requested to note the expiration of their subscriptions, and to forward what is due for the ensuing year, with or without further reminder from this office

NEWSPAPER DECISIONS.

1. Any person who takes a paper regularly from the post-office—whether directed in his name or another's, or whether he has subscribed or not—is responsible for the payment.

2. If a person orders his paper discontinued, he must pay all arrearages, or the publisher may continue to send it, until payment is made, and collect the whole amount,—whether the paper be taken from the office or not.

3. The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers and periodicals from the post-office, or removing and leaving them uncalled for, is PRIMA FACIE evidence of intentional fraud.

LOOK

Upon the margin [redacted] the wrapper, will be found a stencil [redacted] payment has been made. For instance, [redacted] has paid to Dec. 15th, 1870, it will be stencilled, "Smith J.—10 Dec.—0." The 0 means 1870. If he has only paid to Dec. 10th, 1869, it would stand thus: Smith J.—10 Dec.—9, or perhaps in some cases, the last two figures for the year, as 70 for 1870, or 69 for 1869.

☞ Transcending money to this office for the JOURNAL, should be careful to state whether it be a renewal, or a new subscription, and write all proper names plainly.

CHICAGO, JUNE 24, 1871.

A SEARCH AFTER GOD.

NUMBER XLIV.

Ever on the alert, the human mind is constantly seeking for new avenues to traverse, new fields to explore, and always trying to bring into life some of the activities of matter. It is not to be supposed that all the forces of the material world have been discovered by even the wisest sage in existence. Progression will never cease; hence, we may conclude that the activities of matter will never be fully unfolded.

NOTHING AND SOMETHING.

It is a beautiful condition of matter, and one that baffles the skill of the most learned scientist in the Spirit World, that when all its activities are dormant, negative, or in a latent state, its presence cannot be seen, felt, heard, or recognized by any of the senses, nor can the fields of space thus occupied be traversed without first arousing certain forces therein. So long as any of the activities of matter are aroused, so long its presence can be recognized by some of the senses, but when all are latent, they disappear the same as the flame of a lamp when extinguished, and, to all appearance, in the desert fields of space there is nothing, yet in its strictest sense there is something, though not tangible to the senses. In the nebulous regions certain activities have been fully aroused, and matter is becoming apparent. Years ago all of that nebular belt, sometimes called the "milky way," that encircles the heavens, and presents, on a clear night, a dim, whitish appearance, contained no substance that the senses could recognize.

Now, however, conditions have been inaugurated that have aroused certain forces, and to the eye the operations thereof have become visible. As well try to penetrate the waters of the ocean and traverse its bottom, as for a spirit to travel in these regions when all the qualities of matter are in a latent condition.

FIRST APPEARANCE OF MATTER.

There is not a universal active principle pervading the whole universe, that is at all times apparent to the senses. In all the fields of space where the activities of matter are aroused, in cons of ages, in years that the mind could hardly number, the appearance is precisely like that which characterises the "milky way," and the change is so gradual from that condition to one higher, that generation after generation will pass before the various worlds without their recognizing therein the least change.

GRADUAL IMPROVEMENTS.

Oh, how gradual all the improvements that are transpiring in the fields of space through the instrumentality of the wise sages of the Spirit World! So vast, so regular, so wonderful in results, and so comprehensive in detail that the mind is ready to ejaculate, "Nope but a God could have caused it!" Millions of square miles, quintillions of acres, a body so large that should the mind traverse a billion of furlongs a day, cons of ages would transpire before it could catch a glimpse of a millionth of its surface! Count the sands of the sea, the spears of grass that cover the earth, then divide the matter that composes them into particles so exceedingly small that the most powerful microscope can only reveal it, then count them all, and the amount will not be any multiple or measure of the time that has elapsed since the first world was launched in the regions of space. The mind is lost, bewildered, and hopelessly confused in endeavoring to compute the time since the activities of matter were first awakened that made this earth.

WATER MADE "NOTHING."

Now, we state what the scientist of the Spirit World recognizes as a truth: that matter, when all its activities are negative to each other is not apparent to any of the senses. The children of earth do not possess the power to render all the forces of matter latent, but they can partially do it. Water can be resolved into its constituent elements by rendering latent certain activities, and it becomes invisible to the eye. Now, the power exists in the Spirit World to continue the process until the material qualities of the water will not be apparent to any of the senses. The chemist here partially accomplished the object; he caused the water to disappear, by rendering latent the attraction which united its constituent parts, hydrogen and oxygen. Now, follow up the experiment and render the hydrogen and oxygen negative, and they will disappear to all the senses, and, to all appearance, are annihilated, and nothing, in one sense, remains. Now, while it is impossible to annihilate matter, it is possible to place it in a condition where its presence can not be recognized.

Passing back in the history of time, we see spirits constantly engaged in experimenting with these forces, rendering them latent, and arousing them again in order to determine their true nature.

REAL KNOWLEDGE.

Real knowledge is wholly comprised in understanding the peculiarities of matter. True, a knowledge of the history of nations and prominent characters in all ages of the world, is useful and interesting, but practical knowledge is embraced within these activities that can be evolved from matter or certain peculiarities manifested by them. The artist who exquisitely combines different colors to produce a delicate shade, in order to represent some scene of nature, must study the activities of the materials he uses, and on his correct knowledge thereof his success as an artist depends. We may know certain peculiarities of matter without comprehending them.

Real knowledge, then, is confined to a correct understanding of the laws of matter, or the peculiarities they present. The astronomer of earth is content with the appearances of the heavens, and he will laboriously assign on a map the position of each star, but when he has studied appearances sufficiently, his aspirations will rise higher, and he will desire to penetrate the action of the peculiarities of matter in unfolding through the instrumentality of individualized intelligences that which appears before him.

CONSCIOUSNESS.

Now, in the past, we find no commencement of time, but observe the same changes going on continually that now distinguish the fields of space. Each sentient being has always existed, and though at times the activities of the mind are wisely rendered latent, still, it can not be destroyed. In children the mind has its full strength, were not the activities thereof wholly or partially latent, and to us infancy is an unconscious state of existence. We know now, that the mind exists during childhood, during the hours of sleep, during the cataleptic state, during trance, and in many other conditions, yet we do not recognize the fact at the time.

Knowing, then, that there are conditions in which the mind has real life, though we are unconscious of its real condition, we can reasonably infer that it always existed. Now, render the activities of the body latent by wholly retarding the respiration, and it will soon be dissipated by decomposition, but never can be revived again. But render the mind wholly unconscious, render latent all its powers, and still it exists fully organized, and all that is required to bring it back to consciousness, is to arouse its activities.

The cataleptic state often suspends consciousness, or, what is a better term, renders the activities of the mind latent or negative, and they so continue for many days. All the functions of the body are carried on,—not one of its activities are interfered with. Still the mind does not recognise a conscious condition in itself. Now, were the sentient portion or soul of man organized like the body, when its activities were rendered latent or negative, it would be dissipated like the body.

WHICH GOD CREATED IT.

If the germ of each human being has had an eternity of duration, it is not dependent on the orthodox God for its life, or the Materialist's "matter and its laws," but its existence is founded on a substantial basis, and can not be destroyed. There is no absurdity in supposing that matter and its activities always existed, and through the virtue of their eternity of existence, we say they are indestructible! Matter exists complete, organized, and defies the puny efforts of man to destroy it. It stands forth boldly and defiantly, as having always existed! Is not the germ of each human being the soul, entitled to an eternity of existence in the past, as well as in the future? Is matter and its laws superior to it, having been organized through all time? If the germ of each human being owes its existence to a God, then a God can destroy it, and on him alone it rests for immortality. If it was created through the instrumentality of the Materialist's God,—Matter,—then, equally as truly it is dependent on that for its continued life. If, however, it has eternally existed, like matter it is indestructible. But you may say that is not organized, while mind is. Now, such is not the case. Matter is organized as one grand whole, but the mind is a conscious, personal entity, possessing none of the attributes of matter. Matter is subject to mind, to individualized minds. If mind was created, organized, then there was a time when matter was not a servant of mind, and when it had no one to dispute with it the title of sovereignty. Now, at what date in this eternity was man conceived, and who had the ingenuity to bring him forth, when no pattern was existing? But so true as water can not rise above its source, man, if the result of the action of matter and its laws, can not rise above them, or render them subservient to him. If organized mind is superior to matter now, it has been so through all eternity, and if superior to it, it must be made so through the virtue of necessity, and not through the instrumentality of itself. If man owes his existence to God or matter, then there was truly a first man; but if he has eternally existed, though in certain stages of life all the activities of his mind are latent, or in a negative condition, then there was no first man, any more than first matter and its laws, and being no first man, no one could penetrate the infinite past and say who made the first world.

Oh life, infinitely varied, so diversified with strange experience, that one is apt to become bewildered in contemplating the scene. Mind, unconscious to-day, to all appearance annihilated and lost, to-morrow scaling the starry heights and holding communion with the sages of the higher sphere. Surrounded by a material nucleus or shell, upward it moves, gaining at each step a valuable lesson, for it can only acquire a knowledge of matter, by placing itself in close rapport with it. Mind the sovereign, matter the subject,—both have eternally existed.

To be continued.

From the Galesburg Republican.

DEATH OF SORENTO ROGERS.

The Testimony before the Coroner's Jury —The Funeral Services—The Mystery of the Suicide, etc., etc.

At twenty minutes past seven o'clock, Saturday evening, Sorento Rogers died from the effects of the pistol shot inflicted by his own hands. A short time before his death the poor boy said he regretted committing the rash act, and expressed a strong desire to live. It seems, however, that the ball lodged in or near the spine, producing fatal consequences, notwithstanding the utmost care and skill on the part of the attending physician, Dr. J. M. Morse. An inquest was held the same night by Coroner Kimball, and the jury returned a verdict that Sorento Rogers had caused his death by a pistol shot inflicted by his own hands. The following is the evidence elicited at the inquest:

Dr. J. M. Morse sworn. Testified that he first saw Rogers lying on a lounge, on Brooks street. Wound from a pistol shot on the left side; ball ranged downward toward the spine, piercing lower edge of left lung; death produced by the wound.

Mrs. Achsie Rogers sworn. Testified: Am mother of the deceased; did not notice anything peculiar on the part of Sorento until the Friday evening in question; he came home that evening, and desired to burn a letter that he said he had received in the afternoon; found no fire in the stove, and went outside and burnt it with a match. Came back, sat down, and began to eat his supper; commenced crying; said, "I am crying, and can't stop." I asked him, "Why do you cry?" He replied, "Because I hate to leave you all." He finished supper,—he had only a piece of bread and butter and no tea,—and took his pistol out of his pocket. I requested him to put the pistol away, and he promised to give it to me the next morning. He then bid all the family good-bye, but his sister Eva made light of it. He turned to me and said, "Mother, if you don't bid me good-bye, you will never have another chance." He then left the house somewhat hastily and abruptly. When he had been gone a few minutes I became alarmed, and, going to Mr. Wilkinson, asked him to look after Sorento. When he reached the post-office, Sorento had left.

Cross examined.—Know nothing of the contents of the letter destroyed; it was written by Ida Clark. Said he was going to "heaven or hell—whatever you call it," when he left the house.

Eva Rogers sworn. Testified: Sister of the deceased. Noticed strange conduct on the part of Sorento, Friday evening, but he was very kind in manner at his supper and cried, and went outside, and burned a letter with a match. When he came in he said he was going away; we all thought he was jesting, but he repeated that he was going away; he then put a cartridge in his pistol, and bid his little brother Leo goodbye; then turning to mother, he told her she would never see him again, and shook hands with her. When he had been gone a minute or two, mother became alarmed, and went to see Mr. Wilkinson to ask him to look after Sorento. He never said a word about killing himself. The letter over which he cried, and which gave him so much pain, was from Ida Clark.

H. D. Babcock sworn. Testified that when Sorento was conveyed home after wounding himself, that he said he was tired of living, and wanted to die; also told his mother not to annoy and irritate him by questions.

Charles H. Beeney sworn. Testified that he had noticed nothing strange or peculiar in the manner of the deceased. Was standing in front of Meyer Jacobi's clothing store, Friday evening, when Sorento came along and asked me to go walking. Went to the house where Ida Clark lived, on East Berskeu street; deceased went in, and I remained outside. He shortly returned with Ida, and walked toward Lombard University—witness following them until they sat down on sidewalk on Brooks street. Their conversation was subdued, and carried on in a whisper, but overheard Sorento ask her if she would bid him good-bye. Ida laughed and said he was only jesting. He replied that he was going to Knoxville, and almost instantly drew a pistol and shot himself. We were sitting on the sidewalk at the time. Sorento fell over on his back and exclaimed that he was dying. Whisper, he was only fooling, but discovered that he had shot himself; He said he was in fun. I then went for Dr. Morse.

Ida Clark sworn. Testified that deceased came to her house about half-past eight o'clock, Friday evening, and wanted her to go walking. Objected at first, but finally consented. We walked a short distance and then sat down on the sidewalk. He asked me to bid him goodbye. I laughingly refused, when he drew a pistol and shot himself.

Cross examined.—The deceased spoke of going to Peoria a few days previous, and jumping into the river. We were engaged only a short time, and there was no trouble whatever between us. I attached no importance to his threats. Sorento said he had shot himself in fun, but was tired of life. Wrote him a letter this afternoon, but there was nothing in the contents that could possibly give him the least distress or trouble. He had written to me a day or two before that he had gone into the post-office, and that he was all right and very busy. I wrote in reply to his letter. He told his mother that he thought it best to shoot himself. Was certain that she intended firing the fatal shot, and said she was sorry for the act before he died.

Marshall Pollock stated that the pistol was a small Smith & Wesson breech-loader.

The funeral took place from the Universalist church at four o'clock, Sunday afternoon, Mr. Fuller delivering the discourse in the absence of the pastor, Rev. W. G. Haskell.

The remains were followed to Hope Cemetery by an immense concourse of people, and all seemed deeply affected by the tragical event that had consigned a bright and promising boy to the grave. To look at his youthful face reposing in the sleep that knows no waking, hard [redacted] been the heart that could gaze upon him without swelling bosom and misty eyes. Kind, genial, active, bright, and intelligent, he made friends of all who knew him, and it will be long before he is forgotten. He was almost solely governed by impulse, and undoubtedly committed the terrible deed in a moment of desperation.

There are many theories as to the cause that prompted him to commit suicide; but pity for the living, no matter how deserving of censure they may be, impel us to keep silent. It is well known, however, that for the past month the poor boy was unhappy, and he frequently remarked to his fellow employes in the Republican office and postoffice, that he could not endure much longer the trouble and misery he was experiencing.

His parents are both believers in an evil and pernicious doctrine, and the invariable result of misery and unhappiness ensued, the father and mother being divorced under painful and peculiar circumstances, the latter residing in Lincoln, Nebraska, and the mother living here. Under the baneful influence of the accursed Spiritual belief, a ban or taint of some kind seemed to settle on the family, and no one seemed to feel it more deeply—than the unfortunate boy who destroyed himself. In years but a child, confiding and truthful, under more happy and auspicious circumstances he would have lived to become a useful and valuable member of society. For the last few years he saw little home comfort or happiness, and the violets and grass that now spring above his new-made grave may murmur a requiem of "peace at last" in the gentle summer breeze. Truly may it be written of him:

"After life's fitful fever he sleeps well."

REMARKS.—We clip the above from the Galesburg Republican. Sorento Rogers is dead. The motives which urged him to commit the rash act, are not clearly recorded in the testimony, although his behavior plainly indicates that he was insane. The Republican in commenting on the disaster, adds insult to injury, and gives utterance to sentiments in reference to the bereaved parents, that call loudly for condemnation. Poor, miserable editor, destitute of sympathy and every manly trait, he opens his mouth, and there exudes therefrom language that is tainted with his own black nature, and shows conclusively that he not only lacks common sense but decency also. He is evidently an orthodox, or a lineal descendant of those who burned witches and persecuted Quakers, and could you look into his soul you would find it full of all manner of unclean things. No one but a coward will strike a person when he is down, helpless, bound hand and foot, or crippled. There are moral cowards as well as physical cowards; but the writer of the above is both. He never will attack his equal in physical strength. His bravery consists in sending forth his foul sarcasm, the poisonous effluvia of his orthodox nature, against the bereaved mourners who followed poor Sorento Rogers to his grave. Supposing he had followed the funeral cortege that accompanied his remains to their last resting place, and gave utterance to the sentiments expressed in his paper, publicly—why, the good citizens of Galesburg would have mobbed him at once. But no! he was afraid to do that—he must come up in the rear, and send forth his foul breath on the mother of poor Sorento, to add to the pangs of the already wounded heart, and while she was bathing in tears the grave of her unfortunate child, this moral coward, the editor of the Galesburg Republican, was manufacturing poison from his own corrupt soul, to send forth to the world, that the orthodox churches might have something to lave their tongues in. A dog, even, will lick the wound of an enemy that it may heal, but this editor, inferior to the brute creation, would add poison to such a wound, and increase its pain. We once heard of a man so mean, that his shadow turned from him in disgust, and we presume this editor must belong to the same family. While adding pangs to the already wounded heart of Sorento's friends, why did he not turn to the orthodox fold, and refer to the shortcomings of the Hilldale professor, who ruined the wife of the deacon of his church; or, to Rev. Mr. Fuller, whose licentiousness drove his wife insane, and who was finally tarred and feathered, and rode on a rail, or to the Rev. McWilliams, who was arrested while preaching, for horse-stealing and bigamy. Oh! they belong to his own church! Had Sorento had a brother to resent the insult offered to his bereaved mother by the editor of the Republican, he would never have dipped his pen into ink to write the above article.

Sorento though dead still liveth. His spirit, freed from its earthly tabernacle, is now enjoying the loving presence of kind spirit friends, and his mother feels that he is dearer and nearer to her than ever before. To the bereaved mother we would say, be of good cheer! The light is breaking, breaking! Sorento can live a useful life in the Spirit World as well as here. True, you can not feel the pressure of his lips to yours, his affectionate embrace, or hear his own voice, yet he will be near to you in spirit, sending forth into your soul, gleams of sunshine from his own spirit home. Be calm and cheerful, then, under the misfortune that is now weighing you down, for there shall proceed even from it, a realization that will do you good in the hour of trouble. That man is indeed a criminal, who would make the wound of the afflicted ones deeper or more painful. Around the coffin of poor Sorento, clustered the hearts of relatives, and while almost bursting with sorrow, there was one mean enough to go back into the past, trace their life lines, and resurrect the scandal that always follows domestic trouble. But now all is over. The grave has its victim; the Spirit World another occupant.

All true men and women will send the magnetism of their love to Sorento's mother, to give her strength in this hour of her bereavement, and while they will sympathize with her, they will pity this editor who has dared to false his hand to make the lacerated wound still deeper, by tracing her life lines, and gathering therefrom the gossip of foul tongues.

The grave of Sorento has been dug. Soon the green grass and flowers of summer will grow thereon, covering it with beauty. His mother will go there, and mourn over the sad fate of her son, yet within her soul is the joyful realization that he still lives. But she will still love him, though a suicide; and when she glances at his last resting place, she can thank God that he raised his hand against himself, instead of giving additional pangs to some already wounded heart, by cowardly incendoes or false accusations.

Indicted and Fined.

BROTHER JONES: That ominous blue cross appears upon the margin of our JOURNAL this week, with a request inside to pay up.

I have been an earnest reader of your valuable paper for the last two years, and our little home would seem deserted if we should lose its welcome smile.

I should, perhaps, have had the money sooner if I had not been called upon, some time since, to settle an indictment before the Green County Court, for working on Sunday.

I am a young man and quite largely in debt, and am striving by hard toil and honest dealing to pay my indebtedness. But some of my kind neighbors "and Christians of the present day," saw fit to persecute me by taking what they could of my hard-earned means, and thought, no doubt, that God won'd lend them for being strict watchers of his field. But, thank heaven! I have passed beyond such acts, and am willing that all should worship as their reason dictates, and I sincerely pity such ignorance and bigotry, and hope reason will soon lead the way to truth and liberty.

I did write to an eminent lawyer, thinking of carrying my case to a higher court, but I was too poor to get a hearing.

O, Spiritualists! how long shall it be before we can battle for truth and justice, without the money God to call us to action? As for me I ask but little here below, and that freely goes to spread the truth and put down ignorance and superstition.

Brother Jones, if I should not meet my payment when my time expires, please continue to send the welcome messenger, for without its genial influence our home would be desolate.

Ten thousand thanks for continuing it as long as you have done, and I hope I have a life lease upon its valuable folds.

Your grateful friend,

J. B. WHEELOCK.

Springfield, Mo., June 7th.

REMARKS.—My Dear Brother, we would no more discontinue sending the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL to you because you could not pay in advance, than we would refuse a hungry man a seat at our well-spread breakfast table. No, my brother, rest assured that the JOURNAL will greet you from week to week, with columns well-laden with the bread of life and the wine of rejoicing.

Old Theology would put God in the Constitution, hang mediums for witchcraft, burn heretics, banish the Quakers, fine and imprison those who esteem every day alike,—notwithstanding Paul's injunction to "let every man be fully persuaded in his own mind,"—to-day with as hearty a good-will as did the Puritans of old New England or the religionists of the old world of yore, if they had the power.

We hope to get a full report of this case; it will make a fine appendix to a work we now have in press, entitled "The Sunday Question; and Self-Contradictions of the Bible," including a recent lecture by Parker Pillsbury, on the same question. It is a book that will make old Theology howl. Her most sacred day is thoroughly shown to be a pious sham. Her most sacred Book is shown to be so full of self-contradictions as to be self-impeached as authority or evidence that would be received in a petty or any other court of justice.

This book seems to have been especially called for at the present time. If the State of Missouri, or any other State, is so benighted as to hold upon her statute books laws that will indict, fine, and imprison dissenters from the Christian faith, it is high time the subject was ventilated.

This is a book of 123 pages, closely printed, and will be sent by mail to any one on receipt of 50 cents. It is a book that should be in the hands of every thinker. Address S. S. Jones, 189 Clark St., Chicago.

We also offer this book in connection with the JOURNAL. See another notice of it in this paper.

Charles H. Read, the Medium, and the Boston Investigator.

The Boston Investigator says it is "unfortunate for Spiritualism that it fosters so many humbugs," and then goes on to say:

"We lately notified the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL that the Cambridge College had never given Read any recommendation," etc., etc.

The most lamentable thing that we discover is, that a newspaper started by old father Abner Neeland, and which for many years has done good work in showing the absurdities of old theology, should at this late day be found in alliance with bigots, in denouncing positive demonstrations of a system of philosophy—the philosophy of life, which is commanding the attention of the best thinkers of the age,—a system of philosophy which, by clearly-elucidated facts is undermining and proving the absurdity and falsity of every phase of theology, by incontrovertible testimony.

Mr. Read is a most excellent medium, and "it matters not whether the "Cambridge College" recommend him or not; nor does it matter whether Mr. Read says they did or not. The question is this: Is Mr. Read a medium for remarkable physical demonstrations by those who once lived as we do, but now live upon and act from the spiritual plane of life through his mediumship? If so, the skeptic who does not believe in immortality, from want of evidence, can obtain such evidence by attending his seances.

It is Mr. Read's mediumship for spirit communion with mortals that the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL recommends, and not what the "Cambridge College" may or may not recommend.

Of all bigots that we know of, a bigoted skeptic is the most contemptible; of that class, the Boston Investigator seems to have an abundance of adherents who act in the capacity of correspondents; and its editor seems to deem it expedient to cater to that sentiment, rather than meet facts which are every day being developed through spirit media.

Noted Mediums in Chicago.

MRS LORD, that most excellent medium for physical manifestations, continues to hold seances, which are attended by skeptics, who are almost invariably converted to the truth of spirit communion. Why should they not be, when their loved ones, "from over the river," come and shake them by their hands, and speak loving words of recognition through their own materialized lips?

CHARLES. H. READ confounds skeptics and scientists. The marvelous feats displayed through his mediumship, call loudly upon men of intelligence to investigate the phenomena.

The BANGS CHILDREN hold regular seances in the light, on the afternoons of Tuesdays and Thursdays, and the evenings of Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays, at their residence, No. 227 South Morgan street.

MRS A. H. ROBINSON, No. 148 Fourth Avenue, continues to prescribe for the sick by letter, and cures the worst cases of disease, which have been given up as incurable by the doctors, in all parts of the country. While under spirit control, by simply placing a lock of the patient's hair (sent by letter) in her hand, she diagnoses the disease, and prescribes a remedy, that seldom fails to cure. She is also a most excellent business medium. Many of the best business men in the city avail themselves of her mediumistic powers in their heavy financial schemes.

MR. WILLIS, the spirit artist, continues to take spirit likenesses in this city. His success as an artist is daily improving.

By consulting the advertisements and the Mediums' Register, the address and phase of mediumship of many other excellent mediums will be found. The JOURNAL is the especial friend of mediums, and gratuitously keeps a register of all honest persons who request their names to be placed therein.

We feel impelled to stand by and promote the interests of that daily increasing class whom the angels control, and urge our friends to see and test for themselves, inasmuch as there is a considerable number of so-styled missionaries, who consider it a duty to publicly and privately denounce all physical manifestations in dark circles, as the work of impostors.

An Entirely New Proposition.

We now have in press, and will be ready to fill orders before this notice reaches our readers, a splendid new book, entitled THE SUNDAY QUESTION, and SELF-CONTRADICTIONS OF THE BIBLE.

This work consists of 123 large, closely printed pages. It is an exhaustive review of the so-called sunday question, and self-contradictions of the Bible. The work shows the so-called divine authority for the supposed holy day, to be the cunning device of designing priests rather than the inspiration of an Infinite God! This work, which we sell for the low price of fifty cents, and send the same free of postage on the receipt of the money, we will send to any old subscriber on receipt of seventy-five cents, together with the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL to any new subscriber on trial for three months; or, we we will send the same work and the JOURNAL for three months on trial direct to a new subscriber, on the receipt of seventy-five cents. For one dollar, we will send for a new subscriber, the JOURNAL three months and the above-named book, together with that very remarkable book called LIFE'S UNFOLDINGS, or The Wonders of the Universe Revealed to Man.

We hope that every subscriber to whom we are now sending the JOURNAL will avail him or herself of this generous offer, and thus secure these books, as well as to thus aid in doubling the number of the subscribers to the JOURNAL.

Address S. S. Jones, 189 South Clark street, Chicago, Ill.

Point Pleasant, Mo.

W. F. Rhoods inquires, "Has Spiritualism an organized church or creed?"

It no more requires a church or creed to become a believer in spirit communion than it does to become a geologist or a chemist. Spiritualism is, in fact, a system of philosophy,—sometimes called the Harmonial Philosophy; it is the philosophy of life—consequently it is, in fact, the Harmonial philosophy, and must be so, as it is the outworkings of Infinite Wisdom.

Poor ignorant mortals think it a world of discord! So it seems from a narrow and contracted standpoint. The philosopher who can comprehend principles sees naught outside of Deity. No one will contend that he is inharmonious with himself; hence, that may be a subject of reverential contemplation, without the necessity of church or creed.

"Stupendous Whole,
Whose body Nature is and God the soul,"

Spiritualists do well to organize societies and lyceums for the promulgation of knowledge, but may good angels guard them from the contaminating and soul-dwarfing influence of churches and creeds!

Spirit Communion.

Chauncy C. Baker, of White Oak, Hopkins County, Texas, having recently lost an amiable young wife, and finding no consolation in old Theology, wants to know how he can hold communion with his companion.

We deeply sympathize with him—and as a means to the end desired, we say to him, visit mediums,—not with a spirit of criticism, but with an honesty of purpose that is willing to receive what your loving companion may be able to give through the only media available. Continue your research, and your efforts will be crowned with success—never mind failures, but try, try again and again, with an honesty of purpose worthy of the cause you are about to enlist in. Perseverance will crown your labors with success. Your dear companion lives, and is ever near you.

Personal and Local.

—Mrs. M. J. WILCOXSON, who has been laboring efficiently in various parts of the country during the past eight months, has returned to Chicago to rest and recuperate her health. She has done a good work, sown seeds for the cause of the Harmonial Philosophy that will yield a hundred fold, and her labors will be long remembered wherever she has been. She will now make engagements for the fall and winter months. She can be addressed in care of this office.

—Dr. Dake—he is an indefatigable laborer, a live Spiritualist, and is doing great good. He called on us on Thursday last. We are always glad to see him.

—DR. D. P. KAYNER.—This eminent physician has located at St. Charles, Ill., where he is prepared to answer calls to lecture, heal the sick, and give Clairvoyant examinations. Dr. Kayner is thoroughly educated in the different systems of medical practice; superadded to which his natural clairvoyant powers makes his treatment a positive success. Our friends in all parts of the country should remember these facts. Terms: examination and prescription, $3.00.

—Harry Bastian, the renowned Physical Medium, is in Charlestown, MASS., holding seances. We take pleasure in recommending him as one of the very best mediums for physical manifestations.

—Spiritualists in Kansas will please take notice, test, patronize and prove the usefulness of all permanent and settled mediums that shall locate among you. At Pleasanton, Kansas, twenty-five miles north of Fort Scott, you can visit or address Mrs. Fanny Wheelock, a well known medical clairvoyant of nearly twenty year's practice and experience. Her husband, Dr. E. B. Wheelock, is perhaps well known to the readers of the JOURNAL as a physician and speaker.

—"The Science of Evil," by Joel Moody, has created more interest and comment from the public press than any other book of the season, except Darwin's "Descent of MAN."

—We call the attention of our readers to a mistake in the printing of resolutions passed at the Decatur Convention. In the third resolution after the preamble, it should read thus: Resolved, That the building and supporting of costly, luxurious temples and churches engenders dangerous distinctions in society, breeds an aristocracy which is fatal, &c."

—A New Hampshire justice has been issuing a warrant for the arrest of a man for "blasfeming his maker."

—Levi Dinkelspiel, a trance speaker, and a Jewish convert to our faith, lectured at Atlanta, Ill., on Sunday last. He is represented as an eloquent advocate of our cause. We had the pleasure of a call from him on Thursday last.

—"The Mental Cure" is a book that should be more widely known. It is highly recommended by some of our best healers.

—Bell A. Chamberlain has been laboring efficiently at Cedar Falls, Waterloo and other places in Iowa. She gives a case of presentiment when a little child waked from her sleep and called on her mother to save her from falling bricks, fearing they would kill her. So intense was her feelings that it required some time to quiet her. The next day a terrific storm passed over the place, blowing bricks from chimneys, some of which fell on her head, rendering her insensible for sometime. Mrs. Chamberlain is now on her way to Fort Dodge, and other parts, expecting soon to reach Des Moines. Those desiring her services can address in care of J. P. Davis, Des Moines, Iowa.

—Mexico, Mo. Frank A. Leavitt, Esq., informs us that Mexico, Mo., is a live town, and that a good medium for tests, and a good lecturer, will be well compensated by giving them a visit.

—Mrs. JENKS, the Clairvoyant and healer, resides at 176 West Van Buren street, instead of 173, as stated in a previous JOURNAL.

—The second edition of "Bhagvat-Geeta" is now in press, the first being nearly exhausted.

—New York and Boston has a beautiful method of sending sunshine to the sick by "Flower Charity," consisting simply of sending to the sick boquets of flowers and fruits. It is a most delicate and beautiful service which is thus rendered to the sick poor in the hospitals.

—The funeral of Mrs. Sarah Cornwell, of Troy, was largely attended, at the Stone Church, in Milton. Quite a number of friends accompanied the remains from that city, and relatives from Saratoga Springs, Clifton Park and Ballston Spa were present. Rev. J. M. Peebles, Spiritualist, officiated, and Misses Alice and Emma Wilber, of Troy, sang in the church and at the grave.

—Mrs. Francis L. Haswell is an excellent medium, located at Richmond, Ind. Dr. MAXWELL is an excellent healer, at same place.

—We are in receipt of another edition of that deservedly popular work of Bro. Barlow's, "The Voices."

—Mrs. M. L. Sherman, of 306 South Clark street, is a very fine Psychometrist, and almost invariably gives satisfaction to her numerous patrons.

—James M. Oliphant, of Easton, Kansas, writes that his home is open to receive Spiritualists. The Baptists of this place are very liberal, and have kindly offered their church to the Spiritualists for lectures.

—Thank you, Brother Johnson, of Kalamazoo, Mich., for that lot of new subscribers. Many others during the past week have interested themselves in extending the circulation of the JOURNAL, all of whom have our thanks.

—Mrs. Maria M. King's pamphlets are growing constantly in greater favor.

—Dr. J. R. Doty, a trance speaker, writes us from the Sunny South—Covington, La. He has been laboring in the South during the last two years, and delivered during that time twenty lectures in New Orleans. He has received no remuneration for his lectures, and has supported himself by money received for his services in healing the sick. He proposes to start North soon, and will pass westward from New York, lecturing and healing the sick.

—Mrs. A. Swift is a healing, test and business medium, residing at Aurora, Ill.

—"The Fountain," by A. J. Davis, is flowing through the fourth edition with no signs of falling off.

—The Fall River Monitor says the wife of Richard Wordell, of Westport, Mass., during last winter, cut and corded thirty cords of wood.

—Mrs. Kinney, the keeper of a disreputable house in Troy, died recently. It is said she left $15,000 to the Orphan Asylum and Day Home.

Philadelphia Department.

BY.....HENRY T. CHILD, M. D

Subscriptions will be received, and papers may be obtained at wholesale or retail, at 634 Race street, Philadelphia.

History of Spiritualism and Progress of Spiritual Ideas.

We shall continue our history, by presenting some portions of Professor V. D. Gunnings able and eloquent lectures on the geological history of man. He says:—

The world at last was ready for man, and man came. Man had forgotten his birth-place, and until our own times, science had forgotten to fill up that place, it had taken the voice of one who recorded dim and shadowy traditions. Now science turns to the far off worlds, and bids us study them, if we would read our own history. Until our own time, science had in some way thought that primeval man came and went, and left no record in the rocks. It said the stupid monsters would wander into the bogs and leave their record there, but man knew enough to keep out of there. As the boundaries of knowledge have been pushed out, man began to question the old belief, till the Duke of Argyle has avowed that every argument that man can bring to prove a greater antiquity for the race, is an argument for one of the fundamental truths of religion and a knowledge of the human race.

Man began to question his knowledge, and nations which are known only by name, began to speak to us. Egypt, which was as dumb as her own sphinxes, tells us now that five thousand seven hundred years ago Menes mounted the throne of the Pharaohs. At this period Egypt had her monuments, her dynasties. The scholar has been in China, and he has found five thousand volumes, and more than four thousand two hundred years ago, China was out in the full day of history, a nation under a higher dynasty, at the very time of the Noachic flood, she was building her pagodas, and writing her history in pillars and pyramids.

It is very manifest that the lines of human history have at least three great branches, which the human family reached more than four thousand years ago, and the further back we go the darker the night becomes. The three lines are the Chinese, the Egyptian, and the Aryan—the latter will break up into the Jew, the Persian, and the Indo-Germanite.

We know nothing about the early Egyptians back of the days of Menes, though we find stone instruments there, for Egypt passed through what we call the stone age. We might infer that from the mere fact that the Egyptian priest always used a flint knife, we know the priest has always been the last to surrender any custom, so when his neighbors had progressed and learned to cut with iron knives, he still clung to the old stone, saying "his fathers had cut with stone and he would cut with stone; what was good enough for them was good enough for him."

The Chinese Empire comprises about one-third of the human family. It is conservatism incarnate, the very school books in use to-day in China, were written by a contemporary of Daniel the prophet, and are full of old dogmas. For more than two hundred millions of men and women, China has only forty sur-names, and these sur-names grew out of tribal names, and there is an interdiction of marriage between persons of the same name. The inference is obvious, that back of Chinese civilization, was a borderland of savageism.

Of the Aryan branch we will take a single institution, that of marriage, and trace its history. When the Jews were led out of Egypt, a man married his own sister; the same is true of the early Persians and Greeks. You may trace the history of this branch of the family to the time when a man married his own mother. There was a time when a man could not be a priest who had not sprung from a union of a son and a mother. The women married many men, at the same time the men married many women. Marriage did not have the sanctity which is attached to it to-day.

There is another method by which we get at the earlier conditions of the race, I shall call it the symbolism. Long after the real thing drops out its ghost remains. An institution don't like to die, and when it does die, it leaves behind its poor shivering ghost. You are not superstitious, yet you would a little rather see the new moon over the right shoulder. It tells you that there was a time when your great grandfathers worshiped the new moon.

There are ladies here to-night who wear the marriage ring. Do you know that in former times the young men took a big club and knocking the old man down and choking the old woman, they carried off the young woman, and put an iron ring on her wrist? Now there is no knocking down, but they put a gold ring on the finger.

History takes us back more than four thousand years, for the Egyptian more than five thousand years, the marriage institution still further, symbolism still further down into the night of time.

The fathers of our race found themselves in the world with savage beasts, and in the pelting storms they took refuge in the caves. They invented stone clubs, stone knives, stone arrowheads, these were their only weapons. It was a long time before Tubal Cain taught the wandering tribes how to use iron, and when Tubal Cain did come and pointed the way up out of stone into iron, there was many and many an old fogy who said stone is better than iron, it is bad religion to cut with iron, so religion kept to stone.

Tubal Cain was a radical, he had truth, and he conquered. Iron was the first round of the ladder on which man climbed up into civilization, the second round was domestic animals. Without domestic animals no race has ever achieved civilization. What is the reason the Australian never had any civilization? Because they had no grasses which the hand of man could cultivate into grain, and no wild beasts which the mind of man could sub ue—could reach to own his kingship.

The race has domesticated twenty-six species. Twenty-four of which were found in central and western Asia. Here then is proof incontestible to my mind that the cradle of humanity was Central or Western Asia. We can not hold up the veil and look at the features of these early men, we have only glimpses; these tell us that these were men and not brutes. They were lifted immeasurably above the brutes; in their souls were dreams and thoughts of immortality, and in all times the heart of humanity has voiced its deepest hope—its most sacred trust.

A short time ago, a cave was found near the base of the Pyrenees. This was in the limestone. A very large flat stone was found laying up against the mouth of the cave, a mass of gravel and clay and sand had rolled down over the hole; in the mouth of the cave were found masses of charcoal, and further in they found the bones of the woolly elephant, the reindeer and the cave bear; in the sepulchre were found the bones of men, more than a dozen skeletons, and every bony hand clasped a stone club or a stone knife. Here we find stone tools in that which is perchance in the oldest grave yard yet found—surely a primitive burying field, and they were burying their dead, when the reindeer lived in Southern France, and when the woolly elephant and the cave bear were still living there, and that must have been toward the close of the glacial epoch. Then they buried their dead, and with them, their war clubs and knives and arrowheads, and at the door of the tomb, they had their funeral feast; they built a fire and had their feast with these animals, the reindeer, the woolly elephant and the cave bear. Very sacred to me, is that voice from the tomb sounding through unknown milleniums of primeval man; very tender to me are those memories of the funeral feast; very cheering to me in these days of doubt, is that primitive faith in the life beyond, voiced in the very door of the tomb; very inspired is that thought at the dawn of humanity, a light streaming athwart the gloom of death, a faith that brought the invisible world of the beyond to view, a ray of light unseen by fleshy eyes, revealing the invisible and eternal world. These children of the Father, looked beyond the veil to find a world unseen by mortal eyes, a world like this, for in the hand of the dead, they placed the war club to be borne away to that silent land, there to arm the same hand and strike down the bear in its jungles.

Somewhere in the viewless air, they knew there was a world of good and evil like this. Something came into the heart of man which the world around him had never known. It was the light of immortality; it was the dignity of knowing good from evil.

The world with all its grandeur and beauty, was only a garment woven around the soul, which God has called into time. I feel my exaltation, at the door of that tomb. I light anew my torch of hope I am greater than all things, There is nothing great on the globe but man, there is nothing great in man but the thinking mind. The world with all its mountain, below me rolls the ocean, two of the grandest things God ever made, save this soul of man. There rolled the ocean, its great billows leaping and bounding, lashed to fury by the storm. My soul shrank back sweatruck. Yet I could say to the ocean roll on, I am greater than thou. Roll on, the booming of thy billows, and sound of thy far off voice are but the echoes of what in me, is deathless.

What is man? Immortal! carrying in his mind the geometry of the stars, the geology of the earth, carrying in his heart the temple of justice. He looks out upon the stars, and traces the paths of worlds, and yet he is more than they are. The sun and moon shall be stricken from their thrones of light, and walk a flight of rayless solitude. The stars shall grow dim with age, and roll darkly through the voice of space, but man shall abide forever, the spirit disrobed of flesh lives on forever and forever.

NOTICE OF MEETINGS.

OREGON GROVE MEETING.

The Spiritualists of Oregon will hold a four days meeting at Halsey's Station, on the O. & C. R. R., seventeen miles north of Salem, Marion Co., commencing on Thursday, June 29th, 1871.

A general invitation is extended to all, and mediums and speakers especially.

By order of Committee. JOHN S. HAWKINS.
R. V. SHORT.

April 22d, 1871.

SPIRITUALISM.

DR. S. L. MCFADDEN AND WIFE, MAGNETIC PHYSICIAN, Spiritual Test Mediums, Business Clairvoyants, etc., have located at No. 343 W. Madison St., corner of May, up stairs, Chicago.

They invite all who wish the benefit of their mediumistic powers, to call and see them. They hold developing circles, diagnose disease without any previous knowledge of the patient, tell of the past, present and future, give news from absent and departed friends, etc. They also explain the laws of life and death, good and evil, the cause and cure of inharmony, etc., thereby enabling persons to be a law to themselves,—to be their own thinkers, teachers, doctors, and preachers. ALL SEASONS are invited to attend their circles on Sunday. The contradictions of the Bible, lying spirits, and false communications philosophically explained. Sittings for the examination of diseases, and private communications, from 9 A. M. to 5 P. M. Circles each evening; Sundays not excepted.

N. B.—To accommodate a few Boarders.

v10 n12 13t

ARRIAGE MANUFACTORY.

Waverly, N. Y.

THE UNDERSIGNED MANUFACTURES TO ORDER, and keeps on hand all varieties of Open and Top Buggies of the Best Styles; Platform Spring Wagons, with two or more seats, with or without top. This wagon is an improvement on the old two-spring wagon, and as a business wagon, or for family use, is unsurpassed. Best quality of stock used and first-class workmen employed, and all work WARRANTED.

Situated on the Erie R. R., we have good facilities for shipping, and are constantly sending work to all parts of the country.

N. KINNEY.

v9 n25 19t.

WANTED AGENTS

In every Town and City, to sell an article needed in every household. SELLS RAPIDLY. Large PROFITS to AGENTS. Send Stamp for Circulars. C. E. WOOLLEY & Co., Room 12, No. 131 Lasalle St., Chicago.

v10 n12 tf

MRS. C. H. LELAND,

Wonderful Psychometrist, Soul Reader, and Business Medium, will, upon receipt of photograph, lock of hair, or brother married or single, send to any person a correct delineation of character, with leading events in the past and future life, for one dollar. Advice concerning life, six dollars. Written communications from friends in spirit life, two dollars. Satisfaction guaranteed. Instructions for mediumistic development, one dollar. Address, Myrickville, Mass.

v10 n10 tf

THE

Descent of Man,

AND

Selection in Relation to Sex;

By Charles Darwin, M.A.F.R.S. With Illustrations.

Two Vols., over 400 pp. each, Price $2.00 per Vol.; postage 24 cts.

 For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

ABSTRACT OF COLENSO ON THE PENTATEUCH.

A comprehensive summary of Bishop Colenso's argument proving that the Pentateuch is not historically true, and that it was compiled by Samuel, Jeremiah, and other prophets from 1100 to 624 B. C. The substance of five volumes in 68 pages. Price 25 cents. AMERICAN NEWS CO., N. Y.

v10 n8 6w

CHRISTIANITY,

ITS ORIGIN, NATURE AND TENdency considered in the light of Astro-Theology.

By D. W. Hull.

THIS book is, so far as it goes, a thorough review of the Origin of the Christian system, showing it all to be plagiarized from ancient heathens. Being unlike almost any other work ever written on the subject, it cannot but be deeply interesting to all. Its arguments or deductions are bold, and so self-evidently correct that no one can gainsay them.

 For sale, wholesale and retail, at the office of this paper. Price at retail, 15 cents; postage, 2 cents.

MEDIUMS.

Dr. Abba Lord Palmer.

BOX 101, NEW BOSTON, ILLINOIS.

WONDERFUL PSYCHOMETRIST AND CLAIRVOYANT PHYSICIAN, SOUL READER AND BUSINESS MEDIUM.

Can diagnose disease by likeness, autograph, lock of hair, without a failure, and give prescription, which, if followed, will surely cure.

Can trace stolen property, tell the past, present and future—advise concerning business, and give written communications from spirit friends.

Diagnosis of disease, with prescription, $2.00. Communications from spirit friends, $3.00. Delineation of character with advice concerning marriage, $1.00.

n1 v10 tf.

MRS. A. H. ROBINSON,

Healing, Psychometric and Business Medium

148 Fourth Avenue, Chicago.

MRS. ROBINSON, while under spirit control, on receiving a lock of hair of a sick patient, will diagnose the nature of the disease most perfectly, and prescribe the proper remedy. Yet, as the most speedy cure is the essential object in view, rather than to gratify idle curiosity, the better practice is to send along with a lock of hair, a brief statement of the sex, age, leading symptoms and duration of the disease of the sick person, when she will without delay return a most potent prescription and remedy for eradicating the disease and permanently curing the patient in all curable cases.

Of herself she claims no knowledge of the healing art, but when her spirit guides are brought "en rapport" with a sick person through her mediumship, they never fail to give immediate and permanent relief, in curable cases, through the POSITIVE and NEGATIVE forces latent in the system and in nature. This prescription is sent by mail, and be it an internal remedy, or an external application, it should be given or applied precisely as directed in the accompanying letter of instructions, however simple it may seem to be; remember it is not the quantity of the compound, but, the chemical effect that is produced, that science takes cognizance of.

One prescription is usually sufficient, but in case the patient is not permanently cured by one prescription, the application for a second, or more if required, should be made in about ten days after the last, each time stating any changes that may be apparent in the symptoms of the disease.

MRS. ROBINSON also, through her mediumship, diagnoses the disease of any one who calls upon her at her residence. The facility with which the spirits control her accomplish the same, is done as well when the application is by letter as when the the patient is present. Her gifts are very remarkable, not only in the healing art, but as a psychometric, test, business and trance medium.

Terms:—Diagnosis and first prescription, $3.00; each subsequent, $2.00: Psychometric Delineation of Character, $3; answering Business Letters, $5. The money should accompany the application, to insure a reply.

J. G. W. ENTWISTLE,

CLAIRVOYANT PHYSICIAN.

No. 194 South Clark Street, Room 3, Chicago.

He is prepared to treat any of the many forms of disease, and possesses a peculiar insight into the cause and character, and a controlling power over it which seems wonderful (even to himself). His medicines are purely vegetable. Invalids at any distance will be as thoroughly examined, and the means of cure (if curable) as definitely pointed out as if they were present, by sending a lock of hair, giving name, age, sex, and two leading symptoms of the disease. Insanity and fits not treated. Examination fee, by hair, $2.00.

v10 n8 tf

DUMONT C. DAKE, M.D.,

ANALYTICAL PHYSICIAN FOR CHRONIC DISEASES.

Patients at a distance successfully treated. Medicines sent by mail or express. Send a single statement of name, age, and sex, occupation, temperament, (if not known, send photograph). Address P. O. Box 80, Chicago, Ill. Send for ANALYTICAL HEALTH JOURNAL.

v10 n8 tf

A. B. Severance,

The Well-Known Psychometrist,

Will give to those who visit him in person, or from autograph or from lock of hair, readings of character; marked changes, past and future; advice in regard to business; diagnosis of disease, with prescription; adaptation of those intending marriage; directions for the management of children; hints to the inharmoniously married, etc.

TERMS—$2.00 for full Delineation; brief Delineation $1.

A. B. SEVERANCE,
457 Milwaukee St., MILWAUKEE, WIS.

v7n18tf.

GROSVENOR SWAN, M. D.

DR. SWAN MAY BE FOUND AT ALL hours, at 117 Wabash Ave., Chicago, where he will be happy to receive calls from his old friends and patrons, and all who may require his services.

v9 n3 tf

Dr. J. Wilbur's MAGNETIC PAPER

Has cured all sorts of complaints, from cancer to cold feet. Send stamp and receive one paper free. Dr. J. Wilbur, 460 W. Randolph St., Chicago, Ill.

n10 v10 tf.

MRS. E. MANIFOLD.

Medical, Clairvoyant, and Healing Medium. Parties at a distance examined by lock of hair. Price, $1.00. Prescriptions, $1.00. Magnetic Remedies sent to all parts of the country. Address Mrs. E. G. Manifold, P. O. Box 1094, Rockford, Ill.

v10 n7 tf

813 RACE ST.

H. H. STODDARD, of 813 Race St., PHILADELPHIA, can accommodate MEDIUMS visiting that city with free rooms for business purposes, at reasonable rates.

v10n1tf

MRS. LODEMA ATWOOD,

Healing Medium,

Has been before the public as a successful Healer the past fifteen years. We rely entirely on the controling influences. We diagnose and give prescriptions by letter. Distance no objection. Will visit in person a reasonable distance those that desire, and can afford the expense. Delineation and advice in a variety of ways. Emblems we give gratuitously to all our patients, when presented by our guides. Our former custom has been to come en rapport with the applicant by the hand-writing or lock of hair; but to save time, and the unpleasant sensation of taking on the symptoms of the disease, we require the applicant to give age and sex, with one or two leading symptoms of the disease, written by the patient, if able to write—if not, send lock of hair. As the giving of tests is not the object which we seek, but to restore the patient to health by Nature's own hand, in the shortest time possible, we do not deem it necessary here to lumber up an advertisement with what we have done or what we can do, but prefer to be known by our fruits.

Terms, for diagnosis and prescription, $3; Diagnosis without prescription, $1; all subsequent prescriptions, $2 each. All letters should be accompanied with the fee, and addressed to MRS. LODEMA ATWOOD, Box 65, Lake Mills, Jefferson Co., Wis.

v10 n1 tf.

Original Essays.

Written for the Religio-Philosophical Journal.

THE LAWS OF SPIRIT COMMUNION.

By D. P. Kayner, M. D.

NUMBER THREE.

We have already shown that under certain conditions the spirit has power to travel out of its corporeal body, and appear at a distance therefrom, with all the distinctness that pertains to the person while in the body, and that under certain conditions it can unseen, take control of the organism of a medium and give a manifestation the same as a disembodied spirit. In the case of Daniel and Wm. Yeaw, for instance, there was something remarkable in the fact that his own mind was laboring in an excited state under impressions, which, though in reality false, were true to him. While in that excited mental condition—he really believing at the time that he had been shot and killed, and therefore his desire to control the brother and communicate directly the circumstances as they appeared to him, became so intense that he succeeded in accomplishing that object. In this we can see some of the causes operating to produce the result, though not fully clear.

It is evident his friends would feel an anxiety for his welfare, and would be likely to inquire of the control about him, in the circle they were holding. This would erect the telegraph line,—or complete the magnetic circle, by which means a direct communication would be established between his mind and the circle. But with regard to his vivid impressions of death, it is not so clear in that way they were brought to the mind of the circle, and their fears for his safety have taken the tangible form of the messenger of death, and as such, held psychologic control of his mind, and thus made it easy enough to control as an other mind? Or, was it accomplished through some band of spirits holding control of both mediums, to demonstrate to mankind another power of immortality?

But we have another class of phenomena, equally interesting, presenting many different phases, well worthy of our attention. I refer to those cases where the event of the departure of the spirit from this earthly life is accomplished, or where distant friends are made acquainted with the fact at the time of its occurrence.

Numerous cases of this kind are on record. Of the former, a case occurred in February, 1857, in which myself and family were directly interested. Having occasion to go from Syracuse to New York with a company of gentlemen to demonstrate a new chemical process to Prof. Chilton, on Wednesday evening my companions proposed to visit the theatre. Excusing myself, I retired to my room, and gave myself to spirit meditation and communion. After the company returned, and while still awake, I felt a strange coast to me and the dispatch for me to come home, too late for any conveyance up the river, and I was detained until the next afternoon, arriving the second day to find my child had departed. Tuesday morning, I urged the necessity of my immediate departure for home, but was finally over-persuaded by the company to remain, as I had agreed to make the experiment before the professor on Saturday afternoon. But under prevailing, as I now realize, feeling, a knock sounded at the door of our room. I said to the company, "Gentlemen, there is the telegram, and too late for my return home till Monday." On opening the door the porter said, "Here is a dispatch for Dr. Kayner." It was as follows:

"Doctor, come home. Charles has the croup. Dr. Gay says ten chances to die to one to recover."

The last train had left, until five o'clock next afternoon. I took that, was delayed seven hours on the road, and arrived at Syracuse next day at two o'clock, P. M., to find my child had departed this life at ten o'clock A. M.

The minutest details of all that followed I had seen before, while in New York; and while the funeral was being attended, it seemed to me as a farce enacted upon a tragedy—a piece of solemn mockery. I had attended that funeral in all its particulars the Thursday morning previous, in the circle.

By this we infer that our spirit friends see, before the event transpires, what is about to occur in the mundane sphere,—that they know before hand who are about to become inhabitants of that land, and that they also see all the circumstances surrounding that event, and when the mind of a medium is in the proper receptive state, they can photograph the picture in its finest lines upon that mind.

The following authentic case presents one of that class of phenomena where the representation of the death thousands of miles away, is given at the time of its occurrence:

"The late celebrated Lord Byron used to relate the following strange story of Captain Ridd, with whom he sailed to Lisbon in 1809:

This officer visited him one evening deep one night in his berth, he was awakened by the pressure of something heavy on his limbs; and there being a faint light in the cabin, could see, as he thought, distinctly, the figure of his brother, who was at that time in the naval service, in the East Indies, dressed in his uniform, and stretched across the bed. Concluding it to be an illusion of the senses he shut his eyes, and made an effort to sleep; but still the same pressure continued, and still, as often as he ventured to take another look, he saw the figure lying across him in the same position. To add to the wonder, on putting his hand forth to touch this form, he found the uniform, in which it appeared to be clothed, wet through.

On the entrance of one of his brother officers, to whom he called out in alarm, the apparition vanished; but in a few months after, he received the startling intelligence that on that night he (the brother) had been drowned in the Indian seas. Of the supernatural character of this appearance, Captain Ridd himself did not appear to have the slightest doubt."

In the summer of 1865, the putrid dysentery made sad havoc in Warren County, New York, some cases proving fatal in a few hours from the time of the attack: A child whom my wife had previously had special charge of, with her, was taken with the disease, and the third day, when I saw her, I told the physician who then had charge of the case, she could not recover, and in spite of our endeavors, she passed away about two o'clock next morning. As she passed away, her little spirit formed by my wife's bed, and smiled, and gradually rose out of sight. She knew, before she had heard of her illness, that little "Joda" was gone to dwell with the angels.

During the winter of 1865, while living in Gainesville, Ohio, her father passed over, after a short illness, he at the time being in Eastern New York, and the first knowledge I had of his illness was as given by himself at her bedside. These facts were made known to several in the house, and shortly, a letter from her sister announced the fact.

Now, in all cases of this kind, the spirit seems first to go where the strongest attractive existence or where its mind centers at the time of leaving the body,—for spirit, when free, will as certainly follow its strongest attraction as will the magnetic needle its attraction toward the North Pole.

It will doubtless, also, be attracted where it can draw the strongest support, or gain the most vital aid in time of need, to help it re-form under as favorable circumstances as possible, and if that person be a medium, they will see the departing friend, and aid them in this, their extremity,—for the spirit is naturally weak in most cases, and like a new born babe, needs some source of nourishment which the organism of the realize to be adapted to its wants, and which is in harmony therewith.

Then, what would be more natural than for the spirit to go to or near a person whose mind says made it feel easy and at home in their presence—who had imparted real vitality to it ofttimes, and warmed it to a desire to be often near them, or to dwell with them. To such the spirit memories, turn when the physical is failing, and reaching out to them on the wings of its desires, it receives from them sufficient strength to make its presence known, and enable it to pursue its journey to its home in the land of unfading loveliness—the good spirit's home.

St. Charles, Ill., May 20th, 1871.

Over the gate of death, man should arch the rainbow of everlasting life, and bid his fellowman walk through unashamed and not ashamed.

Written for the Religio-Philosophical Journal.

THE RUDIMENTAL AND THE SPIRITUAL; OR, A FEW WORDS OF REPLY TO AUSTIN KENT.

By Dr. E. B. Wheelock.

BROTHER KENT:—All true Spiritualists should never complain of being criticised, if done in the spirit of candor, and for mutual edification. There is yet plenty of room in which we may all live and learn, and grow in wisdom.

It is the following sentence, quoted from my article entitled, "Harmony vs. Inharmony" that seems to merit your criticism. It reads thus:

"As the human mind shall rise above the rudimental, and enter the spiritual, less and less will it blame the world, and vice versa. The more gross and rudimental the human mind, the greater is the inharmony that it sees. Put such a man in search of God, and his composition and thoughts would be well stored with scenes of horror and pictures of misery."

Now, friend Austin, as words are but artificial signs of ideas, perhaps my words have failed to give you my true idea,—for so it would seem from your remarks upon the above sentence.

I use the word 'mind,' as signifying the entire and the interior conscious, thinking man. By rudimental, as applied to man, I mean his external, corporeal, and physical form, with its blind sensations, whether pleasure or pain. That which I term my calling man's external body rudimental, is from the fact that observation and experience have demonstrated to me that man's visible body is but the rude beginning, the blocking out, as it were, of a more refined, or spiritual body, which in due time, and by laws immutable, will be illuminated, unfolded, from the rude.

Now, if my sentence once more,—"As the human mind (the interior, conscious man) shall rise above the rudimental and enter the spiritual (whether by inspiration, clairvoyance, or the process called death) less and less will it blame the world, and vice versa. The more gross and rudimental (the surrounding conditions or state of) the human mind, the greater is the inharmony that it sees, (and oft with pleasure). Put such a mind in search of God, and his compositions and thoughts would be well stored with scenes of horror and pictures of misery."

I fail to see wherein your criticism controverts the above statement. The whole plot history of the human race goes to confirm the truth of my statement. Who but there that give us "hell?"

The question is not one of morality or immorality, nor of big or little brains. Is it one of spiritual sight, a question of divine or spirit illumination which unfolds the mind to a fuller comprehension of the divine origin, and divine use of both good, and what you call evil. I opine that all minds thus illumined, can not fail to see that in due time your finite, time-serving, and darling pet, the devil, will dwindle down to nothing, and good, infinite good, be everywhere acknowledged to exist.

You speak of "Jesus." Did he not say? "Blessed are they that mourn,"—either with sorrow or rheumatism—"for they shall be comforted."

What did he say to his murderers? Did he blame them? The answer is nay. And why? Ah he saw the truth of my sentence. His mind now credits the history—had risen above the rudimental and entered the spiritual, and less and less he felt to blame his foe, and in meekness and faith no doubt, he asked his father, spirit, or God, to pardon his, to forgive even the shedders of innocent blood.

Pure reason sees no absolute evil. Human sympathy may fancy a thousand wrongs.

You also speak of Wm. Garrison. Did he whine and cry for vengeance to be dealt out to the "author of iniquity?" Nay; he was sufficiently illumined, and his mind had so far risen above the rudimental, that he could see the good that would come of it. He did not play the bull-dog—seek only the seeming evil, and deny the existence of Infinite Good.

In your first paragraph we are informed that you once knew a very "moral man" who had unusual clear and deep sense of harmony and inharmony of good and of evil in all their forms, and in the last year of their acquaintance with him, he solemnly declared to you, "everybody" A most singular man—why, I have been acquainted with many such. Which did you call him—a wise man or a fool? When young, he had a "deep sense" of inharmony and evil. When older, he seldom, if ever, uttered a word of evil and harmony now change its appearance, or seem to him, as age advanced, so that he had no cause to blame either, and as a consequence, he became a consistent Spiritualist? Or, did he still see evil and inharmony, as black as tar, and fixed as fate, and no one to blame for it. We think, with age, he knew in wisdom, and hence he plainly saw the truth of my statement, that as the human mind shall rise above the rudimental and enter the spiritual, less and less will it "blame any body."

You have also given us the rise of this man's "moral brain," even to the fractional an inch. Whether he had or had not the knowledge of the moral one, you have not informed us. But we infer that he might have had an immoral one, as well. And it so, was he the author of either? Was his "moral brain" the result of, or was the immoral one the result of demerit? Or, did the same good providence that gave the one give the other also? Upon phrenological principles, would man's spiritual identity, either here or hereafter, be the same were he to lose one single faculty, full to whatever name you will. Each and all are essential to make the man. Each alike are the gifts of God. Each, in themselves considered, are legitimate and right, they being the product of infinite wisdom—a Deific attribute in which you take no stock—must in the end ultimate in man's greatest good. Yes, Brother Kent, for once you are right—at least when saying the "exact truth is wisest and best." In your text, suppose you give a little more of it, and by so doing, much oblige your friends—and humble servant.

I beg pardon. I had nearly forgotten your last sentence. It reads thus:

"If a God," he does, or does not sympathise with the sufferer. Hence, it is proper to know whether the believers in an "infinite God" have or have not reason for the well founding of his "love, pity and compassion." My dear sir, the "believers" in an "infinite God," perceive that whatever is—and by whatever name it may be known, are but so many modes of God's self-manifestation. And as God is, so he must be infinite. If love, pity and compassion are entities and have real existence, they must belong to the infinite. And so do men and angels belong to the same infinite, and are but constituents thereof. So of wisdom, science, and feelings of pleasure and pain, and whatever thoughts and opinions that either you or me and all else possess, are but the modes of infinite manifestation. Hence, as I said, according to my try, are but exhibitions of the way and mode and manner of God's existence. Aside from the infinite, there is neither shadow or substance.

You seem to speak of God as one thing, yourself as another. And then you suppose we "believers in an infinite God" do the same. In this you are mistaken. There is a bigger meaning in many words we use than as yet you seem to comprehend. And yet we blame no one; but if we did, that blame would not be on side of the infinite. It would only be one of the infinite varieties of an infinite God's self manifestation.

A little clearer thinking, Brother Kent, and you may come out of your materialism yet, and become a real philosophical Spiritualist—perceiving that whatever happens, was to happen, from the fact that it did happen.

Letter from Benjamin Todd.

BROTHER JOURNAL:—On the fourth of last month my better half and I bade adieu to Webloot and took the steamer for California, having been nearly two years absent, during which time we had travelled the state of Oregon and Washington Territory pretty thoroughly. On some accounts we felt it a happy deliverance; on others, a matter of regret. We left some warm friends, who will ever be cherished in our memories for their sympathy with us, shown clearly by their acts of kindness toward us.

In Portland there are some whole-souled Spiritualists, such as D. H. Hendee, N. Williams, I. M. Peters, Alfred S. Graves, Warren Davis and others. No more willing worker with his head, arms and money, can be found than D. H. Hendee. He has ably braved public opinion, and fought for the cause years when he stood alone, nor once has he allowed his personal interest in financial affairs; however much he was the loser, to cause him to swerve from the line of duty, or cater for a moment to the good opinions of others. And yet, a more priest ridden hole can not be found to day than the little city of Portland, Oregon; and "Holy Joe," Hendee's home too. It has the vices of older cities, but lacks their virtues. It would hardly be deemed proper, even there, for those women who ply their trade to advertise their traffic publicly. But they have a nice way of doing the thing covertly, viz., go and join the churches, and it answers every purpose. Hence the churches have a plenty of male members, and are well sustained; so much that they have become proud, arrogant and tyrannical, and no stranger can get into business there and hope for success unless he attends some one of the churches and pays his regular assessment.

Probably there are not less than five or six hundred Spiritualists in Portland, and yet it would be difficult to get out of every ten to attend a public lecture. They dare not go. Bread and butter, and the various wants of their families [illegible] out of their boots in no time.

Oregon is the finest agricultural country in the world, and is rather a small place, although in time of the majority of its inhabitants—well, never mind, it is all the same whether I say it or not. If Gabriel's trumpet did not resurrect, the other world would not lose anything in mental worth or moral power.

We spent three months in Washington Territory last summer, visiting the towns on Puget Sound. An entirely different race of beings are to be found there than those who inhabit Oregon, and I may say of them, safely and truly, that they are human beings.

Olympia, situated at the head of the Sound, is a beautiful place, and lovely. They have two orthodox churches there in a languishing condition, and have not enough of orthodox religion to hurt the place or people much. There are quite a number of liberal and Spiritualists in the place. George A. Barnes, the banker, and his wife, are two noble souls, and it would be difficult to find two better or more efficient workers in the private walks of life; nor could you well find those that better exemplify their principles as Spiritualists, by helping the suffering poor and needy among their fellow beings; may the angels bless them for it.

Bhilocoom, the next town as you go down the Sound, is rather a small place, although in time of large things in the future seems to be prevalent among the people. There are but few Spiritualists in the place, but while visiting them I noticed a liberality and depth of thought in the family that served to be the source of inspiration of quite a large share of the people.

Seattle is quite a live place, and is at present in a thriving condition. There are many Spiritualists in Seattle, but Smith, the U. S. Collector, and Dr. Andrews appear to be the leading ones, or at least the most active workers. At the time I was with them they were in a divided condition, owing to beliefs of trivial fact had arisen between two mediums. This is one of the most foolish things imaginable, and one of the greatest drawbacks that Spiritualism has to contend with. If their rivalry consisted in "seeing who could best work and best agree," it would be far better for them and the cause they have espoused.

Port Townsend is a fine little place, and is the port of entry for the Sound. Quite a number of good Spiritualists reside here. Our stay there was short, but while there we need very kindly for our welfare while with them.

From Port Townsend we went to Victoria, the capital of British Columbia. Here we found it virgin soil, as far as Spiritualism is concerned. We gave a course of seven lectures to crowded houses, at the close of which, at the earnest request of the people, we remained and gave a second course. Think it will yield down as good soil and destined to bear fruit an hundred fold.

Just prior to our leaving Oregon we received a letter from a particular friend of ours, Mr. F. W. Mackie, stating that Elder Miles Grant was in San Francisco, slashing around and spoiling for a fight with a Spiritual speaker, also inquiring if I would accomodate the Elder. I immediately answered that I would, and authorized Bro. Mackie to make the arrangements for it. As Elder Grant is one of the city, Bro. Mackie wrote to him and received an answer from the Elder that "with the help of God" he would meet me. On the strength of that reply, Bro. Mackie had logged me to go to Oregon to come down. I answered by telegraph that I would come on the next steamer, and did so; but when I arrived here, Elder Miles Grant, be it known to all the world, backed down. Was there a great number of excuses, to be sure, but no one of them was valid. Now which shall I infer—that Elder Grant acted cowardly and mean after I had come a sea voyage of six hundred miles for one lecture, or shall I infer that his God refused to help him and he dared not undertake it alone? We are more inclined to accept the latter position, viz.: that his God went back on him. Now if his God did badly to back out, he is a coward God, anyhow; if my God served me so I would not strike another blow for him. If the Devil stole all his possessions. Better get even with your God, Elder Grant, you've got a back on him. When Elder Grant failed, J. S. Loveland threw down the glove against Spiritualism, and offered to take the affirmative of the following proposition, it being an expression of his present views:

"Resolved, That the phenomena commonly known as spiritual manifestations can be accounted for by forces inherent in nature, and performed without the aid of any force from disembodied spirits."

An agreement was attached to the resolution allowing me to build the affirmative arguments as I might deem proper, as well as rebut my opponent. We discussed it six nights—two hours each night—dividing the time equally.

I was aware that in going into the argument I would have no novice in the subject as a debater to meet. I well knew that Mr. Loveland's experience in the phenomena and philosophy was equal to my own. Nevertheless I felt confident that I had the truth on my side, which I believed would be in error. It is my opinion, and I think the opinion of the audience generally, that Mr. Loveland signally failed. I deeply regret that he should express the course that he does; but he is entitled in so doing, all right, he will receive no blame from me.

We shall leave San Francisco ere long for the Eastern states. Shall go by Omaha, from Council Bluffs through Iowa to Chicago. Any of the friends in Iowa that wish us to visit them, can address us immediately in care of F. W. Mackie, San Francisco, Cal., until further notice.

Letter from M. F. Chamberlin.

BRO. JONES:—In looking over your list of spiritual works, I was unable to find any describing the various ailments to which the human body is heir to, with treatment therefor. The spirits have record us profitable instructions upon all other subjects, and why not on that? It is a work that we are much in need of at the present time,—in fact I know of no work that would meet with so liberal a patronage as such an one.

If some good reliable medium or mediums would make it a part of their mission to give the spirits an opportunity of compiling a spiritual system of medicine or treatment of diseases, they would receive the blessings of thousands that are afflicted, and the thanks of all liberal minded practitioners, who are not blessed with mediumistic power enough to receive such information, or guidance directly from the spirits themselves.

While we are looking after spiritual life, let us not forget the material.

Hamilton, Nevada, Apr. 23d, 1871.

Sick people remain uncured, not so much for lack of books, as for the want of that life investigating power, imparted from spirits through healing media. Such mediums as are required for healing the sick, are daily being developed, and in a few years will be found in every school district throughout the enlightened world.—ED. JOURNAL.

CAUSES OF FAILURE.

Letter from J. L. Potter.

BRO. JONES:—My experience among societies, and Spiritualists generally, has led me to certain conclusions, that to me are true, as to causes why we do not succeed better in some places, in building up a good, strong, healthy society. Many claim to be opposed to organization and to settled speakers; while others are ever crying, trance, normal, inspirational, scientific, or something different than the one they have. The cause has been languishing for some years at La Crosse, Wis. What has been the trouble? Nothing but this. The President of the Rev. Mr. Deer as their pastor. And Laura De Force Gordon would be at her father's house for weeks, and never get even an invitation to speak. The Spiritualists' house was standing idle all of the time she was there. A Mr. Cox said that Mr. Deer said publicly, that "all the spiritual element of La Crosse, that need either serve or believe in the Universalist church." The Spiritualists are organized at La Crosse, and have a good hall of their own. Still the officers will play into the hands of Universalists, with their influence and money, leaving their own cause to starve and die. H. S. Brown, M. D., of Milwaukee, gives us a little idea of how the Spiritualists of that city are doing. In the Banner of April 22nd, he says:

"Rev. Rowland Conner is employed by the Unitarians—many of whom are Spiritualists; and he gives spiritual food, as good as a Spiritualist would. He is increasing the numbers who attend the church, is quite popular; and thus the Spiritualistic work is being done in this city."

Does this argue for or against organized effort? Perhaps the Universalist and Unitarian churches are not "organized" bodies; still, I am of the opinion they are. Would you call Brother Deer and Brother Conner "settled speakers," or not? Brother Conner "is quite popular." Why? Because "he gives them spiritual food, as good as our own speakers." Does Spiritualism sound better; is its life giving truths sweeter to the spiritual ear, coming from beneath the debris of a Universalist or Unitarian church; spoken by an "ordained priest," than though it were spoken openly and boldly by one of our avowed speakers, "trance or inspirational?"

That looks to me like a bid for policy men and speakers to rally around our standard, that the real characteristic trait of our faith might be covered up, and the real issues kept in the dark.

At Winona the Spiritualists tried years ago to unite with the Unitarians and Universalists, and be one church. They run together for a season, and death to all was the result, neither party have been able to hold their heads up as a society since. At Lake City the Spiritualists and Universalists have been looking forward toward a union, but the Spiritualists have got their eyes open before they got in very deep. Each party will have to run their own side hereafter. That is the way it should be. One or the other must die in the end. Spiritualism never can be Universalism, as they preach it,—or "free religion" either. We might as well set up for ourselves, first as last, for it will have to be one thing or the other with each individual. We can not be both at the same time, and deal justly with both "faiths" I know that systematized labor will cause Spiritualism to prosper under its own name, but as for myself, if not better in any place, as it will by calling it either Unitarianism, Universalism, or Free Religion, with no greater cost of time or means, than though we coalesced with our liberal Christian brethren.

If the Spiritualists would do one quarter as much as Christians do, every speaker and medium could be employed, and get paid for their labor—spreading the truths of spirit communion broadcast for the world. If there were but one million believers in the land, and each one would pay the sum of "fifty cents" a year, we would have five hundred thousand dollars to spend yearly in the work. But when it is said there are six millions in the world, and do not raise the above named sum, can we wonder that the cause lags? Some generous souls are often heard to say, "The angels will do the work;" we need not bother our brains about the matter. When Spiritualists will unite both influence and means for the furtherance of this cause, there is no power on earth that can impede its progress. If we have got the best, let us act as though we thought it better than all the rest combined. Divided forces never conquered disciplined armies, and we have not even in this greatest of truths ever sent to man. Spiritual fam now—Spiritualism ever!

Plain View, Minn., May 18th, 1871.

Reply to Magnetic Correspondents.

BRO. JONES:—"The cry is still they come." As I am not yet quite annihilated by the various attempts to submerge facts by those whose education prevents them from seeing great truths, I again insist that I am no psychologist (magnetically understood), nor do I possess any powers which are only in the "mind's eye" of those who were taught and made to believe that there was such a thing as animal magnetism in nature.

Such a power is only imaginary, and as I do not make passes, exercise a will or attempt to force persons into a somnambulic condition—if they feel anything in my presence it is purely imaginary upon their part, and no power in me, for I am opposed to it, do not believe in it, nor exercise it.

Because some persons cannot enter the somnambulic condition in my presence ought to prove that it is not magnetism that effects it in those that do so; and because one who has been falsely taught he "never for a moment felt to endorse my claim," is no proof nor reason that it is not true and that others will not embrace it.

I do not admit that there is such a power as "fascination" in any person, animal, or snake, and all such exhibitions result from a power in the brain of the subject, the animal, or the bird, etc., that reaches out (even independent of their own consciousness) and observes, feels or learns their surroundings, and through fear, faith, belief, care, anxiety or education, give an outward show of what has been called a "spell" or charm.

Will those who are wild and self-satisfied upon the subject of animal magnetism tell, whether the secret or the effete matter which some call "magnetic emanations," is not peculiar in all individuals, and if so—how magnetism, which has neither smell or taste, can assume or cause a peculiar scent in each person, so that a dog can find his master—for it must be peculiar or he could not do so? Accounting to late assertions magnetism must be a tenth wonder, and if its qualities keep pace with the ideas of its advocates, I should not be surprised if it enabled them (under the circumstances) to account for every thing, and become the ne plus ultra of their ambition, and supply them with all they need.

Because mediums, or susceptible persons, may feel or be able to distinguish a difference between persons and things, &c., even at a distance or through a stone wall, is no proof that it is magnetism, and not a power or a quality of their own faculties that does it. If it were magnetism, brains would be of little use. Upon holding out the hand, any one can imagine that they feel a something going out of it, or coming into it, as they please. I can do it or so can any one, even those who are supposed to be negative—and it is simply the pulsation that produces the sensation, which the imagination can direct either in or out. It is true, clairvoyants can see a something emanating from all persons, but it is only the effete matter which is always escaping through the pores of the skin, and being loaded with moisture, is material and perderable, consequently can be seen by all those whose eyes are in that peculiar condition.

Mineral magnetism is only made evident to our senses, by its influence upon a steel needle that has been charged with that imponderable fluid—Copper, zinc, and all other substances, except nickle and cobalt, etc., are apparently not affected by it, and as they are not, it is more than likely that it has no appreciable effect upon the human system, and none whatever of such a nature as has been ascribed to it by magnetic operators. Some of your contributors are rather muddled upon the subject of magnetism, and mix up the mineral with the "animal," which is not orthodox or according to Mesmer. There certainly are such terms as "terrestrial magnetism," "magnetic equator," "magnetic meridian," "magnetic poles," "magnetic dip," "magnetic variation," &c., but they all have reference to mineral magnetism, and have nothing to do with the supposed animal variety.

Somnambulism is simply a condition produced by an act of the subject's own will, after they have been taught by proper instructions, and is, therefore, neither "a man of straw," nor a pet theory, any more than it is caused by an "animal magnetic fluid," or any other outside influence.

Time will bring the light to those who do not see, and truth will stand, though prejudice oppose, and all the shafts of misdirected minds, are brought to bear against it.

Fraternally,
WM. B. FAHNESTOCK.

A Card from Mrs. King.

BROTHER JONES—DEAR SIR: Will you have the kindness to allow me to inform the public, through your columns, that I have decided to enter the lecturing field for a season.

I am, and have been for some time, gathering thoughts from the inexhaustible fountain of inspiration, in the quiet of home, where they come the purest, the freest from the dross of disturbing influences, and recording them for use upon the rostrum.

Besides subjects relating particularly to the Spiritual Philosophy, I have carefully prepared lectures on "Marriage and Divorce," "Woman—her Relations to Society," "Religious liberty as God in the Constitution," "Religious Culture," etc.

My business will be to treat all questions relating to reform in connection with Spiritualism, and to adapt myself to the wants of any community in which I may be called to labor.

I write lectures because the law of mediumship proclaims to me that I can do the best for the spirit who teaches through me, and therefore serve the people best in the use of my time. Yet I can adapt my mediumship to circumstances, and it will serve me as a treasure from which to draw on all occasions and under all circumstances as I need.

I favor settled speaking, yet will make short engagements for the present.

MRS. MARIA M. KING.

Hammonton, N. J.

Letter from W. Persons.

BROTHER JONES: I read an essay in your last number, from Dr. Moses L. Knapp, giving a very interesting account of the falling stones in Mexico.

I have known the Doctor and his family for many years. He is a fine scholar, an eminent medical man and author, and a gentleman of the highest integrity.

A friend of mine, Isaac Cook, of St. Louis, has written you in relation to an oil-well and lead mineral lying near St. Louis. Bro. Cook was formerly a Methodist preacher, and the spirits converted him to our philosophy. He is a first-class medium, sees spirits, writes under influence. He has brought out a number of useful inventions; but is poor, with a large family. His influence have shut up his way, and desire that he prosecute the boring for oil. I have talked with them; they appear to be of a high order and give a very clear and interesting statement of the great wealth which they wish him to bring to light for the benefit of humanity.

Three to five hundred dollars would fully test the matter. If you can call the attention of some of your readers to the subject of helping Bro. Cook in this matter, and the small outlay is made, I have but little doubt that you would be instrumental in doing great good. The investment is a small one. The results promised are large.

Fraternally yours,
W. PERSONS.

Chicago, June 7th, 1871.

Letter from Eli F. Brown.

ED. JOURNAL:—The spiritual elements have been considerably agitated in this city recently, and as the interests of the cause are now taking definite shape, it becomes a matter of some importance. During the month of May, Moses Hull was with us, and gave eight of his stirring discourses, which have so helped to bring out the energies of the liberal minds of the city, that a working society is now being formed, which proposes to establish the means of raising a fund to maintain lectures regularly. Mrs. Mary L. Strong is lecturing during this month. In a few weeks we think the friends will be ready for the establishment of a Lyceum. By Autumn we believe that Dayton, with a good working organization and Lyceum, will take its place among the localities in our country that are doing a profitable work for the cause of religious emancipation. Dayton is a beautiful city—one of as much outward display of wealth, happiness and prosperity, as can be found in the West. It is nevertheless thoroughly steeped in Orthodoxy and Catholicism, but opposed to this misfortune it has a large number of Spiritualists and "Free Thinkers in its midst, who are banding together and making an effort in behalf of the good and the true, can do much to lift its manner of thought to a higher plane of intelligence and spirituality.

Dayton, Ohio.

Religion wraps all our life in its own wide mantle, takes note of the private conduct of the individual man, and the vast public concerns of the greatest nation and the whole race of mankind. By the sun, nearly sixty millions of miles away, comes every morning, and folds its warm embrace, each great and every little thing in the round world.—Theodore Parker.

Price-List of Books.

LIST OF BOOKS FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

All orders by mail, with the price of books ordered, and the additional amount mentioned in the following list of prices for postage, will meet with prompt attention.

Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies	75	16
Artificial Somnambulism. By Dr. Newton	1.50	20
A Revelation of Departed Spirits	.50	08
Alta Vista, a Story for Children. By Lois Waisbrooker	1.50	16
American Crisis, by Warren Chase	.25	06
Answers to Questions of Practical and Spiritual Importance	1.50	20
Apocryphal New Testament	2.50	16
A Peep into Ancient Tradition, by Rev. Orrin Abbot	.75	12
Antiquity and Duration of the World by G. H. Toulmin, M. D.	.25	4
An Hour Opener, by Lepa. Cloth,	.75	12
Paper,	.50	04
A Roman Lawyer in Jerusalem in the first century by W. W. Story	.15	8
Address on Spiritualism, by T. G. Forster	.15	02
Analogy Between the Facts of the Bible and the Facts of odern Spiritualism, by T. G. Forster	.15	02
Arcana of Spiritualism, by H. Tuttle	2.00	24
Biography of Satan, By E. Graves Price 35 Cents		02
Better Views of Living, by A. B. Child	1.00	12
Bloomers of Our Spring, (a Poetical Work,) by Hudson and Emma Tuttle	1.25	16
Beyond the Breakers, a Tale of Village Life in the West. By Robert Dale Owen	2.00	24
Book of Poems, by J. Wm. Van Namee. Cloth	.75	8
Branches of Palm, by Mrs. J. S. Adams, a book for every Spiritualist	1.25	16
Bethesdaic, by Professor W. Denton	.10	2
Bhagvat-Geeta, or Krishna-Arjoon Dialogues Against the Lusts of Life, and Wealth, by J. R. Gardner, A. M. M. D. Paper	1.00	06
Cloth	1.50	14
Bomber Constitution of Man	1.75	16
Common Sense Thoughts on the Bible, by William Denton	.10	02
Cosmology, by G. W. Ramsey, M. D.	1.50	20
Common Sense, by Thomas Paine	.20	02
Christ Idea in History, H. Tuttle	1.25	16
Chestnut Pamflet, or the Curse of the Drunkard's Appetite, by Julia H. Friend, with an introduction by H. C. Wright	1.00	12
Christ and the people, by A. B. Child, M.D	1.25	14
Christianity; its influence on Civilization, and its relation to Nature's Religion, by Caleb S. Weeks	.25	02
Christianity No Finality or Spiritualism Superior to Christianity.—Wm. Denton,	.10	02
Criticism on the Theological Idea of Deity, by H. B. Graves,	1.00	16
Descent of man, by Darwin. Two Vols. ($2.00 per Vol)	4.00	46
Davenport Brothers, their Remarkable and Universal History	1.50	20
Day of Doom, A Poetical Description of the Great and Last Judgment with other poems, from the ninth edition of 1715	1.00	12
Devil's Pulpit, by Rev. Robert Taylor, with Sketch of the Life.	2.00	20
Dawn. A Novel of intense interest to progressive people	1.75	24
Dealings with the Dead, by P. B. Randolph	.75	12
Death and the After Life, by A. J. Davis, paper 50, postage 4, cloth	.75	12
Errors of the Bible. Demonstrated by the Truths of Nature. By Henry. C. Wright. Paper, 35 cts; postage 4 cts. Cloth	.50	8
Exeter Hall, a Theological Romance	.60	08
Empire of the Mother, over the Character and Destiny of the Race, H. C. Wright paper	.75	12
Cloth
Fales and True Revival of Religion, by Theodore Parker	.10	02
Footfalls on the Boundary of Another World, by Robert Dale Owen	1.75	24
Familiar Spirits and Spiritual Manifestations, by Dr. Newby Pamf.	.20	2
Free Thoughts Concerning Religion, or Nature v s Theology, by A. J. Davis	.20	2
Fragitive Wife, by Warren Chase. Paper	.50	4
Festival Hall, an Inspirational Poem, Mrs. M. J. Wilcoxson, Medium	.25	2
Gazelle, a Tale of the Great Rebellion, by Emma Tuttle	1.25	16
Gist of Spiritualism, by Warren Chase	.50	04
Great Harmonia, by A. J. Davis. 5 vols, viz: Vol. 1 The Physician. Vol. 2 The Teacher; Vol. 3 The Seer; Vol. 4. The Reformer; Vol. 5. The Thinker. Each	1.50	20
Gymnastic Manual for Teachers and Students	.10	2
God Idea in History, by Hudson Tuttle	1.25	16
God Dealing with Slavery, by Thomas Richmond. Cloth $1.00; paper	.75	04
Gleanings from the Past, by G. C. Stewart,	1.00	08
Health by good Living W. W. Hall M. D.	1.50	20
Harbinger of Health, by A. J. Davis	1.50	20
Harmonial Man, or Thoughts for the Age, by A. J. Davis, Paper	.50	4
Cloth	.75	12
History and Philosophy of Evil, by A. J. Davis Paper	.50	4
Cloth	.75	12
Hayward's Book of all Religions, including Spiritualism	2.00	24
Holy Bible and Mother Goose, by H. C. Wright	.25	02
How and Why I became a Spiritualist	.75	12
Helen Harlow's Vow, By L. Waldbrauber	.50	04
How to Bathe, by R. T. Miller, M. D., paper	.50	4
Cloth	.75	12
Hedged In, by Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, author of Gates Ajar	1.50	16
Hidden Globe	2.00	20
History and Philosophy of Marriage, or Polygamy and Monogamy compared	1.50	16
History of the Intellectual Development of Europe by J. W. Draper, M. D., L. L. D., cloth	2.00	20
Human Physiology, Statistical and Dynamical, or the Conditions and Course of the Life of Man, by J. W. Draper, M. D., L. L. D. 320 pages, 8.50 sheep 6,50	6,00	60
History of the supernatural, (2 Vols., 8.00 pages each)	3.00	40
Hit, by Mary M. Wilkins	1.25	16
Institutes, by Mrs. F. Kingman	1.25	16
Important Truths, a book for every child	.25	2
Is the Bible Divine? by S. J. Finney, paper	.50	4
Cloth	.75	8
Is there a Devil? The argument Pro and Con	.25	2
Inquirer's Text Book, by Robert Cooper	1.25	16
Interrogations Considerations from Spirit Land, Mrs. M. E. Park, Medium	1.25	16
Incidents in my Life, by Dr. D. D. Home, Introduction by Judge Edmonds	1.25	16
Infidel, or Inquirer's Text Book by Robert Cooper	1.25	16
Is it the Despair of Science? by W. D. Gunning	.15	02
Jesus of Nazareth, by Alexander Smyth	1.50	20
Jehovah Unveiled, or the Character of the Jewish Deity Delineated	.20	4
Joan of Arc—A Biography, translated from the French, by Sarah M. Grimkee	1.00	12
Kiddle's Sorcery of the Reigning Price, paper bound 50 cents. Bound bound	.75	08
Koran, with explanatory notes, by George Sale 8 vo. 479 pages, best edition yet published	3.50	40
Koran. Or, Life of Mohammed, Translated by George Sale, Gent. 12 mo., 472 pages	1.50	24
Life Line of the Lone One, by Warren Chase	1.00	12
Lily's Yule-tide	.50	04
Life of Thomas Paine, with critical and explanatory observations of his writings, by G. Vale	1.00	16
Life of Jesus, by Renan	1.75	20
Love and its Hidden History, by F. R. Read-Ish	1.00	16
Life in the Beyond, an Undeveloped Spirit's History, F. H. Smith, medium	.10	2
Lyric of the Golden Age, by E. L. Rexford	1.50	20
Legalized Prostitution, or Marriage as it, and as it should Be, by O. S. Woodruff, M. D.	1.00	16
Life and Moral Axioms of Confucius, by M. R. K. Wright	.25	02
Letters to Elder Miles Grant, by Rev. Moses Hull	.25	02
Lecture, Dedication, Deed Poe. R. G. Wright. Cloth, Paper,	.75	08
Lessons Guide. Cloth cover	.50	04
Paper cov'r	.25	2
My Love and I, by Abby M. Laffin Ferre	.50	8
Magic Staff, an Autobiography of A. J. Davis	1.75	24
Marriage, by Myron Colby	.25	02
Marriage and Parentage, by Henry C. Wright	1.25	20
Ministry of Angels Realized, by A. E. Newton	.75	12
Mistakes of Moses	1.50	20
Mental Physic, by Dr. Haddock	.75	12
Home and the Issuities, by Morrill Munson	1.50	16
Mrs. Packard's Prison Life	1.50	16
Mormon at the Bend of Life, by D. S. Cantrall	.50	08
Mystery Children, (for Lyceums.) by A. J. Davis,	.50	8
Mediumship	.20	2
Mental Cure	1.00	12
Mediums, and other Stories, by Lizzie Doten	1.50	20
Marriage, its Laws and Consequences, with Brief Instructions for the Restoration of Spirit Circles, by J. S. Powell	.25	02
Man a Trinity, by T. S. Forster	.15	02
Man a Instigator, Ancient, by T. S. Forster	.15	02
Modern American Spiritualism 1848 to 1868, by Emma Hardinge, or how would you like it, by Annie Lord's Widow	2.75	44
Dealing Lectures (Twenty Discourses) by A. J. Davis	1.75	20
Man and his relations, by Professor S. B. Brittain	4.00	60
Nature's Divine Revelations, by Andrew Jackson Davis	5.00	60
New Testament Miracles, and Modern Miracles, by J. H. Bowler	.10	4
Night Side of Nature, by Crow	1.25	16
Ordeal of Life, Through Dr. J. C. Grimes; Medium,	.25	04
Orthodoxy False, since Spiritualism is True, by Wm. Denton	.10	02
Our Planet, Geology by Denton	1.50	20
Optimism, The Lesson of Ages	.75	12
Origin of Species, Darwin	2.00	24
Origin of Civilization and Primitive Condition of Man, by Sir J. Lubbock	2.00	31
One Religion, One Creed, by Rose Wisner,	1.5	.12
Origin of Species, with Notes and References, by G. F. Kittredge	.10	02
Sermons and Stories, by J. J. Davis	1.50	20
Tre-Adamite Man, by Randolph	1.50	20
Physiology of Woman by C. Morril, M. D.	1.50	20
Planchette—The Despair of Science, by Epes Sargent	1.25	16
Philosophy of Spiritual Intercourse. A. J. Davis. Paper 60 cts; postage 8 cts. Cloth	1.00	16
Principles of Nature, by Mrs. M. M.-King	1.75	24
Poems from the Inner Life, by Lizzie Doten	1.25	16
Philosophy of Creation, by Thomas Paine, through Horace Wood, Medium. Cloth, Paper	.60	08
Real Life in Spirit Land given Inspirationally by Mrs. Marth M. King	1.00	16
Rules for forming Spiritual Circles, by Samuel Harsha	.5	02
Sexual Physiology, by R. T. Trall, M. D	2.00	20
Strange Visitors, Dictated through a clairvoyant	1.50	20
Spiritual Harp	2.00	24
Abridged Edition	1.00
Sequel to The Love Life, by the Spirit of Dr. R. E. Rose	.20	4
Spiritual Tracts by Judge Edmonds	.20	4
Self Abnegationist; or the true King and Queen, by H. C. Wright, Paper	.50	4
Cloth	.75	12
Spiritualism, or Directions in Development, by A. M. Ladis Paper	.50	4
Self-Contradictions of the Bible	.25	2
Soul Affinity, by A. B. Child, M. D.	.20	02
Sexology as the Philosophy of Life, by Mrs. E. O. Willard	2.00	24
Six Lectures on Theology and Nature, by Emma Hardinge, Paper	.75
Cloth	1.00
Soul of Things, by William and Elizabeth Denton	1.50	20
Spirit Manifestations, by Adin Ballou	.15	02
Spirit Mysteries Explained, by A. J. Davis	1.75	20
Supremacy of Reason, by Moses Hull,	.10	02
Social Evils by Mrs. M. M. King	.25
Spiritual Philosophy versus Disbelief, by Mrs. M. M. King	.25
Sense and Nonsense, S. M. Landis, M. D	2.00	20
Story of Jesus, by W. Tucker,	.75	08
Spiritual Songs, S. W Tucker,	.15	02
Spirit Life of Theodore Parker, through the Mediumship of Miss R. Rannedell	.50	02
Seven Hour System of Grammar, by Prof. D. P. Howe,	1.00	08
Paper,	.50	04
Science of Evil, by Joel Moody	1.75	20
Seership, Randolph	1.50	20
Spiritual Manifestations, by J. S. Rymer	.10	02
The Fountain, by A. J. Davis,	1.00	12
The Irreconcilable Records, or Genesis and Geology, by Wm. Denton,	.25	04
Cloth,	.40	06
The Bible in India,	2.00	30
The Faithful Guardian, an Inspirational Story, by J. Williams,	1.50	16
The Bible in the Balance,	1.50	16
That Terrible Question, by Moses Hull	.10	02
True Love. What is it and What it is not, by A. B. Davis	.5	02
The Dynamic Cure, by Leroy Sunderland	$1.50	16
The Book of Physiology, by A. J. Davis,	$1.50	16
The Future Life, by Mrs. Sweet	1.50	20
The Question Settled, by Moses Hull	1.50	16
The Golden Wife Open, by Mrs. M. M. King	1.50	16
The Gates Ajar, by Miss. E. S. Phelps	1.50	16
The Orphan's Struggle, by Mrs. H. M. Gross	.75	12
The Pearl Diver Dr. O. W. Story	.75	12
The Gospel of Good and Evil, by Silver	1.50	16
The Trance, by Leroy Sunderland	1.50	16
The Great Bible, by W. Nicolay	1.00	12
The Merits of Jesus Christ and the Merits of Thomas Paine as substitutes for merits in others. What is the difference between them? H. C. Wright	.25	4
The Philosophical Dictionary of Voltaire. Fifth American Edition, 576 octavo pages, (subject matter, large and most correct edition in the English Language. Contains more matter than the London Edition, which sells for $10.00	5.00	60
The Disputes, by Rev. Robert Taylor, written by him while imprisoned for blasphemy. This work is a history of the origin, evidence, and early history of Christianity	2.00	32
The Inner Mystery, an Inspirational Poem by Lizzie Doten	.50	08
The Spheres, William Denton	.10	02
The True Velvet	1.25	16
The Man-God Philosopher, Voltaire	.25	2
The Woman who Dared, by Epes Sargent	1.50	20
Theological and Miscellaneous Writings of Thomas Paine	2.00	24
Thomas Paine's Pilgrimage in the Spirit World	.75	08
The System of Nature, or Laws of the Moral and Physical World, by Baron D' Holbach	2.00	24
The Poems of Life, by J. S. Adams. Paper cover, Board cover	.50	06
Cloth	.75	12
Tobacco and its Effects, by H. Gibbons, M. D.	.20	02
The Penetralia, by A. J. Davis	1.75	24
The Talk a, a Satirical Rhapsody	.75	08
The Rosicrucian Dream Book, compiled from all lang'ages, by P. B. Randolph	.50	04
Undertalk on Mesmerism, Post-paid	1.50	20
Unhappy Marriages, by A. B. Child	.25	4
Unwelcome Child, by Henry C. Wright, Paper	.35	4
Cloth	.75	12
Voice of Prayer, by Barlow	.25	02
Vestiges of Creation,	.75	.06
Vital Force, how wasted and how conserved, by F. R. Miller, M. D. Paper, 50 cts; Cloth,	1.00	12
Volney's Ruins; or Meditations on the Revolutions of Empires, with Biographical notice by Count Daru	1.00	12
Voices from Spirit-Land through N. F. White	.25	2
What is Right, William Denton	.10	2
What is Spiritualism, and Shall Spiritualists Have a Creed? by Mrs. M. M. King	.25
Whatever is, is Right, A. B. Child, M. D	1.50	16
Writings of Daniel Defoe	10	08
Wolf in sheep's Clothing, or God in the Constitution. Moses Hull	.10	02
Word Book of Spiritualism. Cloth,	1.25	16
Paper,	1.00	06

WE ARE ALSO NOW IN A SITUATION TO FURNISH Miscellaneous books of any kind published at regular rates, and, on receipt of the money, will send them by mail or express as may be desired. If sent by mail, one fifth more than the regular cost of the book will be required to prepay postage. The patronage of our friends is solicited. In making remittances for books, buy postal orders when practicable. If postal orders cannot be had, register your letters.

H. SNOW,

319 KEARNEY ST., (Up Stairs,) SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.,

Keeps for sale the

RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL,

And a general variety of

Spiritualist and Reform Books,

At Eastern prices. Also, Orton's Anti-Tobacco Preparation; Spence's Positive and Negative Powders, Adams & co.'s Golden Pens, Planchettes, Dr. Storer's Nutritive Compound, etc. Catalogues and Circulars mailed free. ☞ Remittances in U. S. currency and postage stamps received at par. Address, HERMAN SNOW, P. O. Box 117, San Francisco, Cal.

WARREN CHASE & CO.,

No. 601 NORTH FIFTH ST., ST. LOUIS, MO.,

KEEP constantly on hand all the publications of the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, Wm. White & Co., J. P. Mendum, Adams & Co., and all other popular liberal literature, including RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL and BANNER OF LIGHT, Magazines, Photographs, Parlor Games, Golden Pens, Stationery, etc.

First Enlarged Edition.

Death and the After-Life.

EIGHT LECTURES ON THE SUMMER LAND.

By Andrew Jackson Davis.

This edition contains more than double the amount of matter in any previous editions, with only a small advance in price. Bound in cloth, 75cts, Postage, 12cts; in paper, covers, 50cts, Postage 4cts.

For sale at the Office of the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL, 187 & 189, South Clark street, Chicago, Ill.

Rail-Roads.

SUMMER ARRANGEMENT.

ARRIVAL AND DEPARTURE OF TRAINS.

Chicago and Northwestern Railroad—Council Bluffs and Omaha Line—Depot North West Street

Ticket Office, south-east corner of Clark and Lake streets.

	Leave.	Arrive.
Cedar Rapids Passenger	8.30 a. m.	6.40 p. m.
Pacific Fast Line	*10.45 a. m.	3.50 p. m.
Rock Island Express	10.30 a. m.	*3.50 p. m.
Pacific Night Express	12.00 p. m.	7.00 a. m.
Rock Island Night Passenger	†10.00 p. m.	7.00 a. m.
Dixon Passenger	*4.00 p. m.	*11.10 a. m.

Prospect Line.

Prospect and Dunleith Pass	*9.00 a. m.	*7.15 a. m
Prospect and Dunleith Pass	*9.45 p. m.	*2.30 p. m
Rockford, Rigin, Fox River and Elgin	*4.00 p. m.	*11.10 a. m.
St. Charles and Elgin Passenger	*4.15 p. m.	*9.45 a. m.
Junction Passenger	5.30 p. m.	8.30 a. m.
Lombard Accommodation	*5.15 p. m.	*9.00 a. m.

Milwaukee Division—Depot corner of Canal and Kinzie street.

Milwaukee Mail	*9.00 a. m.	*12.15 a. m.
Day Express	*9.45 a. m.	*6.05 p.m.
Evanston Accommodation	*1.00 a. m.	*2.00 p. m.
Ross Hill, Evanston, and High Land Park	1.00 p. m.	3.40 p. m.
Afternoon Pass	*3.45 p. m.	*7.05 p.m.
Kenosha Pass	*6.10 p.m.	*9.10 a.m.
Waukegan Passenger	*6.30 p.m.	*9.45 a.m.
Waukegan do	*4.00 p.m.	*7.55 a.m.
Milwaukee do	11.00 p.m.	6.00 a.m.
Kenosha and Waukegan trains leave from Wells street Depot.

Wisconsin Division—Depot corner of Canal and Kinzie street

St Paul Express	*10.00 a. m.	*7.15 p. m.
Night Passenger	*6.00 p. m.	*6.30 a. m
Janesville Accommodation	4.30 p. m.	11.00 p. m
Woodstock Accommodation	*9.37 p. m.	*10.15 p. m
Barrington Accommodation	7.15 p.m.	7.45 a. m.

GEO. L. DUNLAP, General Superintendent.

E. P. Stanwood, General Ticket Agent

Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Rail-Road.

Depot corner Van Buren and Sherman streets. Ticket Office 66 South Clark street.

Mail	*8.30 a. m.	*7.50 p. m
Special N Y Express	*9.00 a. m.	*4.00 p. m.
Michigan City Express	*12.30 p.m.	*10.00 p. m.
Atlantic Express (daily)	5.15 p. m.	7.00 a. m.
Night Express	*8.00 p. m.	*6.30 a. m.

Detroit and Grand Rapids Line.

Day Express	*9.00 a. m.	*6.20 p. m.
Night "	*8.00 p. m.	*6.30 a. m.

P. B. MOSES, Gen'l Pass. Agt., 66 Clark st., Chicago.

Michigan Central Railroad—Union Depot, foot of Lake street

Ticket Office Lake st., cor. Dearborn—Passenger trains of this company leave and arrive at Chicago as follows:

	Leave.	Arrive.
Mail Train	*8.37 a. m.	*8.05 p. m
Fast New York Express	*9.00 a. m.	*5.30 p. m.
Atlantic Express (daily)	12.15 p. m.	*7.00 a. m.
Night Express	†9.00 p. m.	†7.30 a. m.
Kalamazoo Accommodation	*4.15 p. m.	†1.30 p. m.

Cincinnati and Louisville Trains

Day Express	*9.00 a. m.	*8.20 p. m.
Through Express	†4.30 p. m.	†6.05 a. m.

for St. Joseph via New Buffalo.

Day Express	*9.00 a. m.	*11.30 a. m.
Accommodation	*4.30 p. m.	*5.05 p. m

HENRY C. WENTWORTH, General Passenger Agent.

H. B. RAMSDEL, Gen'l Superintendent, Chicago.

Chicago, Burlington and Quincy

Ticket Office 63 Clark St., opposite Sherman House. Union Depot, foot of Lake St.

Hinsdale Accommodation	*7.10 a. m.	*6.18 p. m
Mail and Express	11.30 a. m.	3.40 p. m.
Pacific Fast Line	*10.45 a. m.	*4.15 p.m.
Hinsdale Accommodation	*1.40 p. m.	*9.30 p. m.
Mendota Passenger	*4.30 p. m.	*9.45 a. m.
Evening Express	*9.00 p. m.	*7.30 p. m.
Aurora Passenger	*4.30 p. m.	† 9.30 a. m.
Hinsdale Accommodation	*5.15 p. m	*8.50 a. m.
Pacific Night Express	12.00 p. m.	7.30 a. m

ROSSER HARRIS, Superintendent.

SAMUEL POWELL, Gen'l Ticket Agt. Office in Gt. Cent. Depot

Illinois Central—Depot, foot of Lake street.

Cairo Mail	*9.30 a. m.	*7.45 p. m
Cairo Express	*2.15 p. m.	*7.00 a. m.
Kankakee Passenger	*4.30 p. m.	*7.45 p. m.
Kankakee Night Passenger	*6.30 p. m.	*7.00 a. m.
On Saturdays the train will leave at	4.45 p. m.
Champaign Passenger	*4.30 p. m.	*9.30 a. m.
Hyde Park and Oak Woods	*2.30 p. m.	*7.45 a. m.
" " "	*4.30 p. m.	*9.45 a. m.
" " "	*5.30 p. m.	*10.45 a. m.
" " "	*9.00 p. m.	*1.45 p. m.
" " "	*12.15 p. m.	*5.15 p. m.
" " "	*6.15 p. m.	*7.30 p. m.
(St. Louis through Trains.)
Day Express	*9.30 a. m.	*6.18 p. m
Night Line	*6.30 p. m.	*7.30 a. m.

W. F. JOHNSON, Gen'l Passenger Agent.

Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne and Chicago—Depot, Corner of Michigan and Canal Streets.

Mail	*1.35 a. m.	3.10 p. m.
Day Express	*9.00 a. m.	6.00 p. m.
Atlantic Express	8.15 p. m.	3.00 p. m.
New York Express	9.00 p. m.	7.00 a. m.
Valparaiso Accommodation	4.30 p. m.	7.00 a. m.

W. G. CLELAND, Gen. West'n Pass. Agt., 66 Clark st.

Chicago and St. Louis—Depot, corner Madison and Canal sts

Express Mail	*9.15 a. m.	*9.00 p. m.
Joliet Accommodation	*5.30 p. m.	*9.15 a. m.
Night Express	†4.30 p. m.	†6.00 a. m.
Lightning Express	† 9.00 p. m.	*6.30 a. m.

*Except Sundays. †Runs through to St. Louis every night. ‡Saturdays and Sundays excepted. §Except Monday.

M. HOUGHTON, Gen'l Supt.

Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad. cor Van Buren and Sherman Streets.

Pacific day Express	10.00 a.m.	4.15 p.m.
Accommodation	*5.30 p.m.	*9.50 a.m.
Pacific Night Express	11.00 p.m.	*7.00 a.m.

An elegant parlor sleeping car accompanies the 10 a. m. train, running through to Council Bluffs and Omaha.

E. H. SKINNER, Gen'l Passenger Agent.

R. M. ATKINS, Gen'l Ticket Clerk.

P. A. HALE, Asst'l Gen Superintendent.

Pittsburg, Cincinnati, & St. Louis R. R.—Cincinnati Air Line.

Cincinnati Express	*9.45 a. m.	3.40 a. m.
Columbus Express	*9.45 a. m.	*9.20 p. m.
Cincinnati Night Express	*7.40 p. m.	*6.55 p. m.
Columbus Night Express	†7.40 p. m.
Lansing Accommodation	4.45 p. m.	9.15 a. m.

N. D. SCOTT, Gen'l Pass. Agt., Ticket Office Corner Randolph and Dearborn streets.

Goodrich's Passenger Steamers.

For Milwaukee and West Shore ports *daily at 9 00 a m.
For Grand Haven and East Shore ports *daily at 7.00 p. m.
For St. Joseph and Benton Harbor, *daily at 10 a. m.
Green Bay Ports, Tuesdays and Fridays at 7 p. m.

*Sundays excepted. †Mondays excepted. ‡Saturdays excepted.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF CREATION

Unfolding the laws of the Progressive Development of Nature, and embracing the Philosophy of Man, Spirit, and Spirit world. By Thomas Paine, through the hand of Horace G. Wood, Medium.

Price 25 cents, postage 4 cents. For sale at this Office

The Biography of Satan;

or an Historical Exposition of the

DEVIL AND HIS FIRST DOMINIONS.

Showing the oriental origin of the beliefs in Devil and Future Endless Punishment. All about the

BOTTOMLESS PIT. KEYS OF HELL Chains of Darkness, Casting out Devils, etc.,

By E. GRAVES, author of, "Christianity, Before Christ." Price 25—25 cents. The Trade Supplied at Liberal Rates.

PUBLISHED BY

RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL Publishing House, 187 & 189, Clark St, Chicago.

Prof. Wm. Denton's Works.

THE SOUL OF THINGS; OR PSYCHOMETRIC RESEARCHES AND DISCOVERIES. By William and Elizabeth M. F. Denton.

This valuable and highly interesting work has become part of the standard literature of the country.

Price, $1,50cts, Postage, 20cts.

LECTURES ON GEOLOGY, THE PAST AND FUTURE OF OUR PLANET. A valuable scientific work.

Price, $1,50cts. Postage, 20cts.

COMMON SENSE THOUGHTS ON THE BIBLE. For Common Sense people. Twelfth thousand, revised and enlarged.

Price, 10cts., Postage, 2cts.

THE DELUGE, IN THE LIGHT OF MODERN SCIENCE.

Price, 10cts., Postage, 2cts.

WHAT IS RIGHT. Price, 10cts., Postage, 2cts.

BE THYSELF. Price, 10cts., Postage, 2cts.

For sale at THE RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL Office.

Address S. S. Jones, 187 & 189, South Clark street, Chicago, Ill.

NEW WORKS BY PROF. DENTON.

"ORTHODOXY FALSE,

Since Spiritualism is True."

Price, 10 cents: postage, 2 cents.

THE IRRECONCILABLE RECORDS, OR. GENESIS AND GEOLOGY.

100 pages. Price: paper, 25 cents, postage, 4 cts cloth, 40 cents, postage 8 cts.

For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 187 & 189 S. Clark Street, Chicago.

"MODERN AMERICAN SPIRITUALISM,"

A TWENTY YEARS' RECORD

OF THE

COMMUNION

BETWEEN

EARTH and the WORLD of SPIRITS.

ONE VOLUME, LARGE OCTAVO, SIX HUNDRED PAGES, ENGLISH MUSLIN, BEVELED EDGES, SUPERBLY AND PROFUSELY ILLUSTRATED WITH PORTRAITS, Etc., ON STEEL, WOOD IN TINT, LITHOGRAPHY, Etc., Etc.

BY EMMA HARDINGE.

This work has been prepared by the author

Under the Direct Supervision and Guidance of the Spirits,

who have Inaugurated the movement.

It consists exclusively of rare pamphlets, private journals periodicals now out of print, and various other sources at tainable only to the author.

The collection of these records has cost many years of incessant research, and altogether it forms one of the

MOST COMPLETE, ASTOUNDING AND THRILLING HISTORIES,

that has ever issued from the press.

The first cost of the work will considerably exceed the sale price which has been fixed by the author, with a view of rendering it attainable to all classes of readers,

SUBSCRIBERS AND THE TRADE SUPPLIED

at the Office of the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL,

Address, S. S. Jones, 187 & 189, South Clark street, Chicago, Ill.

PRICE $5,75 POSTAGE 44 CENTS,—$6,19

SIX LECTURES ON THEOLOGY AND NATURE.

BY EMMA HARDINGE,

WITH AN

AUTOBIOGRAPHICAL INTRODUCTION.

CONTENTS:

INTRODUCTION.

I. Astronomical Religion.
II. Religion of Nature.
III. The Creator and His Attributes.
IV. Spirit—Its Origin and Destiny.
V. Sin and Death.
VI. Hades, the Land of the Dead.

Outline of a Plan for a Humans Enterprise.

A large 12 mo., printed from large, clear type, on good paper, and making a book of 160 pages.

Price, in cloth, $1 00.—Postage, 12 cents.
" " paper, 75 cts. " 4 "

For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 187 & 189 S. Clark St. Chicago.

THE CAREER OF THE CHRIST-IDEA IN HISTORY.

A COMPANION VOLUME TO

"THE CAREER OF THE GOD-IDEA."

BY HUDSON TUTTLE.

CONTENTS.

I Introductory; II Career of the Christ-Idea in Hindostan and among other Nations; III Prophecies of the Advent of Jesus; IV Conception and Genealogy; V Birth of Jesus; VI John the Baptist—his relation to Jesus; VII The sermon on the Mount; VIII Miracles; IX sending forth the Apostles; X The fatal journey; XI Burial and Resurrection; XII The Descent into Hell; XIII The Gospels; XIV Resume of the Life and Character of Jesus; XV Causes of the Extension of Christianity; XVI The ultimate of the Christ-Idea.

Price $1.25. Postage 16 cents.

The demand for these new works of Hudson Tuttle both in this country and Europe, is unprecedented.

For sale at the Religio-Philosophical Journal Office.

REPLY OF WASH. A. DANSKIN, ESQ., PRESIDENT of the First Spiritualist Congregation of Baltimore, to Rev. Thomas E. Bond, M.D. Price, 10 cents; postage, 2 cents. For sale at the office of this paper.

WOOD'S HOUSEHOLD MAGAZINE contains in every number one complete prize story valued at $100. Forty pages of other matter. Yearly, $1. Sold by news-dealers at 10 cents per copy. Splendid premiums. $500 cash to be awarded for the best stories. Specimen copy free. Address S. S. WOOD, Newburgh, New York

AGENTS! READ THIS!

WE WILL PAY AGENTS A SALARY OF $80 per week and expenses, or allow a large commission to sell our new and wonderful inventions. Address M. WAGNER & Co., Marshall, Mich.

9 n 23 6m.

39,308 CURES BY THE POSITIVE & NEGATIVE POWDERS.

IN the following list, the total number of cures of different diseases, which have been performed by the Great Spiritual "Remedy, SHOOP'S PERSON'S POSITIVE AND NEGATIVE POWDERS, is indicated by the figures which follow the name of the disease. The kind of Powders which should be used in each disease is indicated by the letters "P" or "N" or "P & N," which follow the name of the disease; "P" standing for Positive, "N" for Negative and "P & N" for Positive and Negative.

Neuralgia, P, 2,137; Dyspepsia, P, 2,974; Asthma, P, 2,915; Catarrh, P, 987; Chills and Fever, P & N, 2,415; Rheumatism, P, 1,315; Painful Menstruation, P, 1,497; Suppressed Menstruation, P, 934; Female Weaknesses, P, 1,561; Fever, P, 2,956; Amaurosis (Blindness), P, 63; Coughs and Colds, P, 1,789; Heart Disease, P, 483; Diarrhœa, P, 1,114; Headache, P, 1,841; Dysentery, P, 1,946; Liver Complaint, P, 760; Pains and Aches, P, 981; Deafness, N, 58; Bronchitis, P, 823; Piles, P, 813; Cholera, P, 112; Worms, P, 360; Inflammations, P, 971; Paralysis, N, 74; Acidity of the Stomach, P, 325; Scarlet Fever, P, 436; Tooth-ache, P, 855; Flatulence, P, 336; Hysterics, P, 184;

Frontier Department.

BY.....E. V. WILSON

Extraordinary Manifestations.

Question for spirits to answer by writing in the dark without the aid of human hands.

First give us the modus operandi through which spirit elements are developed into life.

Answered by the band. First, RESOLVED, That the imponderable essences of gross matter, belonging to and located in strata around the consolidated earth, are the prime reservoirs of the earth's magnifying ponderable essences.

Second, that these essences manifest themselves diversely in vegetable formations, and then pass back into the reservoirs of imponderable, or fluic substances, called gas. These gases are, then, the embodiments of both physical and spirit life. They generate animal formations, according to their substances, under a consecutive series of compositions and decompositions, of both the physical and spiritual elements of mortal and immortal life, which are alternately distilled under an arithmetical series of compound formations, from the ponderable and physical elements of the earth.

Physical life locates the blood of man, and spirit, or immortal life, locates the brain, and its nervous tributaries.

Physical life is inhaled from the gases into the lungs, from the atmospheric reservoirs, but immortal, or spirit life, is conceived and developed in the brain, from the quintessent and immortal germs of all ponderable and compound elements.

Drink and diet are the supporting and maturing auxiliaries of the physical constitution of man, and the nervo-magnetic elements are the auxiliaries that support the spiritual constitution of man, both in and out of his physical form. Physical life is limited; but spiritual life has no limit, neither that being in either conscious or unconscious matter. Physical life is a development, but spirit life is an eternal principle in matter. Spirit lives incarnate are merely passing conditions of spirit development, in which the first dawn of mental illuminations are generated under physical gravitations, terrestrial, from which it passes into more essential spirit embodiments, under spiritual gravitations celestial.

Every individualized spirit that passes through the portals of physical life into the sublimities, bears along its own constitutional record, and its indicative tokens of the diverse colorings and characters inherited through their intermediate series of arithmetical extremes of consecutive embodiments, whether favorable or unfavorable to its own spiritual advancement. But if, through the physical series of spiritual conditions of life, a human dragon (be developed as) Lord of earth (it) is no indication that he will be dragon-lord in the spiritual sublimities, but the reverse; yet earthly lords and rulers, who bear the tokens of the lamb, or the dove, are self-exalted and spiritually promoted.

Second question. "When a germ of any kind becomes partly formed, and its unfolding development is arrested prematurely by decay or otherwise, will they ever reappear in similar species of forms again?"

Answered by Archimedes. First, RESOLVED, That until the law is perfect in either spiritual or physical productions, their constituent elements under this head pass back in common with their relative kindred seriform essences, from which embodiments they pass in common into similar and other advancing plains of corporeal forms, until their immediate advancing plains and gravitating points are gained in higher degrees of animate and immortal states of conscious existence.

Second. But these unorganized atoms will never be regenerated in the same identical personifications to which they were previously tending before they become disorganized prematurely.

Third. But this does not argue that the perfect spirit soul of any living being or mortal personification will be again reincarnated and regenerated in physical life, for this rule applies alone to the preceding case.

Third question. "Do spirits take up space individually?"

Answered by the spirit of Zoroaster. First, RESOLVED, That spirits do require space, not directly but indirectly. Second. That essences are the immortal occupants of physical and corporeal forms and individualized substances and surrounding elements. Third. That spirit is the indwelling principle of all insensible substances. Consequently spirit occupies the internal space of porous tenement. Fourth. At the dissolution of an organized conscious spirit from its gross earthly tenement, it then clothed with more essential embodiment in a living consciousness leaving its mortal tenement both insensible and unconscious of its decaying remains and earthly existence. Fifth. Spirit is the life preserving principle of its consecutive embodiments, and is eternal in the animating discharge of its sacred office. Sixth. Gross physical tenements engrave their constitutional characteristics into the next ensuing embodiments of spirits with similar earthly gravitations, and there to remain until the encumbered spirit performs another life time of maturation in its tran-cending degrees of spiritual inaugurations. Seventh. Every ascending condition of spirit life affords new bodily resources, from which it is newly clad and supported.

These questions were signed as follows:

Exit the arch teachers. Thomas Paine, Sec. Kings 1st and 2d Prest.

After these questions and answers had been written out, the following resolution of thanks was tendered C. C. Wilkey, by the spirits:

"The Band tender their thanks to Dr. Wilkey for his kind attention to the son of our medium.* He who receives our mediums receives us; and he who oppresses our mediums, oppresses us; and he who contributes to our mediums, contributes to us. THE BAND.

We the undersigned, feel confident that the foregoing was not written by mortal hands. Dr. Carter Wilkey, Dr. J. H. Wilkey, J. A. Koons, Mrs. Koons, Jonathan Koons, Dorothy D. McGhee, Emily C. Wilkey, Mary L. McGhee.

MASSADONIA, Ill., January 23, 1871.

*Dr. Wilkey was at this time attending the son of N. W. Koons, the medium, in a case of lung fever.

Incidents of Our Western Trip.

How this young city of the Great West has grown since we were here in MAY, 1868. Where stood high mounds of earth, hundreds of feet above the level of the river, now stand blocks of magnificent buildings, filled with the merchandise of the East, the West, the North and the South, and from beyond the seas.

Truly, Kansas City may be proud of her geographical position, situated in the midst of the finest agricultural country in the world. Turn towards any point of the compass you please, and there lies spread out before you for a thousand miles, the Eden of the world, dotted with cities, towns, villages, hamlets, and farms, connected with the mountains of the West and the hills of the East, the ice banks of the North and the cotton fields of the South, by steam on river and rail, she stands a queen indeed, arrayed in purple and fine linen from the East, in cotton from the South, in wool and silver and gold from the West, and her storehouses filled with every imaginable mechanical and agricultural implement from the great shops of the North.

THE RAILROADS.

The Missouri and Pacific, connecting with St. Louis, Chicago and the East; the Kansas Pacific, connecting with Denver, Cheyenne, Salt Lake City and California; the Hannibal and St. Joseph, connecting Chicago via Quincy, Ill.; the North Missouri, leading into Iowa and Minnesota via Moberly, Iowa, and Fort Dodge, Iowa; the Hannibal, St. Joseph and Council Bluffs Rail Road, Missouri, Kansas, and Lower California, at Atchison. We stood upon the bluff on the west of the city, looking down on the great Union Depot, in West Kansas, and a sight worth going a thousand miles to see, lay spread out before us. Trains were moving in every direction, several of them freighted with human beings, bound to all parts of the world; others with merchandise, again others with the herds of Texas and New Mexico. On our right the iron bridge, showing the muddy waters of the swift rolling Missouri river; a little way before us, and to the west, the beautiful little city of Wyandotte, Kansas, between us and which runs the Kansas river, and behind us the city, with her vigorous population of thirty thousand souls, and yet, within a quarter of a century, this busy mart of civilization was a wilderness, and hardly known to the world, and where now stands a city there were barren bluffs, wild beasts and savages.

First came the hunters, then the traders, then the speculators, then the farmers, mechanics and merchants. After which came the church and her ministers, begging their way into opulence and position, and now turn to the world and say in exultation, see what the Lord has done through us.

The sitting-room in the churches in Kansas City will accommodate about 6,000 at one sitting; of these seats at no one time are there 4 000 occupied, hence some 25,000 souls are outside, in their sins (?)

Spiritualism in Kansas City is healthy and flourishing, not in building churches or settling speakers, but in anxious inquiry after the truth. Everywhere they cry is: Give us tests. Let the gates stand ajar.

The angels are called for on every hand, and the question is being asked continually, "If a man die, shall he live again?" Said an anxious inquirer to us, not long ago, "I am willing to sit and listen one whole week to any settled speaker, though he be as dull as a brute, so at the conclusion I get one single test from spirit life, from beyond the darkness of the grave. Do I live again after death? Does the spirit exist?"

Among the many faithful and free workers in our cause, are Brothers E. Fall, Manon, Todd, Pond, and Sisters Hildebrand, Whicher, Crawford, Follet, and others. May the good God through his angels, bless them.

The laborers in the cause of humanity who have preceded us in Kansas City, so far as we have been able to learn, are Brothers Turner, Lawrence, Allyn, and Wainwroker; Brothers Chase, Taylor, Moody, Pope, and Lynn. They now need Sisters Harding Doten, Tappan, Law, Brigham, and Colby; Brothers Foster, Peebles, Whiting, Wheeler, and Howe. Moses Hull could do a great work in Kansas and Western Missouri, from his intimate acquaintance with that system of death called Advent, or sleeping.

We have lectured three Sundays up to this writing—May 23d—in Kansas City, in Good Templars' Hall, afternoon and evening, to crowded houses—sitting room, 800, standing room 250. We have given two essays, on Monday evenings, which were well attended. During these six meetings we have given the following test, which we selected from many others, as worthy of a place in the Frontier Department of the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL. One of the past, however, we give first. Three years ago last winter, at a seance given in Kansas City, we said to a lady "there is a brother here with you, older than you, who died a child—a mere waif." "I lost no brother, but three sisters," replied the lady; and the skeptics laughed at our failure. On last Monday, May 29th, we called on a friend, when a lady asked us if we remembered the facts above related, and then said—"seven months late I visited my father in Northern New York, and happening to think of your statement, I asked father how many children mother had before her death. He answered three. We thought so," I replied. "Why?" he asked. I then told him what you stated to me in the seance. "Your medium was mistaken," replied my step-mother, "they were all girls." "No they were not," replied my father, "one of them was a boy, which I close with the doctor, know full well." "Well," said step mother, "this is the first I ever knew of this." And we were all very much surprised; and I can now say, sir, that was to me the clearest test I ever received.

And yet these things we want to get rid of, said the editor of the now nearly defunct Present Age. Well, well; we still hold communion with the angels, and desire to entertain strangers, and turn them not away, for some thereby have entertained angels unawares." Hebrew 13: 2.

In our next we shall give a chapter of startling tests.

We cannot close without referring to the good work done by our good sister and co-laborer, Fannie Allyn, in Kansas.

Kansas City, Mo., May 6, 1871.

Edward Francis Walker.

On Tuesday, May 23rd, the following spirit message was given at our Free Circle, with the request that it be printed in advance. It is a touching incident of regard for the welfare of dumb animals which the spirit still retains in the higher life, and takes this method to redress the cruelties his pet horse is subjected to by a hard-hearted master. Here is the spirit's story:

My name was Edward Francis Walker. I was born in Boston, and I died in Boston. I was thirteen years old. I have been dead nearly four years. Since my death my parents have moved to Chicago. Most of my father's business was there, and my mother said Boston was in the shadow since I left. She wanted to go away from it.

Now what I come here for to-day is this: My father, in my lifetime here, owned a horse which I was very fond of. I always called him mine. I called him "Ned." Before father moved, he sold him, and sold him to a man who promised always to use him well. And when he had him, he did, but he has sold him, and he is shamefully abused, and I want my father to come and buy him, and hunt him up, and buy him, and take care of him.

I don't know but what it is a bad thing to be a guardian angel to a horse, but that's what I am to Ned; and he can't speak for himself, and I shall speak for him as long as you give me a chance. Ned is kept half starved, and is overworked, and is abused in almost every way. He might be made a smart horse of yet. He always was when father had him.

I want father to come on and find the man he sold him to, and make him tell whom he sold him to, and seek him out, and buy him back and take him home, and if he hasn't got any use for him, board him out, and see that he is well cared for. Mother will find a use for him. [Then you will be happier.] Yes—a great deal happier; sometimes it makes me so unhappy, I'm sorry I died, because he would never have been sold if I had lived.

Edward Francis Walker, to Edward A. Walker, of Chicago, Ill.—Banner of Light.

—St. Louis.—"A." writing, expresses himself quite dissatisfied in his pursuit of spirit communion through mediums for answering sealed letters, etc., etc.

He wants to know who are the best among those who advertise and are spoken of editorially in the JOURNAL, and thinks good mediums would do well in his city.

Those we speak of editorially, we know to be first class mediums. Those who advertise, but whom we only know by references given, we believe to be good—but it should be borne in mind, that the conditions which surround the investigator, has much to do with the fact of satisfactory communications, be the medium whom it may.

Don't Fail

To send for "The Sunday Question, and Self-Contradictions of the Bible," a new book just from the press. Price 50 cents; postage free.

The Bhagvat-Geeta

Goes off like hot cakes at breakfast-tables.

Lyceum Hall Meetings.

MRS. LAURA CUPPY SMITH lectured at the above-named new hall of the Spiritualists of Chicago, on Sunday, the 11th inst., to large audiences, and well did she sustain the expectations of her hearers.

She is a most happy and appropriate manner, dedicated the new hall to angelic services. We regret that we did not have a reporter there; a full report of her lectures would have graced the columns of the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL.

Spiritual meetings, like spiritual seances, are now in a fair way to become a success in this city. May good angels, and large-minded men and women, be inspired to aid in the good work. Mrs. Smith will continue to officiate for the society for some weeks to come.

Minister of the Gospel.

The RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL SOCIETY granted a Letter of Fellowship, in legal form, to MRS. MARY LANSTEN STRONG, of Washington, D. C., constituting her a "Regular Minister of the Gospel," which authorizes her to solemnize marriages in due and legal form.

May all liberal-minded brides and bridegrooms who are about to take upon themselves the obligations matrimonial, when convenient, call upon sister Strong to tie the silken cord. They may rest assured it will be strongly done!

Letter from Laura Cuppy Smith.

DR. SHERMAN AND PROF. LYON—

Gentlemen: I have perused with deep interest the new book entitled the "Hollow Globe;" it is eminently suggestive, and especially to be admired for its freedom from the sensational and the marvelous, and the calm understanding manner in which it presents its claims upon the attention of the reading public.

Spiritualists who assert themselves ready to investigate every new truth, and allow it to stand or fall upon its own merits, will surely not neglect the perusal of this most remarkable contribution to the progressive literature of the day.

Chicago, June 13th, 1871.

A Crate of Strawberries.

Our thanks are due to an unknown friend for a crate containing a dozen boxes of most delicious strawberries, sent by express. It reminds us of the good friend who sent us last year a crate of most delicious grapes. We have not yet learned the name of the donor.

The fruit is equally delicious whether we know the considerate donor's name or not, yet there is a pleasure in knowing the names of such friends.

BHAGVAT GEETA.

The Hindoo New Testament.

The above-named very neatly executed book, on fine tinted paper, embossed in gold, is now being delivered as fast as orders are received. Price only $1 25; postage, 16 cents. Everybody should have this wonderful book.

Minister of the Gospel.

In accordance with law, the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL SOCIETY granted a Letter of Fellowship and Ordination to WILLIAM H. HOLMES, of Grass Valley, California, on the 14th of June, thereby constituting him a Regular Minister of the Gospel, authorizing him to solemnize marriages.

Pay Up.

We are in earnest with those who are a long while in arrears. Pay for your newspaper, if you never pay any other debt.

You do us great wrong by such negligence. We need our honest dues, and expect them to be promptly remitted.

Bible in India and Hindoo New Testament.

We will send the above-named rare books, free of postage, on receipt of $3.50.

F. M. Sampson,

What is your post office address?

DELINQUENTS.

The following named persons owe for this paper. They have either removed from the town or post office where they formerly took the JOURNAL, without requesting the address to be changed, and paying arrearages; or they have requested the paper discontinued, but neglected to notify us that the paper was not called for, thinking thus to evade payment. Such of these as remain unpaid four weeks, without reasonable explanation, will be placed in the Black List. Our subscribers who know the present residence of either of these persons, will confer a favor by informing us of the same.

S. M. Argo, Clinton, Ill., $2.25; J. H. Moore, Lincoln, Va., 50 cts.; J. P. Tuttle, West Lebanon, Ind., 75 cts.; W. M. Getchell, St. Louis, Mo., $7.00; Mrs. M. Strong, Buchanan, Mich., $8.00; John Hudson, Harrisburg, Pa., $3.75; Geo. Roberts, Emigrant's Gap, Cal., $4.25; Wm. Simms, Curran, Ill., $3.00; Mrs. Emma Cook, Rich's Mills, Ill., $2.25; D. Grambling, Atlanta, Ga., $3.75; G. W. Orth, Princeton, Mo., $3.75; Wm. A. Harshman, Jackson, Ohio, $3.00; Miss P. Robinson, Two Rocks, Cal. $1.00; N. A. Clark, Two Rocks, Cal., $2.25; O. H. McMaster, Edinburg, Mo., $3.50; W. Woodward, Goldsboro', N. C., $4.25; Mrs. Brigham Flint, Mich., 75 cts.; John Hastings, Lexington, Mass., $3.00; A. McCord, Troy, N. Y., $3.75; B. R. Mathews, Mt. Vernon, Mo., $3.75; H. Brevoort, 95 Fourth Ave., New York City, $9.25; John Bartlett, Hyde, Iowa, $3.00; E. Healey, Herman, N. Y., $1.75; A. Cole, Pisgah, Mo., $1.75; C. T. Tenney, Salem, Oregon, $4.00; Eastman, Monroe, Wis., $4.50.

THE Science of Evil; OR FIRST PRINCIPLES OF HUMAN ACTION.

BY JOEL MOODY.

THE SCIENCE OF EVIL is a book of radical and startling thought. It gives a connected and logical statement of the FIRST PRINCIPLES OF HUMAN ACTION, and clearly shows that without Evil there can be neither Morals, Science, Knowledge, or Human Action on earth. In fact, without Evil, man could not exist. This work fully solves the PROBLEM, and unveils the MYSTERY of Evil, giving in a scientific meaning, and shows it to be THE LEVER WHICH MOVES THE MORAL AND INTELLECTUAL WORLD.

The book is a large 12 mo., of 340 pages, printed from large, clear type, on fine, heavy paper. Price, $1,75; postage, 20 cents.

 For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 187 & 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

New Books.

THE HOLLOW GLOBE; Or, the World's Agitator and Reconciler.

A Treatise on the Physical Conformation of the Earth.

PRESENTED THROUGH THE ORGANISM OF M. L. SHERMAN, M.D., AND WRITTEN BY PROF. WM. F. LYON.

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

"THIS book is addressed to the reasoning intelligence of Humanity,—to all inquiring and reflective minds, everywhere upon the earth

"We earnestly request the reader to suspend his judgment concerning the ideas advanced, until he has carefully perused its pages; when he may be better prepared to form his opinions, and offer his criticisms.

"We do not claim that the teachings contained in this work are infallible, neither are they presented in an authoritative manner. But we do claim that it contains more original, natural and startling ideas, which are of great interest to civilized humanity, and which seem to be entirely irrefutable, than any book of its size that has made its appearance in modern times.

"We, therefore, commend it to the careful consideration of the modern thinker, being fully persuaded that its pages contain a large fund of thought which may open to his mind new fields of research, thus tending to enlarge his understanding, and enlighten his intellect."

EXTRACT FROM INTRODUCTION.

"THE central idea contained in the following work, and the one that most of the subsequent chapters are designed to substantiate, is, that this globe is constructed in the form of a hollow sphere, with a shell some thirty to forty miles in thickness, and that the inner surface, which is a beautiful world in a more highly developed condition than the exterior, is accessible by a circuitous and spirally formed aperture—that may be found at the north and south Polar Sea, and this opening affords easy navigation by a broad and deep channel leading from one surface to the other, and that the largest ships or steamers can pass with ease either way, with as much facility as they can pass through any other winding or somewhat crooked channel. And we have endeavored to show as clearly as we could, that the internal condition of this globe is such as to be perfectly compatible with an outer and inner world, or two worlds instead of one."

12 mo., 447 pp. Price $2.00; postage 20 cents.

 For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

LIFE'S UNFOLDINGS OR THE WONDERS OF THE UNIVERSE

REVEALED TO MAN.

Is the title of a new work fresh from press. By the Guardian Spirit of David Corlies. S. S. JONES, Publisher.

RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION PRINTERS.

The Medium, in his address to the public says:

The Medium (David Corlies, of Huntley's Grove McHenry Co., Ill.,) through whom this work was given, has been a careful observer of the phenomena of "Modern Spiritualism" for over twenty years and during this time, under the humble Medium through which hundreds of philosophical and scientific lectures have been given to attentive listeners. Of himself, he can only say he is unvarnished farmer, far advanced in years. He asks for this pamphlet a careful and attentive perusal.

The Introduction entitled "The Unvailing," treats of man as the grand objective ultimate of Life's Unfoldings:

He also stands at the pinnacle of all organized Life in its native purity of all things.

On page twenty-four, the author treats of "the way mediums paint likenesses, in the true order of the development of the arts and sciences."

In part second, under the general head of mysteries Revealed, the author treats of "How Mankind Manifest their presence through Physical Bodies of Mediums. How the writing is done. How we influence Mediums to speak. The fullness of all kinds of language investigated. The ring fest and the carrying of Musical Instruments around the room explained."

This work is neatly got up and consists of seventy-three closely printed pages and we hesitate not to say that it contains more original thought upon important subjects, a few only of which we have enumerated, than any other work of equal size we have seen.

The work will be sent by mail from this office

SECOND EDITION.

A WORK OF GREAT RESEARCH.

ONE RELIGION: MANY CREEDS.

BY ROSS WINANS.

"We object to what the Church demands, an unbounded and unjustifiable confidence in the infallibility of the writings of Moses and the prophets, and the Evangelists and the Apostles. We dissent from a sentimental attachment to an impossible compound of God and man. We protest that Christian theology, as we have it, is not taught by God himself, nor by Christ himself, nor is it consistent with established facts, nor is it comprehensible by our reason. We would show you that Christianity, as taught among us, is no better than the old systems taught in other than Christian countries, and in some respects not so good.

The historic part of the Bible, in relation to the creation of the world, has its counterpart also in the several systems of theology here mentioned. They all had their cosmologies based on equally good authority and equally wide of the truth, as that recorded in the Bible. The true manner of the creation, no man has ever known, or ever will know, in this life; nor is such knowledge of importance in preparing us for the life to come."—EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

This book is a large 12 mo. of nearly 400 pages, printed on fine, heavy-tinted paper, and is sold at much less than the actual cost. Price, $1.50; postage, 22 cents.

 For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

THE HIEROPHANT, OR Gleanings from the Past.

BY G. C. STEWART.

"Being an exposition of Biblical astronomy, and the symbolism and mysteries on which were founded all ancient religious and secret societies, with an explanation of the dark sayings and allegories that abound in the Pagan, Jewish and Christian Bibles, also the real sense of the doctrines and observances of the modern Christian churches."

The above is a good deal to promise the reader that he will find done up in a neat little 16 mo. book of 284 pages, but we assure our readers that they will find all the subjects mentioned treated in a clear, concise, and satisfactory manner.

The book has already passed through several editions, and the demand, of late, has greatly increased.

For sale at the office of this paper. Price, $1; postage, 12cents.

IT COSTS

Only about one-third Bookbinders' prices to do binding handsomely by the use of Alden's Woody Book-Binder. Since called to say publication, from the author, Monthly to the largest Weekly. Price singular free. Send 50 cents for samples of both File and Binder. Size for the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL, No. 18; price $1.20 and $1.50. Address, RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

THE MAGNETIC TREATMENT.

SEND TEN CENTS TO DR. ANDREW STONE, TROY, N. Y., and obtain a large, highly illustrated book on this system of vitalizing treatment. 19 xiii tf.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

"MEDICINA PSYCHICA! ANIMA MEDICA!!

☞ "Nec hominem externum esse animal: Internum co... non animal sed imaginem DEI VERAM!"—V... HELMONT.

THIERS' ODYLIC WAFERS,

The most safe, salutatory, and eff...al Nervine Medium Developer and Curative in all

DISEASES OF THE NERVES,

Including Neuralgia, Epilepsy, Hysteria, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Gout, Lumbago, Sciatica, Chorea, (St. Vitus' Dance) Depression of Spirits, Melancholy, etc.

Sent per mail, in letter form. Price $1.00 per package. Test or trial packages mailed free for 25 cents.

Address, W. F. J. THIERS, M. D., NEUROPATHIST, No. 72 H St., Washington, D. C. v10 n11 tf

[Reprinted from the London edition of 1785 by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, Chicago.]

THE BHAGVAT-GEETA, Or Dialogues of KREESHNA AND ARJOON.

In eighteen lectures, with notes. Translated from the original Sanskreet, or ancient language of the Brahmins

BY CHARLES WILKINS,

Senior merchant in the service of the Honorable, the East India Company, in their Bengal Establishment.

The antiquity of the original and the veneration in which it has been held for so many ages by a very considerable portion of the human race, renders it one of the greatest curiosities ever presented to the literary world.

Our edition of the BHAGVAT-GEETA (sometimes called the Hindoo New Testament) is printed on heavy tinted paper and beautifully bound. It is in great demand, orders for nearly all of the first edition having been received before it left the binder's hands.

Price $1.25; postage, 12 cents.

 For sale, wholesale and retail, by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 187 & 189 S. Clark st., Chicago.

The Bible in India.

HINDOO ORIGIN OF

Hebrew and Christian Revelation.

TRANSLATED FROM

"LA BIBLE DANS L' INDE."

BY LOUIS JACOLLIOT.

EXTRACTS FROM AUTHOR'S PREFACE:

"I come to show you humanity, after attaining the loftiest regions of speculative philosophy, of untrammeled reason on the very threshold of India, and there initiated and edified by the altar that substituted for intellectual life a semi-brute existence of dreaming impotence.....

India is the world's cradle; hence it is that the common mother in sending forth her children even to the utmost west has, in unfading testimony of our origin, bequeathed us the legacy of her language, her laws, her morals, her literature, and her religion.....

To religious despotism, imposing, speculative delusions, and clan-legislation, may be attributed the decay of nations.....

I am aware of the resentment I am provoking, I yet shrink not from the encounter.....We are no longer burnt at the stake."

 PRICE $2.00; postage 24 cents. For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark street, Chicago.

NEW EDITION—REVISED AND CORRECTED.

THE VOICES

Three Poems.

VOICE OF SUPERSTITION.
VOICE OF NATURE.
VOICE OF A PEBBLE

By Warren Summer Barlow.

THIS volume is startling in its originality of purpose, and is destined to make deeper inroads among nectarian bigots than any work that has hitherto appeared.

The author has demolished the creeds of the ages, and proves by numerous passages from the Bible that the God of Moses has been defeated by Satan, from the Garden of Eden to Calvary!

THE VOICE OF NATURE represents God in the light of Reason and Philosophy—in His unchangeable and glorious attributes. While others have too often only described, the author has erected a beautiful Temple on the ruins of Superstition. Judge Baker, of New York, in his review of this poem, says: "It will unquestionably come to be ranked by the classes among the ablest and most gifted children poets of the age."

THE VOICE OF A PEBBLE delineates the individuality in matter and Mind, fraternal Charity and Love.

The book is a repository of original thought, awaking noble sentiments of the mind and heart, exciting and pleasing in style, and is one of the few works that will grow with its years and mature with the centuries. It is already admired by its thousands of readers.

Printed in beautiful type, on heavy, fine paper, bound in beveled boards, in good style; nearly 200 pages. Price $1.50, postage 16 cents. Very liberal discount to the trade.

For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 South Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

MRS. MARIA M. KING'S WORKS.

THE PRINCIPLES OF NATURE, as discovered in the Development and Structure of the Universe; The Solar System—Laws and Methods of its Development; Earth—History of its Development; Exposition of the Spiritual Universe. Price reduced to $1.75; postage, 24 cents.

REAL LIFE IN THE SPIRIT LAND. Being Life Experiences, Scenes, Incidents, and Convictions, Illustrative of Spirit-Life and the Principles of the Spiritual Philosophy. Price, $1.00; postage, 16 cents.

SOCIAL EVILS: Their Causes and Cure.—Being a Brief Discussion of Will, Impulse and Passion, with reference to Methods of Reform. Price, 25 cents; postage free.

THE SPIRITUAL PHILOSOPHY VS. DIABOLISM. In two lectures. Price, 25 cents; postage free.

WHAT IS SPIRITUALISM? and SHALL SPIRITUALISTS HAVE A CREED? In two lectures. Price, 25 cents; postage free.

GOD THE FATHER and MAN THE IMAGE OF GOD. In two lectures. Price, 25 cents; postage free.

 For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

MOSES HULL'S WORKS.

THE QUESTION SETTLED, a Careful Comparison of Biblical and Modern Spiritualism. Price, $1.50; postage 16 cents.

SPIRITUALISM UNVEILED. This sharp and brilliant little book, by one of our ablest writers and most efficient speakers should be read by all. Price, 10 cents; postage, 2 cents.

THE SUPREMACY OF REASON. This little work is a masterly argument on the Supremacy of Reason. The author handles spiritualism as opposed to reason, without gloves. Price, 10 cents; postage, 2 cents.

THAT TERRIBLE QUESTION.—Being an Essay on Love and Matrimony. Price, 10 cents; postage, 2 cents.

THE WOLF IN SHEEP'S CLOTHING; or, God in the Constitution. An ingenious interpretation of the symbols of the Book of Daniel, and the Apocalypse, together with an argument against recognizing God, Christianity, and the Sabbath in our National Charter. Price, 10 cents; postage, 2 cents. For sale, wholesale, and retail, at the office of this paper.

 For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

THE LAW OF MARRIAGE,

BY C. L. JAMES.

An exhaustive argument in favor of liberal divorce legislation. For sale by the author, Louisiana, Mo. Post paid for 25 cents. 19-xiii-tf.

RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL

CHICAGO, JULY 1, 1876. VOL. X.—NO. 10

The Voice.

From the Medium and Daybreak.

THE GOSPEL AND SPIRITUALISM.

Showing how both rest on the Same Foundation—By a Clergyman of the Church of England.

Many people look on the "Reformation" as the greatest blessing which Christians have received. I look on the "Reformation" as the beginning, humanly speaking, of the downfall of Christianity. And if I am asked why I state such a startling idea—my answer is, "The Reformation has put a 'great gulf' between the visible and the invisible world." Christians, as a body, have since the "Reformation" ceased to believe in the "supernatural."

I am ready calmly to prove that those who say that miracles have ceased, that supernatural appearances in the present day—that power of communicating with the departed—is over, I am ready, I say, to prove that people who assert that such is the case may be Christians because it is fashionable, because it pays, but they cannot because their reason tells them that Christianity is a logical belief.

Most Christians are not Christians. To be a Christian implies that the person who professes Christianity believes in Christ. Do people consider what is the full value of that word "believe"?

Now, in the first place, the majority of Christians have no right to say that the "Bible" is the Word of God. What is their authority? The Bible was not written at one time, nor was it intended to contain all things concerning religion. The Bible as we now have it, was not completed in the time of the Apostles; it was some hundred years after Christ ere certain Bishops of the Catholic Church met together and decreed what books were inspired by the Holy Ghost and what were not. What right have people to say, "The Bible, and the Bible alone, is the religion of Protestants?" The Bible did not fall down from heaven all ready bound, and in the English language. Christians who base their belief on the "Bible only" rest on a broken staff.

If Christians will take "the Bible only" as their rule of faith, let me ask such one question. In the Old Testament it was lawful to have many wives—where in the New Testament is this forbidden? There is one text which says, "A Bishop must be blameless, being the husband of one wife," but this would seem to show that most people had many wives, while a bishop was limited to one, and thus serves to confirm what I state, that if people believe in the "Bible only" there is nothing to prevent them having half a dozen wives! But though, I thus distinctly deny that the Bible is the one only thing necessary, yet, as the majority of English people pretend to believe that such is the case, I will not argue the point, but take them on their own ground, and thus granting the inspiration of Holy Scripture, I will prove that Spiritualism must be believed in, or else they must give up even that one remaining supernatural belief of Englishmen—that the Bible is the Word of God.

No one can deny that the Jews, the ancient people of God, believed in spirits, and believed that the spirits of the departed returned and visited their relatives. As an example of this, read St. Luke xxiv., 37, "But they were terrified and affrighted, and supposed that they had seen a spirit." Did He tell them that to believe in the appearance of spirits was foolery? No. He confirmed their belief in the appearance of spirits by allowing the spirits did appear, but He adds, "for a spirit hath not flesh and bones as ye see me have." Read also St. Matthew xxvii., 52 and 53, "And the graves were opened; and many bodies of the saints which slept arose, and came out of the graves after His resurrection, and went into the holy city, and appeared unto many." If one of our good English Protestants could by any chance have been in Jerusalem in in those days and had been told, "Oh! what do you think? my great-grandfather has risen from his grave—I saw him!"—what would have been his answer? "Oh! my dear friend, your stomach is out of order; take a blue pill—your liver must be sluggish."

We read also how when Jesus Christ was transfigured on the mount that Moses and Elias appeared. We read also that Samuel was called up by that powerful medium, the "Witch of Endor." People don't believe in these Bible facts in the present day; and why, good Christian ministers, is this so? Because you have taught people not to believe in the supernatural! And you are not alone in your unbelief. In the 6th chapter of St. John and the 60th verse, our Lord Jesus Christ was teaching the people a supernatural truth, and we read: "Many, therefore, of his disciples, when they had heard this, said, This is a hard saying; who can hear it? When Jesus knew in Himself that His disciples murmured at it, He said unto them, "Doth this offend you?" Then look at the 66th verse, "From that time many of His disciples went back, and walked no more with Him." This has given rise to the following riddle—Who were the first Protestants? "Those who, when our Lord taught the real presence, went back and walked no more with Him."

The life of Christ is a life of unceasing miracles and wonders; and if Christians are logical, they should reject all that is supernatural or else believe all.

If we let us cease to be negative Christians of the nineteenth century; let us go back in spirit to the year 30 a. D. We find ourselves in the Holy Land, and the Jews, the people of the country, are in captivity in their own land, for the Romans are the governors, and they rule with a sword. The Jews have studied the prophecies, and they know that the time is at hand—they looked for an earthly monarch who should redeem Israel from her oppressors.

Our Lord, we know, cast out many devils; but if any of the beloved English people of our day had been there, they would have said, "My dear brethren, avoid this man, have nothing to do with him; he casts out devils by aid of devils." So said the Jews: so ought Christians now to say, and so there do actually say, when any latter-day miracles occur. I will, before I go further, refer my readers to William Howitt's "History of the Supernatural." He remarks: "Before quitting this part of my subject, let me draw attention to the extraordinary practice of the Church of England in regard to exorcism. By the seventy-second canon of the Anglican Church, all lic ministers are forbidden, without license of the bishop of the diocese, under his hand and seal, to attempt upon any pretence whatever, by fasting and prayer, to cast out any devil or devils, under pain of the imputation of imposture or cozenage, or deposition from the ministry. What a fall from the practice of Christ! In the Gospel of St. Mark it is said, 'John answered Him, saying, Master, we saw one casting out devils in Thy name, and he followeth not us, and we forbade him because he followeth not us.' But Jesus said: 'Forbid him not: for there is no man which shall do a miracle in my name that can lightly speak evil of me. For he that is not against us is on our part.' The Church of England has clearly set at defiance this injunction of our Savior. What an extraordinary proceeding in a Church which first professes to communicate the Holy Ghost, and then does not permit it to operate in the minister without a license from the bishop!

* * This department of the supernatural of the New Testament presents still various features which identify modern Spiritualism with it. The fact that the Jews were compelled to admit the reality of the casting out of devils by Christ, then declared that He cast them out by Beelzebub, the prince of the devils, is completely paralleled by the opponents of modern Spiritualism. The moment they are driven from the theory of imposture and delusion, they attribute the phenomena of Spiritualism to the devil."

It is, of course, well-known that the "Bible" was not completed when Jesus came on earth, and that portion of it which was in use was not at the disposal of all persons; and, moreover, certain portions of the books of the Law were forbidden to be read by the ordinary Jew.

It was not by an appeal to an "infallible book" that our Lord converted the Jews; for the prophecies about Himself were by no means so self-evident that of themselves they could be urged as bearing but one meaning. We read of two disciples who had been with Jesus Christ, yet did not know the meaning of the Scriptures (St. Luke xxiv., 27, "And beginning at Moses and all the prophets, He expounded unto them in all the Scriptures the things concerning Himself." Again, after our Lord's death and resurrection, when He appeared to the apostles who were assembled together (Acts i., 6), as we read, "When they therefore were come together, they asked of Him, saying, Lord, wilt Thou at this time restore again the kingdom of Israel?" Even now they could not get it into their heads that He was not going to be the Redeemer of an earthly kingdom—He was not going to overthrow the Roman power and liberate once more the ancient people of God!

That the Scripture by itself, would not prove the Godhead of Jesus Christ we may well believe when we remember that the Sadducees, who were highly cultivated and distinguished by their social position, rejected the belief of the immortality of the soul, as an opinion that received no countenance from the Divine Book: which they revered as the only rule of their faith (Gibbon vol. ii., ch. 15).

I will refer but to one more passage of Scripture to prove how useless it is to suppose that if you give a man the "Bible," from that alone he can deduce the Christian faith. In the Acts viii., 30 and 31: "And Philip ran thither to him, and heard him read the prophet Esaias, and said, Understandest thou what thou readest? And he said, How can I, except some man should guide me?"

How then can we reasonably become Christians? By the help of TRADITION. On what ground do you believe that there was such a man as Julius Cæsar? On tradition. (Tradition is of two kinds—written and unwritten.) On what ground do you believe that Jesus appeared again after His resurrection? Tradition The early Christians especially knew it on no other; for the New Testament was not written, and finished, and declared to be the Word of God for long years after. On what ground do you believe that the Christians of the first centuries believed in the events which we find recorded of Jesus in the Bible? Simply on tradition. On what ground do we in this nineteenth century believe in Spiritualism? On the same ground which led the early Christians to believe in Jesus Christ! Tradition—written and unwritten. The Apostles beheld the miracles of Jesus Christ and reported them to Christians. Englishmen, who are not slaves to bigotry, behold the wonders of Spiritualism and report them to others. What is the difference in the two cases? There is the law of evidence in both—reject the witness of hundreds of clever chemists and collectors as to the real wonders of Spiritualism, and you cut away the ground the early Christians had for believing in Jesus Christ. Why do Englishmen deny miracles in these our days? Because they disbelieve in the supernatural altogether. Our Lord gave power to the early Christians to work miracles—when did He withdraw that power? Do let us have a plain answer to a plain question. It is making use of a two-edged sword to deny the evidence given in favor of Spiritualism, and none know that better than the clergy. I have seen it written LEGHD, I DO NOT SEE THAT THE PROGRESS OF A RELIGION is a better argument of its truth than the prevalency of any system of opinions."

I conclude by asking my brother clergy to ponder ere throwing away the amount of evidence which is every day being adduced to prove the reality of the communications between this world and the other side of the valley of death. Is the Church the enemy of all knowledge? or is she a gentle guide who would direct a movement which may be a great gain to religion or a deadly enemy, according as the Church guides or excommunicates a movement which cannot be ignored?

WHAT IS THE WORK OF SPIRITUALISM?

Lecture by Mrs. N. J. T. Brigham, Delivered at Harmonial Hall, Philadelphia.

Phonographically Reported for the Religio-Philosophical Journal, by Henry T. Child, M. D.

INVOCATION.

Oh, thou great Soul of the Universe; thou Spirit of our Father, that hearest our wishes even before they are turned into words, we bring our prayerful spirits before thee to-day, that from the clear fountains of thine inspirations, we may drink until we thirst no more. We ask for light upon those truths which have been veiled in mystery to our sight. We ask with a hungering and thirsting after truth, that our prayers may be answered. We thank thee, oh, God, that thou art ever present; that when we are weak, and when we would stray from thee, that thy parental care and love is around us. Thou dost always know our thoughts, and in thine own good time, grant, provide for us all that is needful. Teach us to be forgiving, oh, Father, for many are the trials that gather around the pathway of life. Lead us to look for the light that lies hidden beneath the darkness. Help us to purify our spirits. Guide us, oh, Father, in this search for light all through our lives, and so shall we praise and bless thee forever!

THE WORK OF SPIRITUALISM.

Spiritualism has brought before the world a new class of teachers. Its inspiration comes not alone within the old charmed limits of education and professional forms. It comes with astonishing force upon those minds that would seem all unprepared—many times, to grasp this subject. It comes silently, yet beautifully, seeking the heart and mind, and saying to its teachers, "Take no thought for the morrow what ye shall speak, for in that self-same hour it shall be given you." It has laid its hand upon the children's; it has gone to those who were in the shades of life, and brought them forth. Theology has said only the brethren have the right to preach, and when this came, these men said, tell us what it has given to the world that is more than we had received before?

We can point out various things that it has brought before the world. First it has proved the immortality of the soul. One says, it has not always done this. It is full of deception and wrong. We grant that there is no river, however clear and sparkling, that may not sometimes, bear upon its surface dust and drift wood. There is no vale but what, side by side the blue eyed violets, grow poisonous plants. We know that some have discovered that which bore the stamp of deception, and then they threw the whole of it away,—even the truths that they had discovered, because there were errors. When the great cable was first extended from one continent to another, there were men who believed it could never be successful; men who would not aid it with their influence, their capital, and who said let the madman do this. The cable was at last laid under the green waves, and human thought thrilled across that wire, and there came to this country, a message from the Queen, brief and broken and imperfect, and many believed that it was not true; that it was never sent. To-day we realize that it came, and although that cable could no more bring messages, yet men said because of the one message, we know it can be a grand success. Then these doubting, trembling people came forward with their means, and to-day, through the magic wire that connects the continents, human thoughts with noiseless feet come and go. Why will not people be just as reasonable in regard to Spiritualism? If one true, reliable message has ever reached us from the world of the immortals, it tells us that they can communicate,—the dear ones, whose voices are not heard by mortal ears, and proves that they still live although they have passed away from our sight, and that they have the power to communicate with the friends they have left behind.

Spiritualism in proclaiming its great truths before the world chooses its mediums or instruments, and it may seem sometimes that it has made a very poor choice. If you were far away from home, in a land where you had not the conveniences for hearing from your friends or writing to them—suppose you were to receive a letter from some of your friends written upon a sheet of paper that had been badly soiled, but you could trace the handwriting of a beloved friend, your letter would be just as welcome as though it were written on pure white paper. Spirits must use such mediums as they find, and they are glad to do it. You may say it is not possible that my friends would be willing to come through such an impure source. Suppose you desire to send a telegraphic despatch to a friend in a distant place; you go to the office, and you don't inquire whether the man belongs to any church, or whether he is a Christian or not, you only make a bargain, and he sends your message. So the spirits are glad to come through any source—it is true that they would be better pleased with mediums that are more like themselves, but if such cannot be found, then their choice must rest upon those that can be found. When you look upon mediumship in this way, many of the mysteries that have shrouded the truths of Spiritualism are removed.

You ask what has Spiritualism brought forth that is new? We have referred to the first great light, that Spiritualism has brought to man,—namely immortality. Here is something that is being felt throughout the land.

Twenty-five years ago, you could scarcely find a church in the land that would allow women to speak. The brethren meekly followed in the pathway of St. Paul and said, "let your women keep silence in the churches."

To-day St. Paul is not a spiritual teacher, and a keeper of the consciences of the people, although many of the churches think more of what St. Paul said than they do of what Christ said.

Spiritualism has brought women before the world in the line of a public teacher,—but there are those who still say this is wrong. The time has come when sex no longer decides whether a person has the power to bring together an audience and hold up the truth to them. Spiritualism has led women forward, and taught her that she has a work to do as well as her brother man. When to-day we find teachers among women as well as men, we must remember that Spiritualism has had a great deal to do in making this thing common and popular in the land, so that a great deal of the old prejudice is wearing away. Man is learning that woman may be a teacher without losing their motherly and sisterly influence, but she will retain the same tender feelings, and by this very means may be better adapted to lead and guide the people. In the days gone by, woman was crowded back in the field of action, and men believed that she did not require the same amount of education as man; that she had not the right to teach in church, and man treated her as a toy and a servant.

Spiritualism has brought these changes, and we are thankful for it. Again, look at the Children's Progressive Lyceum—the beautiful Sabbath school that Spiritualism has brought before the world—something that makes the Sabbath day not dreaded; something that makes it beautiful to the child, so that when it listens to the orthodox sermon, and hears that heaven is one long Sabbath day, then heaven is not so terrible as once was. It has seemed so terrible that a child would almost be glad to spend eternity in the other place. A little girl once asked her mother if she was right good up in heaven, would not God let her go down to hell, and play sometimes.

Not only in the greater freedom which it thus gives to women and children, does Spiritualism commend itself to us, but in the teaching of the beautiful doctrines of progression, both here and beyond the present stage of existence. It comes before man with the truth that blesses the heart, and makes those who have laid away their friends reconciled. It shows that for them there is a widely extended field of action, of labor, where the spirit never grows weary, where it still has a great work to do.

When we have spoken of endless progression, there are those who say if a man is to progress through the long years that are to come, will there not be a time when he learns the whole truth, and then he will merge again into Deity. If so, man would not be benefitted by his temporal existence, for if he goes into the ocean there there is no identity, and is lost there, man is not improved and God is not improved.

As man comes forth in his identity, he shall forever and forever retain that, and as the soul progresses, it grows more and more brilliant, more and more wise, through all the ages that are to be. Spiritualism teaches a living inspiration to-day. It seemed to man in the past, that the writers of the Bible were inspired, God stood directly by their side, and he had simply to speak the truths of inspiration, and man was to receive them and give them out. It seems to us that God is like an overflowing fountain, whose waves are always crystal clear, and man should ever be ready to receive these crystal waves of God's perfect and direct inspiration. It never seemed to them that God does not work directly, but always by media.

Nature declares that God does not work directly. He inspires the soul of the artist and the poet, through all the voices of nature. The soul of the poet drinks in the inspiration, and as it thrills his inmost being, he awakens in turn an inspiration in others. Why does the animal not have that keen appreciation of the beautiful that quickens and blesses man? Simply because life is towering upward forever, until it attains to man. Man drinks in inspiration, not only from those things that speak to the outward senses, but he gathers inspiration from other channels,—that which comes from God in a thousand beautiful streams of light and song, and loveliness from the spirit world. There are times when every one has had these inspirations given them—times when it seemed to you that the windows of heaven were opened, and things were clearer and better understood. This inspiration is connected with a power beyond you, and that power must be individualized,—a power from human souls beyond the river of death.

There are times when you climb to the mountain tops of your best ideas, and reaching forth a new world has been opened to you. You are sometimes so earnest and true and good, that you come so near to your spirit friends that care for you in their exalted position. You are so near to them that you catch the echo of their voices, and in this inspiration of the soul, you have a power that you can not always comprehend

MINNESOTA.

Semi-Annual Convention of State Association.

The Semi-Annual Convention of the State Association of Spiritualists, of Minnesota, met at Farmington, Dod. County, Minn., June 3rd, 3rd and 4th 1871, at half past ten o'clock, A. M. As the President was absent, J. H. Soule, of Stillwater, was elected President, protem and a conference of one hour agreed upon. The delegates had not all arrived, but those who were present, spoke hopefully of our cause in the state. J. L. Potter State Agent, gave us much encouragement in relation to the affairs of the Associat n, financially and spiritually. One old gentleman, a pioneer in the cause, and who is nearly seventy years of age, walked nearly eighty miles, to once more attend a gathering of this kind. If all Spiritualists were as wide awake in the cause as Father Pratt, Spiritualism would prosper in spite of all opposition. On motion, S. Jenkins, C. P. Collins, Mrs. E. M. Welch, Mrs. Douglas, and Mr. Dwelle, were appointed a committee of arrangements, to conduct the business of the Convention, select speakers etc, etc. Adjourned with music, and a song by J. L Potter.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Called to order by President Soule, music, then a lecture by Isaac Pope of Morristown, after which a conference of one hour was held. Good feeling seemed to prevail, yet when some new idea was broached, it was discussed candidly, in fact handled without gloves. The hours spent in conference in our conventions are productive of much good, inasmuch as many are free to express their opinions and ideas, which they would not in any other meeting. Adjourned with music and song.

EVENING SESSION.

Called to order by President—Conference of half an hour. Lecture by Mrs. M. H. Fuller, of Elk River, who spoke plainly, and to the point, as regards the claims of Spiritualism. Adjourned Saturday morning, at half past nine o'clock. Conference of half an hour. The subject of spirit photography was discussed at length. Mr Roberts, of Northfield, a photographer, gave a very fine description of the process of spirit development in pic ures. A stranger gave some fine reminiscences of his early life, and showed a spirit picture taken in Maine. J. H. Soule, showed a spirit picture, taken by A. D. Willis, spirit artist, Chicago. Lecture by H. H. Smith, of Osseo. Adjourned with music.

AFTERNOON SESSION 3 O'CLOCK.

Called to order by President. Conference lecture by Clarkson Thomas, of Birchman Prairie, trance speaker, followed by J. L. Potter, State Agent. Adjourned with music.

EVENING SESSION.

After being called to order, it was suggested that each one, give their ideas in a conference meeting on Spiritualism, independent of all others. H. H. Smith, spoke at length on clairvoyance, and other gifts of mediumship. Lecture by Mrs. H. E. Pope, of Morristown, after which the meeting was adjourned till Sunday morning, half past ten o'clock. Called to order and a conference of half an hour agreed upon, but it was extended to over one hour. It was indeed a feast of soul, a time to be remembered. The first lecture was by Mrs. Wakefield, of Eden Prairie, and was a decided success,—a lecture that will long do good. He was followed by Wm. Bentley, formerly of St. Paul, now residing near Farmington. It was pathetic, and well calculated to enlist the sympathy of every listener. Subject: Why I am a Spiritualist. He is a new beginner in the cause, but one of which the Ass ciation may justly be proud.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Weather very sultry, and it seemed almost impossible to concentrate the minds of the large audience, but the feeling was deep, and warm as it was, all listened anxiously and respectfully. Lecture by H. H. Smith, followed by a short speech by Isaac Pope. Adjourned with music.

EVENING SESSION HALF PAST SEVEN.

Called to order. Lecture by J. L. Potter, who gave one of his best lectures, followed by Wm. Wakefield, who spoke of the way mankind had been priest ridden, but that the glorious prospect, when mankind should be free from religious bigotry. The Executive Board met and disposed of what little business there was to do. On motion, it was voted to draw an order on the Treasurer for $2.00 to pay for printing return certificates.

On motion, it was voted to pay Mrs. H. E. Pope, $25.00 for services and expenses, as Secretary of the Association. On motion, in the afternoon session, the President appointed one or two, from the various localities, to collect money, to pay the expense of Fall Convention, and to secure some good able speaker from a distance. The following were appointed:

Mrs. Jenkins, Cartwright Valley, Farmington; Truman Andrus, D. Birdshall, Faribault; Geo. Walker, J. H. Soule, Stillwater; Wm. Marshal Mr. Nettleton, Minneapolis; E. H. Bands, Mr. Savage, Mankato; Mr. and Mrs. Ingals, Chicago Co; F. O. Rice Mrs. Thorp, Northfield; Messrs Rider and Denaison, St. Paul; Mr. and Mrs. Douglas, Winona; Mr. Dwelle, Lake City; Mr. Madden Waterford; Rachel Michener, Zumbra, Filmer Co; Clark Ellsworth, H. H. Smith, Osseo; Wm. Wakefield, Eden Prairie; Mrs. Mary Cole, John Canfield, Pawsellm and Wabashaw; Mr. Howard Wilton, Smith Johnson, Medford; Zell Sargent, Plainview; and a request that all Spiritualists in the State unite, in raising a full delegation to the American Convention. On motion, the members of the above committee are instructed to report to the Secretary in July, 1871, how much they can raise, or the amount they can get subscribed, to be paid at Fall Convention.

On motion, the Annual Convention will be held at Faribault, Rice Co., Minn., some time in October. Time to be hereafter designated.

On motion, Certificates of Fellowship were voted to be given to Wm. Wakefield, and Mrs. M. J. Fuller.

The thanks of the Convention, are due to the various R. R Companies, for return tickets free to the delegates, and to the friends in Farmington, who so kindly entertained so many attending the meeting. Our Convention was a decided success, and we would say to all Spiritualists at home, and abroad, that there is no such word as fail, among the Spiritualists of Minnesota.

June 11th, 1871

HARRIET E. POPE.

The Calamity at Pittston—A Strange Premonitment.

The Scranton (Pa.) Republican tells the following sad story of one of the victims of the late Pittston disaster:

"William James expired about 3 o'clock on the afternoon of the Tuesday following the catastrophe, and was the last added to the list of those upon whom the death angel laid his hand in that awful havoc. He was a Welsh man, and had been in this country about seven months. On the morning of the dreadful day in question he had taken his breakfast and his wife had made ready his dinner and set the pail beside him. For some time he lay wrapped in thought, his arms folded, his eyes fixed intently upon the above, and a deep melancholy apparently brooding over him. He was aroused from his reverie by his wife telling him that his dinner was ready, and that he would be late as the bell had rung. He started to his feet, and gazing upon her for a moment with a look full of tenderness and significance, said to her, 'If I should not come back alive would you be in such a hurry getting me out?' The wife answered 'No,' but remarked that 'if he was going at all, it was time he was gone.' He lifted his pail without saying a word and after kissing his wife, kissed his three little children. They were sitting playing on the door step. When he had got about fifty yards from his home, he returned again, and kissed his wife and children once more with great fervency. His wife noticed that he was the victim of gloomy forebodings, and as he turned away she was about to entreat him not to go to work if he apprehended any danger. But hope and courage and the necessities of their family overcame her intention, and she let him go. She stood in the door and watched him on his way to the fatal pit. When at a point where he turned out of her sight, he paused and cast a wistful look toward his home and little ones, and, seeing his wife, waved with his hand a last adieu. He parted with his loved ones forever.

CONTRASTED.

Comments on a Sermon Delivered in the First Baptist Church, Omaha, by Rev. H. A. Davis, before the Free Religious Conference.

The reverend gentleman told us on last Sunday night that Spiritualism is evil, and only evil. He also adduced Josephus and others to prove that the heathen nations had always had their "familiar spirits" whom they consulted, and that all their religions were based upon spirit communion. He might have added the Christian religion also, for that is based entirely upon a dream given by a spirit.

He declared that it was wicked human spirits that were permitted to return, that demons and devils mentioned in the New Testament meant only wicked human spirits disembodied, and claimed to prove it by the Bible. Elder Miles Grant proves by the same Bible that there are no human spirits disembodied, but that demons mean spirits that have never been embodied, but are those intelligences that were projected from Heaven by God, when he overcame Satan in the great conflict in Heaven for supremacy, with myriads of losers to live with us in our atmosphere, ready to pounce upon humanity and lead them astray. Truthful, when it suits their purpose better, when thereby they can more effectually destroy some truth-loving soul. In this case the Rev. Daniels adds wicked human spirits, and declares that God permits none but these deceiving demons from the pit of destruction to walk the earth, while he forbids good spirits and angels from holding converse with mortals. As a child it was a query in my mind how Satan conceived the idea of sinning. The highest and noblest manifestation of God's creative power residing in Heaven, first and holy angels his associates, no outside influence to tempt, how could he possibly conceive the idea of sin unless the elements of evil were implanted within his being? We cannot suppose that God would be so inconsistent as to create a being, he displays less wisdom than man. Then if this theological idea is correct, it must be in accordance with God's purpose and design, and the result is just what he calculated. Then is it just or inconsistent to make man, or Satan, even, responsible?

This idea is said to be a revelation from God, through his chosen mediums. Other revelations from the same source are to the effect that God is changeable, repents, avenges himself, gets angry, sends out lying spirits, even commands his "chosen ones" to practice "fire love" (so called,) on a broad scale, by appropriating the unmanned women of a large army of captives (the record says 20,000) to the use of a licentious soldiery, with other statements, that to Spiritualists at least, do not seem entirely amiable or virtuous.

The revelations of modern Spiritualism, which we are told are evil and only evil, declare God to be a loving Father, humanity one great brotherhood, God perfect in love and wisdom, therefore unchangeable, and never angry. The revelations it brings in regard to the spirit world are consoling to mourners, and all sorrowing hearts. It assures them that their loved ones still live, still love them, can still commune and sympathize with them. It is charged that Spiritualism is a prolific source of insanity. Statistics of insane asylums do not so show it to be.

States prison convicts are, almost without exception, believers in Orthodoxy. Among all classes of depraved and debased humanity you will scarcely find a Spiritualist. They strenuously believe in the orthodox devil and hell, and with uplifted hands in holy horror if you intimate that there is any other salvation save by the blood of an innocent Jesus. They believe they may commit every sin in the calendar during a lifetime, and in the last hour, by a cowardly cry for mercy, have their sins washed away, and their souls ushered into the immediate presence of God, holiness, and purity. The Spiritual testimony of spirits is that violation of any law brings its certain punishment. The consequence of wrong doing is suffering. There is no forgiveness, no possible escape. It must be met either here or hereafter. And investigate, as far as my experience, observation and knowledge go, these spirits, that we are told are so wicked, earnestly exhort us to lead pure lives, deal justly each with the other, aspire for higher and still higher and diviner attainments.

It is a historical fact that the moral sentiments uttered by Jesus had been taught by heathens centuries before his advent upon the earth, uttered by those inspired men. We are told Socrates had his wicked spirits, and were taught by them. The signs were also with them that were with Jesus, and his principles, and with modern Spiritualists, and that every believer in Jesus should follow those that believed. The sick are healed by laying on of hands, the eyes of the blind are opened, the deaf made to hear, the lame to walk. Suffering in all forms cured by direct spirit agency. What can be said of this as evil and only evil?

Spiritualism tells us it is knowledge we need. We need to know that we injure ourselves by wrong doing, and how to do it. That the consequence of our wrong doing must be borne by ourselves, that eternity is far too short to erase the scars made by sin. Is there anything immoral in this?

Theology says to humanity, "You are totally depraved, there is no good in you. You can do nothing commendable. You deserve nothing but God's wrath and displeasure, and it is infinite condescension in him to permit you to live out of the flames of eternal torment." Spiritualism, in the spirit of pity and compassion, earnestly tells us, "Within your nature are powers folded away that are divine. Within you dwell the elements of your salvation."

You are placed here to unfold these powers. It is possible for you to become noble men and women, every earnest effort advances you. Step by step you go forward and God and angels approve. It is your privilege to approximate nearer and nearer to the high standard of a Godlike perfection. It also bids you look beyond this condition of life, these scenes, to the future, and charges

JIM BludsO.

(OF THE PRAIRIE BELLE.)

Wal, no! I can't tell where he lives,
Because he don't live, you see;
Leastways, he's got out of the habit
Of living like you and me.
Where have you been for the last three year,
That you haven't heard on Jim Bludso?
How Jimmy Bludso passed in his checks
The night of the Prairie Belle?

He weren't no saint—them engineers
Is all pretty much alike—
One wife in Natchez-under-the-Hill,
And another one here in Pike.
A keerless man in his talk was Jim,
And an awful profane cuss, they say.
But he never flunked, and he never lied,
I reckon he never knowed how.

And this was all the religion he had—
To treat his engine well;
Never be passed on the river;
To mind the pilot's bell;
And if ever the Prairie Belle took fire,—
A thousand times he swore,—
He'd hold her nozzle agin the bank
Till the last soul got ashore.

All boats has their day on the Mississip',
And her day come at last;—
The Movastar was a better boat,
But the Bell she wouldn't be passed.
And so she come tearin' along that night—
The oldest craft on the line,
With a nigger squat on her safety-valve,
And her furnace crammed, rosin and pine.

The fire burst out as she cleared the bar,
And burst a hole in the night;
And quick as a flash she turned, and made
For the willer-bank on the right.
There was runnin' and cursin', but Jim yelled out,
Over a the infernal roar,
"I'll hold her nozzle agin the bank,
Till the last galoot's ashore!"

Through the hot, black breath of the burnin' boat
Jim Bludso's voice was heard,
And they all had trust in his cussedness,
And knowed he would keep his word.
And sure 's you're born, they all got off
Afore the em-bankers fell,
And Bludso's ghost went up alone
In the smoke of the Prairie Belle.

He weren't no saint, but at judgment
I'd run my chances with Jim,
'Longside of some pious gentleman
That wouldn't shook hands with him.
He seen his duty, a dead sure thing,
And went for it thar and then;
And Christ ain't goin' to be too hard
On a man that died for men.

—John Hay.

Written for the Religio-Philosophical Journal.

SINGULAR COINCIDENCE IN DREAMS —SOMNAMBULISM.

By Wm. C. Bennett.

BROTHER JONES:—In No. 11 of the JOURNAL, June 3rd, is an article from Dr. Fahnestock, to which I feel impelled to say a few words. He says: "As no one has ever demonstrated or proved that animal magnetism has ever had an existence in nature, I deny that it does exist, and again state, that because some susceptible persons imagine that they feel heat upon ice, or to a hand held two or more feet above a so-called operators hand, is no proof that a 'strong current' of any kind is passing from the head to the hand."

Out of the many experiences which I have had that satisfy me of the existence of animal magnetism, and that thought can be, and is, often transmitted by one person in the form to another, I will mention a circumstance that occurred with myself and a younger brother during the summer of 1853, while we were both boys, away from home, trying to make our fortunes in California, and as a natural consequence often got homesick, and in our dreams often found ourselves back among old associates, re-enacting the scenes that we participated in before leaving, and being at the time keeping bachelors's hall alone by ourselves, it was quite natural we should be free and familiar in our conversation, and being both good dreamers (and I will also admit, good somnambulists; it was quite natural,—and with my brother quite a passion, to relate to me at breakfast his dream of the night before, after having had one of peculiar interest, on account of its reviving home scenes.

And now I come to the singular fact connected with it, which is, that he, in relating his dreams, always mentioned me as being with him, and he invaria'ly related them as that I dreamed, and after he had concluded, I would remark that it was just what I dreamed, and supply a portion he had left untold. This occurred several times during as many weeks, and I noticed he was very particular and emphatic in his demand of me to know if I did positively dream his dream as I said I did, to which I gave him positive assurance, but although he had the fullest confidence in my word when pledged in good faith, yet he thought it very strange if he could not dream of home and former scenes, including dancing parties, etc., without I had to know all about it, and so hit upon the following plan to satisfy himself, as he afterward told me, whether I was making game of him or not, and I noticed after he had repeated to me three or four dreams, and rolled up his large black eyes in wonder when I assured him I had the same dream, that he stopped, and on the first morning after he had experienced another, he took especial pains to ask me what I dreamed the night previous, and which I stated as naturally and straight-forward as it occurred to me; at the conclusion of which, I noticed his eyes fixed on me in wonder, and simply said, "Did you dream that?"

A few days subsequently he asked me again what I dreamed the night before, and after I had repeated it to him, he simply remarked that it was very strange, and invariably asked me if I so dreamed, but kept his own counsel till a third trial, and on the conclusion of my recital, laid down his knife and fork, looked me square in the eye, and said he was satisfied I had been truthful, "For," said he, "when I first began telling you my dreams, and you insisted you had the same one, I did not feel like doubting your word, but concluded I would prove satisfactorily myself, whether you were making game of me or not, and accordingly concluded to have you tell your dreams, and see how they corresponded with mine, and I am satisfied; you have every time but repeated what I dreamed, and I did not intend to let you know what I was up to till I had satisfied my own mind of the correctness of your assertions."

Now, these are the facts, and can be substantiated by affidavits, if necessary, as my brother is yet living at Flint, in this State, although the circumstances may have passed out of his mind, as it has never been reverted to between us since it occurred, that I now recollect of.

I will state further, that the cabin we occupied had but one room, and my brother's bunk was in the South-east corner, with his head to the East, and my bunk was in the North-east corner, with my head to the North, my feet on a direct line with his head, three feet or more from it, both bunks being against the wall.

Will the Doctor explain the phenomena, on the theory of no magnetic, or other influence, or give me the only rational explanation is, that the thoughts there carried from one brain to the other, on those currents, and if so, is not thought transmissible, and in three feet, or any number of feet, the limit?

Again, if we dreamed alike by being in magnetic rapport, whence came the magnetism? The Doctor denies the existence of animal magnetism in nature; and although we were both somnambulists, and quite mediumistic, it could hardly be supposed one was operating on the other, when both were tired out with hard toil and seeking rest, and both locked in sleep.

If animal magnetism has no existence, how do sensitive persons often feel the presence of others, so as to identify them before they get within speaking distance, and before they have a view of their faces or persons?

I will say in conclusion, that I have a copy of the Doctor's work on Somnambulism, and find it highly interesting.

Lansing, Mich., June 11, 1871.

Written for the Religio-Philosophical Journal.

"THE SEARCH AFTER GOD."

The Agitation of Thought is the Beginning of Wisdom.

BROTHER JONES: I have been much interested with the "Search after God." From the many communications published in the JOURNAL it seems that the same interest is widespread, and is taking deep hold upon the minds of those who dare think for themselves. Of course to the bigot and slave to old theology, it is a "stumbling-block, a rock of offense."

We may congratulate ourselves that it is happily our lot to live in the nineteenth century, in which the tree of knowledge of good and evil is scattering its fruit broadcast, without any longer subjecting the partakers thereof to theological thumbscrews and fagots.

It is true there are yet benighted localities and priest-ridden communities, even in this boasted land of liberty, where liberal sentiments are not tolerated. But the car of progress is being rapidly rolled through the land by giant minds, and there places, too, will ere long ask riddance from priestly power and influence.

The good time is coming when no man will be imprisoned for honest liberal sentiments. The good time is coming when no man already in his dotage will be entrusted with the administration of the laws.

The "Search after God" will hasten that time. It already has done much in that direction, because it has set thousands of persons to thinking, and has elicited many important questions.

"Who made the first earth?" is the last query put forth. The inquiry presupposes that time had a beginning, and that space has bounds, two predicates that are impossibilities. There can be no bounds to space. This proposition is self-evident. Suppose, for instance, that the universe to which our solar system belongs is centillions of miles in diameter—a space large enough to contain ten thousand millions of solar systems like our own—could the space thus occupied by these innumerable worlds bear any proportion to boundless space? Evidently, no; because that which has limits can express no ratio to that which is boundless.

We then ask, can unlimited space have bounds? Reason answers, No.

We ask, when did the first moment of time commence? Eternity answers, time always was. I am time past, present and future.

We ask, how long since the first earth was made? Time answers, There never was a time, when worlds and systems of worlds did not exist, with individualized intelligences developing thereon.

We ask, how are worlds made? Intelligence answers, I evolve worlds and put them in motion through law and matter.

We ask, what is the difference between the finite and the infinite? Reason answers, the difference is in degree only.

Thus we might question indefinitely, and yet forever be unable to comprehend infinity. Progression, therefore, is an eternal principle, though which infinite possibilities may be achieved.

It is not unreasonable to suppose that finite spirits may arrive to a degree of knowledge which will enable them to build worlds from nebulous matter. Man here on earth has begun to learn how to control the silent and imponderable forces in nature, and to make them contribute to his needs, comforts, and pleasures. What may he not accomplish in the immeasurable cycles of eternity? Surely, such ideas tend to ennoble the human intellect and to inspire an aspiration for knowledge and wisdom.

Go on, Brother Francis, in your Search, and when you have brought it to a termination, please embody it in book form. Consider me a subscriber for one copy, at least.

A. NEWTON.

Daysville, Ill.

Perfection not Desirable.

The author of a "New Theory of Population," has called attention to a remarkable feature of this law of Demand and Supply; namely, that the forces destructive and the forces preservative perpetually tend toward equilibrium, and vary inversely. That is, the lower the organism and the less capable of providing the means of subsistence, the greater the power of reproduction. This he amply illustrates from the vegetable and animal kingdoms. Beginning with the microscopic Infusoria in which the rate of multiplication is beyond compute, we find a constant ratio of decrease as we ascend in the animal world, till we come to man and the elephant, in which it is the least. From this law he concludes that eventually the rate of multiplication will be just equal to the rate of mortality. That is, the approach to equilibrium will never cease until on the average, each pair bring to maturity but two children. This is a view which all perfectionists must take. Those who believe that a perfect law be given to man and that he will eventually be enabled to obey it, are logically driven to the above conclusion. But the question arises right here: Can man ever have the power on earth to prevent all the accidents to matter and man, or will he ever acquire sufficient knowledge to shun them by mental contrivance? It is quite obvious he must not only so perfect himself in science that he can foretell the "falling of lightning," or a meteoric stone, or else have power to control them; but also this knowledge or power must be made universal among mankind, even down to the sucking infant; for how is the young child to shun them but by knowledge acquired? or is the universal knowledge to be born with the child? Will the young child unborn be assured of the fact that it will live out its full number of years, and that it is so provided for in wisdom that it is impossible for it to die till the day, hour and second are fulfilled? Shall there be no quarrel among men, no predaceous animal, no drouth or freshet, no railroad accident, no lost mariner of sea or air, no earthquake or volcanic eruption, no "strong wind" to blow it to its doom with the lamb in this world? No rattlesnake, mosquito or fly; no hunger or pain? It would have to result in this and far greater perfection.

Now, what would be the result of all this perfection? Perfect satisfaction, the greatest catastrophe to man that could happen. As well open the earth at every spot on which a being stood, and let the central fire lick him in at once. The only difference would be in the means employed to extinguish him. It would be the embrace of death in inaction to make man perfectly satisfied. It is dissatisfaction which drives every wheel of industry, provides every mouthful of food, adds to the land every increment of knowledge; and it is dissatisfaction which keeps it there.

From the "Science of Evil" by Joel Moody.

MEDIUMS' DIRECTORY.

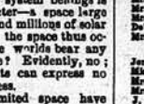
The Religio-Philosophical Journal being an especial friend to all true mediums, will hereafter publish a complete directory giving the place of all professional mediums, as we are advised upon the subject. This will afford better facilities for investigators to learn of the location of mediums, and at the same time increase their patronage. Mediums will do well to advise us from time to time that we may keep their place of residence correctly registered.

It is a lamentable fact that some mediums so far forget their self respect as to speak evil of other mediums, not unfrequently even of those who are far their superiors. The names of such persons will be dropped from this Register so soon as we have evidence conclusive of their indulgence in such unhallowed sins.



It should be borne in mind that mediums visiting mediums carry conditions with themselves—so to speak—which aid or destroy the power of spirits to control the medium visited: hence it is that one medium gives satisfaction to certain persons, another better to others—all having their audience, and justly so, too, and all equally honest and useful in their places.

CHICAGO.

Bangs children, 237 S. Morgan St. ‡
Mrs. Ettie Brown, 125 W. Washington St.
Dr. W. Cleveland, 56 Avenue Harrison St.*
Wm. A. Crocker, 170 W. Madison St. *
Dr. D. G. Dake, 211 Wabash Ave., Chicago.*
Dr. E. Dwyer, 533 West Madison St. Chicago
Dr. L. P. Grigge, 329 W. Madison street, cor. Fourth.*
Mrs. Jorgen on, Parlors 28 and 29 Hooper Block.‡
Mrs. M. Jenks, 176 W. Van Buren street.*
Dr. and Mrs. Lewis and wife, 74 Turo's Ave.‡
Dr. S. L. McFadden and Wife, 342 W. Madison St.*‡
Mrs. O. Moody, 106 12th street. * ‡
Mrs. J. H. Rodman, 1 and 3 North Avenue.*†‡
Madame Ritter, 301 S. Clark St. ‡
Mrs. S. Smith, 141 S. Clinton St.*
Dr. Dewart, 78 Third Ave.‡
Dr. M. L. Sherman and Wife, 206 South Clark St.*†
Dr. Samuel Underhill, 189 S. Clark street.*
Mrs. S. T. Wire, 622 Indiana Ave.*‡
Dr. J. Wilbur, 650 W. Randolph St. *
A. D. Willis, Cor. Clark & Michigan st. ¶
Mrs. M. S. Weeks, Room 60 Dearborn Block, Chicago.

BOSTON.

Dr. H. B. Storer.*†
Mrs. Julia M. Friend, 116 Harrison Ave.
Mrs. E. J. Hickson, 633 Tremont St.
Dr. Main, 226 Harrison Ave.*
Mrs. A. C. Latham, 292 Washington St.
Freeman Marshall, 5 Seaver Place.*
Mrs. L. W. Leach, 97 Salisbury St.*
Mrs. Marshall, 80 Kilmore St.*
W. H. Mansfield, 9 Springfield street. ¶
Mrs. A. S. Eldridge, 1 Oak St.‡
Mrs. M. M. Henry, 134 W. Concord St.‡
Samuel Grover, 26 Dix Place.

D. J.
Mrs. H. J. French, 1325 Ridge Ave.
Mrs. A. Goodfellow, 413 Enterprise St.
Mrs. L. E. Mann, 349 south 12th st.*‡
Hattie S. Rotch on 2 23 Brandywine St.
Mrs. Reynolds, 1013 Parrish St.
Mrs. B. Mitchell, 1346 Hanover St.
Mrs. Taylor, 555 North 10th St.
DeWitt C. Hough, 813 Race st.‡
Mrs. Stoddard, 813 Race St.

NEW YORK CITY.

Jennie Danforth, 84 Lexington Ave.*
Miss Beulah Foley, 534 Third Ave.
Mrs. H. Seymour, 140 Bleeker St.
Mrs. J. Cotton, 341 E. 21st St.
J. William Van Namee, 439 Fourth Ave.*†‡

BLOOMINGTON, ILL.

Mrs. Helen Grover.
Mrs. M. E. Getchell, 613 N. Main St. ‡
Dr. Mary Lucas, Bloomington, Ill.‡

BAYONNE CITY, N. J.

Mrs. E. Wallis.

GREEN GARDEN ILL.

Mrs. Calkins.*†

TENNESEE, WIS.

Mrs. E. W. Salmon. * ‡
Mrs. P. A. Logan.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.

A. B. Severance and Mrs. J. H. Severance. M. D. 487 Milwaukee street, Milwaukee, Wis.*†
W. W. Herring, 180 Spring street, Milwaukee, Wis. *

ROCKFORD, ILL.

Samuel Smith, Box 1321, Rockford, Ill. *
Mrs. M. J. Colson S. Rockford, Ill. ‡

RICHMOND IND.

Francis S. Haswell, 96 N. Marion street.
Dr. Samuel Maxwell, 73 S. 6th street.

SAN FRANCISCO.

Wm. H. Hatch, 138 Kearney St.

ST. CHARLES, ILL.

Mrs. Leonard Howard.*‡
D. P. Kayner, M. D.*

SAN JOSE, CAL.

Mrs. Mary R. Beach.

WHITEWATER, WIS.

Mrs. A. B. Severance.*‡

MISCELLANEOUS.

Mrs. Orrin Abbott, Minneapolis, Minnesota. *
Lizzie Austin, Cedar Rapids, Iowa. ‡
Jonathan Allen, Geneseo, Ill.
Mrs. Ambrose, Janesville, Wis.
Miss M. A. A. philist Dayton, Ohio.*
D. Atkinson, Marietta, Ohio ‡
Mrs. Jennie Adams, Box 1359, Kansas City, Mo. *
Mrs. E. A. Blair, 166 Ridge st., Salem, Mass. †
Dr. H. Butler, Wellsboro, Tioga Co., Pa.*
M. K. Casteel, 155 Bank Street, Newark, N. J.*
Mrs. J. F. Currier, Cincinnati, Ohio.*
Mrs. J. A. Drake, 20 Hoffman Block, Cleveland, Ohio.
J. W. Edmonds, Atlanta, Ga. †
Mrs. S. K. Everett, Springfield, Mo. ‡
David S. Fuller, Davenport, Iowa. *†
Alonzo Hatfield, Schenectady N. Y. *
J. B. Fayette, Oswego, N. Y.†
Dr. B. W. Freeman, 116 Neigh st, Columbus, Ohio. *
Mrs. Wm. L. Day, Canastota, New York. *
Dr. J. M. Holland, 206 Upper Broadway, Council Bluffs Iowa.*
Judge D.L. Hoy, Mobile, Alabama.
N. B. Hamilton, Beloit, Wis.*
Dr. B. Heal, 62 Whitehall St., Atlanta, Ga.*
Mrs. Jennie Ferris, Traveling. †
Minnie Jefferson, Traveling. †
J. W. Kenyon, Watertown, Wis.
Mr. & Mrs. G. H. Leland, Taunton, Mass. †
J. M. Nolan, Waterville, N. Y. ‡
Mrs. A. Nesbit, Cunnonsburg, Mich.*
Dr. Abba Lord Palmer, New Boston, Ill. *†§
Mrs. Mary Pitts, Sac City, Sac Co., Iowa.*
Mrs. M. B. Robbins, Evansville, Ind.
N. B. Starr, Fort Huron, Mich. ¶
Isaac Rawlings Stone, Covington, Ind.‡
Mrs. A. Smith, Aurora, Ill. * ‡
Mrs. F. W. Stephens, east side of 4th street, between I & J, Sacramento.*
H. B. Sherman, Gahanna, Ohio. ‡
Annie G. Torrey, Hoosick Tunnel.‡
A. Thomas, Lyndon Station, Ohio.*
Warren Wight, Waterloo, Seneca Co., N. Y. *
Mrs. Fanny Wheelock, Pleasanton, Kansas. ‡

* Healer.
† Spirit Artists.
‡ Psychometrist.
§ Business and Test.
¶ Writing and Drawing.
Answering Sealed Letters.
Solemnizing Marriages and Attending Funerals.

SPIRIT ARTIST.

MRS. E. A. BLAIR, MEDIUM.

Mrs. Blair, one of the most wonderful Spirit Artists in the world (specimens of whose work can be seen in the Reception-Room of the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE), is now prepared to furnish beautiful specimens of her work, ranging in price from five to one hundred dollars, to suit the purchaser.

It is unnecessary in this notice to state that Mrs. Blair executes this work when perfectly blindfolded (and, when convenient, before public audience), and with a rapidity not surpassed in this sphere of existence.

The manner in which these paintings are executed was published in No. 3, Vol. 9, of the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL.

For beauty of style and artistic finish they cannot be surpassed. They are worthy of a prominent place in the drawing-room or picture-gallery. Considering that these paintings are such positive demonstrations of SPIRIT POWER IN THE FLESH, no SPIRITUALIST should be without one or more in his home.

We will receive orders for any priced pictures desired, ranging from five to one hundred dollars. For ten dollars and upward, it will be well for the person sending to send his or her own autograph, that the Spirit Artist may get an impression from him or her, the better to enable him to execute a more appropriate piece of work, to order.

In sending orders, address S. S. JONES, 189 South Clark St., Chicago, Ill., inclosing the money by a Post Office Money Order, Bank Check, or Registered Letter. The Pictures will be furnished at wholesale prices, when ordered, ranging from one dollar upward, and sent by express to any part of the country.

Prof. Spencer's Positive and Negative Powders, for sale at this office.
Address, S. S. Jones, 189 South Clark street.

Speaker's Register.

We are sick of trying to keep a standing Register of Meetings and list of speakers without a hearty co-operation on the part of those most interested.

☞ HEREAFTER we shall register such meetings and speakers as are furnished to us BY THE PARTIES INTERESTED with a pledge on their part that they will keep us posted in regard to changes; and in addition to that, REMEMBER to indicate a willingness to aid in the circulation of the JOURNAL, both by word and deed.

Let us hear promptly from all who accept this proposition and we will do our part faithfully.

J. Madison Allen, Ancora, N. J.
O. Fannie Allyn, Stoneham, Mass.†
Addie L. Ballou. Address Chicago, care of RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL.*‡
Rob't. Burns, Versailles, N. Y.†
Dr. J. R. Bailey, box 394 Laporte Ind.*
Rev. J. O. Barrett, Glen Beulah, Wisconsin.
M. A. P. Bowe, A. J. Post Boy Custer, Vt. †
Eli F. Brown, Dayton, Ohio. ‡
Dr. H. A. Buttolph, Address at Chicago.†
Hiram Brown, Address 18 West Washington St., Chicago.†
Henry A. Beach, Spring Valley, N. Y.
Mrs. Bell A. Chamberlain, Medford, Minnesota.†
Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Calkins, Green Garden, Ill.‡
H. T. Child, M. D., 634 Race St., Philadelphia, Pa.*
Mrs. A. H. Colby Winchester, Randolph Co., Ind.†
F. B. Dowd, Rockwood, Davenport, Iowa.*
Lewis F. Cummings. Address care of the Journal *
John Corwin, Five Corners, N. Y.
Andrew Jackson Davis, Orange, N. J.
Levi Dinkelspiel, Box 299 Decatur, Ill. ‡
Dan T. Edwards, Stevenson's Mill, Mo.
Samuel Hayward Gookin, Ind.
U. S. Hamilton, Beloit, Wis.*
W. H. Holmes, Great Valley, Cat.‡
O. S. Hamilton, Mazomanie, Wis. ‡
H. H. Houghton, Berea, Vt. ‡
Lois Hay, Battle Creek.*
S. S. Jones, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago. ‡
Dr. Wm. A. Jocelyn, Address him in care of this Office.*
D. P. Kayner, M. D., St Charles Ill. ‡
Mrs. H. M. King, Hammonton, N. J.*
L. Lewis, Vergennes Ind.
P. B. Lawrence, Ottumwa, Iowa.*
Geo. W. Kates, Box 1, Escanaba, Mich.*
Joseph F. Hamilton, 86 Lake, Iowa.
Thomas Harding, box 201, Sturgeo, Mich.
Samuel S. Harman, Goshen

Religio-Philosophical Journal.

S. S. JONES, EDITOR, PUBLISHER AND PROPRIETOR.
J. H. FRANCIS, ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

Office 187 and 189 So. Clark Street.

Religio-Philosophical Publishing House.

☞All letters and communications should be addressed to S. S. JONES, 189 South Clark Street, Chicago, Illinois.

TERMS OF THE [illegible] Journal.

[illegible], $1.—6 mos. [illegible] Months on Trial TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS.

In making remittances for subscriptions, always procure a draft on New York, or Post-Office MONEY ORDER, if possible. Where neither of these can be procured, send the money, but ALWAYS IN A REGISTERED LETTER. The registration fee has been reduced to FIFTEEN CENTS, and the present registration system has been found by the postal authorities to be virtually an absolute protection against losses by theft. ALL POSTMASTERS are obliged to register letters when requested to do so.

All subscriptions remaining unpaid more than six months, [illegible] at the rate of $2.50 per year.

SUBSCRIBERS are particularly requested to note the expiration of their subscriptions, and to forward what is due for the coming year, with or without further reminder from this office

[illegible] been made. 16th, 1870, it [illegible] 6 months 1870. If he has only paid to Dec. 10th, 1869, it would stand thus: Smith J.—16 Dec.—6, or perhaps, in some cases, the last two figures for the year, as 70 for 1870, or 69 for 1869.

☞Those sending money to this office for the JOURNAL, should be careful to state whether it be a renewal, or a new subscription, and write all proper names plainly.

CHICAGO, JULY 1, 1871.

A SEARCH AFTER GOD.

NUMBER XLV.

How true it is that the world to-day is illy prepared to acknowledge the agency of spirits in the various departments of this life. All are willing to admit that spirits now do what at one stage of the existence of the human family, was ignorantly attributed to a God. The Lord spoken of in the Bible, was merely a spirit interested in the affairs of earth, and through his instrumentality, many wonderful things have been accomplished and unfolded.

Connected with the life of Jesus, we recognize no God,—only a spirit circle who were his special guardians. Through their instrumentality, he was developed in such a manner that his mind would be susceptible to certain spiritual influences.

IS MAN A PART OF GOD?

In the various ages of the world, all phenomena, the nature of which could not be understood, were ignorantly ascribed to a God, especially the origin, growth, and development of the human mind and physical organism. So far as the growth and development of each individual is concerned, he must be independent of any God—if not, no one would be able to tell when man was acting, or when the two were acting together. To suppose that God is manifested in man, would really be an untenable position, for his division into innumerable finite bodies, would place him in curious relations to himself. If God and each individualized entity are united, there must be a dividing line between the two. If God is manifested in animals, nature, or man, when did he first manifest himself, and when will he cease his work?

The idea of the commencement of a work, would imply its completion, if power were sufficient for the purpose. Now, if God made man, if through his instrumentality he was constructed, having finished his task, he would leave it, just as the mechanic would a house or a machine that he had built. If, however, he is still connected with each human being, he, being the stronger, must rule, and for every act which man does, the stronger power could prevent, or cause it; hence God, not man, would be responsible for every thing. If, God, however, through his own knowledge of himself and matter and its laws made each human being, and if he completed his work, he undoubtedly has left each one to take care of himself.

DID GOD USE HIMSELF IN MAKING MAN?

Please to examine this question critically. There must be a time that man is finished, fully completed, and if God in his works used any material besides matter and its properties, he must, as we have said before, have used himself. Can we reasonably conclude that he appropriated any part of his organic structure? If he did, of course the part which he used must in all cases rule, and when man acts, it is in obedience to that part of God's nature, which he transplanted in the organism of man.

IF MAN IS A PART OF GOD, WHICH RULES?

Theologians, and even learned spiritual lecturers, will tell their audiences that God is manifested in man, hence, being the superior power, the God part of each one must govern the mind and body in all things. Matter and its laws have certain properties. God, possessing all power and infinite wisdom, you say constructed therefrom a human being; and can we reasonably infer that he used himself in the work? If there is a God manifested in man, he must have used himself,—and we will leave it to the skill of some learned scientist to tell—pshaw, being the case—when he would be entirely used up, and his Lordship cease to exist at all, only as he is divided among the Africans, Abyssinians, Mongolians, and other races of people. To the mind that reasons carefully, he whose vision is clear and conceptions comprehensive, can not fail to recognize the utter absurdity of supposing that God is manifested in man in the way indicated. Being the stronger power he would rule; being present in each individual, would imply a purpose, hence he could either prevent or cause crime. If he would do neither, how could he be manifested in each individual; or, being within each one, would he refuse to exert his influence when the dagger was raised to strike down some defenseless person? Such a theory as is adopted by some learned scientists, that man is a part of God, is certainly not tenable.

Would it not present a strange condition of affairs, when one part of God progresses more rapidly than another part?

In this position, then, that all are parts of God, we beg leave to differ, in so far as an Infinite Intelligence is concerned. The God-part of each individual would rule, being the stronger, in whatever condition a human being might be placed.

WHICH POWER IS WRITING?

In this question, then, we find much food for thought. The world in the past has thought to little purpose, and still to-day there are those who are afraid we will succeed in inculcating atheistical views to such an extent that God will be banished like the Devil. We are not depriving the world of a God. If we are a part of God, then he is writing, and we are not responsible therefor. If we are composed of matter and its properties, and God his properties, it would be difficult to decide which power was giving expression to this series of articles,—the God part or matter part,—but we would have a right to conclude that the God part would have the greater power, and it must be himself that is lost, and who has in consequence instituted this grand Search. In dividing himself into so many different parts, and being manifested in so many different individuals, we would really like to know which part you are addressing when you pray. If God is manifested in nature, animals, and finally in man, each distinct within itself, please explain to me the condition of the remainder of this infinite intelligent entity after being divided up into Indians, Negroes, Chinese, Yankees, French, and Germans. If God is manifested in each individual, it must be for a purpose, said he, being the Creator, would naturally maintain the supremacy. If he used certain portions of matter, and a certain portion of himself, he would naturally so combine the two, that he would retain the supremacy, and would rule, making the God part responsible for what each individual done.

In whatever light you consider this grand question, one must eventually come to the conclusion that there is no infinite God manifested in man. To suppose that such is the case would destroy the individuality of each one, the God part only ruling.

Thus step by step we shall proceed in our investigation, each week presenting such facts in connection with this grand question, that cannot fail to attract attention. The human mind, accustomed to travel in old, hard-beaten paths that have been thoroughly baptized by the influence of old theology, is slow to grasp new truths, or start forth in a direction where its observation has not extended. But gradually the chains that have held it down will be loosened, its aspirations allowed free play in the wide-spread universe, and enjoying the fullest liberty, it moves upward in the scale of existence, appreciating the fact that it is a living entity, eternal as matter and its properties, and destined to live forever.

(To be continued.)

Cheney, the Episcopal Divine.

The great ecclesiastical sensation, in which the central figure was that remarkable personage, Mr. Cheney, has at last been disposed of by the degradation of that eminent clergyman from the ministry of the Episcopal church, yet a calm does not follow. Mr. Cheney occupied a prominent position in this church—was quite independent and low-church in his actions and doctrines, and on account of which he was arraigned before an ecclesiastical court, and finally expelled from the desk which he has for a long time very ably and satisfactorily filled in this city. Now, out in the pure air, his theological collar taken from him, harness and all disposed of, he undoubtedly feels like a caged bird suddenly made free. Mr. Cheney the free man, unhampered by theological straps, will now make rapid strides in liberal views, and finally will become a devoted Spiritualist. Tyng, of New York City, another distinguished clergyman, rather sympathizes with his expelled brother, and he, too, seems to be courting martyrdom. In reference to this sprightly young divine, and the notoriety he apparently is seeking, the Brooklyn (N. Y.) Eagle says: "Martyrdom now is not what it once was. There are no wild beasts and consequent tearing of limb from limb, no flames, and stake, and chains, no torture and starvation in dark and loathsome cells. On the contrary, martyrdom in this day is decidedly a comfortable and profitable thing. It implies a wider reputation and a larger salary, a great deal of sympathy, and a positive present reward. It is, therefore, not so surprising that young Mr. Tyng confronts martyrdom with calm cheerfulness, that he puts himself in regard to it in a receptive attitude, that he indeed courts the soft, pleasant, and valuable martyr's crown. There is not in the land a bishop of the Protestant Episcopal church of North America whom young Mr. Tyng will not boldly approach and defy to make him a martyr. His latest challenge was issued to Bishop Whitehouse, of Illinois. Cheney having been deposed for insubordination, young Mr. Tyng was at once anxious to preach for Cheney, and caused his purpose of so doing to be announced. The bishop remonstrated with young Mr. Tyng, and called his attention to the canon in such case made and provided. Paying no attention to the Episcopal warning, young Mr. Tyng proceed to preach, and may be figuratively described as saying to the bishop, in paraphrase of the irreverent Sunday scholar's remark on the bears of the Old Testament story, 'Now fetch on your martyrdom.' It remains to be seen whether the bishop will gratify young Mr. Tyng by making a martyr of him. Should the desire of his heart be satisfied, his evangelical congregation in New York would be more crowded than ever, and it would be necessary to pull down the chapel and build a greater."

This revolution or rebellion now going on in the Episcopal church, is of the most harmless and innocent kind. No bones have been broken, no blood shed, no olfactory organs smashed—nothing of that kind occurs. A few long robed gentry congregate together, and with an air of authority, arraign their prisoner before their bar, quote from the canons of their church, and judge from them and the testimony whether the prisoner is guilty or not. While being tried, the prisoner looks serious, assumes a sanctimonious appearance, and defends himself the best he can. The fact is, when a man enters the ministry, he is compelled to put on a harness,—a collar to draw with, a breeching to prevent him from going too rapidly toward liberalism, and a check, to hold his head up to the proper standard of morals,—thus dressed, he "crucifies Christ" for sinners, dips sinners in water for Christ,—in fact he is compelled to pursue a circuitous route to heaven, using blood to save the wayward, water to purify them, and fire to frighten them, while he prays regularly for the whole world. Mr. Cheney could not endure the theological harness. It galled him, and he resolved to break therefrom. But the National Baptist don't like his audacity in defying the church, and, indeed, there is some truth in its remarks, which are as follows:

"If the most solemn religious vows, deliberately assumed, may be deliberately and persistently broken, then the conclusion is easily reached by many minds, that no promises, in church or state, social or private, can be very sacred, if conscience, or expediency may be urged against them. Mr. Cheney may be giving to young men an example of independence, but he is certainly learning them to violate their pledges—and the influence of the last lesson will go quite as far as the first. We can respect his motives, and we can heartily approve his dislikes, but we can not disguise the fact that the effect of his course is to bring contempt upon law, and to make the rejection of openly-assumed obligations seem a trivial concern. Nor can we, with our present understanding of the case, attach any importance to the plea that he is persecuted. He made his vows and promises with his eyes open. If the yoke has become too heavy, no one compels him to wear it. He is as free to go as he was to come. If the service which he promised to render is now obnoxious, there is a way in which he may preserve his conscience and his freedom without sacrificing his truthfulness or his honor."

Mediums.

By reference to our Medium's Register the names and residence of many good mediums will be found.

Well vouched for mediums throughout the world will have their names registered in the JOURNAL, free of charge, on application by letter to this office.

IN CHICAGO are to be found some of the very best mediums in the world.

MRS MAUD LORD, a medium for physical manifestations, resides at 251½ Park avenue. She continues to hold seances, to the admiration and consolation of all who attend them. Loved ones in spirit-life unmistakably manifest themselves to relatives and friends who attend her seances.

MRS. A. H. ROBINSON, so widely known as a healing and business medium, is doing a world-wide business in healing the sick of the various ills flesh is heir to. Old chronic diseases yield, as a general thing, to one prescription given by the wise spirits who control her. The principles adopted for such cures, as we are advised by the spirits controlling her while she is deeply entranced, are the positive and negative forces in Nature; when either preponderates to an undue degree, disease is the result. Through her mediumship, skillful physicians in spirit-life gain access to the sick person, and by medicines administered, and proper magnetic manipulation by such spirits, an equilibrium is restored, and health ensues as a matter of necessity.

The foregoing facts are vouched for by letters innumerable from patients thus cured in all parts of the country, many of whom have seen, talked with, and been palpably manipulated by the spirits controlling Mrs. Robinson. They are, as they avow, brought en rapport with the sick persons by the magnetized paper sent to them through the mail.

CHARLES H. READ continues to hold seances in Chicago and vicinity, to the admiration and astonishment of all who witness the manifestations. The most wonderful feats are performed by spirits through his mediumship, in two seconds of time.

The manifestations are performed in the darkened room, and yet there is only darkness for barely time to extinguish and re-light the gas. The marvelous feats performed through this man's mediumship, must be seen to be fully realized.

THE BANGS CHILDREN (the wonderful feats performed through their mediumship was reported at length not long since in this JOURNAL) are still located at No. 227 South Morgan street. They are giving most convincing proof of man's immortality—and the practicability of spirit life as an adjunct or continuation of this—with all the love for the dear ones they leave behind, that is common for one kind, loving relative to manifest, one toward another, in the hour of darkness and sorrow.

All persons visiting this city should avail themselves of the opportunity to see these children, and attend one of their seances.

WILLIS, the Spirit Photographer, has gone home to Crawfordsville, Indiana.

His last spirit likenesses were the best he took, showing from the first, that he is being developed daily to a greater degree of perfection in the art.

We hope to induce some other good spirit artist to make Chicago a permanent home. Will such artists write us upon the subject. Address S. S. Jones, 189 S. Clark street, Chicago.

"The Voice of Prayer."

There is a voice in prayer, whether uttered with the lips, or expressed by the aspirations of the soul. That voice is significant of something,—yes, it teaches an important lesson, which has been beautifully unfolded by one of Nature's poets, Warren Sumner Barlow. In his "Voices," a poem of superior excellence, his nature has flashed lightning, but the thunder did not follow until the "Voice of Prayer" was presented to the world. His soul imbued with the love of truth, he goes forth, attacking error wherever found, and giving no quarter to those who may oppose him. His mission is of a two-fold nature: first en-lightning the mind, and then through the thunders of applause that follow, to awaken the theological world from the stupor in which it is now resting. The "Voice of Prayer" is accomplishing the design of its author most beautifully. Its mission is to eradicate false notions, banish superstition, ignorance and error, and in place thereof to build a structure in which it alone can be heard interpreting the true nature of the aspirations of the soul. In his prelude he says:

"The aspirations of the soul ascend
On wings of hope to scenes divinely fair;
Nor bars nor bolts can hold the silent power
That seeks the soul's home and love!
Then cherish every longing of the soul,
Let thoughtful prayer dispel all slavish fear,
Let radiant hope extend her full-fledged wings;
For all our prayers and hopes but dimly paint
The lofty heights to which we will attain."

In the following he defines prayer, and in a very satisfactory manner, too:

"True prayer is a boon to the sorrowing soul,
An d brings many blessings within its control;
A larder that lifts every child of the sod
In closer communion with Nature and God.
It opens within every channel of love,
And brings us in union with angels above.
But God ever changeless in laws and decrees,
Is ever unbending, regardless of pleas:
But prayer aids the soul that aspiringly prays—
It not only receives but sends its rays."

But in the following he gives utterance to a sublime truth:

"Our faith, like our prayers, must have reason and sense,
Or man shows his folly in every pretense.
Ever pray with the love, so shall harmony reign,
And your prayers shall not mock you as utterly vain."

Prayer must be in obedience to law, or of no avail whatever; yet thousands are being uttered daily by the orthodox churches that are contrary thereto in every particular. His illustration of the Negro's prayer is really mirth-provoking.

"An honest old negro most ardent in prayer,
With reason and faith not developed with care,
Is asking God's blessing on every loyal meal
For what he most needed made earnest appeal.
A war who perceived his potatoes were gone,
With basket brim-full, at the earliest dawn,
Secreted himself in the cabin o'erhead,
Where the negro below him yet slumbered in bed;
Who soon roused to cooking the best he was able,
And under the hatchway spread out his pine table.
Without a potato to grace any plate,
He seated himself, yet bewailing his fate,—
Exclaimed, 'O my Father in merciful love,
Give Cuffy some 'taters from bounties above.'
At once the potatoes came showering down,
Upsetting his dishes and pelting his crown.
'O them's um, them's um, bless de Lord, oh, my soul!
Who cares for de coffee, de pitcher and bowl?
De shower of dig 'taters, O Lord, am sublime—
But I pray dat you left um down easy next time.'"

Throughout this little work there is a vein of charity and love that gives it a tender expression that the sympathetic cannot fail to admire. In reference to kind acts and deeds the author says:

"A word kindly spoken the right time and place,
May lift some dark soul from the depths of disgrace;
May wreathe a prayer on the altar of love,
That ends in fruition with angels above.
We thus build a ladder,—each deed is a round,—
That reaches to heaven while touching the ground;
For in aiding the least is involved the reward—
'Well done! enter into the joy of thy Lord.'*

"Then pray with your purse, with kind words and good deeds;
O pray that our churches may think less of creeds,
That ever the poor may be welcomed within,
Though garments are tattered—souls blotted with sin—
And that love pure, unselfish, each heart may expand,
And peace with its blessings pervade every land."

* Mat. 25: 21, 23.

This little work is really a grand production, and no library is complete without it. The lessons it teaches in regard to prayer are invaluable to those who desire to understand its true meaning as explained by one of nature's poets. While it encourages prayer, it points out the groove in which it must be conducted in order to receive an answer. The selfish, bigoted orthodox should read it, for it would send gleams of sunshine into his soul, and awaken a train of thought that would bring him in closer communion with the angel world. When the prayer is not systematically directed in a proper channel, it is sure to wreck or injure the one who utters it, for it is expressed in violation of law, and a severe penalty must follow. How necessary, then, that all should know how to pray.

This production from Mr. Barlow's pen should be the elementary religious work in all theological seminaries, in fact a knowledge of its contents is just as essential to the student, in order to progress in his theological studies, as a thorough understanding of the multiplication table is to the scholar who wishes to become proficient in mathematics.

You, then, who are accustomed to praying, we advise you to cease your devotion, until you can procure and thoroughly study this "Voice of Prayer." We are confident that after having perused its scintillating pages, you could indulge in prayer with a firm belief implanted within your mind that it would be answered.

A Fact for Travelers.

G. L. C., the New York correspondent of the Toledo Commercial, writes of the Erie Railway in a recent letter, thus:

"Trains run regularly on time, full of passengers, and the new coaches recently put upon the road are marvels of elegance and comfort. The Erie was never in such splendid working order as it is to-day—and people are beginning to appreciate its comforts, notwithstanding the efforts of its rivals to mingle the litigation in which its managers are engaged with the actual business and operation of the road itself."

Mrs. M. J. Wilcoxson.

Cephas B. Lynn, in the Banner of Light of June 4th, writing from Louisville, pays the following merited compliment to Mrs. M. J. Wilcoxson:

"LECTURE ON MEDIUMSHIP,

By Mrs. M. J. Wilcoxson. This good sister lectured for the Spiritualists during the month of March, giving universal satisfaction. Her discourse on 'Mediumship' called out a very respectable audience.

"Mrs. Wilcoxson affirmed, at the outset, that mediumship was fundamental to Spiritualism. She then went on to say that she owed everything to her spirit friends; they had blessed her and made her what she was. She said she had implicit faith in them; not that they were infallible, but that, through experience, she had always found them truthful, and so she should ever heed their admonitions, and seek to carry out their plans.

"Our sister also averred that she considered that true inspiration would only come to those who by prayer and meditation, and pure and holy lives, proved themselves worthy of standing before the world as evangels of a new theology.

"Listening to Sister Wilcoxson, we ceased to wonder either as to the cause of her continued fidelity to Spiritualism, or her moral heroism, or the secret of those beautiful and practical inspirations that have filled from her lips during the years of her public ministry, blessing the people and resurrecting them into the delightful ways of spiritual life and light.

"Our good sister is humble. She is not full of egotism. Believing in the spirits, she subjects herself, in a certain sense, to them; consequently she is inspired, and preaches a living gospel, not a cold, hard, dry, crispy, combative system—no, not at all.

"The doctrine of individualism has so inflated a certain class, that, were it in the economy of things for them to be presented to the highest archangels of the celestial world, they would not take off their hats to the exalted ones. Their minds, full of conceit and pomposity, affect contempt when one talks of an abiding faith in the spirits, and they say, 'Really, we have outgrown all that.'

"Now, we detest fanaticism; science is one of our saviors; but still, at the same time, we do feel that faith in the power of the spirit-world to do for us, is the groundwork of our religion. And he who is prayerful and full of a spirit of trust, who is humble, who is self-abnegating, who says,—if a speaker,—'Dear spirit friends, may words of wisdom and inspirational power be given me to-day. I ask this not for my own glory, not that I may be petted and flattered, no, not that; but, on the contrary, that the great gospel of angel presence and rational religion may be presented in the best manner to the people. For the sake of principle may I be successful to-day;'—he who can occupy this position, may feel sure that victory awaits him, and also that his power for good will increase day by day. 'He that humbleth himself shall be exalted.' That's it! there is true theology in that statement.

"Reader, let us seek this humility. We can be humble and prayerful, and all that sort of thing, and yet be strong in our individual power.

"Mrs. Wilcoxson concluded her lecture by referring to the scientific aspect of mediumship. She hoped the time would soon come when media could possess the knowledge requisite to an harmonious development of their powers."

Lyceum Hall Festival.

We call attention to the fact that the Progressive Lyceum and Society of Chicago now have a home of their own,—having secured a lease of the Hall heretofore known as Rice & Jackson's Hall, situated on West Randolph street. This beautiful hall has an entrance at each end by barely one broad, easy flight of stairs leading from the sidewalk, and is sunny, airy, and cheerful. The sessions of the Lyceum are held each Sunday, commencing at 11 o'clock, A. M. All citizens and strangers are cordially invited to attend.

As an opening and "house warming" of the new hall, a festival will be held there on the evening of Wednesday, the 28th of June, inst., to which all are invited. The admission to the hall will be free. There will be a short programme of speaking and singing, after which the affair will take the form of a social reunion, in which the only "coldness" permissible will be that afforded by the ice creams that will be provided for all who may desire them. Let all friends, both resident and abroad, note the time and place and come, and "whosoever will, let him come" to the social reunion. Rally around the hearthstone, children, big and little, and see what a sweet spirit of concord and sympathy will be found where two or three thousand are gathered together.

The Progressive Spiritualists.

Under the above heading, the Troy (N. Y.) Daily Times of June 9th, says: "This Society, organized under the general State law for religious and scientific associations, has elected the following trustees for the ensuing year: Benjamin Starbuck, Elisha Waters, Alexander McCoy, Charles Kelsey, J. Skinner, J. M. Brophy, B. G. Barto, W. K. Lewis, E. F. Rodgers, Wm. H. Tibbits, H. L. Barnes, Mrs. J. J. McGowan, Mrs. J. Brown. At a meeting of the trustees, B. Starbuck was elected President, Alex. McCoy, Vice-President, B. G. Barto, Secretary, and Charles Kelsey, Treasurer.

The lecture course arranged by the Children's Progressive Lyceum, beginning Sunday, September 3d, was approved and adopted by the trustees, and is as follows: For September, Anna M. Middlebrook; October, November and December, Mrs. Nellie J. T. Brigham; February and March, Hon. J. M. Peebles; April, May and June, Thos. Gales Forster.

The Society have rented W. D. Van Arnum's new hall—now being built on the site of the old Griswold Opera House—and will move into their new quarters about the 1st of August.

Fellowship and Ordination.

On the 21st inst., the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL SOCIETY granted a Letter of Fellowship and Ordination to Mrs. E. E. Gibson, No. 12 Burroughs Place, Boston, Mass., constituting her a "Regular Minister of the Gospel," in due and legal form, and authorizing her to solemnize marriages according to law.

Bible in India and Hindoo New Testament.

We will send the above-named rare books, free of postage, on receipt of $3.50.

Personal and Local.

—O. L. Ray, of Lake Mills, Wis., sends a testimonial of the ability of Mrs. L. Atwood, of same place, giving evidence of her power as a healing medium. He was cured of catarrh through her skill.

—We are glad to see so many ladies commencing the practice of medicine. We notice by the Chicago Daily Tribune, Mrs. L. A. Hooker, M. D., (mother of Mrs. Maud Lord, the medium,) has located in this city, at 251½ Park Avenue, where she will devote herself to her professional duties. She is a graduate of a medical college, and is thoroughly skilled in the treatment of chronic and nervous diseases, employing in part the hydropathic and electropathic treatment. She can furnish a pleasant home for ladies during sickness and confinement.

—Wm. F. Tolles, of Hebron, Ind., who had been a member of a church for 37 years, writes that he has been reading the JOURNAL for three years, and gained therefrom more soul satisfying truth than during his whole life before.

—To all our readers who may want light, pleasant and profitable employment for themselves or friends, we would say read the advertisement of O. E. Wooley & Co., in another column, headed—"Wanted Agents." We know this firm to be reliable.

—Dr. Samuel Underhill gives an account of his doings in several pages of manuscript, the most of which has appeared in the JOURNAL before this date from correspondents. He had a debate with Elder Bancman on the following subject:

"Resolved, That the phenomena of Modern Spiritualism is true, and in harmony with all truth."

The debate elicited considerable attention, and was listened to with marked interest.

—Ananiah Dods, of Stanwood, Kansas, wants some test medium to give that place a visit.

—There is difficulty occasionally even in Christian Sabbath Schools. John Bakon is Superintendent of one at Bourbon, Ind. Not exactly liking the character of one of his teachers, Mrs. Hunt, he dispensed with her services. Next day she captured him in a hardware store and he not making a satisfactory explanation, she cowhided him. He then closed in and threw her down, but she got away, and picking up a chunk of iron put a countenance on him that resembled a prize fighter's after the seventy-ninth round. The assistant superintendent will appear at Sunday school for a few weeks.

—The alarm for missions in China, growing out of the recent proclamation forbidding everything contrary to Confucius, forbidding the presence of female missionaries, etc., has been gradually subsiding.

—Dr. J. Stolz, of Chicago, will lecture at, Rensselaer, Jasper county, Ind., on his next visit to that place, of which due notice will be given. Subject, Is Man a Free Moral Agent, or is he the Creature of Circumstances, subject to a power over which he has no control, and is therefore not free in any sense?

—Thomas Loyd, of Grass Valley, Cal., writes:

"Mrs. Benjamin Todd has been giving us some lectures here. She speaks well, and is a good worker in the cause, and is truly an estimable lady."

He also speaks as follows of Prof. Holmes:

"He has been speaking for us here for six months past, and is doing a great good work."

—The "Sabbath question" is a serious one to converts—e. g., in China. To leave work that day in many cases causes dismissal from employment, and the loss, to human view, of all chance for even a livelihood. Industrial laws and habits in China are not adjusted to the Sabbath, as here.

—Brother Samuel Clegg, of Dodgeville, Iowa Co., Wis., asks the following pertinent question:

"How is it that Iowa county, Wis., is a well settled county, and there has never been a lecturer or medium anywhere in it? J. O. Barret travels through Grant county, goes to places not half so important as Dodgeville, Mineral Point, and numerous places around. Grant county is next county west, but he does not come within thirty miles of Dodgeville."

[Will those referred to reply?—ED. JOURNAL.]

—A Roman Catholic journal, the St. Peter, has just delivered a sharp but pithy homily to Mr. James Gordon Bennett. It reminds him that he was born, baptised and brought up in the Catholic Church. Further, that he is now an old man and should be making his peace with God. But this, it tells him, cannot be done merely by giving a few thousand dollars now and then to a Catholic Church, and occasionally saying a good word for the Pope in his paper. He must do a great deal more than this. He must utterly change the character of the Herald, which has been "most sinfully managed." He must discharge the "infidels" who now write his editorials. Does he object that to do this would ruin his paper? "We think it would," replies St. Peter, "but it is better for all eternity to ruin an evil newspaper than to suffer for all eternity in the burning lake. The success of an evil newspaper can be balanced only by Satan with the loss of the imperishable soul."

—Mrs. Harriet E. Pope writes from Minnesota:

"There seems to be more of a union of purpose among Spiritualists in our State than ever before, and our cause is gaining ground."

—Thomas Ros thinks Humboldt, Tenn., would be a good place for a test medium.

—Mrs. Sarah A. Byrnes lectures at Stoneham, Mass., July 2d.

—The Spiritualists of Carthage, Mo., will have a picnic celebration on the Fourth of July, at which E. V. Wilson and other speakers will be present.

—Miss Lottie Fowler, the Clairvoyant Test Medium, is at the St. James Hotel, Washington.

—J. H. Powell, who gained so much notoriety as a philosopher in discovering the recantation of A. J. Davis, soon returns to England.

—The Valparaiso (Ind.) Messenger says a minister of the gospel refused to preach the funeral sermon of a man who died of delirium tremens in that town, a few days since, saying to the widow of the deceased that "the soul of her husband had gone to hell, and he wouldn't preach the funeral sermon."

—The Protestant Churchman says:

"It is becoming more and more probable that revolution in the Church cannot be averted. We deplore it. We have labored and prayed against it. But if one party in the church is to crush out another under the forms of law, how can revolution be prevented?"

—A Salem, Oregon, paper of a recent date says: "We were shown, yesterday, a letter from a man up the valley, addressed to one of our liquor dealers, from which we make the following extracts: 'Church members have got to drinking here; send me $5 worth of whisky, but don't answer this letter, as some of them may get hold of it.'"

—Levi Dilkelspiel, who attended the Sturgis convention, has returned to this city.

Philadelphia Department.

BY.....HENRY T. CHILD, M. D

Subscriptions will be received, and papers may be obtained at wholesale or retail, at 634 Race street, Philadelphia.

IN MEMORIAM.

Mary K. Noble.

Passed on to the home of the angels, MARY K., daughter of Dr. Charles and Adaline Noble, in the 30th year of her age.

We give below the substance of our remarks on the occasion of the funeral:

Death is always a solemn and impressive teacher, and when, as in the present instance, it has crossed the threshold twice within a very brief period, its lesson seems still more impressive, not only as calling our attention to the fact itself, but to the more important inquiry, what is life? Death, which is but an incident in life, has been pictured in sombre hues and shrouded in gloom, while it is a most beautiful and loving angel, often coming to set the soul free from the chains of a terrible bondage, opening to the human soul life's flower-encircled door, and inviting it all liberty to go forth into the broad fields of the inner life. It may be the most solemn and impressive lesson in life itself, of which death is but a mere incident. In times past some men have said death was the end of life, they have supposed that the world beyond was one of impenetrable gloom to mortals, and it has been spoken of as "That bourne from which no traveler returns."

Now we know that that life and this are all one. The experience of every human life, even the best, the fullest and most perfect, always leaves its possessor with feelings that all has not been accomplished. Here all of our hopes, desires and aspirations are unfulfilled even by those souls that have had the fullest opportunities here, and there is a universal demand in the souls of men that they may have the opportunity to fill out into perfectly rounded and beautifully harmonious proportions all that belongs to life, and we know that our loving Father will not mock us, but in the future of this life that is ours now, we shall continue our issues and fulfill our destinies.

This life, even when carried out to the fullest extent, is but a very brief introduction to the great volume of the book of life which is to be written by each of us throughout the endless cycles of eternity.

This being the case with those whose opportunities for usefulness and labor are extended through a long life on earth, how much more will this beautiful life, so unfortunate to be given to one of this dear child, who for two thirds of her brief life on earth has been held in the thraldom of a sad and fearful disease, so that it may almost be said to have been a failure.

She has gone forth into the angel world as a mere child, to enter there upon the great work of life, and the words of consolation that come to this kind and affectionate father and the loving and devoted mother, whose constant and earnest efforts never failed her, are that she will have this beautiful compensation that all your faithful and tender care has been treasured up, and will be comprehended by her in the unfolding of her soul, and there are those now in the inner life who are ready to take this tender plant of yours under their guardianship and kindly care.

She is so young that she may not be able to stand alone, but there are those who will sustain her in her weakness, and train her in all the ways of life, so that she will grow up to the full stature of womanhood, and when in a few brief years we shall meet her there, we shall rejoice to find that she has grown into the loving and attractive conditions of an unfolded life, the germs of which have lain dormant here.

The inner nature, which is always pure, will be freed from the thraldom of the past, and be enabled to express itself through her spiritual form.

In view, then, of this great law of compensation, there is consolation for all, at the same time this solemn and impressive lesson calls upon us to consider well the responsibilities of life, knowing that each day has its appropriate work, for which we are responsible in accordance with the talents bestowed upon us and the means within our reach for their cultivation. On such occasions as this, when we assemble to pay the last tribute to the casket which has held the spirit of a loved one, and to mingle our sympathies with those who have parted with such, there is a tender and loving influence comes over our souls which brings us nearer to each other; the little differences which may have been between us are melted away by this heavenly fire, and we realize more truly the sacred duties of life, not only to one another here, but to all the brotherhood of man.

Let us, then, carefully treasure up these lessons, and endeavor to be prepared to fulfill all life's duties as we move onward towards "The pale realms of shade,"

Where we shall meet the loved ones who have gone before us, thus shall we not only be prepared to fulfill life's duties here, but to go on with its unfinished labors in the mansions of the Father's house beyond this earth-life.

THE AIR WE BREATHE.

An Essay by W. H. Churchman, A. M. (Superintendent of the Indiana Institute for the Education of the Blind), Read Before the Western Social Science Association, at Chicago.

This is a very able essay, and does great credit to Brother Churchman, for his patient perseverence in elaborating it. He quotes numerous authorities and refers to many sources of impurity or contamination of the air we breathe. The arts, chemistry, morasses, grave-yards, filthy premises, wall papers, perfumery, and a number of other things, some of which we shall refer to, he says:

Vitiated air produces deformity, imbecility, and idiocy. It encourages intemperance in the use of intoxicating drinks. A habit is thus established, which is at best a delusion, fatal to the health and morals, and which not only defeats its own object, but aggravates the evil it is intended to remove, the ultimate effect of every fit of intoxication, or even exhilaration of mind brought on by alcoholic drinks being to precipitate the mind and habits to a point still lower in the scale of human degradation and degeneracy. Even children, whose nervous systems have been worked up into a state of chronic excitability by the impure air of a dark, ill-ventilated cellar, are often dosed with spirits, when inadvertently is not at hand, to put them to sleep and abridge the trouble of nurses and mothers.

Impure air encourages vice. The inhabitants of low, squalid, ill-ventilated basements and cellars are often not only indisposed, but by incessantly breathing an impure atmosphere, are actually unable to labor for their due support.

The combined testimony of those who have taken the pains to investigate the causes of vice and prostitution, leaves no doubt that a low condition of body and mind has no inconsiderable share in their aggravation and production, and ample evidence has been adduced to show that the impure air of factories, theatres, over-crowded lodging-houses, &c., is fully adequate to induce this state.

Upon the subject of wall papers, Dr. Taylor says:

"A square foot of paper may yield from twenty to eighty seven grains of the arsenical pigment. Dr. Hinds, of Birmingham, noticed that in occupying a room covered with a wall paper of this kind, [he does not mention the color, we believe it is always green, H. T. C.] he suffered from severe depression, nausea, pain in the abdomen, and great depression of strength. These symptoms appeared on every evening that he sat in this room. This led him to suspect that they were connected with the room, and on examining the paper he found in it a quantity of arsenic."

In another case it is stated that a Dr. Holley was apprehended and threatened with paralysis.

"He removed the paper, and since then has recovered his health."

The statistics in regard to the fearful mortality of children in large cities, as compared with that of the country, where the air is pure, is another evidence of the necessity of reform in this matter. We have not room to quote all we should like to present. He says:

"The influence of fresh air increasing the appetite is well illustrated by the following fact, from the Philosophy of Manufactures, p. 282: In a weaving mill, near Manchester, where the ventilation was bad, the proprietor caused a fan to be mounted. The consequences soon became apparent in a curious manner. The operatives, little remarkable for olfactory refinement, instead of thanking their employer for his attention to their comfort and health, made a formal complaint to him that the ventilator had increased their appetites, and therefore entitled them to a corresponding increase of wages. By stopping the fan a part of the day, the ventilation and voracity of the establishment were brought to a medium standard, and complaint ceased."

"It is estimated that from forty to fifty per cent. of all deaths are attributable to the morbific influences of foul air. Infancy is the period when the foul destroyer mistee his greatest onslaughts. This is not due alone to the greater susceptibility of the infantile constitution to injurious influences, but mainly to erroneous notions and practices of mothers and nurses. They are too much afraid to allow their tender charges to breathe the pure, free air of the out-door world, and too careless or ignorant as to the quality of that within the nursery."

Various means are suggested for remedying the evils resulting from impure air, but our space will not permit us to quote further than the following, from George Catlin, in his "Notes of Travel among the North American Indians," entitled, "The Breath of Life." Its role aim is to enforce the doctrine that the natural and proper mode of breathing is through the nostrils, which cavities, he reasons, are constructed by the creator with especial reference to the filtration and purification of the inspired air. The savage races, he teaches, owe their physical superiority to the custom of breathing through the nose, which is universal among them.

We have long known that the mass of mankind, especially in large cities, suffer for proper expansion of the chest. Many persons have depressions over the upper lobes of the lungs, as a result of indolent habits of breathing. Nature has provided that about one-third of the ordinary expansion of the chest will supply air for the human body in a state of rest, thus leaving a reserved force of two-thirds, for speaking and exertion of any kind. If every person, especially those who have a tendency to disease of the lungs would voluntarily use the remaining capacity of their lungs, and frequently through the day expand the chest to its utmost capacity, particularly when they are in fresh, pure air, they would find both an increase of strength and an exhilaration of spirits.

The desire, amounting almost to a necessity, on the part of dwellers in large cities to leave their homes during the warm season, is a demand of the system for pure air, and increased appetite and vigor results from the supply of this.

In order to attain to the highest health, it is necessary to avoid, as far as possible, all impurities in our dwellings and upon our persons; to take persistent care in expanding the chest by aid of the will, so that the best condition of blood may be attained.

We would recommend the essay of Mr. Churchman, and hope to see it extensively circulated.

Photography.

The annual meeting of the National Association of Photographers, which was held in Philadelphia from the 7th to the 10th of June, brought together a large body of men distinguished in the most beautiful and spiritual of all the arts.

It was the third annual exhibition, and an opportunity was offered our citizens to witness a large collection of the finest specimens of this wonderful art, which is progressing rapidly. In addition to the regular meetings of the Association, which were largely attended, very enthusiastic and harmonious, and the exhibition, which occupied one of our largest halls, the Association made arrangements for two lectures, by Prof. Morton, of this city, on Light, which were given in the Academy of Music, to large and appreciative audiences, and were brilliantly illustrated. We shall refer to one of the illustrations in our article on healing. There was also a grand exhibition of stereoscopic views given by Mr. Black, of Boston, representing scenes in various parts of the world. Polar and Tropical regions were painted before us, and it was much more pleasant to witness these scenes from the easy seats of our Academy, than to endure the toils and privations incident to travel in either of these places. The icebergs viewed in a warm and pleasant hall could be much better studied than in the frosty atmosphere which surrounds them in their natural conditions. The greasy and stupid looking Esquimaux were quite as agreeable on the canvass as in the bleak and dreary wilds of their frozen land. The scenery upon the White Mountains, as well as that of various parts of our country, and the streets of some of our large cities, were very interesting. Through the kindness of our friend, C. B. Jones, of Davenport, Iowa, we were introduced to a number of the distinguished lights of this beautiful science of light, men whose souls were fascinated with the brilliant and attractive profession. There were a number of Spiritualists in the Association, but we regret that there were no specimens of spirit pictures in the exhibition. We trust next year our friends will see to have some of these on hand.

Obituary.

Passed onward, May 20th, to her home in the Summer Land, from Los Angeles, Cal., Louise A., consort of Rodney Montague, in her 56th year. Our beloved sister bore her long and exhausting illness with a fortitude and patience scarce ever witnessed. The faith, age, knowledge, of the after life, served to soothe and comfort her in her last moments.

The writer, by her request, officiated at the funeral. Our sister could truly exclaim,

"O Death, where is thy sting!
O Grave, where is thy victory!"

THOS. A. GARNY.

Passed to higher life, from Almond, Wis., May 19th, 1871, Mr. M. C. Bent, formerly from Cavendish, Vermont.

Thus another bright star has left the terrestrial and joined the celestial band in their home of love and joy.

O. W. FELKER.

Eastern papers please copy.

Mr. Clark S. Cox, aged 55 years, passed to spirit life, May 10th, at, Laporte, Ind. He was a true and devoted Spiritualist.

Passed to the Summer Land, in the neighborhood of Kents, Ind., daughter of Manlif Jones, aged 12 years; accidentally shot by John Spencer.

Died at Moline, Ill., May 12th, 1871, of whooping-cough, Charles H., infant son of C. W. and P. L. Reed, aged 3 months and 4 days.

MRS. C. H. LELAND,

Wonderful Psychometrist, Soul Reader, and Business Medium, will, upon receipt of photograph, look of hair, whether married or single, send to any person a correct delineation of character, with leading events in the past and future life, for one dollar. Advice concerning business, ten dollars. Written communications from friends in spirit life, two dollars. Satisfaction guaranteed. Instructions for mediumistic development, one dollar. Address, Myrtlestrip, Mass.

v10 n10 tf

WANTED AGENTS

In every Town and City, to sell an article needed in every household. SELLS RAPIDLY. Large PROFITS to AGENTS. Send Stamp for Circulars. O. E. WOOLEY & Co., Room 19, No. 181 Lasalle St., Chicago.

v10 n13 tf

Spence's Positive and Negative Powders for sale this office.

MEDIUMS.

MRS. A. H. ROBINSON,

Healing, Psychometric and Business Medium

148 Fourth Avenue, Chicago,

MRS. ROBINSON, while under spirit control, on receiving a lock of hair of a sick patient, will diagnose the nature of the disease most perfectly, and prescribe the proper remedy. Yet, as the most speedy cure is the essential object in view, rather than to gratify idle curiosity, the better practice is to send along with a lock of hair, a brief statement of the sex, age, leading symptoms and duration of the disease of the sick person, when she will without delay return's most potent prescription and remedy for eradicating the disease and permanently curing the patient in all curable cases.

Of herself she claims no knowledge of the healing art, but when her spirit guides are brought "en rapport" with a sick person through her mediumship, they never fail to give immediate and permanent relief, in curable cases, through the POSITIVE and NEGATIVE forces latent in the system and in nature. This prescription is sent by mail, and be it an internal remedy, or an external application, it should be given or applied precisely as directed in the accompanying letter of instructions, however simple it may seem to be; remember it is not the quantity of the compound, but the chemical effect that is produced, that science takes cognizance of.

One prescription is usually sufficient, but in case the patient is not permanently cured by one prescription, the application for a second, or more if required, should be made in about ten days after the last, each time stating any changes that may be apparent in the symptoms of the disease.

Mrs. ROBINSON also, through her mediumship, diagnoses the diseases of any one who calls upon her at her residence. The facility with which the spirits controling her accomplish the same, is done as well when the application is by letter as when the the patient is present. Her gifts are very remarkable, not only in the healing art, but as a psychometric, test, business and trance medium.

Terms:—Diagnosis and first prescription, $3.00; each subsequent, $2.00; Psychometric Delineation of Character, $3; answering Business Letters, $3. The money should accompany the application, to insure a reply.

J. G. W. ENTWISTLE,

CLAIRVOYANT PHYSICIAN.

No. 194 South Clark Street, Room 3, Chicago.

He is prepared to treat any of the many forms of disease, and possesses a peculiar insight into the cause and character, and a controlling power over it which seems wonderful (even to himself). His medicines are purely vegetable. Invalids at any distance will be as thoroughly examined, and the means of cure (if curable) as definitely pointed out as if they were present, by sending a lock of hair, giving name, age, sex, and two leading symptoms of the disease. Insanity and fits not treated. Examination fee, by hair, $2.00.

v10 n8 9t

DUMONT C. DAKE, M.D.,

ANALYTICAL PHYSICIAN FOR CHRONIC DISEASES.

Patients at a distance successfully treated. Medicines sent by mail or express. Send a simple statement of condition, age, and sex, occupation, temperament, (if not known, send photograph.) Address P. O. Box 80, Chicago, Ill. Send for ANALYTICAL HEALTH JOURNAL.

v10 n8 4t

A. B. Severance,

The Well-Known Psychometrist,

Will give to those who visit him in person, or from autograph or from lock of hair, readings of character; marked changes, past and future; advice in regard to business; diagnosis of disease, with prescription; adaptation of those intending marriage; directions for the management of children; hints to the inharmoniously married, etc.

TERMS—$2.00 for full Delineation; brief Delineation—$1.

A. B. SEVERANCE,

457 Milwaukee St., MILWAUKEE, WIS.

v1n12tf.

GROSVENOR SWAN, M. D.

DR. SWAN MAY BE FOUND AT ALL hours, at 117 Wabash Ave., Chicago, where he will be happy to receive calls from his old friends and patrons, and all who may require his services.

v9 n8 tf

Dr. J. Wilbur's

MAGNETIC PAPER

HAS cured all sorts of complaints, from cancer to cold feet. Send stamp and address for one paper free. Dr. J. Wilbur, 400 W. Randolph St., Chicago, Ill.

n10 v10 tf.

MRS E. MANIFOLD,

Medical, Clairvoyant, and Healing Medium. Parties at a distance examined by lock of hair. Price, $1.00. Prescriptions, $1.00 Magnetic Remedies sent to all parts of the country. Address Mrs. E. G. Manifold, P. O. Box 1094, Rockford, Ill.

v10n7 tf

813 RACE ST.

R. R. STODDARD, of 813 Race St., PHILADELPHIA, can accommodate MEDIUMS visiting that city with fine rooms for business purposes, at reasonable rates.

v10n12 tf

MRS. LODEMA ATWOOD,

Healing Medium,

Has been before the public as a successful Healer the past fifteen years. We rely entirely on the controling influences. We diagnose and give prescriptions by letter. Distance no objection. Will visit in person a reasonable distance these that desire, and can afford the expense. Delineation and advice in a variety of ways. Emblems we give gratuitously to all our patients, when presented to our guides. Our former cession has been to come en rapport with the applicant by the hand-writing or lock of hair; but to save time, and the unpleasant sensation of taking on the symptoms of the disease, we require the applicant to give age and sex, with one or two leading symptoms of the disease, written by the patient, if able to write—if not, send lock of hair. As the giving of tests is not the object which we seek, but to restore the patient to health by Nature's own hand, in the shortest time possible, we do not deem it necessary here to lumber up an advertisement with what we have done or what we can do, but prefer to be known by our fruits.

Terms, for diagnosis and prescription, $2; Diagnosis without prescription, $1; all subsequent prescriptions, $1 each. All letters should be accompanied with the fee, and addressed to MRS. LODEMA ATWOOD, Box 45, Lake Mills, Jefferson Co., Wis.

v10 n1 tf.

Dr. Abba Lord Palmer.

BOX 101, NEW BOSTON, ILLINOIS.

WONDERFUL PSYCHOMETRIST AND CLAIRVOYAN PHYSICIAN, SOUL READER AND BUSINESS MEDIUM.

Can diagnose disease by Rheum, autograph, lock of hair, without a failure, and give prescription, which, if followed, will surely cure.

Can trace stolen property, tell the past, present and future—advise concerning business, and give written communications from spirit friends.

Diagnosis of disease, with prescription, $3.00. Communications from spirit friends, $2.00. Delineation of character with advice concerning marriage, $1.00.

n1 v10 tf.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

ATTRACTIVE NEW BOOKS.

—o—

ERNEST RENAN'S WORKS.

THE LIFE OF JESUS.—THE LIFE OF SAINT PAUL.—AND THE LIVES OF THE APOSTLES.

These three remarkable books, by the great French Philosopher, are attracting the earnest attention of all readers. "They are of great power and learning, earnestly and beautifully written, beautiful in style, admirable in treatment, and filled with reverence, intelligence, and warmth of heart."

* Price $1.75 each; postage 20 cents.

THE BIBLE IN INDIA;

Or; the Hindoo Origin of Hebrew and Christian Revelation. Translated from the French of Louis Jacolliot. A remarkable volume, which is making a great sensation in Europe, and exciting the profoundest attention of thinking people. * Price $2.00; postage 20 cents.

HABITS OF GOOD SOCIETY.

A hand Book for Ladies and Gentlemen; with hints and anecdotes concerning nice points of taste, good manners, and the art of making one's self agreeable. The best and most entertaining book on the subject ever published.

* Price $1.75; postage 20 cents.

THE ART OF CONVERSATION,

With directions for Self-Culture. Teaching the art of conversing with ease and propriety, and setting forth the literary knowledge requisite to appear to advantage in good society. A book of real merit and intrinsic work.

Price $1.50; postage 20 cents.

THE ARTS OF WRITING, READING, AND SPEAKING.

A remarkably clever book that every one, whether educated or not, will find of immense advantage and profit. A capital companion for that ever popular work, THE ART OF CONVERSATION. * Price $1.50; postage 20 cents.

These books are all beautifully printed and handsomely bound in cloth covers, with gilt backs.

For sale wholesale and retail by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 159 S. Clark St., Chicago.

THE

VOICE OF PRAYER,

A Poem by W. S. Barlow, Author of "The Voices."

This little poem is fully equal to any of Mr. Barlow's best efforts, and should be read by every one.

Printed on fine tinted paper with blue line border. Price 25 cents; postage 2 cents.

* For sale, wholesale and retail, by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 159 S. Clark St., Chicago.

ROSICRUCIA!!!

THE ROAD TO POWER!! SEXUAL SCIENCE! P. B. Dowd's Publications for Ladies and Gentlemen. A catalogue of 60 pages, containing principles, ideas, and advice beyond price. Ignorance is the curse of mankind. Price 50 cents. For sale by the author, P. B. Dowd, Davenport, Iowa.

v10 n15 tf.

Spiritualism.

DR. S. L. MCFADDEN AND WIFE, MAGNETIC PHYSICIAN, Spiritual Test Mediums, Business Clairvoyants, etc., have located at No. 342 W. Madison St., corner of May, upstairs, Chicago.

They invite all who wish the benefit of their mediumistic powers, to call and see them. They hold developing circles, diagnose disease without any previous knowledge of the patient, tell of the past, present and future, give news from absent and departed friends, etc. They also explain the laws of life and death, good and evil, the cause and cure of inharmony, etc., thereby enabling persons to be a law to themselves,—to be their own thinkers, teachers, doctors, and preachers. ALL MEDIUMS ARE INVITED TO ATTEND FREE OF CHARGE. The contradictions of the Bible, lying spirits, and false communications of spiritualism explained. Sittings for the examination of diseases, and private communications, from 9 A. M. to 5 P. M. Circles each evening; Saturdays not excepted.

N. B.—Can accommodate a few Boarders.

v10 n12 12t

ARRIAGE MANUFACTORY.

Waverly, N. Y.

—o—

THE UNDERSIGNED MANUFACTURES TO ORDER, and keeps on hand all varieties of Open and Top Buggies of the Best Styles; Platform Spring Wagons, with two or more seats, with or without top. This wagon is an improvement on the old two-spring wagon, and as a business wagon, or for family use, is unsurpassed. Best quality of stock used, and first-class workmen employed, and all work WARRANTED.

Situated on the Erie R. R., we have good facilities for shipping, and are constantly sending work to all parts of the country.

N. KINNEY.

v9 n25 13t.

CHRISTIANITY.

ITS ORIGIN, NATURE AND TENdency considered in the light of Astro-Theology.

By D. W. Hull.

—o—

This book is, so far as it goes, a thorough review of the Origin of the Christian system, showing it all to be plagiarized from ancient heathens. Being unlike almost any other work ever written on the subject, it cannot but be deeply interesting to all. Its explanations of Scripture are lucid and so self-evidently correct that no one can gainsay them.

* For sale, wholesale and retail, at the office of this paper. Price 25 cents; postage, 2 cents.

THE

Descent of Man,

AND

Selection in Relation to Sex;

By Charles Darwin, M.A.F.R.S. With Illustrations.

Two Vols., over 400 pp. each, Price $2.00 per Vol; postage 24 cts.

* For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 159 S. Clark St., Chicago.

ABSTRACT OF

COLENSO ON THE PENTATEUCH.

"A comprehensive summary of Bishop Colenso's arguments proving that the Pentateuch is not historically true, and that it was composed by Samuel, Jeremiah, and other prophets, from 1300 to 624 B. C. The substance of five volumes in 25 pages. Price 25 cents. AMERICAN NEWS CO., N. Y.

v10 n8 6m

THE

Science of Evil;

OR

FIRST PRINCIPLES OF HUMAN ACTION.

BY JOEL MOODY.

—o—

THE SCIENCE OF EVIL is a book of radical and startling thought. It gives a connected and logical statement of the FIRST PRINCIPLES OF HUMAN ACTION, and clearly shows that without Evil there can be neither Morals, Science, Knowledge, or Human Action on earth. In fact, Without Evil, man could not exist. This work fully solves the problem, and unveils the MYSTERY OF EVIL, giving it a scientific meaning, and shows it to be the LEVER WHICH MOVES THE MORAL AND INTELLECTUAL WORLD.

The book is a large 12 mo.; of 363 pages, printed from large, clear type, on fine, heavy paper. Price, $1.75; postage 20 cts.

* For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 187 & 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

Original Essays.

Written for the Religio-Philosophical Journal.

ROSICRUCIAN MUSINGS.

By F. B. Dowd.

OBSESSION! What is it? These were my thoughts as I stood in the presence of B. F. Richardson, the blind medium of Vermont, at Washington Hall, Philadelphia, and witnessed some of his strange doings. Richardson is an inferior-looking man; one would scarcely take him to be of ordinary intelligence.

When I entered the hall, he was delivering a speech, which, it seems, was nearly done, for soon he sat down.

Scarcely had he got fairly seated when he again sprang to his feet and delivered a poem—a really fine one, if I am any judge—and then sat down again, to as suddenly arise and deliver another on some other subject, in a totally different style and voice.

Thus he continued for some time, sitting down at the conclusion of each poem or subject. People deposited sealed letters on the table before him, which he answered, one after the other, without touching them.

At the conclusion he said he would give some general tests, and went around describing the appearance, dress, etc., of different ones. I said, "Why, my dear sir! that is no test at all, for I can do that as well as you."

He retorted, "Are you blind, Sir?"

"No! are you?"

"Yes; I never saw a ray of light in my life."

"As a further test,—there is a man in this crowd who has on a shawl (only one), will you please point him out to the audience?"

"Certainly, sir." And then groping his way around, at last, in a remote corner of the room, he found the man with the shawl.

It is a total stranger to me, as I presume he is to most of my readers, and for an introduction, I here give his hand-bill or circular which a friend gave me:

The "Blind Medium," B. F. Richardson, of Vermont, who is totally destitute of sight and uneducated, and in his ordinary state of apparent weak and low mentality, will hold investigating circles in this place, at Washington Hall, South West corner of Eighth and Spring-Garden sts., every Sunday at 3 and 7½ o'clock p. m. Will also hold circles at his house, 633 North Eleventh st., on Monday, Tuesday, and Friday evenings.

He will improvise a poem, in different voices, on any subject selected by the audience. He is a phenomena, speaking with readiness on any topic,—delivering a sermon, or a discourse in science, as fluently and readily as practiced speakers. He will detail the wonderful experience of his apparent death, when he was four days in a coffin awaiting burial. The audience will be permitted to question him after each discourse.

Read his wonderful history, from the pen of a well known legal gentleman, which can be relied on as correct:

Of the varied spiritual manifestations which have fallen under our observation, none seem calculated to excite more profound psychological interest, than the phenomena exhibited in the person of the subject of this notice, Benjamin Franklin Richardson.

On the twenty-fifth day of March, 1871, there arrived in Boston by rail, from a distant mountain town in the state of Vermont, unattended, a blind, forlorn youth. Rarely indeed has a form more unprepossessing met the pitying eyes of our crowded streets. Nevertheless, within that abject person lay strange endowments. Who, that beheld on that day that sad, wan, sightless face—that small, undeveloped brain, indicating, if not idiocy, the possibility only of the feeblest intellect, that attenuated form, from which nearly all vitality seemed long since to have departed; who that knew that this forlorn being was from his birth doubly orphaned by the loss of both his parents, b'ind from infancy, shut up by utter poverty, and the sad conditions of his life from the possibilities of education and culture, could have imagined that this poor orphan was endowed beyond the ordinary capacities of men—that lo! there stood the teacher of a new psychology, with power to demonstrate through his person, beyond a peradventure, by the voices of unseen intelligences, by the speaking presence of historic sages of all ages, as well as of familiar departed friends of yesterday—the amazing facts of immortal life, and the sublimest truths ever revealed to mankind.

Soon after his arrival in the city, I was invited to meet him at the house of Dr. D., and the following are the incidents of that interview. Their psychological value depends much in bringing the precise diction of the intelligence purporting to speak within the reach of rational criticism. I therefore preserve, as near as possible, the form of expression:

"I was twenty-six years old," says Richardson, "the twenty-third day of January last. My father was Ira Le Barron Richardson, a Methodist minister. My mother's name before marriage, Calista Lovejoy. My father, they say, died two months before I was born, my mother at my birth, which was in Vershire, Orange County, Vermont. When I was seven months old, I lost my eyes by canker-rash. I never saw any thing on the earth that I can remember. I was taken care of by the town, and kept in families that were willing to have me. When about six years old I went to live with Mr. Fulton—lived with him several years till he died. After his death I went back to Vershire. I had five dollars given me by a friend, and then I went about peddling small articles, till all I had was turned up, and I went back to the poor farm in Vershire, where I was taken sick with consumption."

Thus far in answer to my inquiries had he related, apparently in his normal condition, the incidents of his life, when another voice speaks in tones firm and positive, purporting to be that of Dr. William Harvey, formerly of Oxford, England, a celebrated surgeon, and discoverer of the circulation of blood.

"He began to be sick in August, 1858, and continued to decline. As early as February following, he was reduced to a condition of extreme weakness, showing scarcely any indications of life. On the twenty-fifth day of May, 1859, it was supposed by those who had charge of him that he died. His aunt was sent for by telegram, but did not arrive till after the funeral ceremonies had commenced. It was held in the Congregational meeting-house, and the Congregational clergyman officiated."

"Do you know his name?" I inquired.

"Rev. J. F."

"Had he no living kindred except this aunt?"

"None known to us, who cared any thing about him."

"And I am present, sir," are the words now uttered by a low, gentle, feminine voice, such as [illegible] expect from a lady of culture and re-

[illegible] now attending us?" I asked.

"[illegible] aunt, sir, of this poor boy, who has [illegible] and as I was present, I can in-[illegible]y of all that occurred at his [illegible] Mary Howard."

"[illegible]me, madam?"

"Mary Lovejoy," she replied. "My husband was George Howard, a clergyman of the Methodist Episcopal church. We were then living in Springfield, Mass. About seven o'clock in the morning of the 27th of May, 1859, I received a notice by telegraph that Frank was dead, and that his funeral would take place in the Congregational meeting-house, in the centre of the town, at one o'clock on the 29th day of May. I arrived a few moments after the funeral had commenced. A hymn had been sung, and the clergyman was offering the prayer. After the discourse, as I had not seen my nephew for five or six years, I desired to see him, and they opened the outer lid of the coffin. I noticed that a steam or vapor had collected on the glass, and I tried to wipe it off with my handkerchief. I then found it had gathered on the inside of the glass, and I beckoned to Dr. B., and told him I thought there was something singular about it. He said, 'The man is not dead!' We then took him across the road to Dr. B's. house, and wrapped him in a warm flannel blanket. We then let him lie awhile, and then rubbed him with salt and vinegar, as hot as our hands could bear. In about half an hour he showed signs of life. He awoke suddenly with a scream and said, 'Light! oh, light! you are all gone now.' Those were the very words he used. I said to him, 'Frank, you are not dead, are you?' He replied, 'Oh, aunt, why did you bring me back to this world so dark, so drear? There is nothing for me here. You have taken me from my father, my mother.' We all then distinctly heard a voice—not of any one present, say, 'Stay, stay; not yet, not yet.' He then presently rose from the bed and said, 'Bring me the clothes of the machine.' I did not know their meaning. Some clothes were brought, and he put them on."

"Did he dress himself?" I ask.

"Entirely, without any assistance."

"Did he appear strong?"

"Stronger than any of us."

"Do you recollect the names of any who were present?"

"Yes; I recollect Dr. B., Mrs. B., Mrs. P., M., Mrs. D., and Rev. J. F."

Frank then ran into an adjoining room, and took down a flutina. "What's that?" I ask.

"A species of accordeon," she proceeds, "which belonged to a little daughter of Dr. B. On this instrument Frank played several dancing tunes, and danced while he was playing. He then laid the instrument down, and preached as good a sermon as I ever heard in my life, and made just as good a prayer, and said his name was Hosea Ballou, a Universalist minister. During the remainder of the day and evening, Frank was quiet. He ate some water gruel, and was put to bed. Next morning he had disappeared. A diligent search for several days was made for him. He had not been heard of when I returned to my home in Springfield, on the first of June. He was found in the woods, I was informed, fifteen or twenty miles from the place, with a bow and arrow in his hands, and several birds which he had killed. I saw him the following August in Worcester, Vt. He was taken to Brattleborough for examination, but was pronounced not to be insane, but somewhat peculiar. My husband and I left the same fall for California, and both of us died of fever on the passage."

Such was the narrative of the spirit of Mary Howard.

The incisive voice of Dr. Harvey now proceeds to relate Richardson's subsequent career. He appeared next in Worcester, Vt., meeting Hardwick, Greensboro, Wallingford, and other places, peddling and performing such incidental labor as lay within his power, accompanied by Mr. Spencer, the clerk of the band of his guardian spirits, and curing many of diseases by the laying on of hands.

"At Danby," says Dr. Harvey, "I first became sociated with the band, and have ever since taken cognizance of all his movements."

A remark that he seems to have been fond like Elijah, by ravens, and repeat a little ballad illustrating a similar providence. The spirit exclaims, "That is very good, but a little Indian maiden has composed a poem about this blind boy better still, I think. I desire to hear it. The medium instantly rises, and in a sing-song voice recites a ballad, simple and pathetic. I concur with the criticism.

Dr. D. inquires if any poets are present. The answer is the affirmative, and that they will improvise a poem if desired. The medium rises from the sofa, and in a clear, low voice pronounces a stanza, the subject of which is the heroism of soldiers in the late rebellion. Another and another voice succeeds, till seven coherent stanzas of a patriotic ode, which I never heard before, have been recited in as many distinct voices. On subsequent occasions, I have heard from him similar improvisations, upon subjects suggested at the moment, and under circumstances precluding the possibility of prior knowledge. The ideas and metrical expression I have always found varied. These performances, while not possessing high poetic merit, are nevertheless extraordinary.

I next propose to examine more particularly the physical condition of the medium. His height is five feet four inches. I suggest that his weight is probably eighty or ninety pounds.

"More than that," says Dr. Harvey, "I can get it exactly."

Stepping to a pier table, he taps with his forefinger several times on the marble slab, and says, "Ninety-seven and a half pounds. He was weighed the day before he came down here."

"How did you obtain that?" I inquired.

"I telegraphed to his guardian, who is now at Saratoga, and he returned me a report of his weight."

"If it is proper, will you give us his name?"

"It is J. W." he replied.

It is the name of an eminent reformer of the last century. The head of the medium is small, but well formed, and indicating no organic deficiency. "It is the brain," I remark, "of a child of seven years."

"More than that," says Dr. Harvey, "eight years at least. There has been no growth or development since his early life. His vitality seems extremely low."

To my inquiry of the cause of this remarkable atrophy, and why his system, like that of other convalescents, had not recovered its tone, the intelligence replied, "The power of assimilation is so slight, that were his spirit guardians to leave him, he would not live an hour. They alone supply the vitality which, since his supposed death in 1859, holds his spirit in its tenement. Never upon the earth was the electric cord that connects the spirit to the physical body reduced to a thread so fine, without a total separation. It was finer than a cambric needle."

At another interview a week later, I expressed my admiration at the marked improvement, apparent in the person of the medium. Dr. D. and Mr. B., who is also present, and who had [illegible]seen Richardson, concur in my re-[illegible]ther the spirits controlling him are [illegible]ring questions in philology and psy-[illegible]h a scientific precision that few indeed could equal. He is walking the room with a firm, elastic step. His homely face, less thin and angular than on my first visit, is lit up with a healthy color, and attractive with intelligence.

"This change of condition, which you remark," says Dr. Harvey, "is owing to the fact that since he has been here in Boston, a large number of his band have been present to supply the vital elements, which he can obtain only from sources outside himself, since the functional capacities of his body were destroyed by the consumption which he had, and so the spirits have concentrated upon him a great deal of magnetism."

"But," I inquire, "do you mean to say, doctor, that his disease was really consumption?"

"Certainly, I do. The lungs were ulcerated, and the functions of the liver and spleen, and the other viscers were all but destroyed. To all ordinary intents, he then died. Since his resuscitation by the spirits, who then took charge of him, he has been kept alive only by the pabulum and magnetic stimulus which they supply. If you desire to see the effect that will follow our withdrawing, we will do so."

We express our assent.

"We will now," continues Dr. Harvey, "for a few moments withdraw all our influence, and leave him to himself."

Scarcely had these words been spoken, when the medium sinks prostrate on the sofa. The countenance shrinks and assumes a ghastly look. The jaws fall, and the lips recede. The pulse flutters and becomes imperceptible. In a few moments he revives.

"It would be fatal," resumed the voice of Dr. Harvey, "to allow him to remain long in that state. He is never left alone. His immediate band is organized so that each knows his allotted duty. Mine is that of his physician, having charge of his health. An Indian, named Logan, attends him with constant watchfulness, so that if, for instance, while walking in the street, there should be any obstruction, as of a stone projecting above the side-walk, Logan would be there ready to raise his foot over it. Day or night he is never alone. He can find his way anywhere, or thread any passage, however intricate."

This is confirmed by my observation. Richardson moves about with intelligent precision, avoiding obstructions, and adjusting his movements in relation to objects, with all the ease and security that perfect vision could impart. To my inquiries on this point, he says, "I feel the hands of the spirits on my arms when I am walking, as plain as I now feel yours, sir, and I hear their voices telling me what to do just the same as yours."

The intelligences announce that his band comprises representatives in every department of science, and that they expect through the obviously feeble and undeveloped brain of this medium, to demonstrate by irrefragable evidence the fact of spirit life.

J. S. L.

Now, after reading that, and seeing the man, who can help musing: what of the world's science, its boasted knowledge, and the power it brings? Are not the wise confounded by the babbling of fools and children? Is it really the dead who talk through this man, using him as a mere machine, as I use my hand? If so, he is literally swallowed up, and is not at all accountable for what he may say or do. But where does he himself cease to act, and these others take it up? In reply to my question, he said, "I never saw a ray of light in my life." If he meant himself—Richardson—then it is not R who sees at all; and yet it was the same voice which answered my question that gave the descriptions.

Were the dead really present, and at times in absolute control of his organism? or was it not a power formed upon him, which he, sponge-like drank in and embodied by reason of a vacant condition, and by reason of which his whole nervous and brain system became luminous, sensitive and seeing? Was not the poetry poured into him, as water into a vessel—the same as music into "Blind Tom?"

May not Rahmstock be right after all, and the idea of the age, or of those present, so impress itself upon his mind or nervous system (either before or at the time) as to make him personate other individuals, living or dead, forget-himself? May not this forgetfulness of self be really the door to a superior condition, wherein individuality does not figure—if it does, assume any character, according to the idea preconceived? or shall we say they, the dead, spirits, demons, angels, sages, yakas, or dewas, came, and entering in took possession? If it is the latter, then indeed is the Bible idea of "obsession" true, and he a public benefactor who casts them out; for what is of real value, if it be not the power of self-hood—our will, control and responsibility?

Written for the Religio-Philosophical Journal.

THE LAWS OF SPIRIT COMMUNION.

By D. P. Kayner M. D.

NUMBER FOUR.

We have now arrived at a period in our investigations where the physical, as such, ceases, and the spirit cut loose from its earth form has taken one advanced step in its future progress. But we are not to understand that all its relations to its earth life are at once sundered. Its character has been formed here. Its robe made of the material thoughts, words, acts and deeds woven in the earthly, loom into the web of life—is allied to the past; and through the magnetic law of compensation, connects the spirit with the minutest act thereof.

In these related influences of cause and effect, we discover the power of attraction which binds them for a time to the earth sphere, and holds them in certain relations thereto for all time. The mission of life unfulfilled, must needs be worked out, the labors of love left undone, must be completed, the errors of the earth life must be blotted out by unselfish acts of kindness and the broken, tangled and disordered web of the earthly life must be made whole, and bright, and pure, by good deeds and noble efforts. And these works must needs be done among humanity and for humanity—for it was here the wrong was perpetrated—the error or neglect occurred, and here the wrong must be compensated for and obviated, the error corrected, the neglect atoned for.

This, then, binds and attracts them to earth; and the fact that the individual efforts of each, and the amount of good accomplished by those efforts, aids in the advancement and progress of the disembodied spirit, demonstrates the necessity for them to return and open the channels of communion between the two worlds.

Now, having proved the necessity for the spirits return, it devolves upon us to show that spirits do return, as a prelude to thorough investigation of the laws of spirit control.

Do spirits of departed human beings return, and hold intelligent communion with those still in the flesh, giving immistakable evidence of their identity?

Where are the facts?

In the fall of 1850, while residing in the city, of Syracuse, N. Y., I received a visit from Daniel Hitchings, then of Richfield, N. Y., whom I had been informed had become a writing medium. In the evening I requested him to get me a communication, telling him I wanted to see the spirits write. He declined, saying "You are a writing medium yourself." I assured him I was not, when he again assured me I was, and proposed that I should make the trial. After instructing me how to hold the pencil, I placed paper on the table, and lightly holding the pencil with the thumb and finger of my right hand with the point resting upon the paper, I asked if there were any spirits present that would write a communication. Engaging in conversation, without looking at the paper or knowing that a single letter had been formed, after a few moments had passed, he enquired what I had written. I replied, "Nothing" which was literally true. I had not written, but upon looking at the paper, I found beautifully written the following: "My son, do good and I will aid you."

MINERVIA KAYNER.

This was in my mothers own hand writing, and signed with her own signature, and had been written there without my knowledge. There was no possible chance for deception, as I had placed the clean paper on the table myself, had held the pencil which had been used unconsciously to myself, and know that I was consciously conversing upon some other subject, and that no one else in the form came near the table. I had here unmistakable evidence of my mother's presence and identity.

In the fall of 1854, I was stopping for a time in Milford, Conn., where a medium for physical manifestations came to the place. One evening I suggested to James Graham, a friend of mine, and a member of the First Congregational Church, the idea of investigating and exposing the humbug, to which he readily assented. On visiting the medium, he cheerfully accorded us a sitting, and, after some hesitation on the part of my friend, we took seats and placed our hands on the table, which soon commenced moving; and on asking if there were any spirits present who wished to communicate, it rapidly moved three times for yes, and then five times for the alphabet to be called. The result of which was the spelling the name of G-e-o-r-g-e G-r-a-h-a-m. I asked James what this meant, if he was doing this, when he asked me to remain quiet and see what there was of it. The spirit then stated, he was a brother of James Graham, had been in the spirit world eight and a half years, was twenty-eight when he passed away, that he left his body at Middlebury, and passed to spirit-life on account of disease of the brain after a six weeks illness, caused by religious excitement.

I then turned to James and said "Graham is this true?" His answer was—"It is as true as God. I had a brother George who went to a camp meeting eight years ago last Summer, became insane on the subject, and died in Middlebury from a brain fever caused by the excitement six weeks after he attended the meeting, that he was twenty-eight years old when he died; and, said he, "I know no one in this room or in this place but myself ever knew. I had a brother George. It is George himself and no one else.

In 1867 while examining clairvoyantly, Mrs. S. Childs, of Westfield, N. Y., a spirit child about nine years old, came to my side, robed in a blue dress and smiling said—"Tell mamma Anna is here." The lady started with surprise and exclaimed "What is she here for?" when the child spirit once, now the spirit woman answered, she had come to assure her mother she was not dead, but living in a land of surpassing loveliness, and when her mother came to that land, she would receive and show her that her child still lived, and still loved her with a love intensified with the increased joys of the spirit. On being asked how old she was, she answered—"I was nine years old when I passed away and am now twenty-six." The mother assured me, it was her own Anna, and the blue dress was the last she wore on earth," and that the age was correct.

The child had been buried in England before she left that country, and the entire facts were at the time unknown to me, until presented by the spirit.

Now, the spirit coming into the magnetic aura of the mother at the same time that I was passing into the clairvoyant state within the circle of the same magnetic influence, could manifest herself to my vision and control for the time, so as to make herself known and clearly establish her identity.

In the case of the writing before spoken of it is evident that nerve centres not employed in the passing conversation, were unconsciously controlled, and the motary nerves of the arm and hand employed to write the sentence, while those centres witheld from the conscious individual intelligence the knowledge of what were transpiring.

In the case of the table, it had become surrounded with enough of the vital magnetism of the circle to enable the spirit band to hold complete control of its motions, and use it, as the telegraph operator uses the key of his apparatus to communicate the message intelligently to some other mind, to give the message to James Graham, that would be so positive and so easily identified, as to leave no room to doubt the identity of the spirit communitating.

St. Charles, Ill., June 14th, 1871.

Written for the Religio-Philosophical Journal.

THE "SEARCH AFTER GOD."

By Luna Hutchison.

"HE NEVER PRAYED."

This is said of the wise (?) sage that has been many centuries in the search after God!

Now, this searching for the Divine Mind in nature, through the reason and intellectual faculties alone, is like searching for the human soul by means of the scalpel and the crucible, in the physical body, or of trying to find what love is by dissecting the heart, or the wisdom principle by analyzing the substance of the brain.

Any sage, however bright the halo of wisdom might shine upon his brow, or the number of untold centuries he had been in spirit life, could not gratify the voice of God in my own soul.

That sage, like so many others, so long looking outward for God, will never find him until it be said of him as the angel said of Paul, "BEHOLD HE PRAYETH!" Then the dark scales will fall from his eyes, for it is a fact of human experience, that prayer is a power, not so much to control matter, but to calm the troubled sea of life—an anchor of faith that has enabled the storm-laden souls of earth to outride the many storms of earth-trials to which we of this planet are subjected.

Where could that placid sage have had his first existence? Not on our world, for then he must have prayed, either positively or negatively, as surely as waters roar when flowing over impediments or down declivities.

I would say to that sage: your mission is not to this sorrowing, error-teeming world, to tell them there is no God! and no need of prayer! Whatever grand possibilities there may be in the future for us, it is necessary that the mind shall ever have an Infinite Being to adore, with attributes of perfect love and wisdom.

The reason which has so long been held in bondage, like a people long oppressed by their rulers, has become so conscious in its freedom, upsetting authority, both in church and state, that it is even becoming a "moral desperado," and thinks to dethrone the Almighty. This is ever the danger of perfect liberty of mind or body, that it will be misused or abused, and the re-action is sometimes greater and more to be dreaded than their former degradation was cruel.

The time has arrived, when "the mystery of God (or of good), shall be finished," and the world instructed in righteousness and the true God-idea, and of the legitimate expressions of praise and adoration by singing and prayer.

The five external senses are duplicated by five more within. The first look outwardly into the realm of matter, the second look inwardly into the realm of mind. Without the proper use of both these powers man will never be fully unfolded or "rounded out," from irregularities of mind and its action, or his bodily angularities; and none other can grasp all sides of a truth.

Now, from my standpoint of the instruction, let me say, take not away the belief and trust of the world in God, while there is so much need of a power and goodness superior to man's feeble wit which can do so little to make himself happy or to prevent his deepest griefs.

Not till mankind have acquired the knowledge and power to bid their loved ones live, or to follow their spirit forms by open vision to their homes above, and hear their sweet voices, telling us not to weep, and feel their soft hands wiping the tears from our eyes, can we live in this world of pain and disappointed hopes without faith in a God to hear and pity us, though we may fail to comprehend him who is invisible, but is known as well to a child as to a sage or divine.

In the vast eternities yet to come, the most aspiring and unfolded minds will doubtless still be searching after God and find him not, only by the revelations of his infinite expressions of love and wisdom, displayed in the ever-revolving worlds of space and their untold millions of sentient and intelligent inhabitants.

The question is, did we make ourselves? Did man plan the incomprehensible human mechanism of his body and soul, and the laws of reproduction? and if so, why is there so much ignorance and misery in this world of ours? You might reply that man might better be blamed for it than God, who will not or can not make things any better.

And thus the circuit of thought is completed, and the question, What and Where is God? remains unanswered.

Owens Valley, Cal.

Written for the Religio-Philosophical Journal.

THE BOOK OF NATURE.

By Mrs. Maria M. King.

What a hackneyed phrase, and yet how replete with meaning! Book of books, bible above all other bibles, revelation above all other revelations, and by whose light all others are to be interpreted, nature is yet a neglected book by the mass of mankind, and even by some who prate much of this wonderous volume, the handiwork of God. Nature, to many, is a very indefinite term, or signifies simply what is seen with the physical eye, or what constitutes the realm in which physical man lives, and over which he is master. God is considered outside this realm, in the sense of being independent of the laws governing in it, and upon which life and action depend. He who "spake all things into existence," must, of course, exist independent of all things; and nature can be no more to him than an accidental creation, with which he can dispense as readily as he formed it.

What signifies Nature, in the light of the higher philosophy that professes to account for all things by law? It is all things, all space, all live, all law, all method, all variety, all intelligence. It is a unity—an indissoluble whole. God is trinity in unity; it being perpetual through the action of three principles, which answer to body, soul, (or life-essences,) and spirit. It is also a duality in unity; its life resulting from the action of spirit upon physical substances, as from the action of two distinct grades of substance upon each other. God is of nature, and can no more exist independent of its laws governing it than can man, or any inferior form. The originator of the order of mental in nature, God, is yet dependent upon that order. Intelligence inherent in nature devises for its perpetuation, being the ever-active principle that co operates with outer nature for the continuation of the processes of life.

Whoever would read the book of nature to advantage must understand, first, that there are certain fixed and unchangeable principles that form the basis of the plan of the whole work, and these comprehended, there can be no difficulty in deciphering the lessons, one by one, that perpetually present themselves to the attention, awaiting examination. Man is an exemplification of nature. In him is revealed the plan of universal action; and to be truly wise, man only needs to know himself thoroughly, to comprehend the laws through which he came into existence, and by which his being is maintained as a trinity of principles, interdependent and co operating for mutual support, the law of co-operation of his spiritual with his physical forces, which constitutes the duality; and the laws governing his progressive development from his first low state to the infinitely glorified condition that awaits him in the infinite future.

By or degrees, the best he can do, man learns to read the volume inscribed with the interpretation of his own being. He is the child that learns first the alphabet and then practices in arranging the characters to spell out the truths that experience teaches, and which he must learn sooner or later; and learning is his own expositor of nature's principles.

Man cannot fail of learning of nature's economy as he experiences it with its forces, its great variety of elements, substances and forms for the purposes of life. Lessons will come home to the understanding at length; and how often it happens that these contradict the lessons learned in books—bibles and text books. The world's teachers—those whom the world have named such—have as often recorded their ignorance as their wisdom for the inspection and use of the generations of men; and the more men study books, and compare their teachings with those of nature, the more are they likely to be convinced that books are lines in nature's volume, that must be studied with extreme caution lest their significance be misunderstood.

Bible, as the world has received them, are mixtures of truth and error. And science and the philosophy of nature are the touchstones by which their principles must all be ultimately tried. Authorities which theology and the schools have set up must all bow to the great authority which makes no mistakes, revealing the law and the will of God through phenomena that can be "known and read of all men," as they acquire skill to read the characters in which they are written. Intellectes that men make in searching the labyrinths of science for truths, and in experimenting in the various ways that necessity points out. The inexperienced makes mistakes more naturally than they pursue the straight path, and their very failures are prompters to more strenuous efforts to find the right. The monster wrongs that have resulted from the misdirection of the human faculties, stand as monuments of warning, pointing to revelers the horrors of the wrong way. And nature uses them for this purpose until she can rid human society of them.

The beauty and glory of virtue are blazoned in living characters of light, in monuments that betaken the generous rewards that await well-doing, and mankind are called upon to contrast vice with virtue, shame with honor, depravity with purity, and they cannot avoid making the comparison. They are thus reading the book of nature per force, and its lessons engrave themselves on the being.

Man is to prove all truth by experience. He only is reading nature's book to advantage who studies his every day experiences with the view of learning something from them more than is revealed by casual observation. They who neglect to gather the lessons that nature is providing in the common experiences of all, are like careless children at play where diamonds lie scattered thickly about them, but which they utterly neglect, to chase butterflies, or watch glittering bubbles that delight for the moment and are gone, leaving their admirers empty-handed.

The all-wise Father lays the obligation upon his children to gather the diamonds before they can arrive at manhood's estate. And those who would outgrow childishness and put on the strength and wisdom of manhood, must outgrow the childish way of thinking and acting so common to all. They must learn to prize the small things of life as well as the great things, and treasure their experiences as of more worth than fine gold, for they are the treasures they carry with them through every stage of the journey of immortal life, which serve the spirit as guides to wisdom. Nature's book furnishes no more important lessons than individual experiences for; making them use in all future states of being. And the wise of all ages have proved that of all books, all means furnished for man's instruction, the book of life is that from which they have learned the most.

Price-List of Books.

Book-Sellers.

PARKER'S BREECH-LOADING SHOT GUN

Prof. Wm. Denton's Works.

NEW WORK BY PROF. DENTON.

"IMMORTALITY AND Have Spiritualists a Basis for Belief in Immortality?"

THE SOUL OF THINGS; OR, GHOSTS AND GHOULS.

"RELIGIOUS AMERICANISM AND SPIRITUALISM."

A TWENTY YEARS' RECORD OF THE CHURCH VERSUS SCIENCE AND THE RIGHTS OF SOCIETY.

BY EMMA HARDINGE.

SIX LECTURES ON THEOLOGY AND NATURE.

BY EMMA HARDINGE.

CONTENTS.

I. Introductory Subject.
II. Materials of Nature.
III. The Powers and the Principles.
IV. Spirit—Its Origin and Destiny.
V. The Soul, Death, and Immortality.
VI. Nature, her Laws, and her Divine Author.

THE HARMONIAL MANUAL; OR, THE CHRIST ERA IN HISTORY.

A COMPLETE VOLUME OF "THE HARMONIAL MAN" FOR 1870.

BY VARIOUS WRITERS.

CONTENTS.

I. Introductory Address. By the Editor.
II. Spiritualism and Religion. By Prof. S. B. Brittan, M. D.
III. Spiritualism and Science. By Prof. S. B. Brittan, M. D.
IV. Spiritualism and Morals. By Prof. S. B. Brittan, M. D.
V. Spiritualism and Philosophy. By Prof. S. B. Brittan, M. D.
VI. Spiritualism and Government. By Prof. S. B. Brittan, M. D.
VII. Spiritualism and Literature. By Prof. S. B. Brittan, M. D.
VIII. Spiritualism and Art. By Prof. S. B. Brittan, M. D.
IX. Spiritualism and Education. By Prof. S. B. Brittan, M. D.
X. Spiritualism and Reform. By Prof. S. B. Brittan, M. D.
XI. Spiritualism and Humanity. By Prof. S. B. Brittan, M. D.
XII. Spiritualism and Progress. By Prof. S. B. Brittan, M. D.
XIII. Spiritualism and Destiny. By Prof. S. B. Brittan, M. D.
XIV. Spiritualism and Immortality. By Prof. S. B. Brittan, M. D.
XV. Spiritualism and Eternity. By Prof. S. B. Brittan, M. D.
XVI. Spiritualism and Infinity. By Prof. S. B. Brittan, M. D.
XVII. Spiritualism and Absolute. By Prof. S. B. Brittan, M. D.
XVIII. Spiritualism and Relative. By Prof. S. B. Brittan, M. D.
XIX. Spiritualism and Universal. By Prof. S. B. Brittan, M. D.
XX. Spiritualism and Particular. By Prof. S. B. Brittan, M. D.
XXI. Spiritualism and General. By Prof. S. B. Brittan, M. D.
XXII. Spiritualism and Special. By Prof. S. B. Brittan, M. D.
XXIII. Spiritualism and Individual. By Prof. S. B. Brittan, M. D.
XXIV. Spiritualism and Collective. By Prof. S. B. Brittan, M. D.
XXV. Spiritualism and Unity. By Prof. S. B. Brittan, M. D.
XXVI. Spiritualism and Diversity. By Prof. S. B. Brittan, M. D.
XXVII. Spiritualism and Harmony. By Prof. S. B. Brittan, M. D.
XXVIII. Spiritualism and Discord. By Prof. S. B. Brittan, M. D.
XXIX. Spiritualism and Peace. By Prof. S. B. Brittan, M. D.
XXX. Spiritualism and War. By Prof. S. B. Brittan, M. D.
XXXI. Spiritualism and Love. By Prof. S. B. Brittan, M. D.
XXXII. Spiritualism and Hate. By Prof. S. B. Brittan, M. D.
XXXIII. Spiritualism and Life. By Prof. S. B. Brittan, M. D.
XXXIV. Spiritualism and Death. By Prof. S. B. Brittan, M. D.
XXXV. Spiritualism and Resurrection. By Prof. S. B. Brittan, M. D.
XXXVI. Spiritualism and Ascension. By Prof. S. B. Brittan, M. D.
XXXVII. Spiritualism and Glorification. By Prof. S. B. Brittan, M. D.
XXXVIII. Spiritualism and Perfection. By Prof. S. B. Brittan, M. D.
XXXIX. Spiritualism and Completion. By Prof. S. B. Brittan, M. D.
XL. Spiritualism and Finality. By Prof. S. B. Brittan, M. D.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF CREATION

The Biography of Satan

2,500 CURES IN THE POSITIVE & NEGATIVE POWDERS.

AGENTS

NATURE'S

HAIR RESTORATIVE.

THE LAW OF MARRIAGE

BLACK LIST.

Frontier Department.

BY.....E. V. WILSON

These Communications Written by a Spirit Hand.

[Continued.]

These communications are very remarkable. The language is far above the common mind. We have taken the article, No. 4, and carefully examined every word, and find they have a genuine meaning, and are in proper use.

You will fully understand that we publish them that the public may read and understand what is going on around us and in our midst. You will bear in mind that these were written in the dark, on ruled lines, t's crossed, i's dotted, and that the mediums are uneducated men and women, who could not qualify as third-rate school teachers; also, that they were written without human hands.

Question. What constitutes the immortal soul of man, and what are its natural tendencies?

Answer. By Samuel Swedenborg: Resolved: That every atomical particle of matter in form and substance, in its primary unorganized condition, to this period and cycle of revolutions, were, and still are, the resident and bodily lineaments of the divine sparks of dormant immortal germs of life, comporting to their antenatal tendencies, with the character of the substances they locate respectively, in their unconscious and immortal conditions. Resolved: That these immortal atomical living souls (according to their sexualistic gravitations) are constantly blended with a series of physical formations with their living and immortal embodiments, until their consciously immortal location are gained in the various plains and spheres of sensitive physical life; commencing its first appearance with the most minute and lowest scale of visible living animalcula to the animal, and the progress of immortal consciousness in the temporeal formations and the various plains of the diverse species of human life, which embraces all the prepolitied immortal essences of earthly dregs and ponderable elements in divers proportions, according to the constitutional index of the diverse human characters and colorings. Third—Resolved: That the carnal body is man's a sensative mass of physical essences, distilled from a moldering animal deposite, of which the living conglomerations are immortal souls. And if the tenement is constitutionally dwarfed, the immortal soul is adapted to the unavailable limits; but if the tenement is physically hale, the immortal soul will crown itself with durable and unfading spiritual honors.

Answer. By Socrates—Resolved: First—That silitious hydrogen and carbonilorous oxygen are the true prime equi ponderate sexualistic feminate and masculate ponderable procreating and generating elementary extremes that develop sexual gravitations and seminal conditions, for the corporeal conception and projection of sensitive and conscious life, from its pristine state of dormancy, and that all other compounds, gaseous and concreted essences are their magnifying and animating aids and volatile auxiliaries.

Second—Resolved: That silicious hydrogen contains the elements of feminate ova-cells; and that carbonised oxygenated elements contain the pistilliferous masculine germinal principles of physical and spiritual life impregnating elements of the sire, and that the union of their mucilaginous conglomerations excite fatal action and conscious organic life.

Third—Resolved: That there is but one law of sexualistic procreation throughout the entire arcanum of material nature. Although it differs in its diverse external manifestations, beginning with the useless geminations and procreations of centripetal and solar centers and centrifugal circumference in the planetary kingdoms, throughout all the detailed ramifications of their involved plains and formations and life immortal manifestations that are involved between the two great extremes of the centripetal points of physical gravitations and the centrifugal arches, spheres of the spiritual sublimities.

The above was written by a spirit hand, also those that preceded it on the same subject.

A Ruined Family.

In 186-, the daughter of a Presbyterian clergyman in the center of this State who had been reared in a strict and rigid manner, proceeded to New Haven, Conn., to spend a month with friends during the college commencement season. While there, taking advantage of the freedom from restraint afforded her, she carried on a number of flirtations with the students, and was ruined by a member of the Senior class. He persuaded her to leave her friends and return with him to New York, in stead of going home. Singular to relate, she appeared almost from choice to enter upon city dissipations and excesses until becoming thoroughly hardened and depraved, a sister came on to visit her and persuaded her to go back to her father's home. Instead of doing so, however, the visiting sister was also persuaded to remain and enter upon the same terrible life which her sister was leading. Since then the two abandoned women have allured their two younger sisters away from the paternal roof, and the four are now keeping what is known as a "fashionable bagnio" between Twenty-fifth and Twenty-eighth streets, on the west side of the city.

A more melancholy instance of the power of older upon younger members of a family never came to notice. Parents unquestionably sometimes commit a mistake in bringing up their children too tenderly, and restrictions, especially if they be strong positive natures.—Rochester Express.

The above extract speaks for itself, and we shudder when we contemplate the results. The fall of three daughters, the fruits of a belief in total depravity, the antenatal life of both parents, triturated with its awful lesson, conceived under its baneful influences, born within the view of its fatal teachings, educated under its blighting lessons, they have gone down to its practical deductions.

Who, dismed most, these girls, daughters of a Presbyterian clergyman, in their fall, or their parents, who taught the terrible lesson of total depravity? They are but carrying out in practice what their father taught in precept.

What would the world have said of Spiritualism and its advocates, if these four girls had been the daughters of Dr. Childs, S. S. Jones, Moses Hull, J. M. Peebles, T. Gales Foster, or E. V. Wilson?

The hue and cry would have, been, see the fearful fruits of Spiritualism. But, my Brothers, it is a warning to us, and we are bound to heed it. The lesson it contains is this: That the dominant system taught and believed in by parents will crop out in their children. Every child in the present and future should be—first, desired by the mother; second, conceived in love and joy. The minds of both parents should be pure and unalloyed by creed, hatred, or passion. There should be a preparation for conception, an education of the mind and body; joy should be the ruling element in the house, and the mother, instead of being ashamed of the evidence of maternity she carries with her, should be proud of it, and all true souls render her homage as a queen mother about to bring forth an immortal being.

Creeds, settled speaking, a house for God to dwell in, with power to add to and expand from the educational principles inculcated to produce just such results as the one above related.

Who shall be responsible? Has the minister offended his God, and has God revenged himself on the offender by ruining his four daughters, or has the devil won another victory over God, and entern Eden and beguiled four Eves in-

I create the evil; I, the Lord thy ages."—Isaiah 45:7.

ather forgive them, for they know not what de."—Luke 23:34.

ood Lord deliver us from the world, the flesh and the devil."—Episcopal Ritual.

"The education former the common mind. Just as the twig is bent the tree inclines."—English Reader.

Correspondence of the Washington Capitol.

A MAGDALEN'S DEATH.

Thrilling Scene on a Fall River Steamer.

"Fisk's is the Fall River line, is it not?"

"Yes; and the way he tries to beat everybody else, and make his the only line to Boston is astonishing. Why, I'll tell you something about Fisk. One day, just as we were starting from New York, a trim little girl stepped aboard and took a state-room, saying she was going through to Boston. She wasn't dressed loud, but mighty neat and rich, wearing a Turkish hat, velvet sack trimmed with lace, a dress with a lot of scallops and trimming around it, and about the most bewildering foot I ever saw on a human. She was pretty, sassy, and called me "old father" at supper, and carried on in a way that soon showed what she was, though she deceived me at first with her baby face and girlish manners.

"She was standing on deck about 7 o'clock, after having horrified the ladies and amused the gentlemen by her rollicking manner, and became quiet for a few minutes, while she looked far out at sea. She turned round to the captain, and putting up her small white hands and taking him by the whiskers on each side of his face, she looked up to him, and says she, very solemnly, 'Did you ever want to die, Captain?' 'Well, no,' says he, 'I don't think I ever did.' 'And if you did,' said she, 'what would you do?' 'Well, in that case,' said the captain, loosing her hands and turning away, 'I think, as I have plenty of opportunity, I should jump in the water and drown myself.'

"The words were hardly out of his mouth before she turned round like a flash, and putting one hand on the railing, leaped overboard. She was gone before a person could stir to catch her, and a terrible scream arose from the passengers who saw it.

"I was standing aft when I heard the shouts, and looked out and saw her come to the surface. She had taken off her hat, and her splendid brown hair, which she wore loose down her back, floated in a mass on the water. I fancied she looked straight at me with her girlish face as she came up, and there was nothing wild or straggling about her, but she seemed to smile in the same jaunty way that she did when she was plaguing me half an hour before. In another moment she was swept rapidly astern and disappeared. We put about and lowered the boats, but we never found her.

"It is strange how the women who had been so shocked at her conduct before, now pitied and even wept for the little girl when they found out what a load there must have been in the foolish child's heart while she was laughing the loudest.

"She had left a small reticule in the cabin, and when we opened it we found some verses, written in a little cramped hand, on a folded sheet of note paper. They ran about this way, and were headed:

"'A MAGDALEN'S DEATH.'

"I can no longer endure this polluting,
Tempting breath;
Gladly I fly to the refuge that's left me—
Merciful death;
Not selfishly, cowardly,
But gaily, cheerfully,
Go to my death.

"Priests may refuse to grant sanctified burial,
Turn into me.
Father, I thank thee! a blessing is always held
Over the sea.
Aye, in its wildest foam,
Aye, in its thickest gloom,
Blessed is the sea!

"Welcome, oh! sea, with thy breakings and dashings
That never shall cease;
Down in thy starriest stormiest waters,
Oh, hide me in peace.
Say to the weary face,
'Come to thy resting place,
Slumber in peace.'"

Exeter Hall.

This admirable work, which is now passing through its second edition, has become a subject of such intense interest and inquiry, that the author has been unable to longer preserve his incognito. We are scarcely astonished at this latter, as the numerous readers of a production of such rare excellence could not fail to ferret out the name of its author; so that now Mr. William McDonnell, of Lindsay, Ontario, Canada, stands confessed the author of one of the ablest and most conclusive blows that has been struck at sectarianism and the Old Theology in the present generation. The great success of this publication is due mainly to the adroit and fascinating manner in which the author has treated his arguments and mixed his logic. Some of his most destructive thunderbolts are hurled with the utmost joccoseness, while, in playing with the springs of human action, his touch is at times so pathetic that we pay a hidden tribute to its power, although again we wonder at the fierceness of the grasp that makes them groan and tremble to so fearful an extent. In a brief notice like this, we cannot even call the talents due to the admirable plot and coloring of this work, nor can we more than refer to its delightful romance, its profound reasoning and large humanity. It must be read to be appreciated, and such being the case, we recommend its perusal most cordially to all those interested in the progress of liberal ideas and scholarly attainments. Mr. McDonnell is, we understand, engaged in writing another volume of the same intellectual character, which he intends to give shortly to the world, also. We are pleased with this information, as we are well assured that a pen so profound, humane and facile, cannot but be ordained to accomplish a series of glorious achievements in this day and generation.—Banner of Light.

We cordially endorse all our colemporary says of Exeter Hall. We regard it as one of the ablest works of the kind ever written, and as deserving a far larger and more rapid sale than it has had heretofore. We shall welcome with pleasure any further work from the able pen of Mr. McDonnell.

Victoria and Tennie.

Victoria Woodhull and Tennie C. Claflin publish a paper in the city of New York, called Woodhull and Claflin's Weekly. It is a sprightly sheet, is intensely reformatory, and is doing a work peculiar to itself. The two ladies who conduct it, have been charged by those who "cover up their dirty tracks," as tinctured with free love, a fact they do not try to conceal: While all kinds of scandal are afloat in reference to them, they quietly pursue a course which they deem right, keeping their eyes open to gather items from the ranks of those who are ever ready to abuse them. They speak as follows in reference to one who "lives in a glass house:"

"At this very moment, awful and herculean efforts are being made to suppress the most terrific scandal, in a neighboring city, which bear ever astounded and convulsed any community. Clergy, congregation, and community, will be alike hurled into more than all the consternation which the great explosion in Paris carried to that unfortunate city, if this effort at suppression fails. The respectability of the very high-toned magnates of this most hypocritical Rodom stands on a volcano. Civilization, rotten to the core and festering to the bursting point in our great cities, and notably in New York and Brooklyn, needs only to urge us by a little added outrage, to enact the part of a volunteer surgeon to puncture the sore spots and spirt the vile stuff into the daylight."

Mrs. Robinson's Tobacco Antidote.

The most certain and perfectly harmless antidote for the poisonous effects, and remedy for the tobacco appetite, is known by the above name.

It is compounded by Mrs. A. H. Robinson, the celebrated medium of Chicago, while entranced by a celebrated chemist, long in spirit life. This antidote is warranted to break the habit of using tobacco by the inveterate lover of the weed, when the directions (on each box) are followed.

Agents for selling the same throughout the country are wanted. For sale, wholesale and retail, at this office. Price $2.00 per box—sent by mail free of postage, on receipt of the money.

C. F. Fuller

Will you write R. S. Hildreth, of St. Lawrence, Otsego County, New York. He desires to know your address, and supposes we must know it. We have many thousands of subscribers, whom we would be most happy to become personally acquainted with, and be able to remember their address. May be we shall be gratified sometime, as we expect to retain an interest in our beloved JOURNAL for an unlimited time, both in this and the world of spirits.

Fellowship and Ordination.

At the request of a great number of friends, the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL SOCIETY, on the 15th of June, granted Letters of Fellowship and Ordination to Bro. P. B. Lawrence, of Ottumwa, Iowa, constituting him in legal form a "Minister of the Gospel," and authorizing him to solemnize marriages.

Mrs. Laura Cuppy Smith.

The above-named lady, who is now lecturing in Chicago, will answer calls to lecture week-day evenings, Saturdays excepted, anywhere within one hundred miles of the city. Address her in care of this office.

BHAGVAT GEETA.

The Hindoo New Testament.

The above-named very nestly executed book, on fine tinted paper, embossed in gold, is now being delivered as fast as orders are received. Price only $1 25; postage, 16 cents. Everybody should have this wonderful book.

The Hollow Globe.

PROF. WM. F. LYON—DEAR FRIEND: Your book, "The Hollow Globe," has been received and read with profound interest. It has "knocked h—l out" of this world, and out of the universe as well.

It is indeed time that this element of fire, appealing only to the lowest faculty of mind, fear, should be removed, with its Devil, and all other demoralizing superstitions of the past ages of ignorance.

I feel as though I had been holding converse with the combined wisdom of eternal ages.

I will act as agent for the book here, and wish to know where and of whom I can best procure the books for the subscribers.

I have had an advertisement put in our county paper, and shall be able, I think, to sell quite a number of copies.

Wishing you every success in the up-hill work of lifting unthinking and prejudiced minds into the clear realm of principles, I remain,

Yours fraternally,
LUNA HUTCHISON.

Bishop Creek, Inyo Co., Cal.

An Entirely New Proposition.

We now have th press, and will be ready to fill orders before this notice reaches our readers a splendid new book, entitled THE SUNDAY QUESTION, and SELF-CONTRADICTIONS OF THE BIBLE.

This work consists of 123 large, closely printed pages. It is an exhaustive review of the so-called sunday question, and self-contradictions of the Bible. The work shows the so-called divine authority for the supposed holy day, to be the cunning device of designing priests rather than the inspiration of an Infinite God! This work, which we sell for the low price of fifty cents, and send the same free of postage on the receipt of the money, we will send to any old subscriber on receipt of seventy-five cents, together with the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL to any new subscriber on trial for three months; or, we we will send the same work and the JOURNAL for three months on trial direct to a new subscriber, on the receipt of seventy-five cents. For one dollar, we will send for a new subscriber, the JOURNAL three months and the above-named book, together with that very remarkable book called LIFE'S UNFOLDINGS, or The Wonders of the Universe Revealed to Man.

We hope that every subscriber to whom we are now sending the JOURNAL will avail him or herself of this generous offer, and thus secure these books, as well as to thus aid in doubling the number of the subscribers to the JOURNAL.

Address S. S. Jones, 189 South Clark street, Chicago, Ill.

Pay Up.

We are in earnest with those who are a long while in arrears. Pay for your newspaper, if you never pay any other debt.

You do no great wrong by such negligence. We need our honest dues, and expect them to be promptly remitted.

IT COSTS

Only about one-third Bookbinders' prices to do binding handsomely by the use of Alden's Handy Book-Binder. Sizes suited to any publication, from the smallest Monthly to the largest Weekly. Price circular free. Send 50 cents for samples of both Wire and Binder. Size for the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL, No. 19; price $1.50 and $1.65. Address, RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

New Books.

THE

HOLLOW GLOBE;

Or, the World's Agitator and Reconciler.

A Treatise on the Physical Conformation of the Earth.

PRESENTED THROUGH THE ORGANISM OF
M. L. SHERMAN, M.D.,
AND WRITTEN BY
PROF. WM. F. LYON.

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

"THIS book is addressed to the reasoning intelligence of Humanity, to all inquiring and reflective minds, everywhere upon the earth.

"We earnestly request the reader to suspend his judgment concerning the ideas advanced, until he has carefully perused its pages; when he may be better prepared to form his opinions, and offer his criticisms.

"We do not claim that the teachings contained in this work are infallible, neither are they presented in an authoritative manner. But we do claim that it contains more original, natural and startling ideas, which are a great interest to civilized humanity, and which seem to be entirely irrefutable, than any book of its size that has made its appearance in modern times.

"We, therefore, commend it to the careful consideration of the modern thinker, being fully persuaded that its pages contain the seed of thought which may open to his mind new fields of research, thus tending to enlarge his understanding, and enlighten his intellect."

EXTRACT FROM INTRODUCTION.

"THE central idea contained in the following work, and the one that most of these chapters are devoted to maintaining, is, that this globe is constructed in the form of a hollow sphere, with a shell some thirty to forty miles in thickness, and that the interior surface, which is a beautiful world in a many highly favored condition that the exterior, is accessible by a circuitous and spirally formed aperture that may be found in the unexplored open sea. That this opening affords easy navigation for a broad and deep channel leading from one surface to the other, and that the largest ships or steamers may sail from either side of the world to the other, if they can pass through any other winding or somewhat crooked channel. And we have endeavored to show as clearly as possible, that the physical formation of the globe is such as to be perfectly compatible with an outer and inner world, or two worlds instead of one."

12 mo., 447 pp. Price $2.00; postage 20 cents.

 For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

LIFE'S UNFOLDINGS

OR THE

WONDERS OF THE UNIVERSE

REVEALED TO MAN.

Is the title of a new work fresh from press. By the Guardian Spirit of David Corless.

S. S. JONES,
Publisher.

RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION PRINTERS.

The Medium, in his address to the public says:

The Medium (David Corless, of Huntley's Grove McHenry Co., Ill.,) through whom this work was given, has been a careful observer of the phenomena of "Modern Spiritualism" for over twenty years and during that time he has been the humble Medium through which hundreds of philosophical and scientific lectures have been given to attentive listeners. Of himself, he can only say he is an unedu-cated farmer, far advanced in years. He asks for this pamphlet a careful and attentive perusal.

The Introduction entitled "The Unvailing," treats of man as the grand objective ultimate of Life's Unfoldings.

He also stands at the pinnacle of all organized Life in the native purity of all things.

On page twenty-four, the author treats of "the way mediums paint likenesses, in the true order of the development of the arts and sciences.

In part second, under the general head of mysteries Revealed, the author treats of "How Mankind Manifest their presence through Physical Bodies of Mediums. How the writing is done. How we influence Mediums to speak. The fullness of all kinds of language investigated. The ring feat and the carrying of Musical Instruments around the room explained."

This work is neatly got up and consists of seventy-three closely printed pages and we hesitate not to say that it contains more original thought upon important subjects, a few only of which we have enumerated, than any other work of equal size we have seen.

The work will be sent by mail from this office

SECOND EDITION.

A WORK OF GREAT RESEARCH.

ONE RELIGION: MANY CREEDS.

BY ROSS WINANS.

"We object to what the Church demands, an unbounded and unjustifiable confidence in the infallibility of the writings of Moses and the prophets, and the Evangelists and the Apostles. We object to the statement to an impossible composition of God and man. We protest that Christian theology, as we have it, is not taught by God himself, nor by Christ himself, nor is it consistent with established facts, nor is it comprehensible by our reason. We would show you that Christianity, as taught among us, is no better than other systems taught in other than Christian countries, and in some respects not so good.

The historic part of the Bible, in relation to the creation of the world, has its counterpart, in the several systems of theology here mentioned. They all had their cosmologies based on equally good authority and equally wide of the truth, as that recorded in the Bible. The time and manner of the creation, no man has ever known, or ever will know, in this life; nor is such knowledge of importance in preparing us for the life to come."—EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

This book is a large 12 mo. of nearly 400 pages, printed on fine, heavy-tinted paper, and is sold at much less than the actual cost. Price, $1.50; postage, 22 cents.

 For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

DELINQUENTS.

The following named persons owe for this paper. They have either removed from the town or post office where they formerly took the JOURNAL, without requesting the address to be changed, and paying arrearages; or they have requested some pious postmaster to notify us that the paper was not called for, thinking thus to evade payment. Such of these as remain unpaid four weeks, without reasonable explanation, will be placed in the Black List. Our subscribers who know the present residence of either of these persons, will confer a favor by informing us of the same.

S. M. Argo, Clinton, Ill., $2.85; J. H. Mears, Lincoln, Va., $0 cts.; J. F. Tuttle, West Lebanon, Ind., 75 cts.; W. M. Getchell, St. Louis, Mo., $7.00; Mrs. M. Strong, Buchanan, Mich., $6.00; John Hoon, Harrisburg, Pa., $3.50; A. H. Hall, Geo. Roberts, Emigrant's Gap, Cal., $4.55; Wm. Simms, Curran, Ill., $2.50; Mrs. Emma Cook, Rick's Mills, Ill., $9.25; D. J. Grambling, Atlanta, Ga., $1.75; G. W. Orth, Princeton, Mo., $3.50; Wm. A. Harshman, Jackson, Ohio, $6.00; Miss F. Robinson, Two Rocks, Cal. $1.50; N. A. Clark, Two Rocks, Cal., $2.25; G. M. Hopkins, Edinburg, Mo., $5.50; W. Woodward, Goldsboro', N. C., $6 25; Mrs. Brigham Flint, Mich., 75 cts.; John Hastings, Lexington, Miss., $2.50; A. McCorley, New York City, $4.75; H. R. Mathews, Mt. Vernon, Mo., $3.75;

S. Brevoort, 26 Fourth Ave., New York City, $9.35; John Martin, Hyrie, Iowa, $5.00; H. Healey, Hermon, N. Y., $1.35; A. B. Cole, Pisgah, Mo., $1.70; C. T. Yeaton, Salem, Oregon, $3.00; Eastman, Monroe, Wis., $4.50.

ABRIDGED EDITION

OF THE

SPIRITUAL HARP,

PRICE:—$1.00. Postage 16 cents. For sale at the

RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE,
187 & 189 S. Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

MEDICINA PSYCHICA! ANIMA MEDICA!!

☞ "Dico hominem internum esse animal: Internum vero non animal sed imaginem DEI VERAM!"—VAN HELMONT.

THIERS' ODYLLIC WAFERS,

The most safe, salutatory, and effectual Nervine Medium Developer and Curative in all

DISEASES OF THE NERVES,

Including Neuralgia, Epilepsy, Hysteria, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Gout, Lumbago, Sciatica, Chorea, (St. Vitus' Dance) Depression of Spirits, Melancholy, etc.

Sent per mail, in letter form. Price $1.00 per package. Test or trial packages mailed free for 25 cents.

Address, W. F. J. THIERS, M. D., NEUROPATHIST, No. 72 I St., Washington, D. C. v10 n11 tf

[Reprinted from the London edition of 1785 by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, Chicago.]

THE

BHAGVAT-GEETA,

Or Dialogues of

KREESHNA AND ARJOON.

In eighteen lectures, with notes. Translated from the original Sanskreet, or ancient language of the Brahmins.

BY CHARLES WILKINS,

Senior merchant in the service of the Honorable, the East India Company, in their Bengal Establishment.

The antiquity of the original and the veneration in which it has been held for so many ages by a very considerable portion of the human race, renders it one of the greatest curiosities ever presented to the literary world.

Our edition of the BHAGVAT-GEETA (sometimes called the Hindoo New Testament) is printed on heavy tinted paper and beautifully bound. It is in great demand, orders for nearly all of the first edition having been received before it left the binder's hands.

Price, $1.25; postage, 12 cents.

 For sale, wholesale and retail, by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 187 & 189 S. Clark st., Chicago.

The Bible in India.

HINDOO ORIGIN OF

Hebrew and Christian Revelation.

TRANSLATED FROM

"LA BIBLE DANS L' INDE."

BY LOUIS JACOLLIOT.

EXTRACTS FROM AUTHOR'S PREFACE:

"I come to show you humanity, after attaining the loftiest regions of speculative philosophy, of untrammeled reason on the ruins of the venerable edifices of India, was transmitted and sifted by the altar that substituted for intellectual life a semi-brute existence of dreaming impotence.....

India is the world's cradle; hence it is that the common mother in sending forth her children even to the utmost west has, in unfading testimony of our origin, bequeathed us the legacy of her language, her laws, her morals, her literature, and her religion.....

To religious despotism, imposing, speculative delusions, and class-legislation, may be attributed the decay of nations.....

I am aware of the resentment I am provoking, I pre shrink not from the encounter.....We are no longer burnt at the stake."

 Price $2.00; postage 24 cents. For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark street, Chicago.

NEW EDITION—REVISED AND CORRECTED.

THE VOICES

Three Poems.

VOICE OF SUPERSTITION.
VOICE OF NATURE.
VOICE OF A PEBBLE.

By Warren Summer Barlow.

THIS volume is startling in its originality of purpose, and is destined to make deeper inroads among sectarian bigots than any work that has hitherto appeared.

THE VOICE OF SUPERSTITION takes the crowds all Dante raved, and proves by numerous passages from the Bible that the God of Moses has been deified by Satan, from the Garden of Eden to Mount Calvary!

THE VOICE OF NATURE represents God in the light of Reason and Philosophy—in His unchangeable and glorious attributes. While other writers have too often only described, this author has erected a beautiful Temple on the ruins of Superstition.

Printed in beautiful type, on heavy, fine paper, bound in beveled boards, in good style; nearly 300 pages. Price $1.50, postage 20 cents. Liberal discount to the trade.

For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 South Clark St., Chicago, Ill!

MRS. MARIA M. KING'S WORKS.

THE PRINCIPLES OF NATURE, as discovered in the Development and Structure of the Universe; The Solar System—Laws and Methods of its Development; Earth—History of its Development; Existence of Spiritual Universe. Price reduced to $1.75; postage, 24 cents.

REAL LIFE IN THE SPIRIT LAND.—Being Life Experiences, Scenes, Incidents, and Conditions, Illustrative of Spirit-Life and the Principles of the Spiritual Philosophy. Price, $1.00; postage, 16 cents.

SOCIAL EVILS: Their Causes and Cure.—Being a Brief Discussion of the Social Status, with reference to Methods of Reform. Price, 25 cents; postage free.

THE SPIRITUAL PHILOSOPHY VS. DIABOLISM. In two lectures. Price, 25 cents; postage free.

WHAT IS SPIRITUALISM? and SHALL SPIRITUALISTS HAVE A CREED? In two lectures. Price, 25 cents; postage free.

GOD THE FATHER and MAN THE IMAGE OF GOD. In two lectures. Price, 25 cents; postage free.

 For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

MOSES HULL'S WORKS.

THE QUESTION SETTLED, a Careful Comparison of Biblical and Modern Spiritualism. Price, $1.50; postage 16 cents.

SPIRITUALISM UNVEILED. This sharp and brilliant little book, by one of our acutest writers and most efficient speakers should be read by all. Price, 25 cents; postage, 2 cents.

THE SUPREMACY OF REASON. This little work is a masterly argument on the Supremacy of Reason. The author handles sectarianism as opposed to reason, without gloves. Price, 10 cents; postage, 2 cents

THAT TERRIBLE QUESTION.—Being an Essay on Love and Matrimony. Price, 10 cents; postage, 2 cents.

THE WOLF IN SHEEP'S CLOTHING; or, God in the Constitution. A Logical Interpretation of the symbols of the Book of Daniel, and the Apocalypse, together with an argument against recognizing God, Christianity, and the Sabbath in our National Charter. Price; 10 cents; postage, 2 cents. For sale, wholesale, and retail, at the office of this paper.

 For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

THE MAGNETIC TREATMENT.

SEND TEN CENTS TO DR. ANDREW STONE, TROY, N. Y., and obtain a large, highly illustrated book on this system of vitalizing treatment. v9 n20 tf

LIFE IN THE BEYOND.

BENJAMIN FRENCH, an Undeveloped Spirit's History. Francis H. Smith, Medium. Price, 10 cents. For sale at this office.

RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL

$3,00 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.]

S. S. JONES, PUBLISHER AND PROPRIETOR.

CHICAGO, JULY 8, 1871. VOL. X—NO. 16.

Phenomenal.

From the People, Indianapolis, Ind.

LISETTE.

The Musical Somnambulist.

"There are more things in Heaven and Earth, Horatio, Than are dreamed of in your philosophy."

MR. EDITOR.—You have often asked me to write you a short account of Lisette Barnard—the somnambul girl who died at our house last winter—and concerning whose many strange stories have been told, and especially of her wonderful performances on the piano when apparently asleep. She was one of a car load of orphan, homeless children, sent west from New York by the Children's Aid Society there, to find homes. My husband had spoken to Mr. Friedgen the Agent of the Society, brother of the shoe merchant on Washington street, to bring him a little nurse girl the next car load he should conduct to the West. This was in the winter of 1864 5. That spring, in April, he brought us Lisette, stating that he knew nothing of her parentage and that he selected her on account of her gentle disposition, from a number of favorites at the Orphan Asylum, on Randall's Island, near New York, where she had then been for four years. She was eight years of age when she came to our home, and she was so mild and withal so womanly that after a few days I felt our babe was entirely safe in her charge. Time passed—Lisette and baby grew together—the former being an apt scholar at school which she was regular in attending, and quite a lover of books suited to her age. There was nothing remarkable about her but her very mild ways and dreary, weary look from her deep set, blue eyes. Last summer my husband presented me with a piano. I found myself much out of practice, not having had the use of this favorite instrument of mine since I left my father's roof, some years before, but in a few weeks my fingers learned their ways, and I noticed Lisette manifested a peculiar and intense interest whenever I played selections from any of the old operas and master-pieces. At such times I would frequently find her sitting in the adjoining room utterly oblivious to everything but the music; from the effects of which she seemed to recover only when spoken to, and would then rouse herself as if from asleep. This absorption of hers was the subject of frequent remark in our family. One night last November, about one o'clock, my husband and I were aroused from our slumbers by hearing the sweetest of music, coming apparently from our parlor. Our bed-room was off the sitting room—all on the same floor, and of course we were frightened. The doors from our room to the sitting room and thence to the parlor were all open—the gas by our bedside burning dimly but the parlor was dark. We lay a moment listening to the perfect concord of sounds from the piano, which we perceived was under the fingers of a master hand. The music was from Bach—one of grand and majestic movement—but not one that I had played on that piano, for I had not the notes in the house. The playing ceased a moment or two and then began with one of Liszt's Fantasias—one so difficult of execution that none but the highest professors of the art ever attempt it. I had heard it the summer before at Crosby's in Chicago, but had never tried it myself. Mr. J. and I hastily dressed ourselves, for by this time we supposed some of our friends had taken this rather novel method of serenading us. But who was the performer then touching the instrument with a skill possessed by none of my acquaintances was the puzzling question. We passed noiselessly to the parlor door—the light from our room by reflection made everything in the parlor visible. You may imagine our surprise when I tell you that the performer at the piano was none other than Lisette—dressed in her gayest suit with her abundance of hair put up in a style I never saw before on any one, but very neat and tasty. Her face was from us, and Mr. J. motioning me to keep silence, lighted the gas, and we both went to Lisette's side just as she concluded the Fantasia. Her eyes were closed and her face, usually pale, was now deathly white. I sank into a chair thoroughly frightened, for a somnambulist is one of my horrors. At the same time Lisette turning her head toward me, and bowing politely said in a lady like voice—not natural to her—That was Liszt's own favorite when I knew him—beautiful, isn't it? But here is something I like better," and turning to the piano—her eyes still closed—she gave with exquisite skill one of Bach's Counter Fugues, which is perhaps the most difficult of all compositions to render, but when well delivered as this was carries the hearer from earth to heaven. If I could render a Counter Fugue, as a musician I should be content. I was so absorbed in her theme that I forgot who was the performer. As it closed, Lisette rose gracefully and bowing said:

"That is sufficient for this child to-night, she must now rest. Please, kind friends, do not waken her in the morning, I will arouse her at the proper time," and bowing again with a womanly grace Lisette had never attained she passed to her room.

"I am surely dreaming," said I.

"She is the first somnambulist I ever saw," said my husband, "but where did she learn to play, and where did she ever hear that music, for you never played it, and then how strangely she talked about herself, she never knew Liszt; I don't understand it at all." We retired and talked the matter over, but could make the facts fit no theory of which we had any knowledge.

The next morning Lisette, usually an early riser, slept until ten o'clock. We said nothing to her of what we had witnessed, nor told it to any one else that day. On the second night after, we were awakened about the same hour by a similar performance in the parlor—we went in again. The pieces played were all classic, mostly from Handel—one or two from Beethoven—and their execution perfect; only one of which I had ever played in her hearing. Between each she made remarks and criticisms as naturally as if she were some accomplished performer presiding at the piano and not our little nurse girl. As she closed this performance she astonished us more than ever by saying:

"Good friends, I much thank you for your kindness to this child; I am her mother, and I am training her unconsciously to herself. Please do not tell her of this practice, for I fear she will not remain long with you, as she is very delicate," and bowed herself out as before.

These performances being repeated every alternate night after, became somewhat annoying—especially since Lisette seemed to be declining rapidly.

The physician prescribed for her but never seemed to understand her case. He witnessed her musical performances. He said she was undoubtedly asleep the whole time at the piano. On one occasion she turned to him and said:

"Oh, Doctor, I see you don't understand this, Lisette is not before you except in body. I am her mother. I can use her body. My name is Therese Barnard. I was reared in Lorraine, and married in Paris. I taught music in Paris—it was my grand passion. My husband died on board ship as we came to America. I died in New York a few months afterward. I have watched Lisette ever since—you need not give her medicine—she will soon be with me and Louis."

She lingered till January last and died a painless death. It was a gradual fading away.

Her performance ceased in December. After her death Mr. J. wrote to the Asylum whence she came, to know what the record showed concerning her. The answer so far as applicable is as follows:

"Barnard, Lisette—entered January 20, 1861, from Bleeker street tenement house. Supposed to be four years old; mother died of starvation; said to be French music teacher. Lisette sent to Indianapolis, April, 1865."

Now, Mr. Editor, I have made this as short as I can, and yet have not told the half that this curious girl said at her musical performances. She never touched the piano when awake, but said she would like to learn to play it. Nor did she with but two exceptions play any pieces that were played in our house by any other person.

Yours, etc.,

J. J.

STRANGE BUT TRUE.

A Watch Found by Spirit Direction.

The spirit world is constantly at work in giving tests of the presence of loved ones, through various mediums, and the good accomplished thereby to humanity cannot be overestimated.

The Potts family, to whom we have often alluded, are constantly convincing the skeptic of the truthfulness of spirit communion. The following, from the pen of Wm. Barr, contains a wonderful test of spirit presence and power: We clip it from the Harrisburg (Penn.) Telegraph:

In my reply to the communication that appeared in the State Journal some time ago, referring to the spirit drawings of Mr. Potts, I then stated that Spiritualism was not dead, as the writer of the article supposed, but that our meetings were increasingly interesting, and we were receiving tests constantly of the most undoubted character, some of which I would publish soon to interest your numerous readers. Passing over, for the present, a great number received, I will now relate one received within a few days past

On Wednesday of last week, Mr. Henry Brenneman, of this city, formerly of Manheim township, received a letter or communication from the spirit land; from our good and reliable test spirit, Patrick Ocer, in which the spirit stated that a friend of his, by the name of Wm. Martin, now in the spirit land, wished him to direct us to the secret spot where he had hid his watch to secure it from the rebels, during the raid in the Cumberland valley; said that we would find it near Fairview; that we should fix our own time, and he would accompany us to the spot, where we would find it securely cemented in a rubber covering. The watch we would find between 11 and 12 o'clock (time on the watch), in good condition. When found, it must be given to a little girl named Mary Fannie Merriman, to encourage her to labor for the spirits—she being Patrick's second medium.

It would, no doubt, be interesting were I to publish the letter in full as he received it, with the names of several gentlemen whom the spirits wished to accompany us on our search for the watch,—including that of Dr. Orr, a highly educated and much respected gentleman who has always doubted the truth of physical tests. None of us knew the little girl, or where her father resided; the spirit said near Fairview.

At an appointed hour, we agreed to go over to Mr. Merriman's. I had my horse harnessed, and took Mr. Brenneman and Dr. Orr with me. Mr. Bongel took his horse and wagon. His wife and others crossed the river in a boat.

After arriving at Fairview we inquired for Mr. Merriman's, and were told where to find his house. We rather took them by surprise, they not knowing what we were all after. Soon the news spread, and quite a number gathered to his house.

It was not long until our medium became entranced. The spirit of Patrick Ocer controlling, led him away from the house to a very steep, high bank near the creek, above M'Cormick's nail factory. Not less than twelve followed him, when he suddenly stopped, and then went more than half way down the hill, to an old stump.

Mr. B. said, "Patrick, is it there?"

He answered, "Yes"

I then said that there were persons there who were in doubt, I requested that they should examine the stump and ground,—see whether it looked as though any person had been there before us. All being satisfied, Dr. Orr was requested to remove the contents out of the old stump. Finding it rather a difficult task, I proposed upturning the stump, which we did.

After examining it, and the loose dirt, the gum containing the watch was found in a hollow root covered with dirt, as described by the spirit of the man that hid it away.

We all returned to the house, where we found a number of others waiting to hear what success we met with.

I had the pleasure of opening the sealed gum cover, and therein found a beautiful, watch, in perfect order. When wound, it moved as if it had never been laid away, and had run down, when found, after eleven o'clock, as the spirit said in the letter. We presented the watch to the little girl. I was allowed to take the gum or rubber cover, and have it in my possession. It can be seen at any time. The name of T. Hatten is engraved on the inside of the watch.

This may seem strange and hard to be believed by many, but I would like any man to tell me where the intelligence comes from or by what means it is produced, if they think it comes not direct from our departed friends. We have, in addition to the above, been directed to different places where articles have been found that have been buried or hid away for many years, such as cannon-balls, jewelry, diamonds, ancient and modern coin, as well as paper money, and many other articles—unmistakable evidences of spirits power to return.

We find many persons anxious and willing to believe the heavenly truths of Spiritualism if spirits will tell them where they can find gold and silver buried.

Our large circle meets every Sabbath evening in the hall, corner of Locust and Second streets, where all anxious seekers after truth are invited, free, without money, without price. Come, then, and see for yourselves!

None but members of the circle admitted after 8 o'clock.

From the (Michigan) Saginawian.

A SPIRIT PORTRAIT.

How It Was Procured—How It Affected John Tyran.

Patent insides or outsides as well as all other matters, has ceased to be of any occupation and enjoyment as of yore, but when some strange and unaccountable occurrence interrupts the regular order of events, I take to ink like a duck to water.

It is a strange story, and it is true, and, if not unaccountable, is at least plunged farther into mystery than I can penetrate. Some learned scientist or metaphysician might be able to ornament it with polliayllabic adjectives sufficient to make it "clear as mud," but the "plain, unvarnished tale" is all that is here proposed. Seventeen years ago the parents of John Tyran and Amanda Green were neighbors in and out-of-the-way corner of Ohio, and their children attended the same school. The sunny blue eyes of Amanda wrought untold devices on the tender heart of John, and with all the ardor of youth he laid his peg-top and marbles in her lap in token of his unconditional surrender. Whether the lovely Amanda bowed in meek submission to her fate does not appear; for while yet she was a child, death, the destroyer, remorselessly stayed the proceeding. John wept bitterly over her grave, and mourned as one that would not be comforted. Unceasing and timeless as the wandering Jew, he has roamed up and down, mourning always. No lovely daughter of man has been able to beguile his affection, and all their beauties are to him as "Flowers with fragrance overpaid."

Daily he mourns for his Amanda, and prays fervently to be released from this earthly tabernacle, that he may join her "on the other shore." He indeed boasts of holding daily converse with her disembodied spirit, whose ghostly consolation is the one balm left to life. His faith and loyalty to earth love have been productive of the following:

Knowing how eagerly John sought for every memento of his love, and how fully he believed in the spirit manifestations, the writer determined at once to test his memory and his faith.

Unknown to Tyran, a medium wholly unacquainted with all the circumstances of the case was procured, who succeeded after many futile seances, in obtaining the presence of the spirit of the loved and lost Amanda. The desire of John to secure a faithful portrait of his boyish love was stated, and this plan was agreed upon. A man named Starr, of Port Huron, Mich., was named as the spirit painter to whom she would appear as Stella, at any time he should call upon her. This looked business-like, and the prospect of having a bill to pay for a worthless daub was imminent. There was a chance that the spirit would never move the artist, and so a letter was written detailing the plan and object. Return mail brought from the man Starr—known to me only through the medium and newspaper advertisement—a full acceptance of the commission, and appointed a time for the first ghostly interview.

A month passed by, and the picture of the impalpable spirit was not yet received, and I began to believe that the contract would never come to maturity. But one bright morning when the first blue birds were essaying their gayest spring song, the express wagon stopped at my door, and an equilateral flat box was turned upon the side-walk, duly labelled with fleshy hands. C. O. D. There was a large chance of getting nothing for something, with only a ghost of a chance for an indorser, but curiosity could not be baulked. The bill was paid, the box delivered, and, not without trepidation, the cover removed. A picture, and not a bad one, outlining a beautiful landscape, and in the foreground a young girl dressed in the style of years agone. Any young man might be excused for loving her blue eyes, rosy cheeks, chestnut curls, and pouting lips. He would be a fool who did not.

Without betraying the origin of the picture to any one, it was taken to the house of a mutual friend, where Tyran was a frequent visitor, there to await results. A few days passed, when one evening, while we sat contemplating the picture, and speculating on the probable amount of cash it would bring at auction, the door opened and John Tyran, wholly unannounced as was his wont, walked into the room, gave a rapid glance at the portrait, threw out his arms, as if to embrace it, cried, "Amanda darling," and fell fainting to the floor. For two days he lay unconscious of all around him, but all the time talking rapturously with his "Amanda darling"

There is no romance or fiction in this narration, and, to me, no known opportunity for deception. The man Starr never saw John Tryan nor Amanda Green, nor heard her named, except as Stella, and yet John Tyran declares the likeness perfect, even to the pattern of her dress. To the knowledge of the writer, "spirits," other than alcoholic, have had nothing to do with his mundane affairs, and he remains sceptical, but will thank some enlightened soul to tell him what ailed John Tyran.

N. B. Starr is a well-known spirit artist. We have two beautiful oil paintings—one an angelic woman, ministering to "spirits in prison," the other, "My home in Spirit-life,"—contrasted with earth-life, and separated from it by the river—Death. Our friends will find a welcome at our reception rooms, where these and other spirit paintings are on exhibition.—[ED. JOURNAL.

Letter from Dr. Dake.

BRO. JONES:—For several weeks past my field of labor has been Dixon, Ill. Nature has, with a bountiful hand, poured out its richest blessings on this beautiful place. The surrounding country is not only beautiful also, but its farms are very productive, and after sojourning therein, we are led to exclaim with a favorite author, Nature, like a gift from God, thou art a throb from the Deific heart, a pledge from the soul of supreme truth."

But the devil himself could never have conceived of a more bigoted set of religious fanatics than this place abounds. This is owing, no doubt, to the absurd doctrine taught by men claiming to be vicegerents of God Almighty, whose inspiration has gone glimmering, if peradventure they ever had any, and who moreover being joined to their idol, like the heathen, must grow out of their stupidity before they can do humanity any good whatever. Orthodox Doctors, D. D.'s and M. D.'s, run Dixon.

Before our visit to this place, we were informed that two traveling physicians this spring had been persecuted—in fact run out of the city —and that the city council issued a law charging all itinerant doctors fifteen dollars per day. This class legislation comes from pusillanimous Orthodox Doctors. In Freeport, Ill., they also have a tax of ten dollars per day. Hillsdale, Mich, two dollars per day. Louisville, Ky., three hundred dollars. Having failed in State legislating, they are now centering all their forces on the cities.

This crusade is from the Orthodox, Allopathic regular schooled physicians, in every instance. Spiritualists, freemen, will you support them? A Dr. Law, of Dixon, was the first to act in this matter in that city, manipulating the city council. I was so informed by one of the aldermen whom I treated. Our visit was profitable and pleasant, notwithstanding puny man's endeavors to the contrary. When the spirit moves me I shall surely visit Louisville, and give them an opportunity to enforce their law. To-day I have several patients who are now under my treatment in Louisville, and if the court knows herself, I have the right to visit them—and prescribe for others—if I choose.

I am sorry to say that at this time, Spiritualism in Dixon, is smothered. Orthodoxy, cruel Orthodoxy, holds full sway. At one time Spiritualism had a strong foothold. It is only a matter of time, when freedom of thought shall again spread its broad, ample folds over this beautiful place, as well as over every household in America. False man may prove recreant to his high calling, and hide his light, but the dawning of a new era is upon us,—and the great light from angels' homes shed down upon the habitation of man, shall quicken his thoughts and hasten to restore his lost manhood,—now held in durance vile by the High Priests, ministers, Doctor, Popularity, Greenbacks.

Mr. Morrel and wife are wide awake, fearless, outspoken, loyal hearted Spiritualists, and stand high in the community as worthy citizens,—respected and esteemed by all who know them.

There are several other staunch Spiritualists in Dixon and vicinity—among them John Lord, who is a veteran in the cause. The JOURNAL has several warm friends and earnest readers here.

The Machusa House, Dixon, is one of the finest and best kept hotels in the West, and we owe many thanks to both its proprietor, and Mr. Sampson, the clerk, who are wide awake, whole-souled, and progressive men—just as all hotel keepers should be.

Della has not forgotten the JOURNAL. Soon she will again pay her respects.

During the heated term I shall only visit Chicago once in two weeks. I shall remain here in Elgin for a few weeks, then to Waukegan, and up into Wisconsin.

Elgin, Ill., June 20, 1871.

Great Excitement in Frankfort, Illinois.

BROTHER JONES:—Enclosed please find a communication taken from the Du Quoin Republican, of June 24th. I learn from other sources that the excitement is still increasing; that hundreds are visiting that locality daily, for the purpose of witnessing the performance of these girls. If anything new transpires in regard to them, I will endeavor to apprise you of it.

Yours truly,

DANIEL WHITE.

EDITOR REPUBLICAN:—Two young ladies, daughters of James Williams, living about eight miles from here, have been attacked in a singular manner by what is said to be witchcraft,

Witchcraft or whatever craft it may be, puzzles the best physicians.

The young ladies were first affected about the 1st of April. I think that it was known among the neighbors that there was something wrong with them, but any strangeness in their actions was generally imputed to insanity. Matters remained thus until last Wednesday, when their father called upon a physician of this place, and got him to visit them.

Since that time their actions have become generally known, and both men and women have gone to see them. Some fifty or a hundred persons are there every night, and they say it is quite entertaining to witness their performances.

They are perfectly sane during the day, but at the approach of night they become frenzied and uncontrollable, performing feats that the best acrobats could hardly perform. Scaling the house, they dance upon the comb of the building, apparently with perfect ease and impunity, uttering, at the same time, the most hideous and frenzied screams.

Very frequently they take something like fits, or spasms, and fall perfectly still; but, if they chance to be on the house-top, they never fall off, however near the eave they may be.

They are aged, respectively, sixteen and eighteen years, and are both rather small, both being below the medium height. During the day, at which time they are perfectly sane, they seem to be rather modest and reserved, but will converse freely with any one. They are very fond of music and play upon the dulcimer.

The spell comes upon both at or near the same time, generally between sundown and dark, and first manifests itself by both of them breaking into a run. They always run North, in the direction of the house of an old lady, who, they say, has been practicing witchcraft upon them. They say she has recently put harder spells upon them, on account of their telling something that she forbade, and that she and a cat are with them in their house-top dance.

They have a language which they use in conversing with each other, and which they seem to understand; but it's "Comanche" to everybody else.

There are some strange things connected with them. They catch and eat all the flies they can get hold of until nausea is produced, when they both vomit at the same time. What one does, the other is also doing. Their gestures are alike and simultaneous. They seem to both be moved by one controlling power.

The foregoing is a statement of the facts as correct as I can learn them.

You can imagine the excitement when I tell you that, since I began to write, nearly fifty people have passed through our little village on their way to see the girls

J.

Frankfort, Ill., June 19, 1871.

Still Another Gone.

Our old and esteemed friend, N. E. Daggett, of Elgin, Ill., as we see by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL, has lost his foothold on earth and gone on with the spirits. Many years ago we met this bold and faithful witness, who was brought out of the coldest and most negative condition of skepticism, by the invincible proofs he obtained in his own family while trying to detect the tricks and prove there were no spirits. Like our own case, Bro. Daggett had no evidence of life after death, until it came through mediumship, and when he got that evidence, he used it to the best advantage he could, as we did, fearless of the rabble or the persecutions of the churches, which we had both faced in the days of our infidelity to their authority. We had no thought of his going before us to the Summer Land, but since he has, we hope to get some word from him on subjects about which we have so often conversed. As we so often chronicle the departure of our co-laborers, we wait our own transition, and never mourn as our Christian brethren do, nor fear as they do the trial.—Hon. Warren Chase, in Banner of Light.

M. Lou Hopper [illegible]

Her address is Bullwater, [illegible]

MORE LIGHT.

By A. D. Sawyer.

Wishing to avoid unnecessary circumlocution, I will refer briefly, to the interesting, and very important facts contained in the following appends. The subject matter contained therein, will thoroughly explain itself. I am, as per my previous communication, indebted to the columns of that able journal, the Cincinnati Commercial, for these clippings, which I "sizzored" from its London correspondence, and, which is signed with the initials, "M. D. C.," popularly ascribed to the pen of the noted, able and progressive writer, Moncure D. Conway, now residing in the above mentioned city. The following quota, which are imputed to the pen of Mr. Conway, and which any writer might well strive to emulate, are fair samples of the style with which he illustrates the religio-philosophical liberalism and literature of the age.

Just at this time, I seem to feel a strong impression on my mind, inciting me to make the following statements. I am experiencing a unique intuition that persuades me to believe that what I shall now declare, will meet with a quantum of good results, in at least inducing some of my friends who may read what I here write, and who have not yet done so, to break loose from the galling chains of old theological sophistries, bigotries, prejudices and its long retinue of damnable corruptions, and without delay, seek the many opportunities which are enfolding them on every side, to investigate and learn of the great truths of Spiritualism.

I would say to the novice:—As I myself have most happily done, to first read the illustrious Thomas Paine's indellible truths as portrayed in his "Age of Reason, Common Sense, Rights of Man, etc., etc." Then, to carefully study, and thoroughly digest Spiritual Philosophy; read Andrew Jackson Davis, Judge Edmonds, and a host of other great men's works; and in the mean time, visit any good test, or trumpet medium; continue to do so; and, as the theological mountains are removed from your heretofore weary shoulders, will their places be occupied by myriads of shining suns! aye! the innumerable suns of truth! unsullied by the polluting hands of priestcraft or dogmatic creeds, and, thus will the chains of your priestly thralldom be cast off, and you will find yourself a man!

I would also recommend in addition to the above Spiritual pamphlets, to by all means forward 50 cts. to S. S. Jones, 187 and 189, South Clark street Chicago, Ill., Editor and Publisher of the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL, and thereby receive a copy of that most excellent periodical, for three months, as a trial number. Those whose minds are imbued with a real desire to investigate the immortal truths of Spiritualism, will never regret so doing.

Appends as stated:* "The hazy condition of the relation between this country and Australia has just been brought forcibly before me by a personal experience. Not long ago we were startled in this country by the tidings that at Parametta, in the Australian colony of Sydney, a man named Lorando Jones had been sentenced to a fine of one hundred pounds and two years in the common jail for blasphemy. The details of the case have probably been published in America by this time but I may say that the evidence brought before the Court showed Jones to have committed no offense which is not committed by a thousand people, or more, in England every week. As a well-known free-thinker he was challenged to an open air controversy by a pious street-preacher on the merits and demerits of the Bible. Jones accepted, and, bringing his Bible, recited therefrom, particularly from the old Testament, scenes and incidents of cruelty and obscenity which he considered unsuited for the ears of women and children." His opponent and challenger, unable to argue these things out of the Bible, and finding the crowd inclining to agreement with the heretic, fell back upon the ancient line of reasoning in such cases. He informed the public prosecutor that his antagonist had violated the old statute against blasphemy, and had thus incurred and tried. In vain did the defender of Jones plead that Bishop Colenso, Dean Stanley, to say nothing of Mill, Huxley and many other eminent men had been equally guilty with his client, and that the blasphemy statute, though unrepealed, was regarded as a dead letter by English Courts. The Judge declared that Christianity was the law of the land, and that Christianity rested upon the Old Testament, which Christ had recognized as authority; and he gave such a summing up that the jury found the prisoner guilty without leaving the box. The Judge declaring that kind of infidelity had gone on long enough and must be put a stop to, gave the heaviest sentence, and Jones' hair was cropped, a convict's dress put on him, and he was sent to prison. When the news reached England, it was met by general indignation. Some heretics here immediately proceed to commit the offense of Jones, with interest, in order to show that they could do so with impunity. A meeting was held at a heretical chapel, South Place, Finsbury, at which it was decided to appeal to the English Government in some way, so as to have the Parametta decision reversed and Jones set free. Your correspondent was asked to consult various Liberal members of Parliament as to the best method of procedure. And now comes in the point of my story. Three or four eminent members of Parliament spoken to, did not know what the exact influence of England over Australia was, but they all insisted it was not little, and was quite to enable this country to interfere with a judicial decision. The Secretary for the Colonies, Mr. Knatchbull Huguessen, being addressed on the subject, declared that he had never heard of any blasphemy case, nor heard the name of Lorando Jones! The matter had been for a month in the London press, and commented on in leading articles by the dailies, but this gentleman, whose office it is to look after the colonies, had never heard of the case! Of course we supplied the Colonial Secretary with a copy of the trial, and it may be we should have heard from him in the course of time, had not the next mail from Australia arrived with the news that the Parliament of Sydney had itself, after a very creditable debate, set the heretic free. In the years immediately preceding the American Revolution there was, if we are to believe Walpole, a Colonial Secretary who used to address dispatches to the "Isle of New England," which he regarded as being somewhere in the Mediterranean Sea; but one could not have believed the traditions that a Secretary for Colonies must avoid knowing too much about them, were so lasting in the Foreign Office.

In conclusion, I may add that Mr. Lorando Jones, as we have ascertained, is a Welsh sculptor, whose works have appeared at the Royal Academy exhibitions in London, and that he is not only a Theist, but a man of remarkably fine character. The sensation produced here by his imprisonment was not all one way, for a Scotch barrister insisted that Mr. Voysey should be prosecuted under the old blasphemy statute; and he was very much ridiculed. The heretics here would like nothing better than a few trials of that kind, but they can't get them.

The proper punishment for Judge Simpson (who sent Jones to prison) would have been, had he been in London, to compel him to attend a festival which occurred on Tuesday last, in honor of Robert Owen, on the occasion of his centenary.- Owen was born on the 14th of May, 1771; but, as that fell on Sunday, it was thought necessary to have the banquet later. This deference to Sabbatarianism excited some comment, considering the eminent infidelity of Owen. It is significant of the strong arm with which the Church surrounds even those who defy it, that, after battling the popular religion for over three-score years, Robert Owen was buried with the church service, and his hundredth birthday celebrated away from its date in deference to the Sabbath. But his friends made up for it by strong talk, and Judge Simpson would have been in an inferno had he been compelled to listen without being able to send the whole fire of it to hundred to prison. The festival was at the Freemasons' Tavern, and the most prominent figures in it were old friends of Owen, whose reminiscences of him, and of the early struggles of their "cause," sounded like antiquarian records. There were three or four persons who had seen the inside of prisons, among them old Mr. Watson, a bookseller, and his partner, Mr. Etheridge, for printing and selling "Paine's Age of Reason," and G. J. Holyoake, for (I believe) refusing to be sworn on the Bible, or some such offense. These men have lived to see a new England. Letters read from Mill, Huxley, Fawcett and others, spoke with earnestness of the work which Robert Owen did in his day, and, indeed, I think that man's singular life has been quite inadequately appreciated in America. Toward the close of his life, (at the age of eighty-eight), it was common to regard Robert Owen as the hero of splendid failures. But the world is beginning to suspect that, as there are apparent successes which are failures, so there are seeming failures which are successes. Having by business energy and sagacity as a manufacturer gained a large fortune, Robert Owen devoted it all to his schemes for human welfare. Dr. Knox once said: "The Celt revolutionizes, the Saxon reforms;" and the sentence is pointed by the fact that while the French Celts are shattering themselves by a revolution, the centenary of the greatest modern Saxon reformer finds the people of this country plodding slowly, but steadily, along the path of progress. There is no spot that I have visited with more interest than New Lanark, which was the scene of Owen's first attempt at commercial reform. The factory is now turned to conventional uses, but the place is still marked by a certain superiority of its work-people, in morals and intelligence. The dram-shops, which Owen drove away, have returned, but not in such numbers. Owen showed more shrewdness than ordinary teetotallers in dealing with the dram shops. He put up a brewery and a distillery of his own, and took care that the beer and spirits made in them should be absolutely unadulterated. He then retailed these to the people at a lower price than the ordinary public houses. As the latter largely depended for their gains upon adulteration, and as Robert Owen was able to undersell them, by reason of his not wishing to make gain out of the business, New Lanark was soon left without any provision for drink, except that of Owen. When he saw that the public houses had departed, Owen speedily closed his also, having, meanwhile, provided so many amusements for his workmen and workwomen that they were willing to give up drink. He planted an avenue of trees, "so that the young people might walk there and make love." The official returns showed a startling improvement in the moral statistics of New Lanark, as contrasted with the rest of Scotland. But the thing that chiefly roused the attention of this country, and even of the continent of Europe, was Robert Owen's shools. Owen laid out £10,000 to found schools, and spent £12 000 per annum for teaching, and so remarkable was his success that London appointed a committee, with the Archbishop of Canterbury at its head, to visit them and see if his system could be generalized. Lords Brougham, Canning, Sir Robert Peel, Malthus, Sir James Mackintosh, James Mill, Bentham, (in early life Owen's partner,) and a dozen famous peers, visited New Lanark, and Ricardo came from the continent and made a pilgrimage there. Prince Esterhazy also made a pilgrimage there, and even the Emperor and Empress of Russia passed a fortnight in New Lanark. The Emperor offered to transport the whole establishment at any cost to Russia. Owen was the most irrepressible man in those days. In three days he sent out forty thousand of his pamphlets, and one day the London mails were delayed twenty minutes by being choked with his documents. He gathered the people in London almost nightly at teas, meetings, balls, etc., and held them spell-bound by his dreams of a renovated world. At last he built an immense forum—such as Mr. Corry used to plan for Cincinnati—where many thousands were wont to assemble. During all this time he was sure to turn up in any part of Europe where anything occurred which offered an opportunity for disseminating his views. At one moment we find him entertained at a banquet given in his honor at the Hotel de Ville, and exhorting Louis Phillipe to become a savior; and again he is heard of hobnobbing with the Emperor of Austria during his Majesty's morning stroll in his park. His career in America is well-known. Those who know the man only by his printed works can form no conception of the vastness of the immense force that was in him. No sooner did Owen put pen to paper than he became dull. In conversation and oratory he was humorous, dexterous, and at times thrillingly eloquent. During the last few years of his life he passed into second childhood. He became also interested in Spiritualism. I heard a friend of his give a touching relation of his last public appearance. It was resolved to establish a Social Science Association, and a meeting was appointed October, 1858, at Liverpool. Robert Owen was there in his eighty-eighth year, but felt that a Social Science Association was the fulfillment of his dream of many years, and insisted on attending. He went from London... to the morning of the meeting he took two hours to dress him, so feeble was he. He was carried to the hall in a sedan chair. Four men bore him to the platform. Lord Brougham received him, offered his arm and led him in front of the audience. Then Mr. Owen, with a rekindling of his old fire, proclaimed again that evangel of a celestial society, of hope and universal good will, which for near four score years (for he began in his teens) he had delivered to the world. Lord Brougham saw his strength failing, and clapping his hands, cried out: "Capital! very good; can't be better, Mr. Owen! There, that will do," then gently led him away. From Liverpool the old man, at his own demand, was taken to Wales, going by easy stages to every spot associated with his early life, until he arrived at Newtown, where, two doors from the house where he was born, he died about a month after his appearance in Liverpool. He was a man of one idea, no doubt; but some who have said that of him remind us that one idea is better than none. Unquestionably very much of the philanthropic activity of modern England and America is due to the zeal and influence of Robert Owen.

By far the most eloquent address delivered at the Freemason's Tavern was by Mrs. Ernestine L. Rose, of New York. Mrs. Rose is something of a lioness here just now. On Sunday South Place Chapel was crowded with a thousand people to hear her address upon Robert Owen, and so completely did she charm the audience that three times applause began, and had to be checked. At the banquet, where such restraints did not exist, the enthusiasm at her burning words, her fine sarcasm, her clear statement, was so great that the people pressed nearer and nearer, and fairly stood up. She [illegible] near sixty, with a beautiful face, and in voice, manner, and thought one of the very few real orators I have ever heard.

The funeral of the late Sir John Herschel, which took place yesterday, was one of the most impressive I have ever witnessed. It is not possible, of course, to bear the antiquated service read without a shudder, unless one is fully convinced that the lifeless one has been "consumed by God's wrath," and unless one's idea of consistency with that belief, and one's feeling enable him to thank Heaven that his dead friend has been removed from this wicked world. Nevertheless, in Westminster Abbey, they are very artistic in getting over the readings with as much rapidity and indistinctness as possible, and by singing as much of the service as possible. Nobody criticizes the words when there is music, and the music yesterday was exquisite. To a beautiful chant the procession moved through the length of the Abbey, in the western space of which an immense crowd had gathered, and into the choir where a more distinguished company was waiting. The procession was made up of the chief scientific men. When the readings were over, the procession moved back again to the grave, which was immediately next that of Newton. Here the remaining services were concluded with much feeling by Dean Stanley. There was much emotion among the veterans of science as they stood around the coffin of one who had so long been a patriarch around them. Professor Owen, with his quaint black velvet skull-cap, the aged Sir Charles Lyell, Sir Henry Holland, and Dr. Carpenter, looked sadly on as those who felt that the generations of scientific men to which they belonged was nearing its end. And among the younger men Professor Huxley, Dr. Tyndall, and Sir John Lubbock, Mr. Lockyer and others were there to remind us that though the Faradays and Herschels pass away, the destinies of science are in safe hands. Some of these men by their unconcealed emotion may have suggested new opinions to those who regard science as tending to make men cold-hearted. At the foot of the grave were some ladies of Sir John Herschel's family, whose grief excited a deep sympathy. When the Dean had ended there was a pause, and then a gentle strain on the organ. The little boys clothed in white began then to sing Handel's finest anthem, "His body is buried in peace; his name liveth forevermore." And as their voices sounded through the great arches of the Abbey, the light streamed from the richly stained windows, shedding a glory upon them, and tinting the whole scene with glowing hues. In that radiance the mournful company walked around the grave, looking upon the coffin which bore a golden cross, and upon it the words: "Sir John Herschel, Bart. Born 7th March, 1792; deceased 11th May, 1871." Some strewed white flowers into the grave, and there they shone like miniatures of the stars with which the great man's name is associated.

*Mr. Conway gives the name as Lorando, instead of William L. Jones. "But a rose by any other name will smell as sweet."

CALIFORNIA.

Dedication of Hall, at San Bernardino.

DEAR JOURNAL:—Thinking your readers would be interested in the progress of the cause of the angels in Southern California, I propose to give you a concise statement of the erection and dedication of a new spiritual hall in our neighboring city of San Bernardino.

Spiritualism has many noble, outspoken friends in San Bernardino. For years they have labored under the disadvantages peculiar to new and progressive movements; no house or hall wherein to meet or to accommodate the friends of the cause passing that way. Years ago they organized a society, and with commendable firmness and courage have met together as best they could at private houses.

About a year ago, by a concerted and united effort, they bought a lot and commenced preparing to build a liberal hall.

A plan for the building was projected, very plain, and of rather diminutive dimensions,—calculated to serve the present wants of the society.

About this time, as the work was to be commenced, Dr. D. N. Smith, of Arrowhead Springs, near San Bernardino, was controlled by unseen intelligences to draft a plan for a hall; the plan to correspond as far as possible, to the wants of the disembodied friends, as well as the embodied sons and daughters of earth. Accordingly, the following plan was given, and accepted by the society. Extra exertions were made, and the hall erected. The "Spirit Room" is finished, and the main hall is in a condition admitting of use, and will be finished as means can be obtained. We copy the following from the San Bernardino Guardian;

PLAN OF THE BUILDING

"We noticed in our last issue the dedication of Lyceum Hall, erected by the Spiritualists of San Bernardino. Intending to notice all public improvements in our town, we recently visited the Hall, to learn what we could that might be interesting to such of our patrons as have not seen it, and were agreeably surprised to see such a model design of unique and artistic beauty as that portion of the Hall in which they style the Spirit Room presents, which portion is now in a state of completion, and as the medium avers, was designed by spirit dictation; but that being a matter we know nothing about, we can only view it from our own stand point: suffice it to say, the Hall is a convenience and honor to our town, especially so if the Spiritualists carry out their liberal intention of letting it free for all purposes connected with intellectual, social, and moral progress, holding the party or parties using it responsible for damage only. They informed us that the Young Men's Literary Institute are welcome to its use on the above condition.

"The Liberal Hall is an edifice in which all should feel an interest. It is such an improvement that we can not do less than devote a little space to its description; but as we are not indoctrinated into the mysteries of Spiritualism, our patrons will pardon us if we give the description in the language of the medium through whom the design is said to have been given:

"'The main hall is 26 by 52 feet, lighted by four windows on each side. Extending back of the main hall, is an addition of 10 feet less in height, which forms a circular room 16 feet in diameter, with ante-rooms on each side. The ceiling of this room is concave, with a circular sky light in the center, 3 feet in diameter; under this sky-light is a metallic star, with a hook to suspend a chandelier. This ceiling is so put on as to leave a background space of ten inches width at the base, and decreasing to two inches at sky-light, which is painted sky-blue. Another space of same width projecting half an inch, painted a lighter shade, and set with six golden stars alternates with it, forming six circles of stars, representing the heavens by night, and emblematical of the six spiritual spheres surrounding our earth. The upright wall is light sky-blue, symbolic of the horizon. The [illegible] man's physical earth-life from two feet above reached by semi- are painted in imitation of granite and marble, corresponding to the mineral kingdom. The floor is painted green, to represent the vegetable kingdom—emblematical of the progress of matter. Central in the back portion of upright wall is a niche for the organ, closed with a door the shape of the wall, which is suspended on pulleys, allowing it to slide down through the floor. Over this niche is a painted arch, on which is inscribed in golden letters, 'Peace on Earth, Good Will to Man.' Half-way from this niche on either side, is a door, entering an anteroom, shape of wall, so that when all doors are closed, this room forms a perfect recess, with suburban walls. That portion of the room facing the main hall is open full width, spanned by an arch on which is inscribed in letters of gold, 'Dedicated to Progress, Liberty, Love, and Fraternity.' A curious table belongs to the room, which opens through the middle, forming a speaker's stand, and when closed, a centertable.

"'The balance of the house is put up with rough lumber, and is to be finished as means can be obtained, in a style to correspond with the 'Spirit Room.' It is to be ceiled, and seated with movable seats, to accommodate all civil, social and moral gatherings. The outside is to be weather boarded, and a reception put on in front, running up into a tower above the house for a belfry, finished in panel work, on which will be painted spiritual characters and scenes. The entrance of reception will be arched, and inscribed, 'Liberal Hall,' with date of commencement and completion.'"

A two day's meeting marked the Dedication of the Hall. The ceremonies commenced by the President, Bro. William Stamps, reading the Report of the Building Committee, setting forth how the building was gotten up, etc.

The President then read the following

DEDICATION CEREMONY.

In the presence of the visible and the invisible assembly, we, the Spiritualists of San Bernardino, consecrate this house to Progress, Liberty, Love, and Fraternity.

TO PROGRESS,

that it shall ever open its portals to the march of science and intelligence in all directions, morally, socially, and intellectually.

TO LIBERTY,

that all the advocates of freedom, either for an individual, a class, a sect, or nation, may have free access to its rostrum; That liberty may be our crowning maxim, freely granting to others all the rights we demand for ourselves.

TO LOVE,

that its benign influence may harmonize all antagonisms, prompting us to carry out the divine principles of love to the erring, whose shortcomings seek to be pitied, and through sympathy to teach them to overcome their defects; that its fraternal power may cement all into a harmonious kindred of brothers.

TO FRATERNITY,

that we may recognize all mankind as relatives, having the same common origin as ourselves, and endowed by their Creator with the same inalienable "right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness;" feeling that low, misguided minds have souls bound in fraternal ties to ours, making it our imperative duty to guide them to light, truth, and happiness.

Now we resign this our offering into the protecting care of guardian spirits, an indulgent public, hoping all will take an interest in protecting it from harm; that we may always have a Liberal Hall; that even little boys and girls may take an interest in the truths that may be uttered from time to time, which shall tend to unfold their natures into true womanhood and manhood.

To the divine principles engraven in gold on the bow of promise spanning the entrance to this room (Progress, Liberty, Love, and Fraternity), this hall is now dedicated, and we now await the response.

RESPONSE ON BEHALF OF OUR GUARDIAN

[The response was to be delivered by Sister Anna Denton Cridge, but bodily infirmity, which was much regretted by all, prevented, hence, she wrote the response, and it was read by Bro. D. N. Smith.]

"A free hall—not a church or chapel; not a temple or tabernacle; not a house of God, but a house builded and dedicated to humanity. Very simple that; very easily understood nothing mysterious about it; dedicated to principle and every good purpose, to lectures or lessons on any subject that is interesting and beneficial to the community. We think of that with great zest and satisfaction, and just here the question arises, 'What is this Spiritualism that expresses itself thus simply?' We answer, It is the religion of humanity; it moves, it speaks; there is fire in its eye. Its blood circulates, and walks among you to-day a living presence. Suppose the Rochester rappings had occurred eighteen hundred years ago, made a few demonstrations and then ceased with the Fox family, and there had been nothing more, even as Christianity was introduced by Jesus performing a few miracles, and then all manifestations dying with him and his disciples, you would say, and truly, that's a dead religion. Spiritualism points to no dead one, to no authority, to no individual, to no lawgiver,—a mouthpiece for Jehovah, to no life or printed book, to no priest or prelate, but to facts—spiritual facts,—living facts, occurring here now and to-day, all of which every one can become cognizant of. These facts prove to us that there is no death; that our friends who have passed away yet live, and love, and enjoy. No blind faith is needed, no sayings of any living or dead person, or of eighteen hundred years ago, but only the evidence of your own senses,—your own judgment. Here is a living religion, that walks into your houses, sits down at your firesides, takes the vacant chair beside you, and whispers, 'There is no death.' This fact is the corner-stone,—the foundation of this living religion. There is no death. Every soul can become satisfied of the truth of this, in, by, and through themselves. No need to swallow the Bible, the Mormon books, Wesley's sermons, Adam Clarke's commentaries, or any other Bibles or books, sermons or commentaries, whether Mohammedan, Hindoo, Jew, or Gentile, but in your own families, or alone, you can know that the dead live, or rather, that to the spirit, there is no death; that the father or mother whom we have loved, are still near; that the little child whose supposed death wrung our hearts to agony, still liveth, and is often near us; that the little feet patter on the floor, as of yore; that the kiss of love is given, and the fond embrace, just as when with us in the body. Where is the victory! O Grave, where is thy victory!"

"Friends, let us look at this religion of Spiritualism a little further; look at it as we would at any subject requiring a little common sense. Suppose by investigation you establish the fact that there really is no death—what then? what naturally follows? Why, we want to know the nature and character of the Spirit World. What is life beyond the grave? now, how shall you know how to get the information you desire? We answer, By talking with the travelers who have explored that country. Inquire of your friends now residing and traveling there, friends whose word you can believe—do this, and you will all concur in one simple, beautiful fact, that life hereafter, is one of endless progression. Now, is not this a simple, easily understood, common sense religion? No death, and eternal progression,—growing better and better forever. This is the new religion in a nutshell, and we rejoice to see our house dedicated to its service.

ANNA DENTON CRIDGE.

Response in behalf of the citizens, by Q. S. Sparks, Esq., who delivered a very able and eloquent address, dwelling principally upon the principles of civil progress and liberty.

Adjourned.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Lecture by Bro. J. D. Potter, on the subjects to which the hall was dedicated, which was listened to with interest.

EVENING SESSION.

Lyceum conference. Subject: What Good has Spiritualism Done? Opening discourse by Bro Thomas A. Garey, followed by Bro. W. W. Mapy and others.

SUNDAY MORNING SESSION, MAY 7TH.

Lecture at 10 o'clock, A. M., by Mrs. Gore. Subject: Harmonial Philosophy.

SUNDAY AFTERNOON SESSION.

Lecture at 2 o'clock, P. M., by Bro. Thomas A. Garey. Subject: Modern Spiritualism, its Birth, Rise, and Progress, which was well received by a large, attentive, intelligent, and appreciative audience.

SUNDAY EVENING SESSION.

The ceremonies concluded with a Public Circle, witnessed by an audience which tried the cubic capacity of the house.

A great interest is now awakened in this community, and a great and unprecented inquiry is manifest. Our great want now is test mediums, of the first quality. We need the phenomena here now, as much as it was needed twenty or more years ago at Rochester, New York. We feel that good test mediums would be well repaid for a visit to Los Angelos and San Bernardino.

The friends of progress here are as a rule poor as regards this world's goods, but have large and liberal hearts, which coupled with the great inquiring interest of the public, would well repay the good brother or sister who would be pleased to make us a visit.

Yours for the truth,

THOMAS A. GAREY.

Los Angelos, Cal., June 1, 1871.

TESTIMONY OF MRS. WILCOXSON.

To the many who have written me for information, and the numerous readers of the JOURNAL, I would impart the following testimony:

Having long desired an opportunity to test the reality of spirit photography, I yesterday obtained a sitting with Mr. A. D. Willis, whose card has already appeared in the JOURNAL. At the first trial nothing unusual appeared. At the second, the same result. At the third, I received a fine, unmistakable likeness of my son-in-law, Dr. A. C. Stiles, now nearly three years a resident of the Summer Land.

It is just and proper for me to state that Mr. Willis could know nothing of my domestic relations, did not know I had married daughters, did not, most certainly, possess a likeness of Dr. A. C. Stiles, but was totally ignorant of the whole thing, according to my best knowledge. And I herewith give my solemn oath to the genuineness of the picture.

It is nothing more nor less than a true picture of a disembodied spirit.

Let the world scoff, let bigots rave, let critical, suspicious, never-to-be-satisfied Spiritualists insinuate their "may-be's"—to me this is overwhelming evidence which cannot be refuted.

Now, let me ask, why do not investigators give this splendid artist his own quiet, necessary conditions, instead of rushing upon him with their ten thousand impertinent remarks, destroying all the harmony of those fine, subtle currents upon which the great success depends? Mr. Willis has left his gallery simply because he could not control it, but was constantly annoyed by excitable, controversial, aggressive, and selfish persons, which prevented that perfect system of good order and quiet invariably requisite for any picture. How strange that thoughtless, eager, and exacting minds will thus ruin our finest discoveries.

Give Mr. Willis what in justice and reason he requires, and in a short time he will astonish the world, and prove to millions now bereaved, the blessed truth of spirit presence, and their undying love and guardianship.

During the trial in which I received the spirit picture, I distinctly saw in vision some of my controlling band, my dear daughter, the Doctor's wife, and other friends grouped just back of me, but only the Doctor appeared on the plate.

It is but just and proper for me here to say that Dr. A. C. Stiles was a highly educated and successful physician, one of the finest clairvoyant, prophetic, test and inspirational mediums of this or any other age. Of all this I lived to gain the most astonishing proof. For years he was subject to a most agonizing heart complaint, by which he often was swept away, and appeared as if the spirit had truly departed. No pulse, no respiration, no beating of the heart, but all still and cold as the lifeless form. Many a time have I assisted, with the noble Indian spirits who had joined our band, in calling back the suffering spirit, only to hear him plead we would let him go, for he was so free in that world of harmony and peace. His fine susceptibilities made him a special instrument of the spirit world, and many times would those teachers of truth and justice rebuke the stiff-necked and unprincipled persons who came in his way. Thus he became a minister of judgment, a sort of recording angel, whom these hollow-hearted mortals could not love, consequently they both hated and feared him.

Like many a noble-hearted medium in our land, I firmly believe he passed away a martyr to those poisonous waves of psychological hate and treachery which are even now rolling in upon the lives of all noble, true and devoted men and women of our angelic dispensation. But a number of times in returning from the deep death trance in which he had lain, he told us of the meeting with his brother, his dear child and beloved friends, and testified to the reality of spirit-life. And now, said he, more especially on one occasion, addressing himself to me:

"I will surely return, and by some means, if possible, convince you beyond a doubt; I feel—I know I can!"

It is done! oh, glorious thought! Gone before us, there to perfect an immortal ministry—there to continue his work of love—there to reach down to us the life-restoring balm—still the true physician, the true teacher, the compassion of translated sages and saviors—saved from the cruel envy, the deadly hate; victorious in death, triumphant over all doubt, suspicion and injustice; home at last with those who love him!

Remember it, oh, suffering fellow-mediums! we shall reach that higher mansion ere long.

Chicago, Ill.

Original Poetry.

Written for the Religio-Philosophical Journal.

PAT'S DREAM OF HEAVEN.

GIVEN THROUGH THE MEDIUMSHIP OF MRS. WHITE.

I dramed I wint to Hiven one night,
And knocked at the big white gate,
And the good St. Peter he opened it,
But he towld me I'd haf to wait
Waite he looked for me name in the howly book,
And when he had found it there
He bade me come in, though he towld me plain
That men comin' that way was rare.
I axed him how was business now,
And he twirled the golden kay,
And answered he had very little to do,
So few ever came that way.
So I shtopped a bit to chat wid him,
And I axed could I look around.
He said, "Oh, yes, as ye've once got in,
Ye're free to the whole uv the ground;
Free to walk by the River uv Life,
To rist in the Mansions uv Light,
To shtand in the Temple not made by hands,
Wid the sun-burst uv glory bright."
I seen the Apostles a mendin' their nets,
And I axed them "what need uv thim now?"
And the howliest light shone round about
Each howly Apostle's brow,
As they answered, "Our nets must be shtrong indeed
For to light men's sowls away
From the bogs uv doubt: they are clinging in
To the light uv the perfect day."
I saw the martyrs uv olden times,
The saints and the angels fair,
And millions and millions uv young spalpeens,
All playing together there;
And Mary the Mither, wid love in her eyes,
Looked down on each little childe,
And the blessed Tacher was tacking them
So gintle and undefiled.
But away in a corner I heard a noise—
I thought 'twas a bit uv a row;
So I loosed my shillaiah; "Bagorra," sez I,
"If it's fightin', I'll jist show 'em how!"
But whin I dhrew nearer, I heard them shpake,
And Pathrick a tellin' aloud
A shtory of Joseph the Carpenter,
To a listenin' bit uv a crowd.
Now, Joseph, it seems, was a good-natured sowl,
And what he was towld he believed,
And many's the friend on his recommend
By Peter had been received;
But Peter at last found this wouldn't do,
So he towld to the Carpenter Joe,
That no more friends on his recommend
Inside uv the gate shou d go.
This what does Joseph the Carpenter do
But, bein' so deft at his thrade,
He wint to work wid hammer and plane,
And a long, shtrong ladder he made,
And thrustin' it out uv a window high,
Afore they knowed what he was about
He was "anakin'" his friends by the dozens in,
And that was what made the route.
And Paul the Preacher, the earnest heart,
Had found out what was goin' on,
And he was tellin' the shtory shtrange
To Matthew and Mark and John.
And Peter the door-keeper left his place
And dhrew near and listened, too,
Till he 'waxed very wroth. "Now, Joseph," sez he,
"I've had too much throuble wid you;
Let me hear no more of these wicked pranks,
Or we'll have a council uv war,
And see if there's no way of makin' you
Abide by the common law.
Way, we'll have you cast out, as our inimy
The Dhragon was, long ago,
And then you must wander a thousand years
In darkness and death, you know."
This Joseph the Carpenter bowed and said,
"Is it turnish' me out ye mane?
Shure, I'll go at once if you think it best,
And niver a word I'll complain;
But a man has a right to his family, Paul,"
Here he winked his eye and smiled,
"And 'twould break up your whole institution shure
If I take my wife and child."
Then all the Apostles took up their nets,
And silently walked away;
And Peter moved off a scratchin' his head
Wid the ind uv the golden kay:
And Joseph the Carpenter whistled a tune—
I thought 'twas a bit uv a joke,
But I feared to laugh, so I made up my mind
That 'twas all a dream—and I woke.

New York.

RECENT PUBLICATIONS.

Press Comments.

THE BHAGAVT-GEETA: OR DIALOGUES OF KREESHNA AND ARJOON. Translated from the original, in the Sanskreet, or Ancient Language of the Brahmans. By Charles Wilkins. Chicago: RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE. pp. 120.

This translation was first published in 1785, under the patronage of the celebrated Warren Hastings, Governor-General of the East India Company. Columbus discovered the New World, but Sir Wm. Jones discovered the Old—that vast world of unique, antique literature, no one knows how old, which still lives in that most vital of languages, the Sanscrit. Not unworthy to be named with the prodigious scholar and world-benefactor, just mentioned, is the translator of these fragmen's from the ancient Hindoo Scriptures. The Theology of Brahmaism is a sort of infinite Spiritualism. Its primal idea is Intelligence. To know, is life. To see is to be. Contemplation is the way of Salvation. Absorption into the Infinite, the Absolute, the Imperturbable, the Unknowable—is the summit of blessedness. Brahminism is one moment monotheistic, the next polytheistic. By turns all the Gods appear supreme. There is something quite enormous in the old Aryan Mythology—huge and grand and awful, as their own Himalayan Mountain ranges; and not seldom, it must be admitted, do their topmost peaks seem gilded with the beauty and glory of the, to them but dimly revealed Light of the world. This little book is well worth buying and reading. The following extract is from the Display of the Divine Nature in the outward Universe:

"I see thee, difficult to be seen, shining on all sides with light immeasurable, like the ardent fire or glorious sun. Thou art the Supreme Being, incorruptible, worthy to be known! Thou art prime supporter of the universal orb! Thou art the never-failing and eternal guardian of religion! Thou art from all beginning, and I esteem the Pooroosh. I see thee without beginning, without middle, without end; of valor infinite; of arms innumerable; the sun and moon thy eyes; thy mouth a flaming fire, and the whole world shining with thy reflected glory! The space between the heavens and the earth is possessed by thee alone, and every point around: the three regions of the universe, O mighty spirit! behold the wonders of thy awful countenance with trouble in their minds. Of the celestial bands, some I see fly to thee for refuge; whilst some, afraid, with joined hands sing forth thy praise. The Maharshees, holy bands, hail thee, and glorify thy name with adorning praises. The Roodras, the Adeetyas, the Vasoos, and all those beings the world esteemeth good; Aswcen and Koomar, the Maroots and the Oushmabas; the gandharvs and the Yakshas, with the holy tribes of Soors, all stand gazing on thee, and all alike amazed! The worlds, alike with me, are terrified to behold thy wondrous form gigantic; with many mouths and eyes; with many arms, and legs, and breasts; with many bellies, and with rows of dreadful teeth! Thus as I see thee, touching the heavens, and shining with such glory; of such various hues, with widely-opened mouths, and bright expanded eyes, I am disturbed within me; my resolution faileth me, O Veeshnoo! and I find no rest! Having beheld, on thy dreadful teeth, and gazed on thy countenance, emblem of Time's last fire, I know not which way I turn! I find no peace! Have mercy, then, O God of Gods! thou mansion of the universe! The sons of Dhreetarashtra, now, with all those rulers of the land, Bheeshma, Dron, the son of Soot, and even the fronts of our army, seem to be precipitating themselves hastily into thy mouths, discovering such frightful rows of teeth! whilst some appear to stick between thy teeth with their bodies sorely mangled. As the rapid streams of full-flowing rivers roll on to meet the ocean's bed; even so these heroes of the human race rush on towards thy flaming mouths. As troops of insects, with increasing speed, seek their own destruction in the flaming fire; even so these people, with swelling fury, seek their own destruction. Thou involvest and swallowest them altogether, even unto the last, with thy flaming mouths; whilst the whole world is filled with thy glory, as thy awful beams, O Veeshnoo, shine forth on all sides! Reverence be unto thee, thou most exalted! Deign to make known unto me who is this God of awful figure! I am anxious to learn thy source, and ignorant of what thy presence here portendeth.

Written for the Religio-Philosophical Journal.

QUESTIONS ANSWERED.

By D. G. Mosher.

Wm. W. Campbell, in the JOURNAL of June 31, asks:

1st: "What is the difference between mind and matter? If mind is not substance, what is it?"

Would it not be as philosophical to ask if nothing is not something, what is it? Under orthodoxy, in connection with the doctrine that God made all things out of nothing, it might be considered a fair question; but philosophically whatever is capable of producing motion or life, action either directly or indirectly, is substance, however refined or sublimated such animating or life-giving substance or element may be.

The inertia of matter, whether organized or unorganized, is overcome only by contact with matter in motion, and this moving animating or life-giving power, receives its impulse from still other and more refined substance in motion, and thus onward infinitely, and it will require just as much labor and research to prove that mind is not substance, as for Brother Francis to find the Orthodox God.

Our physical bodies are animated by a pervading life-giving organized form, improperly called the spiritual body, and this "spiritual body" in proportion as it is more refined, is even more substantial than the physical counterpart. The spiritual form is animated and intellectualized by a still superior and more refined form, thus onward infinitely.

Second question. "What is heat, and is it not the cause of all life and motion?"

Answer. Heat is but one of the numberless forms of matter in existence, and subserves an important part in the animal and mental economy. As well might it be said that electricity or any of the distinct gaseous elements are "the cause of all life and motion."

Third question. "Is space a substance?"

The word space or void in "the celestial philosophy" of the "second spiritual dispensation," has no meaning. All space (?) is occupied by all forms of matter in existence.

Fourth question. "If man came from the lower animals, would that be any proof that he has a spirit or soul?"

Answer. No animated being can exist without an animating counterpart or soul.

Fifth question. "Is there any matter in the universe different from the matter of this earth?"

Answer. A grain of sand contains all forms and degrees of forms of matter in existence.

This may appear absurd, but with a fair hearing I shall prove this to be a fact to those of good philosophic capacity, who seek the evidence.

In answering these questions, I have not thought of books or the teachings of men.

Mosherville, Mich., June 6th, 1871.

Take Notice.

BROTHER JONES—Dear Sir:—I wish through the columns of your widely circulated JOURNAL, to call the attention of those having in charge the interests of Children's Progressive Lyceums and Spiritual Association in the State of New York, to the published call for the Eighth National Convention, to be held at Troy, New York, on September 12th, and the three following days.

According to the terms of that call, "Each active State organization of Spiritualists shall be entitled to one delegate for each fractional fifty members of such organization, and of each local Society and Progressive Lyceum within such State. Each active local Society and Lyceum of any State, which has no general association, shall be entitled to one delegate for each fractional fifty members."

It will be observed, this National Convention is to be composed of delegates elected by the State Associations, where is one; otherwise by the respective local organizations.

The New York Spiritualist Association is to hold its fourth annual session at Leroy, Saturday and Sunday, September 2nd and 3rd, and in accordance with the above requirements, will at that time elect delegates as set forth in that call, and in order to do so understandingly and acceptably, all Associations and Lyceums in this State, are earnestly requested to report to I. I. Clum, Esq., Secretary, Rochester, N. Y., previous to September 1st, the whole number of members, with the names of members to be selected as such delegates.

It is very desirable that all sections of the Empire State should be represented by delegate in the Eighth Convention, and to that end, we invite Spiritualists from all parts of the State to forward to I. C. English, Treasurer, Batavia, the membership fee of one dollar, that opportunity may be given to select members from various parts of the State as delegates.

For the information of many, it may be proper here to add, that this State Association was organized at Rochester, in 1867,—Warren Chase, President; that he was re-elected in 1868, at Buffalo, at which time a missionary work was inaugurated, based upon a membership fee of one dollar; that this membership fee is pledged almost exclusively to that purpose, and to this fund we invite contributions from all parts of the State.

J. W. SHAVER, Pres't. N. Y. State Ass'n.

Byron, N. Y., June 14, 1871.

American Spiritualist please copy.

Grand Union Picnic.

The Children's Progressive Lyceum, of Cleveland, Ohio, extends to all sister lyceums a friendly greeting, and requests their assistance in a great project. It is our purpose to gather together as many of the lyceums in Ohio as possible, and spend a day in social enjoyment that those who are engaged in this beautiful work may become better acquainted with each other, and so be able to work more in unison, and to devise means to further the great cause of enlightenment for the youth of our age, to emancipate them from the religious trammels of the past, that they may grow in physical strength and spiritual beauty, and become instrumental in the advancement of human progress.

For this great purpose we invite all the lyceums in the State of Ohio to join us in a Grand Union Picnic about the last of August or first of September, as is most convenient for them. Suitable accommodations will be in readiness for them and such delegations from other States as may wish to be present, and if they will but assist us by their numbers and their talents, a demonstration will be made worthy the glorious cause represented. Several prominent speakers will be engaged.

We wish to make this the best demonstration of the kind ever made since Spiritualism dawned upon the world to redeem it from bigotry and superstition, to convince mortals of their immortality, and restore to the arms of sorrowing, despairing mourners their loved ones made better, purer by their change from this sin-tempting world to the sinless one above.

Very respectfully we solicit replies from the various lyceums, stating their wishes in regard to the programme for the day, and, we hope, assuring us of their presence, for without their hearty co-operation our plan will prove a failure.

We have none too much time to make the necessary preparations, and so request immediate answers, and will gladly furnish all information required.

Earnestly hoping our plan will meet the approbation of all lyceum lovers, we leave its success with them.

Address all communications to C. I. Thacher, Conductor C. P. L., 136 Branch St., or Emma Allen, 247 St. Clair St., Cleveland, Ohio.

Exeter Hall! Exeter Hall!

HAVE YOU READ EXETER HALL

The following are extracts from a few of the notices of Exeter Hall, the Theological Romance:—

"The plot and passion in Exeter Hall show an experienced hand in their delineation. Exeter Hall proves that the author has something to say and knows how to say it."—[Public Opinion, London, England.

"It is indeed a wonderful book."—[New York Mail.

"We commend it to the widest popular approval."—[Banner of Light, Boston.

"We have no hesitation in declaring this a great work."—[Universe, New York.

"The book is well and powerfully written. * * * The most scorching work ever published in America since the 'Age of Reason.'"—[Liberal, Chicago.

"One of the most exciting romances of the day."—[Demorest's Magazine, New York.

"Convincingly illustrative of the errors of Theology."—[Investigator, Boston.

"The humane and charitable tendencies of the book must receive the approbation of every friend of humanity."—[Daily Telegraph, Toronto, Canada.

Price, 60 cents. Postage, 4 cents.

For sale, wholesale and retail, by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 187 & 189 South Clark st. Chicago.

UNDERHILL ON MESMERISM.

WITH

Criticisms on its Opposers,

AND A REVIEW OF HUMBUGS AND HUMBUGGERS, WITH PRACTICAL INSTRUCTIONS FOR EXPERIMENTS IN THE SCIENCE—FULL DIRECTIONS FOR USING IT AS A REMEDY IN DISEASE—HOW TO AVOID ALL DANGER,

THE PHILOSOPHY OF ITS CURATIVE POWERS;

How to develop a good Clairvoyant

THE PHILOSOPHY OF

SEEING WITHOUT EYES.

THE PROOFS OF IMMORTALITY DERIVED FROM THE UNFOLDING OF MESMERISM—EVIDENCE OF MENTAL COMMUNION WITHOUT SIGHT OR SOUND, BETWEEN BODIES FAR APART IN THE FLESH—COMMUNION OF SAINTS, OR WITH THE DEPARTED.

BY SAMUEL UNDERHILL, M. D., L. L. D.,

LATE PROFESSOR OF CHEMISTRY, ETC., ETC.

Price $1.25. Postage 12 cents. The Trade supplied. Address S. S. Jones, Chicago, Ill.

PROF. HOWE'S

SEVEN-HOUR SYSTEM

of

GRAMMAR.

The writer of this useful book has had a practical experience in the art of teaching of upwards of thirty years. He had long been impressed that a shorter pathway to grammar than that which led through the perplexing subtleties of the text books could be secured, and with much skill devised his "Seven-Hour system" of oral teaching. Appeals from his audiences and requests from correspondents abroad became so numerous and repeated, that he was compelled to put his ideas into print to satisfy the public demand. His discoveries in the science are many and startling, reducing the labor, in many instances, from years to minutes. The limited governing power of the Transitive Verb from 20,000 words to seven; his rotating or vibrating "S," securing syntactical agreement between the Verb and Noun; his exposition of the Subjunctive Mood and Potential Mode, with many other interesting features of the work, are not only original, but might with very great propriety be considered inspirational. These are of the utmost value to the public writer, the platform speaker, the clergyman, or the senator. Fifteen minutes attention to any one of them will protect any intelligent person from erring once in a lifetime!

The work is got up in pamphlet form of about 50 pages, strong and neat covers, with large plain type, containing everything within, in its simplest terms, to constitute the Practical Grammarian. It is not sold for the value of the paper, print, or binding; but for the seven-hour grammatical edition contained within.

Price:—cloth $1.00. Paper 50 cents. For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 187 & 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

19 al tf.

EMPRESS!

THE "EMPRESS" and other Rubber Goods

FOR

The Use of Ladies and Gentlemen.

Send stamp for circulars. Address: "EMPRESS" Co.

139 Clark St., Room 13 Chicago.

Spencer's [illegible] and Negative Powders. For sale by [illegible]

MEDIUMS'

DIRECTORY.

The Religio-Philosophical Journal being an especial friend to all true mediums, will hereafter publish a complete Directory giving the place of all professional mediums, and the nature of such phases as they will affort better facilities for investigators to learn of the location of mediums, and at the same time increase their patronage. Mediums will do well to advise us from time to time that we may keep their place of residence correctly registered.

NOTE. It is a lamentable fact that some mediums so far forget their self respect as to speak evil of other mediums, not unfrequently even of those who are far their superiors. The conduct of such persons will be discouraged from this Register so soon as we have evidence conclusive of their indulgence in such unkindness.

It should be borne in mind that professional visiting mediums carry conditions with themselves—so to speak—which aid or destroy the power of spirits to control his medium visited; hence it is that one medium gives perfect satisfaction to certain persons, another but little or nothing—all having their friends, and justly so, too, and all equally honest and useful in their places.

CHICAGO.

Bangs children, 227 S. Morgan St. ‡
Mrs. Ellis Brown, 128 W. Washington St
Dr. W. Cleveland, 48 West Harrison St.*
Mrs. A. C. Hooker, 179 W. Madison St.
Dr. D. G. Dake, 211 Wabash Av., Chicago.*
Dr. E. Dwyer, 233 West Madison St. Chicago.
Dr. L. P. Grigg, 229 W. Madison street, cor. Peoria.*
Mrs. Jorgenson, Parlors 28 and 29 Honore Block ‡
Mrs. M. Jenks, 176 W. Van Buren street.*
Mrs. J. T. Lewis and wife, 73 Twenty-first.*
Dr. S. U. M. Fadden and Wife, 343 W. Madison St.*‡
Mrs. C. Moody, 196 12th street. * ‡
Mrs. A. C. Hooker, 179 W. Madison St.
Madame Ritter, 301 S. Clark St. ‡
Mrs. M. Smith, 141 n. Clinton St.*
Dr. Sargent, 76 Third Ave.*
Dr. M. L. Sherman and Wife, 306 South Clark St.*†
Dr Samuel Underhill, 189 S. Clark street.*
Mrs. E. P. Viner, 689 Indiana Ave.*
Dr. J. Wilbur, 460 W. Randolph St. *
A. D. Wills, Cor. Clark & Madison st. ¶
Mrs. M. S. Weeks, Room 69 D. Haven Block, Chicago.

BOSTON.

Dr. H. B. Storer.*†
Mrs. Julia M. Friend, 116 Harrison Ave.
Mrs. S. J. Hickney, 833 Tremont St.
Dr. Main, 220 Harrison Ave.*
Mrs. A. C. Latham, 294 Washington St.
Freeman Hatch, 8 Seaver Place.
Mrs. M. W. Leigh, 27 Salisbury St. †
Mrs. Marshall, 39 Edinboro St.
W. H. Muller, 179 W. Springfield street. ¶
Mrs. A. B. Ridings, 7 Oak St. ‡
Mrs. M. M. Hardy, 128 W. Concord St.‡
Samuel Grover, 23 Dix Place.
Mrs. F. O. Hyzer, 301 Tremont St.‡
B. O. Littlejohn, 36 Hanson street, Boston, Mass.

PHILADELPHIA.

Mrs. S. A. Anthony, S. E. Cor. of 7th and Ontcarlos
D. S. Cadwallader, 1005 Race St.
Mrs. M. J. French, 1826 Ridge Ave.
Mrs. A. Goodfellow, 415 Enterprise St.
Mrs. L. T. Mann, 249 south 12th st.*‡
Mattie B. Robinson, 2 33 Broadway Station.
Mrs. R. Reynolds, 1013 Parrish St.
Mrs. R. McNeil, 1346 Hanover St.
Mrs. Taylor, 856 North 10th St.
DeWitt C. Hough, 813 Race st ‡
Mrs. Stoddard, 813 Race St.

NEW YORK CITY.

Jennie Danforth, 84 Lexington Ave.†
Miss Blackman, 624 Tuthill, N. Y.
Mrs. H. Seymour, 146 Bleeker St.
Mrs. J. Cotton, 242 2. 31st St.
J. William Van Namee, 430 Fourth Ave.*†‡

BLOOMINGTON, ILL.

Mrs. Helen Grover.
Mrs. M. E. Gridley, 413 N. Main St. ‡
Dr. Mary Lewis, Bloomington, Ill.‡

RAVENNE CITY, N. J.

Mrs. R. Wallis.

GREEN GARDEN ILL

Mrs. Colklin.*‡

GENESEE, WIS.

Mrs. E. W. Balcom. * ‡
Mrs. F. A. Logan.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.

A. B. Severance and Mrs. J. H. S. severance. M. D. 467 Milwaukee street, Milwaukee, Wis.*‡
W. W. Herring, 135 Spring street, Milwaukee, Wis. *

ROCKFORD, ILL.

Samuel Smith, 3 s. 1st., Rockford, Ill. *
Mrs. M. J. Colton, S. Rockford, Ill. †

RICHMOND, IND.

Francis S. Haswell, 26 N. Marion street.
Dr. Samuel Maxwell, 72 s. 6th street.

SAN FRANCISCO.

Wm. H. Hatch, 126 Kearney St.

ST. CHARLES, ILL.

Mrs. Leonard Howard.*‡
D. P. Rayner, M. D.*

SAN JOSE, CAL.

Mrs. Mary S. Beach.

WHITEWATER, WIS.

Mrs. A. B. Severance.*‡

MISCELLANEOUS.

Mrs. Orvis Abbott, Minneapolis, Minnesota. *
Little Frank, Cedar Rapids, Iowa. ‡
Jonathan Allen, Geneseo, Ill.
Lydenia Atwood, Lake Mills, Wis.
Miss M. A. A. pblett, Dayton, Ohio.*
D. Atkinson, Marietta, Ohio ‡
Mrs. Jennie Adams, Box 1936, Kansas City, Mo. *
Mrs. S. M. Blair, 166 Ridge st. Newark, N. J.
Dr. H. Butler, Wellsboro, Tioga Co., Pa.*
M. K. Cassico, 155 Bank street, Newark, N. J.*
Mrs. J. F. Currier, Cincinnati, Ohio.*
Mrs. J. A. Drake, 24 Hoffman Block, Cleveland, Ohio.
J. W. Ellis, Atlanta, Ga. †
Mrs. E. K. Everal, Springfield, Mo. ‡
David B. Fuller, Davenport, Iowa. *†
Alonzo Fairchil, Schenectady, N. Y. *
J. B. Fayette, Geneva, N. Y.
Dr. B. W. Freeman, 116 Neigh st, Columbus, Ohio. *
Mrs. Wm. L. Gay, Canastota, New York. *
Dr. J. M. Holland, 206 Upper Broadway, Council Bluffs Iowa.*
Judge D. L. Hoy, Mobile, Alabama.
U. B. Hamilton, Beloit, Wis.*
Dr. R. Heal, 62 Whitehall St., Atlanta, Ga.*
Mrs. Jennie Ferris, Traveling. †
Minnie Jefferson, Traveling. †
J. W. Kenyon, Watertown, Wis.
Mr. & Mrs. O. B. Leland, Taunton, Mass. †
J. H. Nolan, Waterville, N. Y. *
Mrs. A. Nesbit, Cheesetown, Mich.*
Mrs. John D. Odell, Waterloo, N. Y. *
Dr. Abbe Lord Palmer, New Boston, Pl. *‡§
Mrs Nellie Rice, South Bend, Ind. ‡
Mrs. M. E. Nicholas, Evansville, Ind.
N. B. Starr, Port Huron, Mich. ‡
Isaac Jackson Hoag, Covington, Ind.‡
Mrs. Dr. Sarah Morris, Ill. ‡
Mrs. F. W. Stephens, east side of 4th street, between I & J, Sacramento
H. B. Stuckman, Gahanna, Ohio. ‡
Annie O. Torrey, Houston, Texas. ‡
A. Thomas, Loudon Station, Ohio.
Warren Wright, Waterloo, Seneca Co., N. Y. *
Mrs. Fanny Wheelock, Pleasanton, Kansas. ‡

* Healer.
¶ Spirit Artists.
† Psychometrist.
‡ Business and Test.
§ Will visit Sick and Dying.
Answering Sealed Letters.
Solemnizing Marriages and Attending Funerals.

ARCANA OF SPIRITUALISM.

A MANUAL OF

SPIRITUAL SCIENCE AND PHILOSOPHY

By Hudson Tuttle.

WITH PORTRAIT OF THE AUTHOR. Price $2.00; Postage 24c.

This work embodies the results of the author's researches and experience during the past twenty years, and is, without doubt, the most thorough presentation of the subject of Modern Spiritualism before the public.

Dealing, as it does, with a question in which the interest of all mankind is centered, it cannot fail to command universal attention.

While the experience of thousands will repudiate some of the conclusions the author arrives at, they will still be able to obtain much invaluable information from the book. It is a good book to place in the hands of every person who would know more of what it is that is waking the world to new hopes and aspirations, and participating a free of life beside every man's door.

 Price, $2.00; postage, 24 cents. For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

LIFE IN THE BEYOND.

BENJAMIN PETERS; an Undeveloped Spirit's History, Through E. Smith, Medium. Price, 15 cents. For sale at this office.

Health by Good Living.

BY W. W. HALL, M. D.,

Editor of Hall's "Journal of Health."

THIS book is to show how high health can be maintained and common diseases cured by "good living," which means eating with a relish the best food, prepared in the best manner.

The best food includes meats, fish, poultry, wild game, fruits, and the grains which make bread.

The best cookery preserves the natural tastes and juices.

As there can be no "good living" without a good appetite, how to get this great blessing without money and without price, is pointed out, and, it is hoped, in very clear and plain terms.

Some of the subjects treated are:—

The object of eating: Power to work: Early breakfast: Dinner-time: Luncheon: Eating "down town": What shall a man do? What shall fat men eat? How to get fat: Bad blood: Diet for the sick: Spring diseases: Children's eating: Forcing children to eat: Young ladies' Satiner: Cold feet and headache: Biliousness: A lazy liver: Mischievous tonics: The out-door air: Why are we dyspeptic? Discomfort after eating: Cold slaw: Certain cure of neuralgia: Nervous debility: Air and exercise: Food cure, etc., etc.

It tells

How to cure dyspepsia: How to cure neuralgia: How to cure biliousness: How to cure nervousness: How to cure exhaustion: How to get a good appetite: How to get lean: How to get good sleep: How to maintain high health. How to avoid disease: And all these without medicine: without money; without price.

It tells about

Luncheons and how to take them: Late dinners and how to take them: How drunkards are made at eating-houses: How girls are spoiled at boarding-schools: How health is lost: How home love is lost: How social respect is ruined: How love of dress is instilled: How young men are talked about: How bad matches are made: How good wives are made at home: How home influences purify.

Price $1.50. Postage 16 cents. For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189, So. Clark Street, Chicago, Ill.

DR. E. P. MILLER'S WORKS.

The Cause of Exhausted Vitality, or Abuses of the Sexual Function. Cloth $1,00, Postage, 12cts.

Every Young Man and every Young Woman, every Married Man and every Married Woman, Should read it.

A vast amount of suffering, as well as physical, mental and moral ruin would be prevented, if all were acquainted with the facts contained in this work and followed its excellent advice.

Vital Force, How wasted and How Preserved. Cloth $1,00, Postage 12cts; Paper Cover, 50cts, Postage, 4cts.

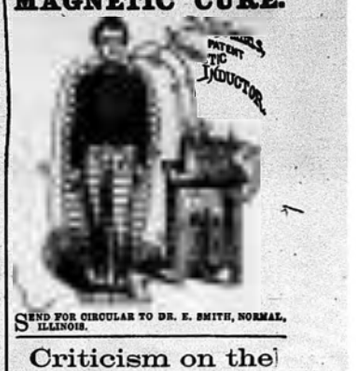
Mrs. Francis Dana Gage says: "I earnestly wish that it could be read by every mother in the country."

It is an invaluable work and should have a place in every family library.

How to Bathe, a Family Guide for the Use of Water in Preserving Health and Treating Disease.

Paper Cover, Price 40cts. Postage, 4cts

Important Truths, By Mrs. E. P. Miller, M. D.



Price, 20cts, Postage, 2cts.

This little work is written in a style adapted to children's Minds, and no parent need fear to place it in their children's hands as an opening to conversation and advice on points upon which their future health, happiness, and even life, largely depend.

THE TRADE SUPPLIED.

Address S. S. Jones, 187 & 189, South Clark Clark street, Chicago, Ill.

The Great MAGNETIC CURE.

SEND FOR CIRCULAR TO DR. E. SMITH, NORMAL, ILLINOIS.

Criticism on the THEOLOGICAL DEA EA OF DEITY,

Contrasting the Views Entertained of a Supreme Being by the Ancient Grecian Sages, with those of Moses and the Hebrew Writers; and blending Ancient Judaism, Paganism and Christianity into a Common Original.

BY M. B. CRAVEN.

12 mo., 317 pages.—Price, $1.00; postage, 16 cents.

 For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

JETS! JETS! JETS! JETS! JETS!

A New Book by Andrew Jackson Davis, ENTITLED,

"THE FOUNTAIN,

WITH JETS OF NEW MEANINGS."

ILLUSTRATED WITH ONE HUNDRED AND FORTY-TWO ENGRAVINGS.

Beautiful Paper, Fine Presswork, Superior Binding.

Price only $1.00; postage 16 cents.

This Book is Freighted with Thoughts for Men and Pictures for Children.

For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING House, 189 Clark Street, Chicago.

HESPERIA:

AN EPIC OF THE PAST AND FUTURE OF AMERICA.

By Mrs. Cora L. V. Tappan.

 PRICE: $1.75; postage, 20 cents. For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING House, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

AGENTS! READ THIS!

WE WILL PAY AGENTS A SALARY OF $20 per week and expenses, or allow a large commission, to sell our new and wonderful inventions. Address M. WAGNER & Co., Marshall, Mich.

19 al20 6m.

Religio-Philosophical Journal.

S. S. JONES, EDITOR, PUBLISHER AND PROPRIETOR.
J. R. FRANCIS, ASSOCIATE EDITOR

Office 187 and 189 So. Clark Street.

Religio-Philosophical Publishing House.

☞ All letters and communications should be addressed to S. S. JONES, 189 South Clark Street, Chicago, Illinois.

TERMS OF THE
Religio-Philosophical Journal.

$3.00 per year, $1.50—6 months, $1.—4 mo.

☞ Fifty cents for Three Months on Trial TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS.

In making remittances for subscriptions, always procure a draft on New York, or Post-Office Money Order, if possible. Where neither of these can be procured, send the money, but ALWAYS IN A REGISTERED LETTER. The registration fee has been reduced to FIFTEEN CENTS, and the present registration system has been found by the postal authorities to be virtually an absolute protection against losses by mail. All Postmasters are obliged to register letters when requested to do so.

All subscriptions remaining unpaid more than six months, will be charged at the rate of $2.50 per year.

PAPERS are forwarded until an explicit order is received by the Publisher for their discontinuance, and until payment of all arrearages is made, as required by law.

No names entered on the subscription books without the first payment in advance.

SUBSCRIBERS are particularly requested to note the expiration of their subscriptions, and to forward what is due for the ensuing year, with or without further reminder from the office.

NEWSPAPER DECISIONS.

[illegible] who takes a paper regularly from the [illegible] directed to his name or another's, or [illegible] scribed or not—is responsible for the [illegible]

[illegible] orders his paper discontinued, he must pay [illegible] or the publisher may continue to send it. [illegible] le made, and collect the whole amount,— [illegible] per is taken from the office or not.

[illegible] courts have decided that refusing to take news- [illegible] of periodicals from the post-office, or removing [illegible] them uncalled for, is PRIMA FACIE evidence of [illegible] fraud.

LOOK TO YOUR SUBSCRIPTIONS.

Upon the margin of each paper, or upon the wrapper, will be found a statement of the time to which payment has been made. For instance, if John Smith has paid to Dec. 10th, 1870, it will be mailed, "Smith J.—10 Dec.—0." The 0 stand for 1870. If he has only paid to Dec. 10th, 1869, it would stand thus: Smith J.—10 Dec.—9, or perhaps, in some cases, the last two figures for the year, as 70 for 1870, or 69 for 1869.

☞ Transmitting money to this office for the JOURNAL, should be careful to state whether it be a renewal, or a new subscription, and write all proper names plainly.

CHICAGO, JULY 8, 1871.

A SEARCH AFTER GOD.

NUMBER XLVI.

During this Search, in traversing the domains of nature, in examining those conditions of life with which a supernatural power is supposed to be connected, we have endeavored to render our position clear. True, we have offended some,—those whose ideas of God are founded on early education, or who have a nature so organized that they must pay homage to something, and who seriously believe that there exists a God, an Infinite Intelligence, that pervades every nook and corner of space. In treating this subject, we are compelled, of course, to deal in those facts and principles which we conceive to be true, and in so doing, we were under the necessity of attacking the pet theory of many. No doubt you think every branch of this subject has been discussed, and all the facts in existence brought to bear in elucidating it. Really, but one field in the Arcana of Nature has been explored, but one drop of water in the ocean of philosophy examined with a critical eye—vast fields are yet before us, but we only propose to investigate certain parts of the grand theme that has remained untouched, and then leave the subject to the consideration of a thoughtful world.

In the examination of the intricate points connected with our Search, we have endeavored to be concise, but in order that our position might be understood, we were necessarily compelled to be prolix sometimes, for a fact not clearly expressed, had better remain unmentioned.

Now, how shall we next consider this question,—in a mathematical point of view,—and how can we demonstrate by the rules thereof, that no Infinite God exists? In geometrical demonstrations, the mind is brought down to facts; and no one would have the audacity to dispute the truthfulness of the 47th proposition in Davies' Legendre because they could not comprehend the nature of the proof adduced. Then, to mathematics we will direct our attention,—but can not exactly reason as the geometrician would, or as the algebraic scholar would be compelled to do, in solving some intricate problem. All subjects may be regarded as problems. True, figures may not be employed, angles, tangents, co-tangents, may not be brought into requisition, still they are problems, and can be solved as truly as any in the higher mathematics. In the solution of this subject, we desire to reason from a mathematical standpoint, and come to a conclusion that none can dispute, and in what direction shall we proceed?

1. An Infinite God fills all space.
2. An Infinite God possesses omniscience.
3. An Infinite God possesses all power.
1. Finite man possesses limited power.
2. Finite man possesses limited wisdom.
3. Finite man fills limited space.

If God possesses all power, and finite man limited power; if the former fills all space, and the latter only limited space, in what relation do they stand? Can the former be the originator of the latter? If so, from what source did he derive strength for man? If he used himself, then he would cease to be infinite. If he imparts to man his strength, the power thus imparted is either a part of God, or he ceases at that very moment to be all-powerful! God is all powerful, or he is not. If he is constantly [illegible] himself in the fabrication or construction [illegible] beings, then the objects of his crea- [illegible] Gods on a small scale. If he uses him- [illegible], the inference will arise, that good would [illegible] therefrom, for the part of himself incorporated with matter, must be the only portion that can progress in knowledge, and how would that look, a part of God progressing—God lying in the cradle envelo[illegible] in matter, and playing with toys? Now, if God is manifested in man, in what relation to him does he stand? Why, the God part is the motive power! It is the supervising intelligence! Now, let me ask the scientists of the country to explain to me how a being perfectly organized, as God is claimed to be, can use himself without destroying his perfection? Is it not impossible to give God additional strength? Why? Because it is claimed that he possesses all power already! But man progresses, and if the God-part progresses also, it could not have been perfect when first imparted to man. But God from the very nature of things can not be manifested in man. If he is, which part is God? You can not divide the conscious element of man. Can you divide the conscious element of God? If God exists, he is complete within himself. If he is manifested in man, he is not complete within himself. Again; what object could God have in manifesting himself in each one?—being perfect, why should he originate that which is imperfect? Waste and recuperation is not a characteristic of God. If he imparts anything to man, is not that waste so far as he is concerned? Is he the same after he imparts some of his strength to us? If he is constantly manifesting himself in each one, he is constantly changing! If he uses himself in the formation of any thing, there would be a uniformity of action; on the contary, in all things there is diversity of action. We have taken up this question and critically examined it, for there are many who believe that God is manifested in all things; and we desired to convince them of the utter absurdity of such a position.

THE ORTHODOX OPINION.

1. An Infinite God fills all space,
2. Possesses infinite wisdom,
3. Can conceive,
4. Can execute his purposes,
5. Is all-powerful.

A PHILOSOPHER'S DOUBT.

Don't know positively that he can do anything, or that he exists, and the first five propositions are not sustained by the five senses.

A TRUE STATEMENT.

1. Man occupies only limited space,
2. Possesses only finite wisdom,
3. Can conceive,
4. Can execute certain purposes,
5. Possesses limited power.

NO DOUBT.

Know positively that he can do some things, and that he exists, and the first five propositions are sustained by the five senses.

1st PROPOSITION.

God, whose existence can not be established by the five senses, and whose operations only rest on supposition, is supposed to have eternally existed.

1st CONCLUSION.

Man's existence is fully established by the five senses. His operations do not rest on supposition. Can we not then more reasonably ascribe to him an eternity of existence than the former?

2nd PROPOSITION.

But God is manifested in man, and in the operations of matter—an assumption that can not be proved.

2nd CONCLUSION.

God, as you claim, is an Infinite Spirit, and always existed, and is manifested in man. Would it not be more reasonable to suppose that the spirit-germ of each individualized intelligence always existed, and that this spirit-germ is manifested in matter,—man.

3rd PROPOSITION.

But God is the moving impulse of matter,—the Soul of the Universe. This is, however, all speculation.

3rd CONCLUSION.

Man is known to control certain portions of matter. He can release its activities, use them to move the ponderous wheel, to send messages to his friends. He possesses a living soul. Is it not more reasonable to suppose that all things are under the control of real, tangible, living entities whom we know exist, than a God that the five senses have failed to recognize.

4th PROPOSITION,

God is supposed to possess all power, and control the action of matter in the formation of worlds.

4th CONCLUSION.

Man is known to posses limited power, and to control certain activities of matter, and it would me more reasonable to ascribe to him the creation of worlds than the former.

5th PROPOSITION.

It is said that God answers prayer. This statement has no foundation.

5th CONCLUSION.

Spirits residing in the higher spheres have been known to answer prayers, and to respond to the wants of the mortals of earth. Why not then ascribe to them what you do to God?

6th PROPOSITION.

All that exists in regard to God is founded on speculation,—not only in regard to his existence but his operations.

6th CONCLUSION.

Many things that exist in reference to man are founded on actual knowledge. Is it not better to have actual knowledge to reason from than speculation?

7th PROPOSITION.

It is supposed that God eternally existed.

7th CONCLUSION.

Man's existence is a tangible reality, and would it not be more consistent with reason and philosophy to ascribe to him an eternity of duration in the past, than that being whose existence rests only on supposition?

8th PROPOSITION.

God is said to be a spirit, present in every part of the universe—infinite. This is merely an opinion, without any foundation to rest upon.

8th CONCLUSION.

Spirits do exist, present in certain localities of the universe, and why not ascribe a controlling influence to them instead of a God whose existence is merely an opinion?

9th PROPOSITION.

It is said that God made this earth,—that through his instrumentality worlds and systems of worlds are created. All guess-work.

9th CONCLUSION.

You could convince an ignorant negro that God made Crosby's Opera House, Chicago; but when his ignorance vanished, he would find man its builder. God vanishes in connection with any work the moment you understand it. As the negro found man the architect of Crosby's Opera House, so you will find individualized intelligences the architects of this earth, when you have progressed sufficiently.

10th PROPOSITION.

The idea is universal that there exists a God as the architect of the universe, and that he is eternal, having always existed in the past. This, however, has no tangible evidence.

10th CONCLUSION.

The idea is universal that man lives hereafter. This is an actual fact. Would it not be more reasonable to ascribe all things to that which we know can act, than that which only exists in the imagination?

11th PROPOSITION.

God eternally existed,—that is, has always existed in the past,—exists in the present, and will always exist in the future. This is all conjecture.

11th CONCLUSION.

Man exists in the present, will always exist in the future. This is an acknowledged fact. Would it not be more reasonable to conclude that he has had an eternity of existence in the past than the God of whom we know nothing?

We leave the above eleven propositions and conclusions to the consideration of the thoughtful mind, and below give the views of Rev. Dr. Hedge, author of "Reason and Religion," on Pantheism. Some ideas therein contained the student should be familiar with.

Pantheism is a name of bad repute in theology, where it passes for something akin to Pantheism, and a good deal more dangerous. The doctrine is of ancient origin, and many noble souls have held it boldly.

In 1720, the English Deist, Toland, in a defense of Pantheism, expressed his faith in a "God, the creative and ruling power of the universe, distinguished by reason alone from the universe itself."

If this statement of Pantheism be accepted, we have in it a theory discriminated from Theism proper by the immanence in nature of the Supreme Power but not less widely separated from Atheism by the acknowledgement of a power to which the title of God is applied. Toland, so far as we know, was the first to assume the name of Panthelst, but he was by no means the first who held the Pantheistic faith. Nor does his definition embrace all the varieties of views which might, with equal propriety, be designated as Pantheism.

The Pantheist Schelling declared that the Pantheists, so far from maintaining, as has been asserted, that the sum of sensible objects is God, contend that the very reason of their being objects of sense is their privation of Deity.

Giordano Bruno, unquestionably a Pantheist, distinctly acknowledges God as the author of Nature, which, he maintains, must have had a beginning and a cause. He calls Nature the mirror in which God is imaged.

Scotus Erigena, that wonderful intellect which lighted the ninth century, is commonly regarded as a Pantheist; but he constantly and earnestly enforced the distinction between created and uncreated.

Even Spinoza emphasizes causality in God, and distinguishes between the infinite and the finite.

Pantheism is theistic, not atheistic in its conception of cause and effect. It puts the universe as secondary, as effect—and God as primary, as cause. It confesses a God supra-mundane but not super-mundane. And here comes in one principal point of difference between Theism and Pantheism.

The popular Theism supposes a God existing outside of the universe which he has made—a Creator who once in time called a universe into being, and has been ever since a spectator and director of its on-goings, having no substantial connection with it, but only a providential and governmental one.

The God of Pantheism is immanent, interfused, all-penetrating, the ground of all dependence, the life of all life. It is true that the view of many unquestionable Theists coincides with this Pantheistic conception of God. But this is only one stage. That which really and fundamentally distinguishes Pantheism, as represented by Spinoza, from Theism, as usually understood, is not the doctrine of the one substance, but the doctrine of the one sole agent—the denial of any other agency than that of the one God, as well in the spiritual as in the phenomenal world.

Spinoza not only denies freedom of will to man, but denies to man substantial existence. He considers the human mind to be part of the infinite intellect of God; so that when we say the human mind perceives this or that, we say nothing else but that God,—not in his infinity, but as explained by the nature of the human mind, or as constituting the essence of the human mind,—has this or that idea. In other words, there is no such entity as the human mind or soul; what we call such is but a thought of God. We accordingly find it a marked distinction between Theism and Pantheism, that the latter does not at all recognize that attribute of Deity which Theism expresses by the term Lord. The God of Pantheism is in no sense Lord, for he has no intelligent subjects—the mind or soul of man being only one of his own thoughts. But, to the Theist, God-head is lordship. Therefore it appears that however the Theistic and Pantheistic conceptions of God in nature might be harmonized, their conceptions of man and his relations to God must remain wide asunder. The one sees in man a moral agent, the other, an irresponsible expression of divinity.

Spinoza is the typical exponent of Pantheism. His system, given to the world 200 years ago, remains to this day the most thorough and complete of all Pantheistic statements. His influence upon thought has been truly immense. To him Goethe owed more than to any other mind, and acknowledged his obligations with enthusiastic gratitude.

Schleiermacher, in his Discourses on Religion, bids us sacrifice reverently to the manes of the holy outcast Spinoza, who was full of religion and of the Holy Ghost. Spinoza's ontology supposes a single and whole substance, comprising all that is, and of which all phenomena and all finite existences are modes and affections. Therefore he is said to have turned the evil out of the world. There is no room for his Satanic Majesty in a universe which is all an expression of God. He says that in the nature of things nothing is contingent, but all things are determined from the necessity of the divine nature to a certain mode of existence and operation. You perceive this takes away all idea of the free-agency of man, and, theoretically, all human responsibility. "Experience as well as reason teaches," he affirms, "that men believe they are free only because they are conscious of their actions and ignorant of the causes by which they are determined."

The great weakness of Pantheism as expressed by Spinoza, consists in the relaxation of the moral sense consequent on referring all action, good or bad, to God, as the one immediate and direct cause of all. Its great strength is the quickened sense it gives us of the all-pervading and immediate presence of God. It has changed the divine omnipresence from a cold and unmeaning dogma to a fact of consciousness. Thus it has given to Nature a new soul. Wordsworth is the truest exponent of this sentiment among the English poets. In all Greek literature there is nothing which embodies it. Greeks and Romans painted no landscapes like ours, suggestive of mystery within and beyond. The soul of Nature is interpreted by Pantheism.

But Pantheism and Theism are not of necessity contradictory terms. They should be complementary. Theism gives us the Holy Person, the providential care, the moral will; Pantheism gives us the diffused presence, the all-pervading life, the divine nearness in the outspread landscape. To Pantheism belongs the world of nature; to Theism the world of spirits.

[To be continued.]

The Hollow Globe.

"'The Hollow Globe; or The World's Agitator and Renovator,' is the title of a badly-written mass of balderdash. H. Snow, 319 Kearney street, has it."

This little notice taken from the San Francisco Bulletin of June 2nd, seems to demand more than a passing notice. Its significance appears to be more of a general than of a personal character. It aims a blow not only at the authors of this work, which had not been examined sufficiently to spell the title correctly, but at all the rank and file who have dared to acknowledge the Spiritualistic idea. Every man or woman who has had sufficient independence of mind to admit that any portion of their thoughts upon any subject, were given them by spirit inspiration, will come under the ban of this renowned book reviewer, who is doubtless no better qualified to sit in judgment upon the real merits of this work, than the priestly council who condemned Galileo were to comprehend his scientific demonstrations.

All ages of the world have furnished this kind of dead and rotten fish, that float down the current of public opinion. If such a man had published the official organ of the Jewish Sanhedrin, it would have overflowed with vile slanders concerning the innocent Nazarene, and such an one would have been active in raising the money and in holding all the necessary conferences with his betrayers. He would have ran and gathered the thorns for his brow, and poured out his loathesome saliva upon his person, and procured the hammer and spikes to have fastened the hands and feet of this man to the cross, whose only offense has been the utterance of some new ideas.

Any of the vile rabble who cried out "Crucify him! release Barabbas," could just as easily say "Spiritualistic balderdash." It would require no more intelligence or research to say the one than the other. They never pretended to examine into the truth or falsity of the teachings of the man they helped to slay; they never said a word concerning that matter—they had no time to bother their heads with that kind of "balderdash." Moses was their man every time—they wanted no other. Their cry was, "Hurrs for Moses!—down with Jesus!—away with him!"

There have always been this kind of human vultures, who scent their natural food from a great distance, and gorge themselves upon the dead carcasses of a bygone age, and of course when they open their mouths, they emit a noisome effluvia. They have so long feasted upon stale intellectual meat, that has first been masticated by some other organs, that they know not the taste of that fresh, inspirational nutriment that comes direct from the great fountain of universal intelligence.

In order that there should be no blank pages in the history of men, and that human life might exhibit itself in all its different phases, there had to be individuals who would gather kindling wood, to light the fires that burned the martyrs; and those who held the torches by which the various cruel tortures were inflicted in the dark cells of the Inquisition. No doubt our astute critic would have been admirably qualified to have filled such an honorable position, and would have gladly attended to any such duties had he been there at the proper time.

It was not expected that "The Hollow Globe" would escape the slime usually disgorged by persons of this character, and we are agreeably surprised by the general tone of candor with which this novel work, coming from such a source, has been noticed thus far by the secular press.

The book is before the world, and it must stand or fall upon its own intrinsic merits. It has dared to attack, and has vigorously maintained its arguments against theories which seem to be well established, and which are endorsed by the most eminent scientific men of the present day, and yet no one seems to venture a reply.

We can safely say that the central idea presented in this work, is far better sustained than many of those which have ultimated successfully, and which have been demonstrated as truth. Ideas must first be presented by some one before they can be acted upon. The authors of this book have had the candor to confess the real source of their ideas, being fully conscious that that their value can not be depreciated by this fact, notwithstanding all the prejudice that exists against any such mode of communication.

"Could Not Rule Me nor Use Me."

W. F. Jamieson, in the Crucible makes the above charge against the JOURNAL. We pity him. Not knowing of any use we could put him to (we have none but reliable and truthful employes about our office), and not wishing to control him (we have better use for our time, and beg pardon of our readers for using our columns to even refer to him), we have never passed a word directly or indirectly, orally or in writing, nor in any other manner, since we resumed the publication of the JOURNAL, in regard to "ruling" or "controlling" him, nor upon any subject whatever.

It is his habitual practice to denounce the JOURNAL through the numerous newspapers that he has been and is the Northwestern and Corresponding editor of, as well as at all public and private gatherings.

His papers are so short-lived, and have so few readers, that his vindictive attacks do us but little good. But as small favors are thankfully received, and larger ones in proportion, we only beg of him to never say any good of the JOURNAL, and we will be satisfied.

In conclusion, we will refer him to "My Uncle Toby's" parting words to the fly that had so briskly buzzed around him.

Spirit Artist—Oil Paintings.

Those who have dearly beloved friends in spirit-life (no matter if they passed away in infancy), whose likenesses they would like to have as they look now, will do well to write to J. B. Fayette, Spirit Artist, Oswego, New York, giving him the name, age at the time of passing to spirit-life, and length of time since.

Bro. Fayette is a good artist. His work is executed in oil colors, and of the ordinary size of bust paintings.

His terms are ten dollars, which should be remitted with the order. He is an honest man, and if the spirit does not appear sufficiently distinct for him to paint the likeness, he will refund the money.

We have one, of our spirit daughter, Lavinia, now over twenty-one years of age, who remained upon this plane of life only nine weeks, which we value very highly.

Our friends who desire to see her likeness, as well as many other valuable spirit paintings, will do well to call at the reception rooms of the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL, where they will always be welcome.

Mrs. Laura Cuppy Smith.

This lady has delivered several lectures before the First Society of Spiritualists in this city, and has awakened new interest in their ranks. She is one of our most gifted and highly inspired lecturers, and is capable of holding the attention of any audience. On last Sabbath evening, for the first time, no admittance fee was charged; we hope this arrangement will be continued. There are in this city hundreds of Spiritualists, who, if called upon, would contribute freely to aid in defraying the necessary expenses for hall and lectures, and by this means be instrumental in disseminating the truths of our philosophy. Under the ministrations of Mrs. Smith, if no admittance fee is charged at the door, the hall would be crowded. Shall Chicago remain behind Boston in the grand march of progress? The Banner of Light says:

We are gratified in being able to state that next season the doors are to be thrown open free to the public. The subscription list to defray the expenses is being signed willingly by generous souls, who are ever ready to do what they can to help spread the light and truth of Spiritualism among the people. But the list is not full yet, and others can "share the pleasure of subscribing" by calling on Mr. Wilson, at this office, and adding their names to the list. All subscribers will have checks given them which will entitle them to reserved seats. Music will also be furnished by a quartette, not less proficient than the last. Those wishing to secure the seats previously occupied by them, or others desiring seats, should hand in their names at once. Checks for seats will be ready for delivery in September. The course of lectures will begin the first Sunday afternoon in October, with the renowned Emma Hardinge.

Widows' and Orphans' Fund.

Bro. A. Beecher, of Santa Cruz, California, donates twenty-five cents to the above-named fund—this will pay some poor woman's or orphan child's subscription to the JOURNAL for four weeks. Who will do more, or as much? Every little helps to feed the hungry soul.

John M. Gilbert.

What is your post-office? You say you have written us before; probably then, as now, you neglected to give any post-office or State.

Waukegan, Ill.

Dumont C. Dake, M. D., can be consulted at the Waukegan House, for a few weeks, on and after Thursday, July 6th.

What an Old Railroader Says.

"AN OPINION AS IS AN OPINION."

"I advise you to take the Erie Railway; I always take it, going East or West, when my business permits, because I feel safer on that road than or any other, because it is better managed, and in better condition than any of the Western roads. When I get on that road I can sleep sound, because I know that the road-bed is in good order, and everything is done that can be to keep it so. I have been a railroad man over fifteen years, and have crawled up from Engineer to Master of Transportation on one of the principal roads of the country, and have traveled fifteen to twenty thousand miles within a year, on roads in the West, and I consider the Erie the best managed of any of them, and in a better condition to-day than any Western road. Some railroad men consider the Erie management a little extravagant because they have the best of everything, the best road-bed, the best locomotives, the best cars, the best engineers and conductors, but that suits the traveling public."

Pay Up.

We are in earnest with those who are a long while in arrears. Pay for your newspaper, if you never pay any other debt.

You do us great wrong by such negligence. We need our honest dues, and expect them to be promptly remitted.

Religio-Philosophical Journal.

S. B. JONES, EDITOR, PUBLISHER AND PROPRIETOR.
J. R. FRANCIS, ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

Office 187 and 189 So. Clark Street.

Religio-Philosophical Publishing House.

☞All letters and communications should be addressed to S. B. JONES, 189 South Clark Street, Chicago, Illinois.

TERMS OF THE
Religio-Philosophical Journal.

$3.00 per year, $1.50—6 months, $1.—4 mo.

☞Fifty cents for Three Months on Trial

TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS.

In making remittances for subscriptions, always procure a draft on New York, or Post-Office Money Orders, if possible. Where neither of these can be procured, send the money, but ALWAYS IN A REGISTERED LETTER. The registering fee has been reduced to FIFTEEN CENTS, and the present registration system has been found by the postal authorities to be virtually an absolute protection against losses by mail. All Postmasters are obliged to register letters when requested to do so.

All subscriptions remaining unpaid more than six months, will be charged at the rate of $3.50 per year.

PAPERS are forwarded until an explicit order is received by the Publisher for their discontinuance, and until payment of all arrearages is made, as required by law.

No names ENTERED on the subscription books without the first payment in advance.

[redacted] particularly requested to note the descriptions, and to forward what is [redacted], with or without further reminder

1. Any [redacted] utterly from the post-office—whether directed to his name or another's, or whether he has subscribed or not—is responsible for the payment.

2. If a person orders his paper discontinued, he must pay all arrearages, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and collect the whole amount,—whether the paper is taken from the office or not.

3. The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers and periodicals from the post-office, or removing and leaving them uncalled for, is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

LOOK TO YOUR SUBSCRIPTIONS.

Upon the margin of each paper, or upon the wrapper, will be found a statement of the time to which payment has been made. For instance, if John Smith has paid to Dec. 1, 1870, it will be made, "Smith 1—10 Dec.—71." The 1 meant 1870. If he has only paid to Dec. 10th, 1869, it would stand thus: Smith 1—10 Dec.—6, or perhaps, in some cases, the last two figures for the year, as 70 for 1870, or 69 for 1869.

☞Those sending money to this office for the JOURNAL, should be careful to state whether it be a renewal, or a new subscription, and write all proper names plainly.

CHICAGO, JULY 8, 1871.

A SEARCH AFTER GOD.

NUMBER XLVI.

During this Search, in traversing the domains of nature, in examining those conditions of life with which a supernatural power is supposed to be connected, we have endeavored to render our position clear. True, we have offended some,—those whose ideas of God are founded on early education, or who have a nature so organized that they must pay homage to something, and who seriously believe that there exists a God, an Infinite Intelligence, that pervades every nook and corner of space. In treating this subject, we are compelled, of course, to deal in those facts and principles which we conceive to be true, and in so doing, we were under the necessity of attacking the pet theory of many. No doubt you think every branch of this subject has been discussed, and all the facts in existence brought to bear in elucidating it. Really, but one field in the Arcana of Nature has been explored, but one drop of water in the ocean of philosophy examined with a critical eye—vast fields are yet before us, but we only propose to investigate certain parts of the grand theme that has remained untouched, and then leave the subject to the consideration of a thoughtful world.

In the examination of the intricate points connected with our Search, we have endeavored to be concise, but in order that our position might be understood, we were necessarily compelled to be prolix sometimes, for a fact not clearly expressed, had better remain unmentioned.

Now, how shall we next consider this question,—in a mathematical point of view,—and how can we demonstrate by the rules thereof, that no Infinite God exists? In geometrical demonstrations, the mind is brought down to facts; and no one would have the audacity to dispute the truthfulness of the 47th proposition in Davies' Legendre because they could not comprehend the nature of the proof adduced. Then, to mathematics we will direct our attention,—but can not exactly reason as the geometrician would, or as the algebraic scholar would be compelled to do, in solving some intricate problem. All subjects may be regarded as problems. True, figures may not be employed, angles, tangents, co-tangents, may not be brought into requisition, still they are problems, and can be solved as truly as any in the higher mathematics. In the solution of this subject, we desire to reason from a mathematical standpoint, and come to a conclusion that none can dispute, and in what direction shall we proceed?

1. An Infinite God fills all space.
2. An Infinite God possesses omniscience.
3. An Infinite God possesses all power.
1. Finite man possesses limited power.
2. Finite man possesses limited wisdom.
3. Finite man fills limited space.

If God possesses all power, and finite man limited power; if the former fills all space, and the latter only limited space, in what relation do they stand? Can the former be the originator of the latter? If so, from what source did he derive strength for man? If he used himself, then he would cease to be infinite. If he imparts to man his strength, the power thus imparted is either a part of God, or he ceases at that very moment to be all-powerful. God is all powerful, or he is not. If he is constantly using himself in the fabrication or construction of human beings, then the objects of his creation are gods on a small scale. If he uses himself, the inference will arise, that good would result therefrom, for the part of himself incorporated with matter, must be the only portion that can progress in knowledge, and how would that look, a part of God progressing—God lying in the cradle envelopped in matter, and playing with toys? Now, if God is manifested in man, in what relation to him does he stand? Why, the God part is the motive power! It is the supervising intelligence! Now, let me ask the scientists of the country to explain to me how a being perfectly organized, as God is claimed to be, can use himself without destroying his perfection? Is it not impossible to give God additional strength? Why? Because it is claimed that he possesses all power already! But man progresses, and if the God-part progresses also, it could not have been perfect when first imparted to man. But God from the very nature of things can not be manifested in man. If he is, which part is God? You can not divide the conscious element of man. Can you divide the conscious element of God? If God exists, he is complete within himself. If he is manifested in man, he is not complete within himself. Again; what object could God have in manifesting himself in each one?—being perfect, why should he originate that which is imperfect? Waste and recuperation is not a characteristic of God. If he imparts anything to man, is not that waste so far as he is concerned? Is he the same after he imparts some of his strength to us? If he is constantly manifesting himself in each one, he is constantly changing! If he uses himself in the formation of any thing, there would be a uniformity of action; on the contary, in all things there is diversity of action. We have taken up this question and critically examined it, for there are many who believe that God is manifested in all things; and we desired to convince them of the utter absurdity of such a position.

THE ORTHODOX OPINION.

1. An Infinite God fills all space,
2. Possesses infinite wisdom,
3. Can conceive,
4. Can execute his purposes,
5. Is all-powerful.

A PHILOSOPHER'S DOUBT.

Don't know positively that he can do anything, or that he exists, and the first five propositions are not sustained by the five senses.

A TRUE STATEMENT.

1. Man occupies only limited space,
2. Possesses only finite wisdom,
3. Can conceive,
4. Can execute certain purposes,
5. Possesses limited power.

NO DOUBT.

Know positively that he can do some things, and that he exists, and the first five propositions are sustained by the five senses.

1st PROPOSITION.

God, whose existence can not be established by the five senses, and whose operations only rest on supposition, is supposed to have eternally existed.

1st CONCLUSION.

Man's existence is fully established by the five senses. His operations do not rest on supposition. Can we not then more reasonably ascribe to him an eternity of existence than the former?

2nd PROPOSITION.

But God is manifested in man, and in the operations of matter—an assumption that can not be proved.

2nd CONCLUSION.

God, as you claim, is an Infinite Spirit, and always existed, and is manifested in man. Would it not be more reasonable to suppose that the spirit-germ of each individualized intelligence always existed, and that this spirit-germ is manifested in matter,—man.

3rd PROPOSITION.

But God is the moving impulse of matter,—the Soul of the Universe. This is, however, all speculation.

3rd CONCLUSION.

Man is known to control certain portions of matter. He can release its activities, use them to move the ponderous wheel, to send messages to his friends. He possesses a living soul. Is it not more reasonable to suppose that all things are under the control of real, tangible, living entities whom we know exist, than a God that the five senses have failed to recognize.

4th PROPOSITION.

God is supposed to possess all power, and control the action of matter in the formation of worlds.

4th CONCLUSION.

Man is known to posses limited power, and to control certain activities of matter, and it would me more reasonable to ascribe to him the creation of worlds than the former.

5th PROPOSITION.

It is said that God answers prayer. This statement has no foundation.

5th CONCLUSION.

Spirits residing in the higher spheres have been known to answer prayers, and to respond to the wants of the mortals of earth. Why not then ascribe to them what you do to God?

6th PROPOSITION.

All that exists in regard to God is founded on speculation,—not only in regard to his existence but his operations.

6th CONCLUSION.

Many things that exist in reference to man are founded on actual knowledge. Is it not better so to have actual knowledge to reason from than speculation?

7th PROPOSITION.

It is supposed that God eternally existed.

7th CONCLUSION.

Man's existence is a tangible reality, and would it not be more consistent with reason and philosophy to ascribe to him an eternity of duration in the past, than that being whose existence rests only on supposition?

8th PROPOSITION.

God is said to be a spirit, present in every part of the universe—infinite. This is merely an opinion, without any foundation to rest upon.

8th CONCLUSION.

Spirits do exist, present in certain localities of the universe, and why not ascribe a controlling influence to them instead of a God whose existence is merely an opinion?

9th PROPOSITION.

It is said that God made this earth,—that through his instrumentality worlds and systems of worlds are created. All guess-work.

9th CONCLUSION.

You could convince an ignorant negro that God made Crosby's Opera House, Chicago; but when his ignorance vanished, he would find man its builder. God vanishes in connection with any work the moment you understand it. As the negro found man the architect of Crosby's Opera House, so you will find individualized intelligences the architects of this earth, when you have progressed sufficiently.

10th PROPOSITION.

The idea is universal that there exists a God as the architect of the universe, and that he is eternal, having always existed in the past. This, however, has no tangible evidence.

10th CONCLUSION.

The idea is universal that man lives hereafter. This is an actual fact. Would it not be more reasonable to ascribe all things to that which we know can act, than that which only exists in the imagination?

[To be continued.]

The Hollow Globe.

"'The Hollow Globe; or The World's Agitator and Renovator,' is the title of a badly-written mass of balderdash. H. Snow, 319 Kearney street, has it."

This little notice taken from the San Francisco Bulletin of June 2nd, seems to demand more than a passing notice. Its significance appears to be more of a general than of a personal character. It aims a blow not only at the authors of this work, which had not been examined sufficiently to spell the title correctly, but at all the rank and file who have dared to acknowledge the Spiritualistic idea. Every man or woman who has had sufficient independence of mind to admit that any portion of their thoughts upon any subject, were given them by spirit inspiration, will come under the ban of this renowned book reviewer, who is doubtless no better qualified to sit in judgment upon the real merits of this work, than the priestly council who condemned Galileo were to comprehend his scientific demonstrations.

All ages of the world have furnished this kind of dead and rotten fish, that float down the current of public opinion. If such a man had published the official organ of the Jewish Sanhedrin, it would have overflowed with vile slanders concerning the innocent Nazarene, and such an one would have been active in raising the money and in holding all the necessary conferences with his betrayers. He would have ran and gathered the thorns for his brow, and poured out his loathesome saliva upon his person, and procured the hammer and spikes to have fastened the hands and feet of this man to the cross, whose only offense has been the utterance of some new ideas.

Any of the vile rabble who cried out "Crucify him! release Barabbas," could just as easily say "Spiritualistic balderdash." It would require no more intelligence or research to say the one than the other. They never pretended to examine into the truth or falsity of the teachings of the man they helped to slay; they never said a word concerning that matter—they had no time to bother their heads with that kind of "balderdash." Moses was their man every time—they wanted no other. Their cry was, "Hurra for Moses!—down with Jesus!—away with him!"

There have always been this kind of human vultures, who scent their natural food from a great distance, and gorge themselves upon the dead carcasses of a bygone age, and of course when they open their mouths, they emit a noisome effluvia. They have so long feasted upon stale intellectual meat, that has first been masticated by some other organs, that they know not the taste of that fresh, inspirational nutriment that comes direct from the great fountain of universal intelligence.

In order that there should be no blank pages in the history of men, and that human life might exhibit itself in all its different phases, there had to be individuals who would gather kindling wood, to light the fires that burned the martyrs; and those who held the torches by which the various cruel tortures were inflicted in the dark cells of the Inquisition. No doubt our astute critic would have been admirably qualified to have filled such an honorable position, and would have gladly attended to any such duties had he been there at the proper time.

It was not expected that "The Hollow Globe" would escape the slime usually disgorged by persons of this character, and we are agreeably surprised by the general tone of candor with which this novel work, coming from such a source, has been noticed thus far by the secular press.

The book is before the world, and it must stand or fall upon its own intrinsic merits. It has dared to attack, and has vigorously maintained its arguments against theories which seem to be well established, and which are endorsed by the most eminent scientific men of the present day, and yet no one seems to venture a reply.

We can safely say that the central idea presented in this work, is far better sustained than many of those which have ultimated successfully, and which have been demonstrated as truth. Ideas must first be presented by some one before they can be acted upon. The authors of this book have had the candor to confess the real source of their ideas, being fully conscious that that their value can not be depreciated by this fact, notwithstanding all the prejudice that exists against any such mode of communication.

"Could Not Rule Me nor Use Me."

W. F. Jamieson, in the Crucible makes the above charge against the JOURNAL. We pity him. Not knowing of any use we could put him to (we have none but reliable and truthful employes about our office), and not wishing to control him (we have better use for our time, and beg pardon of our readers for using our columns to even refer to him), we have never passed a word directly or indirectly, orally or in writing, nor in any other manner, since we resumed the publication of the JOURNAL, in regard to "ruling" or "controlling" him, nor upon any subject whatever.

It is his habitual practice to denounce the JOURNAL through the numerous newspapers that he has been and is the Northwestern and Corresponding editor of, as well as at all public and private gatherings.

His papers are so short-lived, and have so few readers, that his vindictive attacks do us but little good. But as small favors are thankfully received, and larger ones in proportion, we only beg of him to never say any good of the JOURNAL, and we will be satisfied.

In conclusion, we will refer him to "My Uncle Toby's" parting words to the fly that had so briskly buzzed around him.

Spirit Artist—Oil Paintings.

Those who have dearly beloved friends in spirit-life (no matter if they passed away in infancy), whose likenesses they would like to have as they look now, will do well to write to J. B. Fayette, Spirit artist, Oswego, New York, giving him the name, age at the time of passing to spirit-life, and length of time since.

Bro. Fayette is a good artist. His work is executed in oil colors, and of the ordinary size of bust paintings.

His terms are ten dollars, which should be remitted with the order. He is an honest man, and if the spirit does not appear sufficiently distinct for him to paint the likeness, he will refund the money.

We have one, of our spirit daughter, Lavinia, now over twenty-one years of age, who remained upon this plane of life only nine weeks, which we value very highly.

Our friends who desire to see her likeness, as well as many other valuable spirit paintings, will do well to call at the reception rooms of the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL, where they will always be welcome.

Mrs. Laura Cuppy Smith.

This lady has delivered several lectures before the First Society of Spiritualists in this city, and has awakened new interest in their ranks. She is one of our most gifted and highly inspired lecturers, and is capable of holding the attention of any audience. On last Sabbath evening, for the first time, no admittance fee was charged; we hope this arrangement will be continued. There are in this city hundreds of Spiritualists, who, if called upon, would contribute freely to aid in defraying the necessary expenses for hall and lectures, and by this means be instrumental in disseminating the truths of our philosophy. Under the ministrations of Mrs. Smith, if no admittance fee is charged at the door, the hall would be crowded. Shall Chicago remain behind Boston in the grand march of progress? The Banner of Light says:

We are gratified in being able to state that next season the doors are to be thrown open free to the public. The subscription list to defray the expenses is being signed willingly by generous souls, who are ever ready to do what they can to help spread the light and truth of Spiritualism among the people. But the list is not full yet, and others can "share the pleasure of subscribing" by calling on Mr. Wilson, at this office, and adding their names to the list. All subscribers will have checks given them which will entitle them to reserved seats. Music will also be furnished by a quartette, not less proficient than the last. Those wishing to secure the seats previously occupied by them, or others desiring seats, should hand in their names at once. Checks for seats will be ready for delivery in September. The course of lectures will begin the first Sunday afternoon in October, with the renowned Emma Hardinge.

Widows' and Orphans' Fund.

Bro. A. Beecher, of Santa Cruz, California, donates twenty-five cents to the above-named fund—this will pay some poor woman's or orphan child's subscription to the JOURNAL for four weeks. Who will do more, or as much? Every little helps to feed the hungry soul.

John M. Gilbert.

What is your post-office? You say you have written us before; probably then, as now, you neglected to give any post-office or State.

Waukegan, Ill.

Damont C. Dake, M. D., can be consulted at the Waukegan House, for a few weeks, on and after Thursday, July 6th.

What an Old Railroader Says.

"AN OPINION AS IS AN OPINION."

"I advise you to take the Erie Railway; I always take it, going East or West, when my business permits, because I feel safer on that road than on any other, because it is better managed, and in better condition than any of the Western roads. When I get on that road I can sleep sound, because I know that the road-bed is in good order, and everything is done that can be to keep it so. I have been a railroad man over fifteen years, and have crawled up from Engineer to Master of Transportation on one of the principal roads of the country, and have traveled fifteen to twenty thousand miles within a year, on roads in the West, and I consider the Erie the best managed of any of them, and in a better condition to-day than any Western road. Some railroad men consider the Erie management a little extravagant because they have the best of everything, the best road-bed, the best locomotives, the best cars, the best engineers and conductors, but that suits the traveling public."

Pay Up.

We are in earnest with those who are a long while in arrears. Pay for your newspaper, if you never pay any other debt.

You do us great wrong by such negligence. We need our honest dues, and expect them to be promptly remitted.

Personal and Local.

—D. P. Kayner, M. D., of St. Charles, Ill., the well known Clairvoyant Physician, late of Erie, Penn., is diagnosing disease clearly by a lock of the patient's hair, and is treating cases in all parts of the United States. Dr. K. is thoroughly educated in the different systems of medical practice; superadded to which his natural clairvoyant powers makes his treatment a positive success. Our friends in all parts of the country should remember these facts. Terms: Examination and prescription, $3.

—H. L. Taft, we have received your $7, now give us your Post Office address. Don't omit the State.

—The comments on the Bhagvat Geets, on third page, were taken from the Advance, Chicago.

—The name "Samuel Swedenborg" appeared in Wilson's Department—should be Immanuel Swedenborg.

—Dr. C. C. Brackett, of Lincoln, Ill., is about to start for Kansas, where he will lecture on phrenology.

—Our dear good friend, Brother John Haskell, of Cicero, N. Y., writes to us as follows:

My age is nearly eighty-four, and when I reach the other shore, I shall not want your paper at more.

—The Elgin (Ill.,) Gazette has the following:

Dr. Dumont C. Dake is stopping at the Waverly House in this city for a few weeks, and has under his treatment several of our wealthiest families. His great success in the treatment of Chronic Diseases has made his name a household word wherever he has been.

His many cures in this vicinity speak louder in his praise than any language we might use, and he is constantly adding to his friends by the real good which he is effecting.

—Eli F. Brown, Missionary of the American Association of Spiritualists, will answer calls to organize lyceums or to lecture. Address Dayton, Ohio, till August.

—Dr. W. H. Bagcroft is now healing the sick at Appleton, Wis. He also lectures on subjects connected with the harmonial philosophy.

—Dr. J. D. Stillman has located at St. Louis, Mo.

—We learn from Brother Williams, who gave us a call last week, that Spiritualism is in a flourishing condition at Darien, Wis. The friends there have a lecture once in four weeks. Children's Progressive Lyceum meets each Sabbath. Spiritualism commenced there about twelve years ago, and now has the largest congregation.

—D. W. Hull will lecture in the Grand River Valley during July. Address care H. B. Alden, Lowell, Kent Co., Mich.; August 6, 13, Linesville, Pa.; August 20, Edwinston, N. Y.; 27, West Winfield; would like to speak near the same neighborhood Sept. 3, and will answer calls to lecture in New York the balance of the month. October 7, 8, near Covington, Ind., and will answer calls to speak in Indiana the balance of the month. Permanent address, Hobart, Ind.

—Mrs. Warren Wily, of Landgrove, Vt., speaks at Weston, same State, once in two weeks.

—Brother Maple writes that P. B. Lawrence, of Ottumwa, Iowa, delivered four lectures at Snake Hollow. He says he is a good healer and fine inspirational speaker.

—Henry L. Buel writes:

Spiritualists who design removing to this Northwest coast will undoubtedly find it to their interest to take a look at Cocee county, Oregon, as offering good advantages for the emigrant.

—Dr. Entwistle, whose card may be found in our advertising columns, is located directly opposite our office, and appears to be doing a thriving business.

—J. G. Fish is now permanently located at Avon Springs, N. Y., and the Spiritual interests of the western part of the State are to be promoted by his aid and inspiration. He is engaged to speak one-fourth of the Sundays at each of the following places: Byron, Lavonia, Batavia and Albion.

—While the Rev. T. A. Sampson, colored, of Pine Bluff, Ark., was addressing his flock, Sunday week, he was struck dead by a flash of lightning. His funeral occurred Tuesday, and while his remains were being carried to the grave, another flash of lightning struck his coffin, tearing it to splinters, and leaving the body a ghastly sight. He was then buried before any more lightning struck him.

—There will be a Fourth of July celebration at Eagleville, Harrison county, Mo. Mr. O. P. Kellogg will deliver the oration. The Spiritual societies wishing to procure the services of Mr. Kellogg can do so by writing him immediately at Eagleville, Harrison Co., Mo.

—A deacon in Illinois objected to the organ purchased by his church, and when called upon to close the service with prayer, said: "Call on the machine; if it can sing the glory of God it can pray, too. Call on the machine."

—Brother B. writes as follows from Indianapolis, Ind.: Miss Lizzie Keyser gave a public seance in Masonic Hall, in this city, on Sunday evening last, under the auspices of the State Spiritual Society of Indiana, which proved a great success, the Chicago Post correspondent to the contrary notwithstanding. A large and highly cultivated audience was present, who showed their interest in the subject by paying fifty cents for admission and observing the best of order and closest attention during the entire evening. This was Miss Keyser's first appearance in Indianapolis, hence the audience was composed almost wholly of strangers to her, yet she pointed out and gave personal descriptions and names of some forty spirits in different parts of the hall, all but one of whom were recognized by their friends. Some very remarkable tests were given. For instance, she said "I see the spirit of a lady of great beauty," adding full description, "who gives me the name of Rosamond Hovey; says she formerly resided in this city, but passed away in Washington City; says her maiden name was Smith." Recognized by many as the wife of General Hovey, and daughter of the late Hon. O. H. Smith. Miss Keyser is a clairvoyant and clairaudient medium of wonderful powers, and we do not see how a reasonable person can resist the tests she gives. The convention was a success numerically and financially, the chief source of income being Miss Keyser's seance.

—It is stated that in one of the country churches in England, where the rector has been preaching for thirteen years, he has repeated the same sermon forty-eight times and is far advanced in the forty-ninth cycle. The sermons, it is believed, were written between the thirty-fifth and fortieth years of George III, or about seventy-five years ago.

—In Scotland the whole Presbyterian church is convulsed with the awful problem as to whether the devil can be saved. This question is raising more feeling and exciting more vehement discussion among the Scotch preachers than is that of the salvation of the entire human race.

—Our Episcopal brother at Council Bluffs who refused to attend to the dying prayers of an erring woman, the Dubuque Times says:

We will bet a dogon five-cent piece against his soul—which is as cheap an article as ever bet as we can conceit—that that preacher is a frequenter of such establishments as that poor girl died in, and put on that assumption of righteous indignation in order to avert suspicion from his shirts.

Philadelphia Department.

BY.....HENRY T. CHILD, M. D

Subscriptions will be received, and papers may be obtained at wholesale or retail, at 634 Race street, Philadelphia.

ON LIFE.

What are the Best Means of Preserving it in the Physical Form and Retaining and Strengthening it there?

In a former article an ancient seer spoke to us of the human physical body as designed to be the ultimate compound of all the elements of the globe on which man lives. He declared that it was progressing toward that; and also that the vitalizing elements of force which bring these material elements together, and maintain their relation for a time, are also a compound of all the various modes of motion of the great, all pervading force of the universe in any given world, together with a soul, which is a spark of divinity—of God himself. The highest idea that we can have of God can be but imperfectly expressed, on account of the finite character of mind and of the language which we are compelled to use. It is this—physically the material universe and spiritually the entire and complete expression in all the varied forms of the great central force we have been otherwise, in the various departments of the universe. Man, by virtue of the physical properties above named, is more cosmopolitan than any other being, and may live almost anywhere upon the globe on which he finds himself. And God, by virtue of the same properties, is omnipresent and omnipotent. Man by means of his soul nature, which we have said is a spark of God, and infinite in its character and attributes, may, in the coming future, visit all parts of the universe.

Our object at this time is to speak of the means of preserving, retaining and strengthening life in these physical forms. The proper play of the functions, or modes of motions in the various organs, gives man what we call constitutional vigor, and the difference in the strength, endurance and longevity of life in an individual depends, in a great measure, upon the proper and harmonious blending of the different modes of motion which are combined in the human system, and make up the vital force. This harmonious blending in early life depends upon the conditions as to harmony for its transmission, and the fearful mortality of children is a loud and solemn protest against the ignorance and willful carelessness in regard to this highly important matter.

Next in importance to this are the influences of the food and surroundings. In the angular and unbalanced condition that is so common in early life, and the helplessness of the human being, constant care is required to maintain life in the body, but there is implanted a love in every human being for these little ones, and especially is the strong maternal feeling essential, not only to maintain life in the form, but to bring into action the various separate forces of life which must blend and work in harmony in order to produce healthy action and vigor of life. For a long time the actions of life seem more automatic than systematic. Time which we call will-power results for the joint action of these forces, and the greater the number of these that co-operate and work harmoniously together the stronger and more permanently will be the will.

We have spoken of food on several occasions. Man has a capacity to receive into his organism small portions of all the elements of the mineral kingdom upon which he exists all belong to this class, but these enter into the human system very slowly and only after having passed through the organic kingdoms below man, except in the case of that wonderful mineral compound of oxygen and hydrogen (water) with some gaseous substances intermingled therein. This has been called the pabulum of life, as it enters into all forms, and is essential to all living organizations.

The vital force may be said to be a consuming fire, it is constantly burning up the various tissues of the body, and by a wonderfully elaborate and beautiful system, compounds are prepared to enter into all the various tissues, and replenish them by supplying their waste.

For this purpose the system requires proper articles of food at very brief intervals. The internal demands for this waste we call hunger. These demands are among the most important in their influence upon the subject which we are presenting. Their perversion, and the morbid desires resulting therefrom, are the fruitful causes of disease and death. Their nice discriminations, and natural selections of proper food are not only sadly perverted by the pernicious habits of civilized life, but in no department of life are inherited tendencies more marked and influential in their character, and millions of earth's children inherit tastes for rum, tobacco, spices, &c., which are exceedingly injurious, and this which was designed to be one of the great sources of intelligent enjoyment, as we have a source of the highest pleasure upon the physical plane, becomes one of the most corrupting and injurious influences that acts upon the system, and until generations of mankind have learned to appreciate these facts, and to avoid all stimulation, and all poisoning of the system by drugs, &c., long enough to permit the natural instincts and appetites to return and assume their away; this great evil will continue to constitute the lives of mankind, and consign millions to untimely graves, sending their spirits forth into the inner life with appetites that require long and painful processes to overcome, even longer than they would on earth, as the external influences are not always so favorable, and every repetition strengthens the habit and weakens the will power to resist it.

In laying down these general principles, we cannot enter into minutia, and this is not so essential, as each individual must become a law unto himself or herself in all these matters, and in all departments of life it is knowledge which is the savior of the people, a study of the physical system, and the careful observance of the laws thereof, is of the highest importance.

A few words upon mental and spiritual influences and their effects upon the prolongation of life. Even the most intelligent of mankind have failed to recognize the potency of these influences, and thousands upon thousands of human beings pine away and die because they are not appreciated or understood, and the love that burns in their souls finds no response, and they cannot tell of their sorrow; it is ever gnawing at their vitals and tapping the sources of life. There are many of these starved souls going to the world of spirits who are victims to influences which, in the present state of society, it seems impossible to avoid. Spirits tell us that "it was said we died of consumption, but it was in reality a want of appreciation and love that drove us from a cold and ungrateful world." As mankind comes to be more spiritually unfolded these cases will be better understood, and many of them relieved.

Among the remedial agents which are to be better understood are physical, mental and spiritual magnetism. Of these we shall speak in a future article, and endeavor to throw some light upon them.

Geology and Railroads.

Professor Gunning, in one of his able lectures recently delivered in our city, says: "Our Mother Earth is alive, and is kept so by the internal fires, and when these fires die out she will die, and all living beings must perish from her face."

Then he consoles us with the idea that it will be many millions of years before these life forces will be exhausted. We have thought railroads might be compared to the arteries, as the telegraph lines represent the nerves of the earth, and as these nerves and arteries are extended over the surface the life of the world must be increased. So in this wonderful country of ours there has been a great increase of life and activity in the last fifty years.

Railroads are like arteries in many ways; if they are weak, instead of adding to the strength and vigor of life they endanger it, hence it becomes a matter of importance to know that these arteries are constructed in a substantial manner. The frequent occurrences of fearful accidents on these is a very serious matter, and every means by which this may be avoided should be carefully used. As a Pennsylvanian, we feel proud of our great Central road. In looking over a picture of the heads of the officers of this road, we were struck with the intelligent and substantial character presented by all these men. We do not know where a group could be found that would exceed this, and the road speaks for itself and its management. A double track of steel rails, over three hundred and fifty miles long, across our great State from Philadelphia to Pittsburgh, with proper switches and sidings at all places where the business requires them, with ample cars for the accommodation of travel and freight, with great promptness and care, the road is decidedly popular. We have passed over this road several times, and at each subsequent ride have been pleased to notice the continued improvements. Our attention has been called to the new "Westinghouse Air Brake," which we will briefly describe. An air pump and receiver is constructed upon the locomotive, which is acted upon by the engine, and the air is condensed in this; under each car there is an inch iron gas pipe; these are coupled with strong gum hose, so attached that when they are united the air passes through them, but should the cars become detached, valves close and the brake continues to be applied. The management of the train is entirely in the hands of the engineer, who can, by the simple movement of a lever, instantly and effectually stop it, as the condensed air passes into a cylinder with a piston under each car, and this at once presses up the brakes, without that unpleasant jerking and noise that always accompanies the hand brake. This brake is applied instantly to all the cars throughout a train, as the air rushes very rapidly through the tubes, and the train may be stopped sooner than by the old hand brake. The old hand brake may remain upon the cars with the new one.

We understand that the officers of the Pennsylvania railroad find this brake to answer all that was claimed for it, and we think no one can ride upon a train where these brakes are used without perceiving the quietness and ease with which the cars are stopped. There is no shock or jar, but just as though a noble steed was gradually reined up, the train stops. We have no doubt this brake will be introduced upon all the main arteries of our country, and that it will tend to remove much of the danger incident to travel, which has now become so essential to us as a people.

Interesting Quotations.

As man is spiritually developed his loving kindness and sympathy leads him to strive to make the suffering of those who are weak and deformed happy, to give them something for that which they have been deprived, and to make the life which is sad and bitter as bright and beautiful as they can.—[N. J. T. Brigham.

We have sympathy for those who are deaf in the outer sense. Should we not have more for those who are deaf spiritually? We should raise our spiritual voices there and make an effort to speak loud enough to be heard by the slumbering spirits.—[Ibid.

The great thought of humanity is that they are striving to be appreciated.—[Ibid.

The grandest events in life are slowest in reaching their consummation. The more glorious and profound a truth the slower is man to receive it.—[Ibid.

Theodore Parker says: The world never saw such a population as America has; so rich, vigorous, well educated, so fearless, so free, and so young. I know America very well. I know her faults. I have never smared them, nor never will. I have great faith in America; in the American idea; in the ideal of our government—a government of all the people, by all the people, for all the people, a government to serve the unalienable rights of man; government according to the law of God, and His constitution of the universe. To the power of numbers, of money, of industry, and invention, I will ask the nation to add the power of justice, of love, of faith in God, and in the natural law of God, that we might surpass all nations, not only in vulgar numbers and vulgar gold, but in righteousness, which the good God values of us. I have confidence in America because I have confidence in man and confidence in God, for He knew what He did when He made the world, and made human nature sufficient to human history and its own salvation.

The history of the world is the story of the perpetual triumph of truth over error, of justice over wrong, of love against hate, of faith in God victorious over everything which resists his law.

Before me pass the thirty-third of society, the earthquake of life in the State, and the fire of the church; but through the storm, the earthquake's cruel, and the hiss of the fire, there comes the still small voice of reason, of conscience, of love, and of piety, and that is the voice of God. Those things shall perish, but His shall endure when the heavens have faded as these poor flowers shall vanish away.

While theology tells us of a tired God, a resting God, nature everywhere proclaims that God is never weary in well doing.—[N. J. T. Brigham.

The highest heaven that any mortal can enter is one of action, not a heaven where his innate indolence is developed and immortalized, but one where he labors and is not weary, but with his toil he is refreshed. It is the friction with that which is inharmonious on earth that is the cause of weariness.—[Ibid.

A religion in which man acknowledges the justice and goodness of God is the noblest work of humanity.—[Ibid.

In every human spirit there is an indestructible principle of good.—[Ibid.

Man's body is but an external expression of the spirit, and we may judge of the spirit by its outward manifestation, though we must remember that conditions modify this.—[Ibid.

LOVE.

BY T. L. HARRIS.

"Love God and man!" This ancient creed
Must be outwrought in daily deed,
Or thou art helpless in thy need.

Love God in man. He asks no more.
He only doth his God adore
Who loves his brother evermore.

In love all things begin and end;
Through love man can to God ascend,
And talk with him as friend to friend.

Love stands to ope the morning gates
Whence shall descend Angelic Fates—
The Genii of fraternal States.

Love lifts her angel finger high,
And where she points, the bright'ning sky
Kindles with Immortality.

Love hath one mighty end in view.
'Tis this: God's Eden to renew
And make all things divinely new.

JULIA DAKE CASTERLINE, M. D.,

TREATS SUCCESSFULLY CHRONIC AND ACUTE DISEASES. SPECIAL ATTENTION TO DISEASES OF WOMEN. 641 North 12th street, Philadelphia. v10 n16 tf.

IT COSTS

Only about one-third Bookbinders' prices to do binding handsomely by the use of Alden's Ready Book-Binder. Sizes suited to any publication, from the smallest Monthly to the largest Weekly. Price circular free. Send 50 cents for samples of both Plain and Binder. Size for the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL, No. 18; price $1.20 and $1.50. Address, RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

EMPRESS!

THE "EMPRESS" and other Rubber Goods, FOR

The Use of Ladies and Gentlemen.

Send stamp for circulars. Address: "EMPRESS" Co 189 Clark St., Room 19 Chicago.

MEDIUMS.

Spiritualism.

DR. S. L. MCFADDEN AND WIFE, MAGNETIC PHYSICIAN, Spiritual Test Mediums, Business Clairvoyants, etc., have located at No. 363 W. Madison St., corner of Hoyt, up stairs, Chicago.

They invite all who wish the benefit of their mediumistic powers, to call and see them. They hold developing circles, diagnose disease without any previous knowledge of the patient, tell of the past, present and future, give news from absent and departed friends, etc. They also explain the laws of life and death, good and evil, the cause and cure of inharmony, etc., thereby enabling persons to be a law to themselves—to be their own thinkers, teachers, doctors, and preachers. ALL MEDIUMS ARE INVITED TO ATTEND FREE OF CHARGE. The contradictions of the Bible, lying spirits, and false communications philosophically explained. Sittings for the examination of diseases, and private communications, from 8 A. M. to 9 P. M. Circles each evening; Sundays not excepted.

N. B.—Can accommodate a few Boarders.

v10 n12-12t

J. G. W. ENTWISTLE,

CLAIRVOYANT PHYSICIAN.

No. 194 South Clark Street, Room 3, Chicago.

He is prepared to treat any of the many forms of disease, and possess a peculiar insight into the cause and character, and a controlling power over it which seems wonderful (even to himself). His medicines are purely vegetable. Invalids at any distance will be as thoroughly examined, and the means of cure (if curable) as definitely pointed out as if they were present, by sending a lock of hair, giving name, age, sex, and two leading symptoms of the disease. Insanity and fits not treated. Examination fee, by hair, $2.00.

v10 n8 tf.

DUMONT C. DAKE, M.D.,

ANALYTICAL PHYSICIAN FOR CHRONIC DISEASES.

Patients at a distance successfully treated. Medicines sent by mail or express. Send a simple statement of condition, age, and sex, occupation, temperament, (if not known, send photograph). Address P. O. Box 80, Chicago, Ill. Send for ANALYTICAL HEALTH JOURNAL.

v10 n5 tf

MRS. C. H. LELAND,

Wonderful Psychometrist, Soul Reader, and Business Medium, will, upon receipt of photograph, lock of hair, whether married or single, send to any person a correct delineation of character, with leading events in the past and future life, for one dollar. Advice concerning business, two dollars. Written communications from friends in spirit life, two dollars. Satisfaction guaranteed. Instructions for mediumistic development, one dollar. Address, Taunton, Mass.

v10 n10 tf

MRS. E. MANIFOLD,

Medical, Clairvoyant, and Healing Medium. Parties at a distance examined by lock of hair. Price, $1.00. Prescriptions, $1.00. Magnetic treatment to all parts of the country. Address Mrs. E. G. Manifold, P. O. Box 1094, Rockford, Ill.

v10 n7 tf

813 RACE ST.

R. R. STODDARD, of 813 Race St., PHILADELPHIA, can accommodate MEDIUMS visiting that city with free rooms for business purposes, at reasonable rates.

v10n13 tf

MRS. LODEMA ATWOOD,

Healing Medium.

Has been before the public as a successful Healer the past fifteen years. We rely entirely on the controlling influences. We diagnose and give prescriptions by letter. Distance no objection. Will visit in person a reasonable distance those that desire, and can afford the expense. Delineation and advice in a variety of ways. Embrocation we give gratuitously to all our patients, when presented by our guides. Our former custom has been to come en rapport with the applicant by the hand-writing or lock of hair; but to save time, and the unpleasant sensation of taking on the symptoms of the disease, we require the applicant to give age and sex, with one or two leading symptoms of the disease, written by the patient, if able to write; if not, send lock of hair. As the giving of tests is not the object which we seek, but to restore the patient to health by Nature's own hand, in the shortest time possible, we do not deem it necessary here to lumber up an advertisement with what we have done or what we can do, but prefer to be known by our fruits.

Terms, for diagnosis and prescription, $3; Diagnosis without prescription, $1; all subsequent prescriptions, $1 each. All letters should be accompanied with the fee, and addressed to MRS. LODEMA ATWOOD, Box 45, Lake Mills, Jefferson Co., Wis.

v10 n1 tf.

Dr. Abba Lord Palmer.

BOX 101, NEW BOSTON, ILLINOIS.

WONDERFUL PSYCHOMETRIST AND CLAIRVOYAN PHYSICIAN, SOUL READER AND BUSINESS MEDIUM.

Can diagnose disease by likeness, autograph, lock of hair, without a failure, and give prescription, which, if followed, will surely cure.

Can trace stolen property, tell the past, present and future—advise concerning business, and give written communications from spirit friends.

Diagnosis of disease, with prescription, $2.00. Communications from spirit friends, $3.00. Delineation of character with advice concerning marriage, $1.00.

n1 v10 tf.

MRS. A. H. ROBINSON,

Healing, Psychometric and Business Medium

148 Fourth Avenue, Chicago.

Mrs. ROBINSON, while under spirit control, on receiving a lock of hair of a sick patient, will diagnose the nature of the disease most perfectly, and prescribe the proper remedy. Yet, as the most speedy cure is the essential object in view, rather than to gratify idle curiosity, the better practice is to send along with a lock of hair, a brief statement of the sex, age, leading symptoms and duration of the disease of the sick person, when she will without delay return a most potent prescription and remedy for eradicating the disease and permanently curing the patient in all curable cases.

Those who claim no knowledge of the healing art, but when her spirit guides are brought "en rapport" with a sick person through her mediumship, they never fail to give immediate and permanent relief, in curable cases, through the POSITIVE and NEGATIVE forces latent in the system and in nature. This prescription is sent by mail, and be it an internal remedy, or an external application, it should be given or applied precisely as directed in the accompanying letter of instructions, however simple it may seem to be: remember it is not the quantity of oil the compound, but the chemical effect that is produced, that science takes cognisance of.

One prescription is usually sufficient, but in case the patient is not permanently cured by one prescription, the application for a second, or more if required, should be made in about ten days after the last, each time stating any changes that may be apparent in the symptoms of the disease.

Mrs. ROBINSON also, through her mediumship, diagnoses the diseases of any one who calls upon her at her residence. The facility with which the spirits controling her accomplish the same, is done as well when the application is by letter as when the the patient is present. Her gifts are very remarkable, not only in the healing art, but as a psychometric, test, business and trance medium.

Terms:—Diagnosis and first prescription, $2.00; each subsequent, $1.00; Psychometric Delineation of Character, $3; answering Business Letters, $3. The money should accompany the application, to insure a reply.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

ATTRACTIVE NEW BOOKS.

—o—

ERNEST RENAN'S WORKS.

THE LIFE OF JESUS.—THE LIFE OF SAINT PAUL.—AND THE LIVES OF THE APOSTLES.

These three remarkable books, by the great French Philosopher, are attracting the earnest attention of all readers. "They are of great power and learning, earnestly and honestly written, beautiful in style, admirable in treatment, and filled with reverence, tenderness, and warmth of heart."

 Price $1.75 each; postage 20 cents.

THE BIBLE IN INDIA;

Or; the Hindoo Origin of Hebrew and Christian Revelation. Translated from the French of Louis Jacolliot. A remarkable volume, which is making a great sensation in Europe, and one ing the profoundest attention of thinking people.  Price $2.00; postage 20 cents.

HABITS OF GOOD SOCIETY.

A hand-Book for Ladies and Gentlemen; with hints and directions concerning nice points of taste, good manners, and the art of making one's self agreeable. The best and most entertaining book on the subject ever published.

 Price $1.75; postage 20 cents.

THE ART OF CONVERSATION,

With directions for Self-Culture. Teaching the art of conversing with ease and propriety, and setting forth the literary knowledge requisite to appear to advantage in good society. A book of real worth and intrinsic merit.

Price $1.50; postage 20 cents.

THE ARTS OF WRITING, READING, AND SPEAKING.

A remarkably clever book that every one, whether educated or not, will find of immense advantage and profit. A capital companion for the people's every popular work, THE ART OF CONVERSATION.  Price $1.50; postage 20 cents.

These books are all beautifully printed and handsomely bound in cloth covers, with gilt backs.

For sale wholesale and retail by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

THE

VOICE OF PRAYER,

A Poem by W. S. Barlow, Author of "The Voices."

This little poem is fully equal to any of Mr. Barlow's best efforts, and should be read by everybody.

Printed on fine tinted paper with blue line border. Price 25 cents; postage 2 cents.

 For sale, wholesale and retail, by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

ROSICRUCIA!!!

THE ROAD TO POWER!! SEXUAL SCIENCE! F. B. Dowd's Private Lectures to Ladies and Gentlemen. A pamphlet of 60 pages, containing principles, ideas, and advice beyond price. Ignorance is the curse of mankind. Price 50 cents. For sale by the author, F. B. Dowd, Davenport, Iowa.

v10 n15 tf.

CARRIAGE MANUFACTORY.

Waverly, N. Y.

THE UNDERSIGNED MANUFACTURES TO ORDER, and keeps on hand all varieties of Open and Top Buggies of the Best Styles; Platform Spring Wagons, with two or more seats, with or without top. This wagon is an improvement on the old two-spring wagon, and as a business wagon, or for family use, is unsurpassed. Best quality of stock used, and first-class workmen employed, and all work WARRANTED.

Situated on the Erie R. R., we have good facilities for shipping, and are constantly sending work to all parts of the country.

N. KINNEY.

v9 n25 13t.

CHRISTIANITY.

ITS ORIGIN, NATURE AND TENDency considered in the light of Astro-Theology.

By D. W. Hull.

—o—

This book is, so far as it goes, a thorough review of the Origin of the Christian system, showing it all to be plagiarized from ancient heathens. Having written almost any other work ever written on the subject, it cannot but be deeply interesting to all. Its explanations of Scripture are lucid, and so self-evidently correct that no one can gainsay them.

 For sale, wholesale and retail, at this office.

Price at retail, 25 cents; postage, 2 cents.

ABSTRACT OF COLENSO ON THE PENTATEUCH.

A comprehensive summary of Bishop Colenso's argument proving that the Pentateuch is not historically true, and that it was composed by Samuel, Jeremiah, and other prophets, from 1100 to 624 B. C. The substance of five volumes in 60 pages. Price 25 cents. AMERICAN NEWS CO., N. Y.

v10 n6 6m

THE

Science of Evil;

OR

FIRST PRINCIPLES OF HUMAN ACTION.

BY JOEL MOODY.

—o—

THE SCIENCE OF EVIL is a book of radical and startling thought. It gives a connected and logical statement of the FIRST PRINCIPLES OF HUMAN ACTION, and clearly shows that without Evil there can be neither Morals, Science, Knowledge, or Human Action on earth. In fact, without Evil, man could not exist. This work fully solves the PROBLEM, and unveils the MYSTERY of Evil, giving it a scientific meaning, and shows it to be the LEVER WHICH MOVES THE MORAL AND INTELLECTUAL WORLD.

The book is a large 12 mo., of 342 pages, printed from large, clear type, on fine, heavy paper. Price, $1.75; postage, 20 cents.

 For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 187 & 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

A. B. Severance,

The Well-Known Psychometrist,

Will give to those who visit him in person, or from autograph or from lock of hair, readings of character; marked changes, past and future; advice in regard to business; diagnosis of disease, with prescription; adaptation of those intending marriage; directions for the management of children; hints to the inharmoniously married, etc.

TERMS—$2.00 for full Delineation; brief Delineation—$1.

A. B. SEVERANCE,

457 Milwaukee St., MILWAUKEE, WIS.

v1n18tf.

GROSVENOR SWAN, M. D.

DR. SWAN MAY BE FOUND AT ALL hours, at 117 Wabash Ave., Chicago, where he will be happy to receive calls from his old friends and patrons, and all who may require his services. v9 n3 tf

WANTED AGENTS

In every Town and City, to sell an Article needed in every household. SELLS RAPIDLY. Large PROFITS to AGENTS. Send Stamp for Circulars. O. E. WOOLLEY & Co., Room 12, No. 151 Lasalle St., Chicago.

v10 n13 tf

Spermatic Positive and Negative Powders, for sale this office.

Original Essays.

Written for the Religio-Philosophical Journal.

BIBLE MYTHOLOGY.

By M. Woolley.

MYTH OF THE CREATION.

In Gen. 1: 1, we read:

"In the beginning GOD created the heavens and the earth."

Here the first query of the rationalist would be: Who or what is GOD? Until he can answer this most important, this fundamental question, satisfactorily and truthfully, he had better stop right here, for he must first have a foundation to stand upon, else all his endeavors will prove fruitless, as has hitherto every "Search after God."

Is God, then, "unsearchable, and his way past finding out?" Let us see; and while it is the "glory of God to conceal a thing," let it redound to the glory of man to discover who this old fellow is, and to trace out his ways.

In the Hebrew text: "Elohim" is the word which stands opposed to the word "God" in the English. Elohim is the plural of El, the contracted form of Ul or Eul, to roll together or to twist, and, hence, is applied as a name to the male of the sheep kind—Ram, in allusion to his contorted or twisted horns. God, or, as the Methodist properly pronounces the word, Gaud, is another term commonly applied to the Ram, because of the little grooves which encircle his horns.

These two terms, then, are, therefore, synonymous, God being simply a substitute in the English for Elohim in the Hebrew text.

God, then, in English, is a Ram, or, as the Hierophant would say, is the Ram (Aries in Latin), as meaning a particular Ram.

But how did God or the Ram create the heavens and the earth? A little knowledge of astronomy will enable us to answer this question. This science informs us of a belt or zone encircling the heavens and extending eight degrees on each side of the ecliptic or sun's path, within which the moon and the ancients discovered planets move during their respective rounds. This zone or belt is divided into twelve equal parts of thirty degrees each, called signs. The grouping of the stars which appear in each of these divisions, is fancied to resemble the outline of some animal, and hence the whole taken together is called the "zodiac," or menagerie.

These signs and their corresponding months are as follows: Aries, March; Taurus, April; Gemini, May; Cancer, June; Leo, July; Virgo, August; Libra, September; Scorpio, October; Sagittarius, November; Capricornus, December; Aquarius, January; Pisces, February.

In general we shall find all the myths of the Bible to wrap up or envelop, as it were, the year in circle and its attendant phenomena. To describe the year, or the successive parts of the zodiac, we must begin at some designated point in it. The author of Genesis, in his dissertation, chose the point of the spring equinox, which at the time of his writing was when the sun entered the sign Aries or the "Ram." Hence, he says: "In the beginning God (that is, the Ram—the sun in Aries) created the heaven," etc.

Now the word translated created never meant the production of something out of nothing. Its primary meaning is simply to cut, to divide, and hence, the first verse of Genesis should be translated thus: "In the beginning God (that is, the sun in the sign Aries, or the Ram) divided the heavens and the earth;" i. e., divided the year into two parts—Summer and Winter.

More anciently, some 2,000 years before our Mosaic account of the creation was written, when the sun entered the sign "Taurus," or the Bull, at the spring equinox, the Bull, it was said, created the heavens and the earth. The Chaos was represented by an Egg.

"The whole world was, at the time of the Chaos, enclosed within this Egg, which swam upon the surface of the waters. The moon, by virtue of her light and her other influences attracted from the bottom of these waters a terrestrial substance, which was insensibly converted to a rock, and by that means the Egg rested upon it. The Bull observing this Egg, broke the shell of it, by goring it with his horns, and so created it. The world, day by his breath formed the human species."—Quoted by the Rev. Dr. Oliver in his History of Initiation, pp. 84, 85.

This Bull, however, by the precession of the equinoxes, went forward one whole sign, while God (Aries, or the Ram) took his (the Bull's) place in the heavens, and became in his turn the creator.

It may be asked, if the word Elohim be plural, why is it rendered in the singular by the word God in our English version of the Bible? The question is readily and easily answered. When we take the word Elohim to mean the constellation Aries, simply as it does in our text, we would naturally translate it in the singular—God, or the Ram.

When we take "Elohim" to mean the several stars of which the constellation is composed, we would as naturally translate in the plural—Gods, or Rams. And this word is so rendered in the singular or plural in the Bible, as the occasion seems to demand.

Treated thus, as above indicated, the narrative becomes not only intelligible, but absorbingly interesting. True, we meet with, what we must always look for in every species of fiction—discord and incongruity; yet by seizing the salient points of the myth, we are, for the most part, able to weave them into consistency, and educe light where before all was darkness.

In this first myth of the Bible, we have found the year divided into two parts—Summer and Winter; God, or the Ram, ruling over the first only, for we shall find to our dismay, that another gentleman claims jurisdiction over the other half of the circle!

During the first day, or month, of Summer—March—light is separated from darkness; i. e., we have the long bright days of Summer in place of the short, gloomy days of Winter. The waters dried off the land during the second day—month of April—leaving it fit for cultivation. During the third day—month of May—the grass grew and matured. The fourth day month of June—the sun attained his highest northern declination, and so ruled the day, i. e., the longest day, of Summer. The moon being at her full in the opposite point of the heavens, of course, in her turn ruled the night, i. e., she shone all that night. Then, in its order, came forth animal life; first, fish and fowl on the fifth day—month of July; and lastly, the higher animals and man—male and female—on the sixth day—month of August. That is, all animals—man not excepted—had by this time become sleek and fat, in a proper condition to withstand the hardships of winter, when they would be under the control of the other gentleman, that old Serpent, the Devil, who led our first [illegible] out of the Garden of Eden, or Paradise, and [illegible] in the habit of leading their [illegible] from the same delectable [illegible].

Thus the heavens and the earth were finished, and all the host of them; and on the seventh day (month of September) God ended his work which he had made; and he rested on the seventh day from all his work which he had made,"—his work being simply the products of the season. That is, we are to understand, God, or Aries, or the constellation of stars in the zodiac, called the Ram, went below the horizon, or set in the west.

Thus endeth at the 4th verse of chapter 2d of Genesis, Myth the First.

Written for the Religio-Philosophical Journal.

STRANGE EFFECT OF ARTIFICIAL SOMNAMBULISM.

By A. H. Orr, M. D.

The host of correspondents who are contending against the theory of "artificial somnambulism," as advanced by Dr. Wm. B. Fahnestock in his recent work on that subject, have, I think, (if they have accomplished nothing more) pretty clearly demonstrated the proposition, that some so-called Spiritualists, like a great many theologians, are strongly in favor of human progression, when its direction does not interfere with their particular branch of the manufactory of "silver shrines for the Goddess Diana." Without desiring in any way to become identified with this controversy, the love of truth prompts me (with your permission) to present to your many readers a few thoughts on the subject. On the present occasion I design to confine my remarks to that branch of the question alone, which relates to the action of the mind on physical organization. I shall endeavor to avoid, so far as possible, the unmeaning jargon of mixing up "magnetic poles," "magnetic equators," "magnetic dip," "magnetic meridians," etc., all well enough in their appropriate sciences, but only calculated here to impress "buncombe," with the wonderful extent of my condition. With this brief introduction, I propose the questions:

1st. What is disease, and how can it be relieved? Disease may be defined simply as an abnormal condition of some organ or tissue of the human body, produced either by miasmatic influence or physical contact. Nature, when left to herself, has but one mode (so far as we know) of relief in every case, the production of increased action in the organ or tissue by which the offending matter is eliminated. An increased flow of blood is directed to the part—inflammation and swelling of the part follows, the delicate nerves are compressed, and pain and suffering follow as a consequence. A congested condition of one portion of the body, necessarily produces the opposite condition in other parts secondarily, so that while we have one part suffering from over action, other organs may be unable to perform their proper functions from inertia. A simple example will serve to illustrate nature's modus operandi, in expelling disease. A thorn or briar becomes embedded in some part of the body; it is allowed to remain, and in a few hours the part becomes inflamed from the increased action, and pain is produced by the pressure on the nerves, resulting from the turnified condition. Over action reduces the portion of the muscle surrounding the thorn into pus, and then it drops out. The very same effort is made by nature to eliminate from the system all inimical influences—only modified by the nature of the organ or tissue implicated.

Let it be observed that the extent of the inflammation in every case, is proportionate to the extent of the primary cause of injury, and the subsequent irritation resulting from the pain; that is, the pain resulting from the injury becomes a subsequent cause of irritation, increasing the inflammation and being itself, in many cases, the direct cause of the mortification of the part, or the death of the patient. Outside of the operations of surgery, one point alone is philosophically apparent in relieving disease, viz.: rest. By this I mean not only a cessation of motion in the part, but also a cessation of sensation. The first indication is easily fulfilled, as all persons have the full control of the motor portion of all voluntary nerves, the second not so easily—hence all medicinal applications when judiciously employed, aim at that result. Opiates lessen nervous sensibility; fomentations and poultices, subdue congestion and allay irritation; internal antiphlogestics control the inordinate action of the heart and arteries, and decrease the circulation to the part. All these means being employed for the purpose alone of relieving the pain, and allowing nature to work the final cure, resulting with the injury alone.

It is scarcely necessary to say to persons in any degree acquainted with anatomy and physiology, that every fasciculus of nerves is composed of two portions, one giving the power of motion, the other the power of sensation. Cut the motor portion of a nerve, and the part it supplies is deprived of motion, while its sensation remains. Cut the sensitive portion, and motion remains, while sensation is gone.

I have already intimated, that every individual has by an act of the will, the control of the motor portion of every voluntary nerve; he can move a part or keep it at rest. Is it not clear, that if he had the same control by an act of the will over the sensitive portion, pain in a part could be as easily removed by an act of the will, as the motion or rest of the same part could be produced; and this, too, without the puerile putting out the cheeks, and the unmeaning "passes" of an operator.

From 1836 to 1840, I attended in the city of Philadelphia, the University of Pennsylvania, and Jefferson Medical College, as a student. During that period mesmeric operators—at least during the winter season, were publicly giving exhibitions of their theory every few nights, and have not been again and again, without the slightest effect. I have been tried by the so-called most powerful magnetizer of Lancaster City, without result. Some six years before the publication of Dr. F's. book, on one occasion I was engaged in the construction of a model which I considered important to have finished by a certain evening, when a large "inner chest" of which I was using, slipped and struck into the ball of my thumb, nearly severing the tendon of the abductor muscle. The subsequent suffering in a few hours was intense, necessarily producing a "dead lock" in my model. I met Dr. F., who, after inquiring into the nature of the case, observed, "You are simple to suffer. Why not throw the part out?" He did not touch the part, nor come near me. My previous experience in mesmerism, satisfied me that I was not susceptible to mesmeric influences. I therefore hesitated to make the effort required, but finally agreed to try it, resulting in the instantaneous cessation of all pain in the part, and so it continued for several days, when, accidentally striking my hand against some obstruction, the pain returned with increased violence, and continued for several hours until removed again by an act of my own will. But some of your correspondents say Dr. F. is a "powerful psychologist," and intimate that he produces the result by mesmerism. I confess I do not understand the phrase "psychologist," as used in this connection. A reference to my school-boy days, derives this word from the Greek Psyche, the soul, and Logos discourse or science, that is the science of the soul. In the design in the use of this word was to identify Dr. F. with a manipulating mesmerizer, and the designer has succeeded, hereafter it will only be necessary in proving that a man makes horseshoes, to say that he is a "powerful" mineralogist.

I close this article with a question to Bible theologians. You tell us (and I do not dispute it) that pain, sickness and death, was the result of the fall. Now, if man had not fallen, would he not have been just as liable to accidents as he is at present, and would not his nervous organization have been just as susceptible of suffering as now? Certainly. The position that his Creator originally endowed man's will with the power over sensation, as well as over motion, at once rescues your doctrine from successful contradiction, as well as vindicates and fully sanctions the philosophical acumen of Dr. F's. theory.

Harrisburg, Pa.

Written for the Religio-Philosophical Journal.

VISIT TO THE SPIRIT WORLD.

Dr. Rayner's Experience when Drowned.

BRO. JONES:—The following was to me one of the most interesting scenes of my life, and may be interesting to your readers:

When about seven years of age I climbed on the edge of half a hogshead to drink at a pen-stock from which it was filled, when I was pushed head foremost into the hogshead by a rude schoolmate who then ran away and left me head downward in the water.

I distinctly recollect the sense of suffocation, followed by a rushing, roaring sound in my ears with a pressure and almost bursting sensation upon my eye-balls, when purple and red lights seemed to spin out through the bursting orbs, and soon I seemed to pass through a small space when I emerged into the bright golden mellow light of the Spirit Land.

Nearly two years previously my only sister, a child of two summers, had passed to that beautiful land, and a little cousin had also departed this life a few months after my sister's decease.

But, upon what fairy scene had I now entered! My sister, cousin, and many other little spirits I had known in the form, with a numerous band I had never before seen, came forth in bright robes with radiant smiles and glad songs of welcome to meet me. By them I was conducted to their garden-home and school; and to-day, language and pen fail me in describing my recollections of its harmony, order, system, and beauty —excelling the liveliest conceptions of art, or the finest creations of poesy, that were then indelibly impressed upon my mind, and through all the long years that have followed, have only grown more vivid as I have failed to find anything in earth approaching to the exceeding loveliness of childhood's home in the spheres.

The garden was ample and extended. Its walls were of the finest variegated stones and beautiful in design—typifying in their structure and design a wholesome restraint with proper license for recreation and enjoyment.

Within those walls order and beauty everywhere prevailed. Thousands of the rarest flowers of every conceivable hue imparted their fragrance to the atmosphere. Fruits the most luscious hung bending on their branches along the flower festooned walks, inviting you to partake; while here and there were jetting fountains in whose pearly waters were sporting the many colored fishes, and the adjoining groves were redolent with the sweet songs of the thousand warblers whose plumage had borrowed tints from the rainbow and the early dawn—all conspired to make a scene more lovely than mortal mind can possibly conceive of while in the form.—"For the things of the Spirit can only be conceived of by the Spirit.

Here was the home and school of the tender buds that had been transplanted early from the earth to spirit life. On all sides were arranged objects and scenes to inspire emotions and awaken thought. The divine harmonies and melodies of the place were set to music and uttered in joyful song. The happy children were joined by the chorus of a thousand birds and all rejoiced together in thanksgiving and praise. Then came a hush like the stillness of even, and the children were ranged in groups with their books for instruction. These books contained the rudiments of spirit or symbol language, and all were earnest in application and attention.

After enjoying myself amid these unspeakable beauties for a time, their teacher came forward and informed me I must now return to my body, which had been laid out for dead, and to my home again on this side of the river. O! how I begged to remain in that angel school to dwell with that happy throng, in that place of untold beauties; but from that decision there was no appeal. A look from that angel presence was sufficient command. Firmness, with kindness and love, imparted the magnetism of the purpose, which commanded at once respect and obedience. As I turned sorrowing earthward, I was assured that there was a work for me here which I must do—a mission which I must fulfill —and that if faithful to the spirit influences controlling me then and there, my future life's journey in the form over, I would again be permitted to enter that garden and rest and refresh myself in its groves and by its life-giving fountains.

Bidding adieu for a time to my sister and cousin and their many happy companions, I again awoke amid pain and intense agony to the consciousness of the earth life, to find my friends about preparing for my funeral.

But, amid all the struggles and sufferings of the earth life to which a sensitive medium is exposed, the recollections of those hours in Spirit Land which were indelibly impressed upon my mind, have been my solace and cheer and the beacon to guide me safely on above the follies of a creed-bound world and beyond the breakers of a bigot's sea. I know that I have passed the bourne and returned. That the river of death is bridged by angel-love, and that Spirits are passing and repassing.

St. Charles, Ill., June 7th, 1871.

Pleasanton, Kansas.

BRO. JONES: Agreeable to custom, and for the encouragement of those who think that Spiritualism is "dying out," I send you a condensed report of our three days meeting, and dedication of Brother Decker's new hall, on the 2d, 3d, and 4th of June.

The weather was pleasant and agreeable, and the citizens and friends from abroad gave us a good hearing. Brother Taylor from Fort Scott, and Sister Fry, an inspirational speaker, gave the people a rich and interesting talk. Others took part in the meeting, and we had a good time for all.

This week we have had two lectures from E. V. Wilson, accompanied with his usual readings and tests, all of which has served to call up the attention of the people, who still "want more." The only thing that excites a little mirth is to see the falling of the lower jaw and the staring and protruding eyeballs, of the old religious conservatives who so belittle themselves to sustain their creed, that they deny having any merit of their own, but expect to go to a local heaven, some time, on the merits of a Jew, whose name, they say, was Jesus.

E. B. WHEELOCK.

June 27th, 1871.

Voices from the People.

PARIS, ILL.—J. Curl, M. D., writes.—Now Bro. Jones, a few words concerning the progress of the spiritual philosophy in Eastern Illinois, and particularly in this fossilized orthodox city of Paris, and I will close. Fifteen years ago I stood alone in this town, and I believe with one or two exceptions, in the county, and for my firm stand that I took when I came here, and have ever since, as I expected, sniff-red constant persecution and the vilest slander. But it harmed me not, and no doubt increased my spiritual growth; have lived it down, and to-day, thanks to the angel world, I begin to see the fruits of my labors. Now there are here quite a number of Spiritualists, and many liberal minds, and some of the most intelligent citizens of the place and county are inquiring for more light, the banks of old theology does not satisfy their hungering and longing souls. Thus you will see the ball is rolling, the creedists, too, are beginning to understand the moving of the Spiritualistic car. They see that the people are beginning to think for themselves, and then of course they do not think with them. Consternation and terror seizes the priests when they behold the sceptre about to depart from Judah.

WATERBURY, CONN.—Lewis White writes.—I have not had much time to thoroughly read the Search after God, thinking that it would be issued in book form, so I have waited. Although radical it is the foundation for much thought. Can you not go back in your mind to a time when there was no human being? Was there not at the first some thing that developed into man? If so, was there not a spirit before that? Was not that spirit God? The more I think of it the more I can see a glimmer of light in the account of the creation that the Jews must have copied from the Egyptians. The earth was without form. True. It was in a gaseous state. You can look into a glass jar of gas and see nothing, yet it may contain that which can be converted into a solid. I can see in the Bible good authority for the statement that the spirit is the only God.

TISKILWA, ILL.—J. Gage writes.—Your Search after God are good negatives, but I, an old, feeble man, near four-score years, have found a personal God.

BELOIT, WIS.—S. W. Bullock writes.—That Search after God is a great search. The question is, will he find the old fellow? If he does I would like to see him.

PLYMOUTH, VT.—Cyrus Johnson writes.—I like your paper for its fearless advocacy of truth, but I think some of the theistical ideas of Voltaire Francis advocates had better not be printed. Let him bound the universe before he undertakes to say there is no God. I would like to know what kind of a God he is hunting after.

Remarks: Why, dear Brother, you are entirely mistaken. There is not an Atheistical impulse within us. Could you once see us, and talk with us, and hear our views in regard to the beauty and grandeur of man's destiny, you would wish our position true, and doing that would imply it had some merit. Your letter indicates that our thoughts have hurt you, when, indeed, we would gladly encircle the whole world in the arms of sympathy, and if we have made a wound in your sensitive heart, we would heal it with the tears of love. No, Brother, our position presents a grand moral platform to the world, and a high and beautiful conception of man's destiny. If our ideas hurt your sensitive mind, or clash with preconceived notions, don't read them, but remember that we know we have gladdened the hearts of thousands by instituting this Search, which was urged upon us for months by our spirit guide. As to his being an atheistical spirit, the charge amounts to nothing. In the spirit world to-day this question is being discussed, and intelligences as widely differ there as here. We commenced this series of articles without a moment's aforethought, perfect passivity only being required. We have studied no ancient authors, have consulted books only when told to make extracts from them.

WAUTOMA, WIS.—H. S. Johnson writes.—We are much interested in the articles now contained in the Journal. The search after God in particular calls forth much thought. It is like a cannon ball sent forth crushing and destroying the ancient idea of the Jewish God, seated upon the great white throne. The intelligence through Brother Francis speaks of the ponderous, vibrating machinery of this God, as an old, clock-like concern, out of season, while in the clairvoyant condition, things which I think are not laid down in any of the laws of science known to man, in regard to the path in which this earth is moving, he seems to see. It seems to be a vast river of shimmering, blazing, silvery light. Now what I wish to do, is to ask all clairvoyants, whose clairvoyant powers will permit them to examine this circle around the sun, or path in which the earth must move once a year, and let me know the results, either privately by letter, or publicly through the Journal. It requires a clairvoyant of considerable power to see the path of the earth, and it cannot be seen through any telescope at the present time. This path is very different in appearance from the immensity of space on either side. It seems to be as much a road, or place for the earth to move in, as the railroad is for the steam engine.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—H. S. Brown, M. D., writes.—I inclose you three dollars to pay for the Journal a year, and also a communication, which I wish you to publish. I think the question of what we should do in associations is the greatest question of the times, and if your principles are right in your search after God it quickens the brain to worship nature by combining to live according to her laws the better. That is the only God that is above us.

MERRILLSVILLE, MICH.—Marcus Fields writes.—Within you will find two dollars, it is not the full amount, but all that I can at present send you for the kindness you have shown towards myself. The Search after God is worth the price of your paper. Long may Brother Francis live to help hammer common sense into creed-bound souls.

XENIA, O.—A. D. Solvely writes.—I will close by adding my testimony to the highly meritorious excellency of the great truths contained in the Search after God, now being promulgated through the columns of your most influential Journal.

SOUTH ADAMS, MASS.—James M. Carter writes.—The Journal amply pays every week, and would if there was nothing in it but the Search after God.

NORTHWEST, O.—John Morgan writes.—Inclosed please find fifty cents, for which please send me the Brinkley College Spirit Manifestations and a volume of Judge Edmonds' tracts, and oblige a what the old Orthodox Christians call an old gray headed infidel. I want to see the Search after God in book form. I think if in the search you should find the Bible God, he would probably be standing in Heaven by some big stone pile, with a great stone in his hand ready to throw on some poor fellow on the run, as we read in the Bible of his casting a great stone out of Heaven on to the inhabitants in old times, when they were going at the top of their speed.

ALMONT, MICH.—James H. Andrus writes.—"The Search after God" is an excellent article, and surely "the world will be the better for it." If the writer succeeds in finding any God at all, I hope, for his sake as well as others, that he will not be one of the angry, vindictive kind, nor one who will be so very exceedingly set indeed. The Search after and show his "hinder parts," but that he will be fully up to the present times, at least, and will face the music to the tune of endless progression and love for all.

ADAMSVILLE, PA.—H. Andrus writes.—I see by the tab on my paper that my time is out on the 15th, and unwilling to follow "the torch of the God." I send you $1.50 for which you will continue the Journal for six months.

WEBSTER, MD.—Anna Harvey writes.—I had rather my grocer or dry goods merchant would wait a little while for pay than you. Your machine is doing a great good in enlightening the people who sit in darkness, and must be kept running, and your readers must furnish the lubricating oil.

BUCHANAN, WIS.—Elizabeth Gardner writes.—I cannot do without the Journal, can hardly wait for it to come, and when I have read the precious contents I pass around to those who desire to read it. I must confess I was almost afraid to read the paper at first—had been prejudiced against it, but now consider it a blessing, for it has given me new views of life.

NEWTON FALLS, OHIO.—Lucy Hudson writes.—I have taken the Journal ever since its commencement, am well pleased with the noble stand it has taken for the defense of mediums and free thought. All honor to those noble souls, who dare to stand up in the defense of truth against bigotry and her twin sister ignorance.

SALEM, OHIO.—John Gordon writes.—I send you in this letter $3 for a continuation of the Journal. I cannot do without it. It is a welcome messenger. I consider it a highly toned paper, conducted and edited with rare ability, and an able exponent of the thrilling truths of Spiritualism. God bless and prosper you, my brother, in your great labor of love and enlightenment. Ever yours for the dethronement of error and the exaltation of truth.

ST. CATHARINES, CANADA.—Geo. D. Derby writes.—Like many others, I am not fully convinced of the truth of the Spiritual philosophy, but like the Journal very much and have been instrumental in inducing some to subscribe for it, and many to read it, all of whom admire its independent tone and bold philosophy. I am short Nos. 16 to 19 inclusive. Will you be kind enough to forward them?

ROCKINGHAM, VT.—John A. Burt writes.—I am well satisfied with the paper, and cannot get along without it. Will try to get some more subscribers soon. The prompt action you have taken to put down the M. D. gag law I heartily endorse.

STANWOOD, KANSAS.—A. Dodge writes.—I have been a firm believer in and supporter of Spiritualism, and thank God that my eyes were ever opened to its blessed truths. Now I can see and commune with sweet angel spirits. What a sweet, blessed privilege and gift it is, to enjoy the communion again of our spirit friends we so much loved while on earth. It is my blessed privilege to be endowed with the spirit, or medium-istic phase of Spiritualism. I have been handled by spirits. I have had a sight of that "beautiful Summer Land." O, what a sight! But the magnetic chord was not broken, and I was taken back to Mother Earth, to inhabit this earthly casket a while longer.

TERRE HAUTE, IND.—J. H. Stanley writes.—Dear Sir: Enclosed you will find postoffice order for $3 which please pass to the credit account of Journal. I prize the Journal too highly to think of doing without it, though it requires some effort on my part to raise the stamps, as I am "one of God's poor."

EAST ABINGTON, MASS.—J. Madison Allen writes.—I wish heartily for you and your excellent paper abundant success. And you will have it. The Journal is one of the papers that the spirits are determined shall live. It has been gradually improving, and constantly, and is now an indispensable weekly guest in thousands of families all over the land.

DURDETT, N. Y.—James Row writes.—You are the kind of man that I believe in, and whether I indorse all that is published in the Religio-Philosophical Journal or not, there is a freedom of thought through most of the paper that I like.

HASSAN, MINN.—D. T. Goodwin writes.—A few weeks ago I was the only one in this place who took the Journal, now there are five subscribers. To be sure that is not a large number, but this is a farming community, only thinly settled. The cause is progressing surely, and nothing aids it more than a wide-awake, thorough-going Spiritual paper.

GETTYSBURG, PA.—J. Swope writes.—We are much pleased with your paper here, though "The Search after God" is a little too radical for some of our members. We are few in numbers here, and strong only in the strength of truth, and in our cause. Having constantly recurring facts to appeal to in support of our faith, we are more than a match for the advocates of Old Theology, whose only basis of faith is to be found in a book compiled by a set of wrangling priests, and handed down to us through the mists and corruption of two thousand years.

ELKHORN, IOWA.—M. Roper writes.—I am about 50 years old, and about stopping the use of tobacco, and other stimulants, and save the money to sustain the paper. I don't think that there is that others who owe for the Journal would be better off if they would do the same.

KENDALLVILLE, IND.—Dr. Brown writes.—I enclose $3 for the year's subscription of the dear old Journal. I feel grateful that you have continued to send it weekly to me, as it contains some precious truths that such souls as mine need after feeding on orthodox husks for 23 years in the Presbyterian Church.

AURORA, MINN.—Mrs. Abbie Stapleton writes.—I am a constant reader of your to me inestimable Journal. In it I find many things cheering to my heart; it helps me to smooth the rough road of life, as I pass along toward the river we all must cross.

A good brother, who does not wish his name or residence to appear, writes:

I don't know as I have anything now that would interest you or any one else. I only wish to make use of this occasion to tell you that I do not indorse the opinion of Voltaire Francis Search after God. He comes almost up to the point several times, then flies off in a flourish of eloquence, but always dodges the question, "Who started the Mill." We all might grind if we only had a start. Then another theory I don't think much of, the intelligences that could look calmly on and see me plunged into all the unspeakable miseries that I have endured for years in the marriage relation, when I was taking one step more to set me on a better footing. I have only one of two excuses for his creating and controlling intelligences, they are grossly wicked or lamentably ignorant. I have no forgiveness for intelligences that could if they would, or would not? Then come and DIE NOW averit the terrible storms which have for many years "rolled like bitter waves of wormwood over my poor soul."

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—Enos Gray writes.—I am glad you are sustained in the good and glorious work of publishing the truth to the world in a bold and fearless manner, and that your efforts are appreciated. The Search after God seems to be doing much good by the agitation of thought among the people. There is great need for such truths to be spoken, for there is so much superstition in the minds of the people through false teaching.

LOWELL, MASS.—E. Hall writes.—I wish I could find words to express my feeling and views in regard to the grand and glorious position the Journal has taken and has so nobly and fearlessly sustained itself as a fortifier in the soil of human minds.

AUGUSTA, MICH.—E. E. Wood writes.—I dearly prize and love the Journal. I think it the best Spiritual paper published. I feel that I cannot well do without it. When I can take it no longer I will inform you. I must have it as long as I can pay for it. It is food for my soul, and gives the heavenly-inspiring truths. It is elevating and aspiring to the mind's growth and advancement. These blessed spiritual truths are more real sonlsatisfying than ever the Christian religion was or can be.

BLUE RIDGE, IND.—R. D. Creed writes.—Go on in the good work, and may the inhabitants of the Summer Land assist you in the right direction. I hope to increase the circulation of the Journal in this locality.

SKANEATLES, N. Y.—E. Spaulding writes.—Enclosed you will find $3 to renew my subscription for another year. I cannot think of letting your paper stop as long as it contains so much of the bread of life. I am taking more pains in the right direction. I hope to increase the circulation of the Journal in this locality.

SKANEATLES, N. Y.—E. Spaulding writes.—Enclosed you will find $3 to renew my subscription for another year. I cannot think of letting your paper stop as long as it contains so much of the bread of life. I am taking more pains in the right direction. I hope to increase the circulation of the Journal in this locality.

Search after God than I ever could in that old Mosaic Bible.

Price-List of Books.

LIST OF BOOKS FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

All orders by mail, with the price of books ordered, and the additional amount mentioned in the following list of prices for postage, will meet with prompt attention.

Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies	75	16
Artificial Somnambulism. By Dr. Pahlenstock	1.50	20
A Revelation of Departed Spirits among the Shakers	.25	02
Alice Vale, a Story for the times, by Lois Waisbrooker	1.25	16
American Crisis, by Warren Chase	.75	03
Answers to Questions Practical and Spiritual. Double	1.50	20
Apocryphal New Testament	1.25	16
A Peep into Sacred Tradition, by Rev. Orrin Abbot. Paper	.50	05
Age of Reason, by Thomas Paine. Cloth	.40	04
A Woman's Secret, by Mrs. G. F. Corbin	1.75	20
A Lecture in Rhyme—The Past, Present and Future, by Mrs. F. A. Logan	.15	02
Arcana of Nature, or History and Laws of Creation, Vol 1, by Hudson Tuttle	1.25	20
Arcana of Nature, or the Philosophy of Spiritual Existence, and of the Spirit-World, Vol 2, by Hudson Tuttle	1.25	20
A B C of Life, by A. B. Child	.25	02
Arabula, or the Divine Guest, by A. J. Davis	1.50	20
After Death, or Disembodied Man, by Randolph	1.00	06
Cloth	1.50	20
Approaching Crisis, by A. J. Davis	1.00	16
Apostles, [translated from the French] by Renan	1.75	20
A Stellar Key to the Summer Land by A. J. Davis	1.00	16
Astro Theological Lectures by Rev. Robert Taylor	2.00	24
A Kiss for a Blow, a Book for children by H. C. Wright, small edition	.30	2
Large do	1.50	12
Antiquity and Duration of the World by G. H. Toulmin, M. D	.25	4
An Eye Opener, by Zepa. Cloth,	.75	12
Paper	.50	04
A Roman Lawyer in Jerusalem in the first century by W. W. Story	.15	2
Address on Spiritualism, by T. G. Forster	.15	01
Analogy Between the Facts of the Bible and the Facts of Modern Spiritualism, by T. G. Forster	.15	02
Arcana of Spiritualism, by H. Tuttle	.75	04
Biography of Satan, by M. Graves. Price 35 Cents! Better Views of Living, by A. B. Child	1.00	12
Blossoms of Our Spring, (a Poetic Work,) by Hudson and Emma Tuttle	1.25	16
Beyond the Breakers, a Tale of Village Life in the West, by Robert Dale Owen	2.00	24
Book of Poems, by J. Wm. Van Namee. Cloth	.75	2
Branches of Palm, by Mrs J. S. Adams, a book for every Spiritualist	1.25	16
Bethany, by Professor W. Denton	1.50	20
Bhagvat-Geeta, or Krishna's Dialogues	1.25	.16
Conjugal Sins against the Laws of Life and Health, by A. K. Gardner, A. M., M. D. Paper	1.00	08
Cloth	1.50	16
Comber's Constitution of Man	1.75	16
Common Sense Thoughts on the Bible, by William Denton	.10	03
Cosmology, by G. W. Ramsay, M. D	1.50	20
Common Sense, by Thomas Paine	.20	02
Christ in History, H. Tuttle	.50	06
Chester Family, or the Curse of the Drunkard's Appetite, by Julia M. Friend, with an introduction by H. C. Wright	1.00	12
Christ and the people, by A. B. Child, M. D	1.25	16
Christianity; its influence on Civilization, and its relation to Nature's Religion, by Caleb A. Weeks	.25	02
Christian No Finality or Spiritualism Superior to Christianity.—Wm. Denton	.10	02
Criticism on the Theological Idea of Deity, by M. B. Craven	1.00	.16
Descent of man, by Darwin. Two Vols.. ($3.00 per Vol)	4.00	.48
Davenport Brothers, their Remarkable and Interesting History	1.50	20
Day of Doom, A Poetical Description of the Great and Last Judgment with other poems, from the sixth edition of 1715	1.00	13
Devil's Pulpit, by Rev. Robert Taylor, with Sketch of the Author's Life	2.00	20
Dawn. A Novel of intense interest to progressive people	1.75	24
Dealings with the Dead, by P. B. Randolph	.75	12
Death and the After Life, by A. J. Davis, paper 50, postage 4, cloth	.75	12
Errors of the Bible. Demonstrated by the Truths of Nature. By Henry C. Wright. Paper, 35 cts; postage, 4 cts. Cloth	.50	8
Exeter Hall, a Theological Romance	.50	06
Empire of the Mother, or the Character and Destiny of the Race, H. C. Wright paper	.50	04
Cloth	.75	12
Footfalls on the Boundary of Another World, by Robert Dale Owen	1.75	24
Familiar Spirits and Spiritual Manifestations, by Dr. Hardy Ford	.20	2
Free Thoughts Concerning Religion, or Nature vs Theology, by A. J. Davis	.20	2
Fugitive, by Warren Chase. Paper	.35	4
Festival Night, an Inspirational Poem, Mrs. M. J. Wilcoxson, Medium	.2	2
Seattle, a Tale of the Great Rebellion, by Emma Tuttle	1.25	16
Gist of Spiritualism, by Warren Chase	.50	04
Great Harmonia, by A. J. Davis. 5 vols, viz: Vol. 1 The Physician; Vol. 2 The Seer; Vol. 3 The Reformer; Vol. 4. The Thinker. Each	1.50	20
Gymnastic Manual for Teachers and Students	.10	2
God Idea in History, by Hudson Tuttle	1.25	16
God Dealing with Slavery, by Thomas Richmond. Cloth $1.50; postage, 13 cents. Paper	.75	06
Hierophant, or Gleanings from the Past, by G. G. Stewart	1.00	.06
Health by good Living W. W. Hall M. D	1.50	20
Harbinger of Health, by A. J. Davis	1.50	20
Harmonial Man, or Thoughts for the Age, by A. J. Davis, Paper	.50	6
Cloth	.75	12
History and Philosophy of Evil, by A. J. Davis Paper	.50	8
Cloth	.75	12
Hayward's Book of all Religions, including Spiritualism	2.00	24
Holy Bible and Mother Goose, by H. C. Wright	.25	02
How and Why I become a Spiritualist	.75	12
Helen Harlow's Vow, by Lois Waisbrooker	1.50	20
How to Bathe, by R. T. Miller, M. D., paper	.50	6
Cloth	.75	12
Hedged In, by Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, author of Gates Ajar	1.50	16
Hollow Globe	2.00	.20
History and Philosophy of Marriage, or Polygamy and Monogamy Compared	1.25	16
History of the Intellectual Development of Europe by J. W. Draper, M. D., L. L. D. cloth	3.00	60
Human Physiology, Statistical and Dynamical, or the Conditions and Course of the Life of Man, by J. W. Draper, M. D., L. L. D. 550 pages, cloth 3.50 sheep 4.50
Harmony of the supernatural, (2 Vols., 500 pages each)	3.00	45
Hit, by Dr. Mary M. Walker	1.10	.16
Intuition, by A. B. Child	1.25	16
Important Truths, a book for every child	.25	2
Is the Bible Divine? by S. J. Finney, paper	.25	2
Cloth	.40	12
Is there a Devil? The argument Pro and Con	.25	2
Inquirer's Text Book, by Robert Cooper	1.25	16
Interactive Conversations from Spirit Land, Mrs. M. H. Park, Medium	1.25	16
Incidents in my Life, by Dr. D. D. Home, Introduction by Judge Edmonds	1.25	16
(Added, or Inquirer's Text Book by Robert Cooper
Jesus and the Gospel of Science! by W. D. Gunning	1.50	16
Jesus of Nazareth, by Alexander Smyth	.50	06
Jehovah Unveiled, or the Character of the Jewish Deity Delineated	.25	4
Jesus of Nazareth, Myth or History, translated from the French, by Sarah M. Grimke	1.00	12
Kidder's Secrets of Boo Keeping. Price, paper Bound 60 cents	.75	08
Koran, with explanatory notes, by George Sale 5 vo. 670 pages, best edition yet published	3.00	60
Kersa, with Life of Michael Angelo. Translated by George Sale, Gent. 12 mo., 479 page.	1.50	.24
Life Line of the Lone One, by Warren Chase	1.00	12
Life's Unfolding	.50	8
Life of Thomas Paine, with critical and explanatory observations of his writings, by G. Vale	1.00	16
Life of Jesus, by Renan	1.75	20
Love and its Wisdom History, by P. B. Randolph, 12th edition	2.00	20
Logic of the Golden Age, by T. L. Harris	1.50	20
Legalized Prostitution, or Marriage as it, and as it is	.10	2
Lucifer the Son, by G. S. W. Woodyard, M. D	1.00	16
Life and Moral Actions of Confucius, by M. E. M. Wright	.25	02
Letters to Rufus Miles Grant, by Rev. Moses Hull	.25	02
Living Present, Dead Past. H. C. Wright. Cloth	.75	.08
Paper	.50	.04
Lyceum Guide. Cloth cover	.75	16
Paper cover	.50	.04
Lecture on Evil, by Joel Moody	.15	2
Leadership, Randolph	3.00	.20
Spiritual Manifestations, by J. S. Rogers	.10	.02
Lyceum Question and self contradictions of the Bible	.50	.00
The Fountain, by A. J. Davis	1.00	12
The Irreconcilable Records, or Genesis and Geology, by T. Denton, Cloth	.25	04
The Biblein Index	2.00	.40
The Faithful Guardian, an Inspirational Story by J. William Van Namee	1.50	16
The Bible in the Balance	1.50	16
That Terrible Question, by Moses Hull	.10	02
True Love. What it is, and What it is not, by A. B. Davis	.10	02
The Dynamic Cure, by Leroy Sunderland	$1.00	12
Tale of A Physician, by A. J. Davis	$1.50	16
The Future Life, by Mrs. Sweet	1.50	20
The Gospel of Nature, by Moses Hull	1.50	20
The Gates Wide Open, by George Wood	1.50	20
The Gates Ajar, by Miss. E. S. Phelps	1.50	16
The Orphan Girl, by Mrs. H. N. Green	.50	6
The Pearl Diver by Dr. G. W. Kirby	.15
The Gospel of Good and Evil, by Silver	1.50	16
The Tragedy, by Peter Sandeland	1.50	16
The Great South-West, by W. Nicoley	1.00	16
The Merits of Jesus Christ and the Merits of Thomas Paine as a substitute for merits in others. What is the difference between them? H. C. Wright	.25	2
The Philosophical Dictionary of Voltaire. Fifth American Edition, 876 octavo pages, two steel plates. Largest and most correct edition in the English Language. Contains more matter than the London Edition, which sells for $10.00	5.00	60
The Disgests, by Rev. Robert Taylor, written by him while imprisoned for blasphemy. This work is a history of the origin, evidence, and early history of Christianity	3.00	35
The Inner Mystery, an Inspirational Poem by Lizzie Doten	.20	02
The Deluge, William Denton	.10	2
The Tiber Volcano	1.25	16
The Internal Philosopher, Volume 1	1.25	16
The Woman who Dared, by Epes Sargent	1.50	20
Theological and Miscellaneous Writings of Thomas Paine	2.00	24
Thomas Paine's Pilgrimage in the Spirit World	.75	.06
The System of Nature, or Laws of the Moral and Physical World, by Baron D'Holbach	1.50	20
The Psalms of Life, by J. S. Adams. Paper cover, Board cover	.50	06
Cloth	.75	12
Tobacco and its Effects, by H. Gibbons, M. D.	.20	02
The Reasonists, by A. J. Davis	.50	06
The Yah a Satirical Rhapsody	.10	.02
The Rostrucian Dream Book, compiled from all languages, by P. B. Randolph	.50	.04
Undercliff Series, Post-paid	1.50
Unhappy Marriage, by A. B. Child	.20	2
Unwelcome Child, by Henry C. Wright, Paper	.35	4
Cloth	.75	12
Voice of Prayer, by Barlow	.35	.03
Vestiges of Creation	.75	.06
Vital Force now wasted and how preserved, by R. P. Miller, M. D. Paper, 50 cts.; Cloth	1.00	13
Volney's Ruins; or Meditations on the Revolutions of Empires, with Biographical notice by Count Dara	1.00	12
Voices from Spirit-Land through N. F. White	.25	2
What is Right, William Denton	.10	2
What is Spiritualism, and shall Spiritualists Have a Creed? by Mrs. M. M. King	.25
Whatever is, is Right, A. B. Child, M. D	1.00	16
Writings of Osmon	.10	02
Wolf in sheep's Cloth'ng, or God in the Constitution, Moses Hull	.10	.02
Year Book of Spiritualism. Cloth	1.25	20
Paper	1.00	08

WE ARE ALSO NOW IN A SITUATION TO FURNISH Miscellaneous books of any kind published at regular rates, and, on receipt of the money, will send them by mail or express as MAY BE DESIRED. If sent by mail, one-fifth more than the regular cost of the book will be required to prepay postage. The patronage of our friends is solicited. In making remittances for books, buy postal orders when practicable. If postal orders cannot be had, register your letters.

H. SNOW,

819 KEARNEY ST., (Up Stairs,) SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.,

Keeps for sale the

RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL,

And a general variety of

Spiritualist and Reform Books,

At Eastern prices. Also, Orton's Anti-Tobacco Preparation, Spence's Positive and Negative Powders, Adams & Co.'s Golden Pens, Planchettes, Dr. Storer's Nutritive Compound, etc. Catalogues and Circulars mailed free. ☞ Remittances in U. S. currency and postage stamps received at par. Address, HERMAN SNOW, P. O. Box 117, San Francisco, Cal.

WARREN CHASE & CO.,

No. 601 NORTH FIFTH ST., ST. LOUIS, MO.,

KEEP constantly on hand all the publications of the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE; Wm. White & Co., J. P. Mendum, Adams & Co., and all other popular liberal literature, including RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL and BANNER OF LIGHT, Magazines, Photographs, Parker Games, Golden Pens, Stationery, etc.

PARKER'S
BREECH-LOADING, DOUBLE BARRELED
SHOT GUN
BEST IN THE WORLD
PARKER BROTHERS, WEST MERIDEN, CONN.
SEND FOR A CIRCULAR.
New York Office, 37 BEEKMAN ST.

Rail-Roads.

SUMMER ARRANGEMENT.

ARRIVAL AND DEPARTURE OF TRAINS.

Chicago and Northwestern Railroad—Council Bluffs and Omaha Line—Depot North Wells street.

Ticket Office, south-east corner of Clark and Lake streets.

	Leave.	Arrive.
Cedar Rapids Passenger	8.30 a. m.	8.50 p. m.
Pacific Fast Line	*10.45 a. m.	3.50 p. m.
Rock Island Express	10.30 a. m.	*2.50 p. m.
Pacific Night Express	11.00 p. m.	7.00 a. m.
Rock Island Night Passenger	*10.00 p. m.	7.00 a. m.
Dixon Passenger	*4.00 p. m.	*11.15 a. m.

Freeport Line.

Freeport and Dunleith Pass	*9.00 a. m.	*7.15 a. m.
Freeport and Dunleith Pass	*5.45 p. m.	*2.30 p. m.
Rockford, Rigin, Fox River and State Line	*4.00 p. m.	*11.10 a. m.
St. Charles and Elgin Passenger	5.15 p. m.	*8.45 a. m.
Junction Passenger	5.30 p. m.	8.30 a. m.
Lombard Accommodation	*6.10 p. m.	*8.50 a. m.

Milwaukee Division—Depot corner of Canal and Kinzie street.

Milwaukee Mail	*8.00 a. m.	*10.10 a. m.
Day Express	*9.45 a. m.	*4.50 p. m.
Evanston Accommodation	*1.00 a. m.	*2.00 p. m.
Rose Hill, Evanston, and Highland Park	1.00 p. m.	3.40 p. m.
Afternoon Pass	*3.45 p. m.	7.40 p. m.
Kenosha Pass	*4.10 p. m.	*9.10 a. m.
Waukegan Passenger	*5.30 p. m.	*8.55 a. m.
Waukegan do	*6.30 p. m.	7.40 a. m.
Milwaukee do	11.00 p. m.	4.00 a. m.

Kenosha and Waukegan trains leave from Wells street Depot.

Wisconsin Division—Depot corner of Canal and Kinzie street.

St Paul Express	*10.00 a. m.	*7.15 p. m.
Night Passenger	*9.00 p. m.	*5.30 a. m.
Janesville Accommodation	*2.00 p. m.	*1.00 p. m
Woodstock Accommodation	*5.30 p. m.	*10.10 a. m.
Barrington Accommodation	5.15 p. m.	7.45 a. m.

GEO. L. DUNLAP, General Superintendent.
H. P. Stanwood, General Ticket Agent

Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Rail-Road.

Depot corner Van Buren and Sherman streets. Ticket Office 56 South Clark street.

Mail	*6.30 a. m.	*7.30 p. m.
Special N Y Express	*9.00 a. m.	*4.00 p. m.
Richard's Accommodation	*3.30 p. m.	*10.30 a. m.
Atlantic Express (daily)	5.15 p. m.	7.00 a. m.
Night Express	*9.00 p. m.	*6.30 a. m.

Detroit and Grand Rapids Lines.

Day Express	*7.30 a. m.	*7.40 p. m.
Night "	*9.00 p. m.	*6.30 a. m.

P. H. MOSES, Gen'l Pass. Agt., 56 Clark st., Chicago.

Michigan Central Railroad—Union Depot, foot of Lake street

Ticket Office Lake st., cor. Dearborn—Passenger trains of this company leave and arrive at Chicago as follows:

Mail Train	*8.30 a. m.	*3.05 p. m.
Fast New York Express	*9.00 a. m.	*4.00 p. m.
Atlantic Express (daily)	12.15 p. m.	7.00 a. m.
Night Express	*9.00 p. m.	*6.30 a. m.
Kalamazoo Accommodation	*4.10 p. m.	*12.30 p. m.

Cincinnati and Louisville Trains

Day Express	*9.00 a. m.	*9.20 p. m.
Through Express	12.30 p. m.	6.30 a. m.

for St. Joseph via New Buffalo.

Day Express	*9.00 a. m.	*11.35 a. m.
Accommodation	*4.30 p. m.	*8.06 p. m.

HENRY C. WENTWORTH, General Passenger Agent.
H. B. RAMSEY, Gen'l Superintendent, Chicago.

Chicago, Burlington and Quincy

Ticket Office 63 Clark St., opposite Sherman House. Union Depot, foot of Lake St.

Hinsdale Accommodation	*7.45 a. m.	*6.18 p. m
Mail and Express	17.30 a. m.	2.40 p. m.
Pacific Fast Line	*12.45 a. m.	*4.15 p. m.
Hinsdale Accommodation	*7.45 p. m.	*6.30 p. m.
Mendota Passenger	*4.30 p. m.	*9.45 a. m.
Evening Express	*9.00 p. m.	*6.30 a. m.
Aurora Passenger	*6.30 p. m.	*9.30 a. m.
Hinsdale Accommodation	*5.15 p. m.	*8.50 a. m.
Pacific Night Express	19.00 p. m.	17.30 a. m.

ROSSIE HARRIS, Superintendent.
SAMUEL POWELL, Gen'l Ticket Agt. Office in St. Capt. Depot

Illinois Central—Depot, foot of Lake street.

Cairo Mail	*9.30 a. m.	*7.45 p. m.
Cairo Express	*5.15 p. m.	*7.00 a. m.
Keokuk Day Passenger	*9.30 a. m.	*7.45 p. m.
Keokuk Night Passenger	*5.30 p. m.	*7.00 a. m.

On Saturdays this train will leave at 4.45 p. m.

Champaign Passenger	*4.00 p. m.	*9.30 a. m.
Hyde Park and Oak Woods	*9.30 a. m.	*7.45 a. m.
" " "	*2.00 a. m.	*2.27 a. m.
" " "	*3.30 p. m.	*1.45 p. m.
" " "	*5.00 p. m.	*3.12 p. m.
" " "	*6.10 p. m.	*7.38 p. m.

(St. Louis through Trains.)

Mail	*9.30 a. m.	*8.15 p. m
Fast Line	15.15 p. m.	*7.00 a. m

H. HUMPHREY, Gen'l Supt.

W. F. JOHNSON, Gen'l Passenger Agent.

Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne and Chicago—Depot, Corner of Madison and Canal Streets.

Mail	*1.30 a. m.	6.10 p. m.
Day Express	*9.00 a. m.	8.00 a. m
Pittsburgh Express	5.15 p. m.	3.30 p. m.
New York Express	9.00 p. m.	8.00 a. m.
Valparaiso Accommodation	*5.30 p. m.	*9.30 a. m.

Allerton's Wagon Express Leaves Depot, 86 Clark st.

Chicago and St. Louis—Depot, corner Madison and Canal sts

Express Mail	*2.15 a. m.	*8.00 p. m.
Joliet Accommodation	*4.50 p. m.	*9.35 a. m.
Night Express	18.30 p. m.	16.45 a. m.
Lightning Express	12.00 p. m.	*7.30 a. m.

*Except Sundays. †Runs through to St. Louis every night. ‡Saturdays and sundays excepted. §Except Monday.

T. B. BLACKSTONE, Pres. & Gen'l Superintendent.
A. NEWMAN, Gen'l Pass. Agt., Office 65 Dearborn st.

CHICAGO, DANVILLE AND VINCENNES RAILROAD.

Milwaukee Depot—Corner Canal and Kinzie Sts., West Side. Freight Office at C., C. & I. C. Co.'s Office, corner Halsted and Carroll sts.

Mail Train Chicago time,	3.45 p. m.	9.15 a. m

Frontier Department.

BY.....E. V. WILSON

Items from the Great West Continued.

We have lectured in the fair city of Kansas, Mo., eight times on Sundays, and twice on Saturdays, and four times on Monday evenings,—fourteen times in all—all parties feeling good,—the society because we paid our way, (the receipts at the door nearly or quite paying all expenses); outsiders felt good because they got the worth of their money, and something to think of besides; the rum shops and churches talk somewhat sour,—the former because we did not patronize them and get drunk on their wares during our stay, the latter because we hurt them every time we speak—stripping the garments of tinsel off of the skeleton system of settled speakers; and we felt good all over, for the reason that we were well paid, well used, and invited to return for another month during the fall or winter. Kansas City is a queen indeed, standing on many hills, with her commerce reaching out to the ends of the earth—long may she prosper.

Thursday, May 9th.—Went to Olathe, Kan., situated on the Missouri, Ft. Scott and Gulf; the L. L. and G., and the Lawrence and Pleasant Hill railroads.—the two former in good running order and doing a fine business, the latter to be completed this fall. There is no better farming country in the west than in Johnson Co., Kan., of which Olathe is the county town. Olathe was at one time the home of the Associated Editor of our dear RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL, and here we believe commenced that most wonderful production of the age, the "Search after God,"—trusting that Brother F. may tree him in Chicago, as the revival meeting (according to Prof. Braden) in White Co., Ill., some time ago treed a third part of him, (Jesus.) We heard many kindly inquiries after him, and all wishing him success in his new home and Search after God.

There are a number of new frame buildings going up, and several fine blocks of brick and stone buildings, and a large stone elevator with capacity for many thousand bushels of grain. Truly, Olathe is a flourishing town, containing many liberal minds, among whom we may mention Chas. Tillotson, Judge Noteman, Dr's. Julian and Wilson, and many other equally true and faithful souls.

We have lectured in Olathe five times, and given three seances, all of which were well attended save one.

We have given many fine tests in Olathe that were readily recognized. The following of which we deem worthy of your attention, dear readers:

NO. ONE, TO MR. F.

"We see by you a spirit, tall, spare and dark. He stands by your side. Says he was killed in the South—murdered. We then went into a minute description of the spirit man, who impressed us with many incidents in the life of Mr. F." Mr. F. replied, "I recognize this spirit as my brother, who died in Texas, or was killed there by an assassin, as stated."

NO. TWO, TO A STRANGER.

"I see the spirit of a woman. She is this man's sister. She died many years ago," fully describing her and her death,—recognized.

NO. THREE, TO A MAN.

"I see this man struggling with a light bay colt," fully describing it, the place and circumstances, all of which proved true. The man replied, "It is true to the letter, save in the color—it was a bright chesnut sorrel colt." "A failure," cried a good Christian. "He saw a bay colt, and yours was a chesnut sorrel."

NO. FOUR, TO A STRANGER.

"We hear a voice speaking to you, words of cheer—it is your wife." Correct. She is a spirit.

NO. FIVE, TO A METHODIST, MR C.

"There is with you a little girl, about eight years of age,"—fully describing her. "Her name is Alice. She died twenty-five years ago." This was at first denied, after which it came to his mind fully, and the statement was true to the letter. Where was the mind reading?

Many other tests and readings were given, which, if they were written in a book, the world could not contain it.

The friends of Olathe are moving in the matter of organization, and the building of a hall. Johnson Co., Kan., can form and organize a splendid society, of as true and loyal Spiritualists as there is in America, with head quarters at Olathe. They can in one year revolutionize Johnson Co.

"Spiritualism breaks up families," said a good Brother Methodist to me one day.

"Yes," we replied. "It caused the son of Bro. Tillotson to leave his home some two years ago."

"Ah! I thought so."

"But it was in this wise. Young Tillotson wanted to join the Methodist church. His father consented—furnished the means for him to do so. After he joined, the minister advised him to leave his father, and that Jesus would approve of it—setting these words to sustain him in his unholy act."

"The father shall be divided against the son, and the son against the father."—Luke 12: 53.

"If any man come to me, and hate not his father and mother and wife, and children and brethren and sisters, he can not be my disciple.—Luke 14: 26. Again, Luke 15: 29. 30.—And the young man under age, on the advise of his minister, left his home for Christ's sake.

And we are informed, that at the very time this minister of God was thus dealing with young Tillotson, in separating him from his father, he was doing his best to beget a Methodist soul on Catholic stock, under influence of the spirit, in a very different manner.

Tuesday, 16th of May, we went to Desota, twenty-two miles from Kansas City. This little town is situated on the Kaw River, and will soon be a railroad town. It has fine advantages in the midst of good timber, good water, a new railroad in process of construction, and to be in running order this fall. We lectured here four times to full houses, and gave one seance and many fine tests, among which were the following:

NO. ONE, TO THE METHODIST MINISTER.

His character given by his spirit sister. He tried to avoid identifying the sister, and his be lief, but signally failed, and fully corroborated all we said.

NO. TWO—THE SPIRIT OF AN INDIAN.

Big John came and was fully identified, together with one hundred other tests of spirit life and power.

Among the efficient workers and fearless ones in Desota, we found the Abbot's, Robinson's, [illegible] Myers. We tarried in the pleasant [illegible] Abbot and his charming lady, [illegible] had many a ride over the broad [illegible], visiting the fine farm houses of [illegible] Crozier, Belden, Rogers and others. Truly, "droughty Kansas" is a well watered eden.

The Methodists got up a big pow-wow close to our hall, and yelled, shouted, sang, and prayed themselves hoarse, in order to silence the "devil," but he would not be still, and as is always the case, came out ahead.

On Saturday the 20th, we returned to Kansas City. While at the Lenape depot, on K. and P. railroad, and when in the act of buying a ticket, we heard a harsh, crooking, crow-like voice, behind us, and thus it said:

"That's him."

"No," said voice number two.

"Yes, 'tis,—that's him,—yay, old fellah; as'nt you the man what spoke at Desota last night and t'other day?"

"Yes; we have been lecturing there," we replied.

"Yer a poothy man. Yer don't believe in any God. Yer'd oughter be tarr'd and feathered, and ducked in the mud. Yer had, and I'd help do it, too. Yer don't believe in a God! Yer don't believe in a God!"

"How do you know?" we asked.

"'Cause our minister said so, and ise hearn others say it, too. Yer don't believe in a God."

"Do you believe in the Bible, madam?" we asked.

"Yes I dose."

"Well, we advise you to remember Paul's advise."

"What's that?" she yelled.

We answered.—1st Tim., 2d chap.: 12, 14 verses.

"But I suffer not a woman, to usurp authority over the man, but to be in silence."

But Adam was not deceived, but the woman being deceived was in the transgression. Again we say with Paul, "Hold your tongue or keep your head covered, and mind your husband."

"I don't care for Paul, nor you, and I won't hold my tongue—and I won't hold my tongue, so thar."

We pity the man that boards with that woman, and do not wonder that Adam cried aloud before God, when he gave him Eve, wo-man.

Tuesday, May 23d. We leave to-day for Hodges, Leavenworth Co., Kan., lecturing four evenings and giving one seance—concluding Friday evening the 26th.

Hodge and Star schoolhouses are twelve miles southwest of Leavenworth City, and in a fine farming country.

We gave many fine tests. We found warm and true friends, and made many for the cause, and some converts. We would call the attention of our brothers and sisters to the necessity of working faithfully in the country. We make it a rule to spend one-half of our time in the rural districts, instead of seeking to be settled in large towns, holding it to be good, "to be well shaken before taken, ad nauseum." We believe that is good Indian.

We returned to Kansas City on the 27th.

Tuesday, May 30th, left for Gardener, Johnson Co., Kan. We were invited by Brother Taylor, of Gardener, who boasted of how much he is doing for Spiritualism. We believe him to be doing more for the Orthodox churches than Spiritualism. We spoke twice in an unplastered, unfinished, uncomfortable stone box, called a church; and it was deemed a great favor to get into this pen. We spoke twice in Gardener, once in Olathe, and then went to Spring Hill, and we found Brother Taylor's management a failure all through. Nor do we want an invitation from any man or Spiritualist for a course of lectures, who is not our friend.

When we reached Spring Hill, we found out little, any, preparation made for us,—Brother Taylor's statement to us to the contrary notwithstanding. We called on our invalid Brother Davidson,—made a statement of the case to him, and through him, Bro's. Winners, More, Dr's. Tremain and Parker, we got the schoolhouse,—called together the people, and had a good meeting. Brother B. came to the rescue, and we were well compensated. We were well treated by Sister Taylor and her family at Gardener, and amongst the stanch and true advocates of Spiritualism, we found Brother Francis and lady and Sister Taylor, all that could be asked. Brother Taylor is an able farmer; keeps a good country hotel, but can not run spiritual meetings to our liking. Gardener is a fine country place, and is a good farming country.

A certain Chicago firm—one the son of a Methodist minister, whose father lives in Chicago, started a store in Gardener, and another in Olathe, all affiliating with the Methodist church, and in their own language, taking no interest in this thing, Spiritualism,—"ailed. The son of the minister has failed several times since 1854, for we have known of him all of the time, and in this failure turns out a free will lover; and while his honest little wife was attending to the store in Gardener, he, the minister's son, a good Methodist, was keeping his mistress in Olathe; and when detected by his ill-used wife, owned that he had kept this woman eight years. How for the church and its morals!

And Peter said, Lo, we have left all, and followed thee. And he (Jesus) said unto them, Verily, I say unto you, there is no man that hath left house or parents, or brethren, or wife, or children, for the kingdom of God's sake, who shall not receive manifold more in this present time, and in the world to come, life everlasting—Luke 18: 28, 29, 30.

And Joseph the minister's son done as Peter did—left all. Who breaks up families?

Saturday, June 10th, we go through a fine farming country to Ft. Scott, at which place we shall hold forth Saturday evening, and twice each Sunday during June, 1871. We shall have more to say of this enterprising Western town, by and by.

Monday, June 5th, we go to La Cygne, county seat of Lynn Co., Kan.,—a young town, only two years old next September. The site of the town is in a beautiful valley, surrounded by mounds, hills, forests and rivers. Two years ago to-day, it was an open prairie, now a town of many hundred inhabitants, and surrounded by flourishing farms and good farmers. No one can pass through this valley without admiring its picturesque scenery. Standing upon the top of Kline's Mound, you look down upon an Eden,—not without its serpent, however. You look beyond the borders into Missouri. West Point just visible in the southeast; at your feet La Cygne; beyond La Cygne, beautiful farming land dotted with cabins and farm houses. All around you flow on the tributaries of the Osage River, which pours its mighty volume, made up of many little streams, into the muddy waters of the Missouri, which rolling on through many a league is married to the father of waters, the Mississippi,—after which there is in this marriage, as in many other marriages, a general rile; but this marriage is of God, and can not be divorced by Christian laws, hence it must forever be in a rile.

We lectured in La Cygne four times, giving two seances, at which we gave many fine tests, of which the following will please our readers:

No. 1. "We saw a spirit standing near us, who impressed us that he was a lawyer."—fully recognized.

No. 2. The character and life libels of Mr. W.,—fully recognized.

No. 3. A singer. We saw his sister and daughter, and described them—they giving the incidents of his life. Correctly.

We gave eighty other tests—all of which were identified. We made seven statements which were not identified.

La Cygne is a live town, and her people are a go-ahead people. We met many here we had known and met in Wisconsin. There are the Davis', Beeche's, Heath's, Currie's, and Olney's—all of whom we had met in Wisconsin.

E. V. Smith is the working man here, with able helpers in Bro's. Davis, Kline, Beach, and their ladies. Nor are these the only ones, who lend a helping hand.

We started at the good home of Dr. Davis, and enjoyed ourselves well. We call attention to the La Cygne House railroad eating depot, where a man can get a good square meal for reasonable rates, and plenty of time to eat it.

E. V. Wilson's Appointments for July, 1871.

All of our friends will please govern themselves accordingly.

July 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, and 7—Saturday, Sunday Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday; lecturing twice on Sunday, morning at 11 o'clock, evening at 7½, and every weekday evening at 8½ o'clock, at Carthage, Mo.

We will be in Springfield, Mo., on Saturday evening, Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, and Sunday evening at 8 o'clock; Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings, July 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13 and 14, 1871—eight lectures.

In Marshfield, Mo., four lectures, beginning on Saturday evening, continuing Sunday, two lectures and one on Monday evening, July 15, 16 and 17.

We will hold a three-days meeting in Brother John W. Smith's new hall, in the village of McHenry, McHenry County, Ill., beginning on Friday evening and closing on Sunday evening, July 21, 22 and 23, four lectures; seance on Saturday afternoon. The friends in McHenry county and on the borders of Illinois and Wisconsin will mark the time and be on hand. Let us have a good time.

We will be at our posts in Chicago, Elgin, Rockford, Ill.; in Janesville, Clinton, Darien, and other places, cannot do better than leave the heated cities on Saturday, the 24th, and enjoy the pure country air over the Sabbath, and get good health, appetite and Spiritual religion.

There is a first class hotel connected with the hall, besides the friends of Spiritualism are a live people, and will do all they can to entertain friends from abroad.

Come to McHenry; this will be the only three-days meeting we shall hold inside of fifty miles of Chicago this year.

We will be in Iowa and Minnesota after the 17th of August to the 1st of November, 1871. We have eight evenings during the time mentioned for.

We are not settled, "and speaking us before taking," makes us all the better.

Let us came together in love—let us separate in peace.

And while together let us reason.

EXPLANATION.

Mrs. Wilcoxson to J. Tinney.

DEAR SIR:—I was not a little surprised when within twenty-four hours Dr. Sherman, of this city, calling my attention to your recent article in the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL, I found myself advertised as abusing you. Really, what a world of misconception will arise from a little act of omission or commission on the part of either writer or printer! Believe me, sir, I had no more thought of referring to J. Tinney, of Westfield, N. Y., when that clause came from my pen, than I had of "the Man in the Moon." I observed that the compositor had set up the word Tinney instead of Finney, as it should be, but supposed everybody would know I meant S. J. Finney, who so ingloriously set himself up as inspector of mediumship, and the incorrigible Judge in that self-constituted tribunal—the Providence Convention notoriety. Because I knew the truthful, devoted character of Miss Mary Jordan, then one of the finest mediums of the age, and read his open, defiant denunciations of her as an impostor, and his propositions to discard dark circles, etc., his name came in to fill up the trio. It was this and nothing more. But of course your article has been read by hundreds who will never see mine, and the idea prominent there is, that I have most unjustly wronged you. Let me suggest to you a safe rule when thus liable to mistakes. First, and before publishing any grievance, address the fancied sinner personally and privately, then, if you are right and he or she is proved to be guilty, "tell it to the church." Like myself you are liable to mistakes, and I have learned in my own life-experience, that "a little prudence saves a world of pain." As for your articles, excuse me when I say, I have not read them, and can not, of course, understand your position. With my still weak, and often painful head,—the result of my almost fatal sickness of last winter,—many excellent articles must be postponed till a future occasion.

In truth and sincerity,

•M. J. WILCOXSON.

LITERARY.

Peters' Musical Monthly.—Music can no longer be considered a luxury, and those who spend fabulous sums in purchasing sheet music, are simply throwing their money away. If our musical friends will take the trouble to procure a copy of Peters' Musical Monthly, they will see what their wiser friends are doing—namely, getting better music at one and two cents apiece than they are buying at thirty, forty, and fifty cents. Each number of this valuable publication contains thirty six pages of music, printed from full-size music plates, embracing sacred and secular songs, duets, choruses, polkas, waltzes, and twenty pieces. The July number commences Volume VIII., and contains thirteen pieces of music, neatly bound, that would cost just four dollars and fifty cents in sheet-form. You can get it by mail, post-paid, by sending thirty cents to J. L. Peters, 599 Broadway, New York.

Atlantic Monthly.—The July number of the Atlantic exhibits a remarkable combination of talent. Longfellow, Lowell, Agassiz, Higginson, Howells, George Eliot, and Brette Harte have with others united to give its pages brilliancy and solidity. Mr. Fields, in "Our Whispering Gallery," continues his recollections of Dickens, and publishes several of the novelist's gay, dashing letters to Prof. Felton. "Armgart," a fine dramatic poem by George Eliot, will well repay a careful reading. The "Sapphic," by Higginson, is valuable as a historic record. T. M. Brewer gives some interesting facts in relation to the swallow. The Atlantic is always good, and this number is one of the best.

Eclectic Magazine.—The July number of this is at hand, and as it commences a new volume, the publisher very properly intimates that it is a very good time to subscribe. It is scarcely necessary for us to repeat here the special features of the Eclectic which commend it to all lovers of good literature. It is a perfect cyclopedia of current foreign thought, the last number alone containing more than a hundred articles on all those topics, political, scientific, literary and social, which have claimed the attention of the world during the period which it covers. The Eclectic is one of the very best magazines published, and we would commend it to all who desire gleanings from the best foreign literature. The price of the Eclectic is $5 per annum; 45 cents per copy. The publisher is E. R. Pelton, 108 Fulton street, New York.

The Overland Monthly, for July, is, as usual, full of interest. This, the only literary magazine published on the Pacific coast, is in no way inferior to its Eastern contemporaries, and its home interests is more interesting. John H. Carmany & Co., publishers, San Francisco.

The Radical.—The July number of the Radical seeks an early start among the periodical candidates for favor. J. Stahl Patterson treats of the "Stone Ages" in the leading essay. "The Death of Borne," by Chas. T. Brooks, is a translation from the German of Beck. "Goethe's Conversations," translated by C. G. Shackford, continues to increasing interest as each new chapter is published. "The Reorganized Republic," a sterling article on government, by Conrad Weigand. John T. Sargent gives some very interesting reminiscences and unpublished letters by Theodore Parker. The Radical is always instructive and entertaining. The price of the Radical is $3 per year. Single copies, thirty-five cents. Published by Sydney H. Moore, 25 Bromfield street, Boston.

Phrenological Journal.—The July number of this hand-book of phrenology and physiology comes freighted with its usual supply of facts in regard to the laws of life and health. The department of ethnology contains an article by J. P. Jackson, on "The Last of the Tasmanians." "Leaders in the Mormon Reform Movement" is the heading of an article in which is embodied a short biographical sketch, with portrait, of the men who are at the head of the movement to crush Mormonism in Utah. The Phrenological Journal deservedly stands high among the reform journals in this country. It is published by Samuel R. Wells, 389 Broadway, New York.

Our Young Folks is crowded with delightful things of various nature. There are three additional chapters of "Jack Hazard and his fortunes," and a poem by S. T. Trowbridge; a historical narrative by James Parton; a couple of charming lessons in natural history, by Charles A. Walker and Helen Hunt, besides verses and stories by Lucy Larcom, Helen C. Weeks, and others. The department filled by "Our Young Contributors" is one of the most interesting and useful in the magazine.

The Nursery, like the little child for whose amusement it is created, always wins a smile and pleasant word. The mothers welcome it as heartily as do their little folks, for it is an effective resource when plaything's lose their charm and the restless little brain is demanding something novel and new.

The Ladies' Own Magazine.—This favorite with the ladies arrives in good time, as usual. It is devoted to fashion, literature, and to the elevation of woman from her present bonded estate to one of a higher freedom. The literary department contains some very readable stories which are in bright contrast to the usual trashy "light literature" of the day. Price only $1.00 per year. Address M. Cora Bland, Indianapolis, Indiana.

AN HONEST MAN OR WOMAN when they desire a newspaper discontinued, inclose arrearages, and say so. Exceptions to this rule are almost invariably found among church members, or those leaning that way. They trump up a pious lie to get rid of paying honest dues. Such people will be promptly exposed, so far as this paper is concerned.

An Entirely New Proposition.

We now have in press, and will be ready to fill orders before this notice reaches our readers a splendid new book, entitled THE SUNDAY QUESTION, and SELF-CONTRADICTIONS OF THE BIBLE.

This work consists of 123 large, closely printed pages. It is an exhaustive review of the so-called Sunday question, and self-contradictions of the Bible. The work shows the so-called divine authority for the supposed holy day, to be the cunning device of designing priests rather than the inspiration of an Infinite God! This work, which we sell for the low price of fifty cents, and send the same free of postage on the receipt of the money, we will send to any old subscriber on receipt of seventy-five cents, together with the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL to any new subscriber on trial for three months; or, we will send the same work and the JOURNAL for three months on trial direct to a new subscriber, on the receipt of seventy-five cents. For one dollar, we will send for a new subscriber, the JOURNAL three months and the above-named book, together with that very remarkable book called LIFE'S Inebriate; or The Wonders of the Universe Revealed to Man.

We hope that every subscriber to whom we are now sending the JOURNAL will avail him or herself of this generous offer, and thus secure these books, as well as to thus aid in doubling the number of the subscribers to the JOURNAL.

Address S. S. Jones, 189 South Clark street, Chicago, Ill.

Mrs. Robinson's Tobacco Antidote.

The most certain and perfectly harmless antidote for the poisonous effects, and remedy for the tobacco appetite, is known by the above name.

It is compounded by MRS. A. H. Robinson, the celebrated medium of Chicago, while entranced by a celebrated chemist, long in spirit life. This antidote is warranted to break the habit of using tobacco by the inveterate lover of the weed, when the directions (on each box) are followed.

Agents for selling the same throughout the country are wanted. For sale, wholesale and retail, at this office. Price $2.00 per box—sent by mail free of postage, on receipt of the money.

Obituary.

This morning's train from the east brings precious freight—the earthly remains of one of those sweet, pure beings who seem to be permitted only to blossom in this cradle, unfriendly world.

Georgiana Lascelle Hale, born in this city, grew to womanhood, and the violet loves to grow and blossom in quietude and shade, her excellence and purity of character known to but a small circle, and by that small circle greatly admired and fondly loved. Three years since a bride, she has been but briefly spared to fond husband and loving friends, and now joins her infant sister in the world of love beyond the tomb.

Farewell, sweet Georgia! On thy burial casket to-day we lay immortelles which pale beside thy sweet, celestial face; wherever we lay them where thy spouse and the willow shall watch over thee, and soon we shall follow—may we surely follow thee to thy new home in heaven.

The funeral will be held at the residence of her father, Mr. George W. Lascelle, number 93 Jefferson St., at 10 o'clock this morning. Friends of the family are invited to attend.

—Syracuse Paper.

We deeply sympathize with Brother Lascelle, the father of the deceased as well as with the other mourning relatives and friends.

While Brother Lascelle was connected with this office, often did we hear him refer to his beloved daughter in terms of deep affection. Her health was delicate, and her early change from the material to the spiritual plane of life was looked for by him with fear which is now painfully realized.

Brother Lascelle is a Spiritualist, and knows well that that event however painful to loved ones remaining, to her is a boon of unspeakable joy; a change from a world of suffering to a world of unalloyed happiness.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

MEDICINA PSYCHICA! ANIMA MEDICA!!

☞ "Dico hominem externum esse animal: Internum vero non animal sed imaginem DEI VERAM!"—VAN HELMONT.

THIERS' ODYLLIC WAFERS,

The most safe, salutatory, and effectual Nervine Medium Developer and Curative in all

DISEASES OF THE NERVES,

Including Neuralgia, Epilepsy, Hysteria, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Gout, Lumbago, Sciatica, Chorea, (St. Vitus' Dance) Depression of Spirits, Melancholy, etc.

Sent per mail, in letter form. Price $1.00 per package. Two or three packages mailed free for 25 cents.

Address, W. F. J. THIERS, M. D., NEUROPATHIST, No. 72 I St., Washington, D. C.

v10 n11 tf

THE

HOLLOW GLOBE;

Or, the World's Agitator and Reconciler.

A Treatise on the Physical Conformation of the Earth.

PRESENTED THROUGH THE ORGANISM OF

M. L. SHERMAN, M.D.,

AND WRITTEN BY

PROF. WM. F. LYON.

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

"THIS BOOK is addressed to the reasoning intelligence of Humanity,—to all inquiring and reflective minds, everywhere upon the earth.

"We earnestly request the reader to suspend his judgment concerning the ideas advanced, until he has carefully perused its pages; when he may be better prepared to form his opinions, and offer his criticisms.

"We do not claim that the teachings contained in this work are infallible, neither are they presented in an authoritative manner. But we do claim that it contains more original, natural and startling ideas, which are of great interest to civilized humanity, and which seem to be entirely irrefutable, than any book of its size that has made its appearance in modern times.

"We, therefore, commend it to the careful consideration of the modern thinker, being fully persuaded that its pages contain a large fund of thought which may open to his mind new fields of research, thus tending to enlarge his understanding, and enlighten his intellect."

EXTRACT FROM INTRODUCTION.

"The central idea contained in the following work, and the one that most of these chapters are designed to substantiate, is, that this globe is constructed in the form of a hollow sphere, with a shell some thirty to forty miles in thickness, and that the interior surface, which is a beautiful world in a more highly developed condition than the exterior, is accessible by a circuitous and spirally formed aperture that may be found in the unexplored open Polar Sea, and this opening affords easy navigation by a broad and deep channel leading from our surface to the other, and that the largest ships or steamers may sail or steam either way, with as much facility as they can now through any other winding or somewhat crooked channel. And we have endeavored to show as clearly as possible, that the physical formation of the globe is such as to be perfectly compatible with an outer and inner world, or two worlds instead of one."

12 mo., 467 pp. Price $2.00; postage 20 cents.

•,• For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

[Reprinted from the London edition of 1785 by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, Chicago.]

THE

BHAGVAT-GEETA,

Or Dialogues of

KREESHNA AND ARJOON.

In eighteen lectures, with notes. Translated from the original Sanskrit, or ancient language of the Brahmins.

BY CHARLES WILKINS,

Senior merchant in the service of the Honorable, the East India Company, in their Bengal Establishment.

The antiquity of the original and the veneration in which it has been held for so many ages by a very considerable portion of the human race, renders it one of the greatest curiosities ever presented to the literary world.

Our edition of the BHAGVAT-GEETA (sometimes called the Hindoo New Testament) is print-ed on heavy tinted paper and beautifully bound. It is in great demand, orders for nearly all of the first edition having been received before it left the binder's hands.

Price $1.25; postage, 12 cents.

•,• For sale, wholesale and retail, by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 187 & 189 S. Clark st., Chicago.

LIFE'S UNFOLDINGS

OR THE

WONDERS OF THE UNIVERSE

REVEALED TO MAN.

The Medium, in his address to the public says:

The Medium (David Corless, of Huntley's Grove McHenry Co., Ill.) through whom this work was given, has been a careful observer of the phenomena of "Modern Spiritualism" for over twenty years and during that time he has been the humble Medium through which has been given literary and scientific lectures have been given to attentive listeners. Of himself, he can only say he is an unassuming farmer, far advanced in years. He asks for this pamphlet a careful and attentive perusal.

The Introduction entitled "The Unvailing," treats of man as the grand objective ultimate of Life's Unfoldings:

He also stands at the pinnacle of all organized Life in the native purity of all things.

On page twenty-four, the author treats of "the way mediums paint likenesses, in the true order of the development of the arts and sciences.

In part second, under the great head of mysteries Revealed, the author treats of "How Mankind Manifest their presence through Physical Bodies of Mediums. How the writing is done. How we influence Mediums to speak. The fullness of all kinds of language investigated. The ring test and the carrying of Musical Instruments around the room explained."

This work is neatly got up and consists of seventy-three closely printed pages and we hesitate not to say that it contains more original thought upon important subjects, a few only of which we have enumerated, than any other work of equal size we have seen.

•,• Price 80 cents; postage, 8 cents. For sale wholesale and retail by the publishers, the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 South Clark St., Chicago.

THE MAGNETIC TREATMENT.

SEND TEN CENTS TO DR. ANDREW STONE, TROY, N. Y., and obtain a large, highly illustrated book on this system of vitalizing treatment.

v9 n20 tf.

Bible in India and Hindoo New Testament.

We will send the above-named rare books free of postage, on receipt of $3.50.

BHAGVAT GEETA.

The Hindoo New Testament.

The above-named very neatly executed book, on fine tinted paper, embossed in gold, is now being delivered as fast as orders are received. Price only $1 25; postage, 16 cents. Everybody should have this wonderful book.

RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL.

"HARMONIAL PHILOSOPHY" · HOLY BIBLE · ZEND-AVESTA · SHASTER · LIBRARY · BOX 1498 · 26 Nº 13

"THE ARTS AND SCIENCES, LITERATURE [illegible] DEVOTED TO [illegible] AND PHILOS[illegible] ROMANCE AND GENERAL REFORM."

BANTA-CHICAGO

$3,00 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.] Truth wears no mask, bows at no human shrine, seeks neither place nor applause: she only asks a hearing. [SINGLE COPIES EIGHT CENTS.

S. S. JONES, PUBLISHER AND PROPRIETOR. CHICAGO, JULY 15, 1871. VOL. X.—NO. 17.

Phenomenal.

WHAT IS IT?

Wonderful Manifestations.

BRO. JONES:—Agreeable to promise, I send you a slip from the Du Quoin Tribune, of yesterday. I am credibly informed that the writer is an ex-Methodist preacher, formerly of this place, but now residing in that neighborhood. It does not differ materially from the first I sent you. If it is of any use to you, I shall be fully compensated.

Yours truly,

DANIEL WHITE.

Du Quoin, Ill., June 30th, 1871.

EDITORS DU QUOIN TRIBUNE:—Thinking the following account of reported witchcraft in this community may interest your readers, I place it at your disposal:

About five miles southeast of this place resides one Mr. James Williams, who has two daughters, aged respectively about sixteen and eighteen years. For some time they have had strange symptoms, indicating insanity. Their father took them to Kentucky, hoping a change of surroundings would help them. For the time they seemed better, but after returning home, the former symptoms soon returned. This state of things lasted till about ten days ago, when the entire community, miles around, was thrown into feverish excitement, and reports of witches and their wonderful feats, filled the air which ever way one turned.

The following are some of the rumors which wild excitement, with a wonderful amount of credulity, circulated with winged rapidity, many believing them:

Every evening, just as twilight came on, these young ladies were attacked by witches, when with wonderful agility, they would climb the house, or rather jump on top of it, run and dance over the roof, sing beautiful songs, lie on the comb of the roof, glide down on its edge and swing off, holding by their teeth to the eave, then suspending themselves in the air, throw themselves back again on the roof, pass over the gable end, and go through a small opening 10x12 inches into the garret, with as much ease and rapidity as a squirrel, and then come down and commence hunting pins and flies to eat. They never failed to catch a fly, and could pick up pins anywhere on the floor, or in the yard; the house had been swept, and they surrounded by a circle to watch them, and they would pick up pins on the clean swept boards when no other persons could see one. Some affirmed they had jumped from the back door of the residence on the top of the house on which they performed their feats, which stands about thirty feet distant, and then jump from this house on to a tree thirty yards off. These spells would come on as night came, and leave them with the return of day. During the day they would remain rational, and converse freely of their condition.

The following was reported as their own version of the matter:

One evening shortly ago, just at twilight the oldest saw a woman (witches are always women) ride up to the gate on a beautiful gold and dapple gray horse, who invited her to go to meeting with her; she refused, when the woman put the tip of her fore finger on the tip of her, the girl's fore finger, and without an effort, placed her on the horse behind her, and rode off; finally they arrived at a house where were congregated a great many most beautifully dressed women. Taking her to a cell entered by a hatchway, the women opened it, and told her to go in, then give her soul to the devil, and she would become a witch, and be able to do anything she wished in this world; this she refused to do, when instantly she found herself seated on a pole in her father's barn. Since then every evening the witch comes, and torments her for refusing to be a witch. She says she can see the woman who does it, and knows her, but whenever she attempts to tell who she is, she chokes her, and throws her into spasms.

Such is said by those who talked with her, to be her story. Hundreds go every night to see the sight; and not being afraid of witches—for I do not believe there was ever such a thing in the world, or out of it, I concluded I would go, and see for myself what foundation there was for the reports. So on Saturday night I rode down to witness the scene. On the way I was asked, what I thought of witches; if I believed in witches,—how witches were made, and who made them; if I thought it was the witch of Endor, etc. To which I replied, I don't think of witches; I don't believe in witches; don't think they were made at all; don't know anything about the witch of Endor—have not found her name in my Bible where Samuel was raised from the dead, etc., and thus rode bravely on till we came, just at twilight, in sight of the house, and there they were, right on top of the house, standing, side by side, singing, waving their arms, and turning round and round. I never had, I ever; I never had, never have, and never will believe in witches, and I was determined to be courageous; but as their beautiful voices rolled out from the housetop on the still twilight, plaintive, mournful, sweet, their arms waving, bodies turning this way and that, looking in their light dresses more like fairies, ghosts or any unearthly apparition than human beings—have after wave of chill came up my back, and I felt light almost as air. While I will not believe in witches, it was not the only suitable place I had ever seen for them; and if such thing could be, they surely would be there, and there, right there. We hitched our horses, and I told mine not to let the witches ride him, as I must ride him home that night, and examining his mane to be sure that there were no stirrups in it, we walked to the crowd who stood gathered around the house, on which were the young ladies. Distance lends enchantment to the view, especially of an evening when ghosts and witches are supposed to be about. On nearing the house, I could see nothing remarkable in two persons walking and singing on top of a house, and so expressed myself; but there was the window, they told me, and if I would wait, I would be convinced when they had gone in at that. I told them, though not very small myself, I was confident I could go through it, for saying which, I got laughed at; soon, however, one of them came down to the corner of the house, not over from the comb of the roof, as had been reported, and climbing along the cracks (a log house) till she was directly under the window, and reaching up, took hold of the bottom casing, and easily passed in. Soon after, Mr. F. M. Martin, a large man whom you often see in Du Quoin, climed up and went his head and shoulders through, which effectually spoiled their feat. When they came down, the crowd formed a circle round them, to prevent them running off. The circle was large, as they were not less than two hundred people present to witness the performance, for such, by this time, it had got to be. Now came the most distressing sight I ever witnessed. Two young ladies, rendered wholly unconscious of what they were doing, by some unknown cause, running about hunting pins and flies to eat. A coal-oil lamp being held to give light, caused a pin to shine, and be more readily picked up than in day-light. It is hard to believe, but there were villains there who threw pins on the ground to see those poor senseless creatures pick them up and try to eat them. After running around, and across the ring some time, stooping often to pick up a pin, when one of their friends would spring in, and catch their hands to wrest it from them, which would be followed by a severe struggle, she struggling to get the pin to her mouth, and often succeeding in swallowing it; after this had lasted some time, they fell with something like a spasm, when they were carried in the house and laid on a bed. They had very slight convulsions, and seemed to have fallen more from exhaustion than any other cause. After near half an hour, they came out of these spells, and commenced eating flies. There is no mistake about this. I actually saw them with wonderful expertness catch flies off the wall, and eat them in spite of the watchfulness of their friends, and then vomit them up. It was horrible to look at, yet there were fiends there laughing at it. During these spells they would go to a French harp which they own, and are very fond of, and play and sing catches of wild music. After witnessing these scenes till ten or eleven o'clock, I sought an interview with their parents, tried to prevail upon them to send the people home, and get their daughters quiet. They firmly believed they were bewitched, and wanted the people to witness it. I plead with and told them it was impossible, there were no witches, that excitement would kill them, and urged them for the love of their interesting daughters to put a stop to it. I told them reason was dethroned, that disease had hold of their minds, that some villainous quack doctor had perhaps given them a fatal dose, and to send for the best medical advice they could get, and mentioned several physicians whom I could recommend, but all to no purpose. I then went home feeling sad and disgusted. Yesterday afternoon, E. Rose, Esq., Mr. W. H. McCan and myself rode down to see them in their lucid moments, and converse with them. They seem sad, and look as if they were just convalescing from a long spell of sickness, they walk about the house, and converse intelligently during the day. Mr. Williams now says he is satisfied they are not bewitched, but that some villain has drugged them. At several times he has found papers of medicine in their hands during the night, slipped there by some one. When in their crazy spells they will eat anything they can get, and of this advantage has been taken to keep up the drugging. If this be so, doubtless the same fiend who gives the drug, scatters the pins for them in the night.

However this may be, there is something very strange about it. They do swallow the pins and flies, I saw it with my own eyes, and saw them vomit them up. They are crazy at night, and sensible in the day. Yesterday they sang and played for us, and tried to entertain us, but, oh! how sad! Some of your physicians ought in the interest of humanity and the science of their profession, come out and witness these cases.

SUBSCRIBER.

Fitts Hill, Ill., June 23d, 1871.

Charles H. Read.

The Spiritualists tell wonderful stories. Some of their tales make the legends of Charlemagne and the exploits of Munchausen seem tame. The last Spiritualistic story that has come to us, from a perfectly reliable source of course, relates to the extraordinary performances of the spirits through the mediumship of one Mr. Read, whose hands were tied and sealed together, and whose arms were tightly bound with ropes passing over his coat; yet his coat was taken off in a twinkling, in a way that showed it must have been taken to pieces, and put together again by spiritual agency. Heavy rings of solid iron were put on his arms, and were taken off and put on again in a manner which showed that they must have been disintegrated and joined together again as before. Read confounded the Harvard College Professors, which is not particularly wonderful; if we mistake not quite a number of materialized have done that; in fact, they have been confounded so often that we wonder any first-class medium should think it worth the while to go through that unsatisfactory process again, particularly as they perversely refuse to stay confounded. But a certain clergyman living in the neighborhood, determining to put Read to a crucial test, brought rings of steel to a seance where he was to perform; but when the entertainment was half over, our clerical friend suddenly withdrew, no one knowing why. Shortly afterwards it was ascertained that one of his steel rings had been put upon his own neck; and the steel being so hard that blacksmiths could not file it off, he was obliged to go hundreds of miles to a physical medium who could relieve him.

We simply state "the facts," only regretting that the clergyman had not the moral courage to tell the story himself, and show the ring with his neck in it to the public. If miracles could prove the truth of a religious or other system, then Spiritualism could lay greater claims to credence than any modern faith. But miracles convince only those who are predisposed to believe in marvels, and only a religion strong in reason is sufficient to carry a heavy load of them.—Golden Age.

From the Harrisburgh, Pa., Telegraph.

Reply to an Undeveloped Spirit.

In the Morning State Journal of the 13th we find an article headed "Spirits in Harrisburgh, Ignorance trifling with Theology, A Mystery that is a Humbug."

I have been requested to answer the spirit that prompted the writer to pen that article, and in so doing I must confess I am at a loss for language to express my astonishment. I, with many others, could not think it possible that there lives in this city an educated man so devoid of Christian honor as to charge or insinuate that a good old Christian gentleman like Mr. Potts, and his two worthy sons, would be guilty of perjury or practice deception, in any manner or form. He says that in company with two friends, one an honest, conscientious and intelligent Spiritualist, and the other a high-toned and unquestioned Christian, on Sunday afternoon, visited the residence of Mr. Potts, on Broad street, where they were informed were art productions of the spirits. The gentleman of the house, Mr. Potts, received them in a Christian, courteous manner, conducting them through his rooms on the second and third floors of his house. On the walls of the rooms were hung a collection of drawings which he supposed were crayons, but were assured by the old gentleman they were the work of spirits. He said neither him nor his high-toned Christian friend made any pretense to correct judgement of the correctness of designs, yet in referring to the beautiful representation of a decayed stump and two large bunches of grapes, he says the stump represents a pig's tail, and the grapes ears of corn. How different good spirits tell us; the decayed stump represents our mortal body after death, and the grapes the spirit, after death, springing forth in newness of life, bearing fruit unto perfection, eternal progression.

The picture referred to has been examined by honest, experienced artists, who make no pretense to high-toned Christianity, and all have pronounced them the best and most extraordinary productions of art they ever saw, when taken into consideration they were drawn and colored in the space of fifteen minutes, without mortal hands, and that in a closed dark room. Other drawings, he says, they examined in turn, in all of which they detected, with ease, the ignorant touches of human defects—everything about them savored of corrupt flesh, and they smell of humbuggery—and that they are sure they are the work of ill-trained and clumsy earthly hands, moved by a mind low-bred and shallow, but knavish enough to indulge in miserable deceptions.

I would ask your Christian readers what they think of the above kind of high-toned Christianity. If that is the language of high-toned Christian men, I confess I know nothing about true, heart-felt religion. What, I ask, but a wicked, undeveloped spirit could ever have prompted a man to use such terms to those who showed no other spirit than kindness to them?

Some time last fall or winter Mr. Potts and his two sons were requested by a friend from Illinois to send him their artist in reference to their spirit pictures. They went before Mayor Verbeke, in my presence, and upon their solemn oath declared that the drawings exhibited in his rooms, and the picture presented to Mr. E. V. Wilson were not drawn, sketched or colored by mortal hands, and that no living being either furnished pencil or colors for them, and yet, in the face of their oaths, that undeveloped spirit would dare to publish such base slander and call them knaves and mountebanks.

A wealthy gentleman, a citizen resident (who by the by is no Spiritualist), after reading that base, cowardly article, remarked: "I know Mr. Potts well, and I would sooner take their word than the writer of that article's oath." I have heard other gentlemen say so.

I am at a loss to know what ever could have prompted him, unless he thought it would gain him popularity amongst the opponents of Spiritualism, or give a death blow to Spiritualism in this city. If the latter was his object, I am happy to inform him that in this he has signally failed. Our circles since have been more numerously attended by intelligent ladies and gentlemen, our meetings increasingly interesting, and the tests given proved satisfactory and convincing.

All we ask is an honest investigation and examination of these spirit drawings. Our meetings are free for all honest investigators. Mr. Potts is pleased to see gentlemen and ladies come and see these pictures, and takes pleasure in giving all the information he can.

When the "Undeveloped Spirit's" article was read to him by a gentleman what think you was his reply. He said, "Oh, well, we must expect such things. Worse was said of Jesus. If they had the power now, they would punish us in the same way; it will all do good." This was the language of a Christian Spiritualist, and not high-toned.

Since I commenced writing this the spirits commenced and finished a beautiful picture for me. It was worth seeing. I have it at my house, and most respectfully invite all my neighbors and friends to call and see it and judge of its fineness.

Now, Mr. Editor, a few more remarks and I will leave him to his glory. I should not have written one syllable if it had not been for the base attack on Mr. Potts and his good sons, the latchet of whose shoes he is not worthy to unloose, as far as honesty is concerned.

I have no doubt exceptions will also be taken by that learned spirit to the plain manner I express my thoughts; but I remember of once hearing that good man, the Rev. John Winebrenner, say when asked by a learned, high toned man, why it was he used only plain, common language when he preached? His answer was, "If I can touch the hearts of children, the aged and learned will understand what I say." The sons of Mr. Potts and myself may lack a knowledge of syntax and prosody, and have a mixing up of plurals and singulars, revolting to all like him and his high-toned friend. If they have been fortunate in receiving a more liberal education than we, what has that to do with Spiritualism? Much learning makes some men mad. I care very little what they say about me. I believe in the power of spirits to return. I don't only believe it, but I know my departed spirit friends and relatives under proper conditions can return and identify themselves. I have seen, recognized and talked to them, in the presence of many witnesses. I know what I say. We are all the while receiving valuable and incontrovertible tests, some of which I purpose publishing an account of soon. If you, Mr. Editor, will consent to publish the account of spirit manifestation at Brinkly Female College, as published in the Memphis Avalanche, the Pittsburg, Boston and Chicago papers, the demand for your paper would increase, and would be very interesting to your readers. I will take 50 copies. Yours, respectfully, in the cause of progression.

W. BARR.

Testimonial

DEAR JOURNAL:—Not being a Spiritualist, but an enquirer for light and truth, I would like to state a few tests of spirit power, as it is claimed, given me by Dr. Abba Lord Palmer, through the columns of your interesting paper, of which I am a reader. I visited the medium a short time since, and while sitting at the breakfast table with the family, I remarked that it would be a source of gratification to have my sister described and a communication from her. The medium said if my sister came, she would inform me, and in less than five minutes, she said, "I see a young lady, with dark, curly hair, round features etc; was cheerful and amiable in disposition," thus describing a sister of mine that died seven years since. My hair is a light brown, and not inclined to curl, and we did not resemble each other, so that she did not guess from my looks her contour, age etc. The Doctor then described another spirit, that she thought was the mother of my spirit sister. Now my father's first wife died some thirty years ago, but the medium knew nothing of this. Some one present asked, is she the mother of John?—of Rily? she clapped her hands together saying the mother of John, a half brother of mine,—his name being John Rily McNaigh; but the person who asked this question thought his given name to be only Rily. All were surprised, especially the questioner at the answer given, because the question was asked in that way to catch the medium in an error if possible.

While there I gave her a piece of lead ore taken from a mine, last winter near this place. From it she described the country, the location, and a building close by—a school house, and stated that water was trickling upon the ore, which I had forgotten until reminded by her; also describing one of the miners even to his clothing and manners. Said there were three men in the mine, the general rule being only two. She also described the locality of a mine that has not been explored, but is talked of by the miners. From a pebble she gave me a better description of its original locality than I could; bringing to my recollection a severe pain and some disease I was troubled with at the time of picking it up.

The mediums gave all the leading events of my past life up to the present,—even the events of my journey from Wisconsin to New Boston.

I then gave her a letter from one of my sisters. She did not even read the name but taking it in her hands, closing her eyes, she described the writer of the letter,—even to the dress she wore when I saw her last. From a scrap of writing, she described the contour, manners and disposition of an acquaintance; also her occupation, without a failure. I cannot explain how she told these things, as we were perfect strangers to each other, up to the time of my visit, and no one had told her to my perfect knowledge and satisfaction.

Plattville, Wis. GEORGE MCNAIGH.

Belvidere Seminary.

This is a week of commencements and accounts are reaching us from all the great educational institutions of the country. This beautiful miniature city on the Délaware, is by no means out of fashion. On an eminence commanding a view of vast extent and unrivaled beauty, overlooking the town as well as the country round about, stands BELVIDERE SEMINARY, an institution gradually but surely growing in public favor, which is evidenced by pupils finding their way here from the growing expanding West from the Pine Tree State, that bounds our "away down East," and from cities and towns south of the once important line run by Mason and Dixon, and even from South America. The attractions are a healthy climate, a genial, moral atmosphere, and a system of home influences and philosophical teaching rarely combined in one locality. Over this institution, like the three graces, preside the three sisters Bush, who to a native fitness for teaching the young, have added long experience, careful study, deep thought and an earnest endeavor to make education attractive to the pupils, and lead them by pleasant ways, up the hill of science, keeping their minds so agreeably entertained that they do not weary and faint by the way.

It was our fortune to be present at this commencement, and to find it as worthy of a public record as many of greater pretensions and more extended fame.

In this Institution diplomas are conferred for any department in which the pupil is far enough advanced to be able to graduate, and a portion graduated in the departments of science, literature, some in gymnastics and some as teachers, and the diplomas were distributed accordingly.

Among the important and interesting features was the exhibition in the gymnastic department, so essential to physical health and development, and to which this Institution pays much care and attention, believing that as a mind mind can only be sustained in its vigor by a sound body. This part of the entertainment was exceedingly interesting.—Williamsport, Pa., Gazette and Bulletin.

Somnambulism and Dreams.

BROTHER JONES:—That it is possible for two somnambulists, lying at any angle or at any distance apart to dream the same dream, there can be no doubt, especially if their connections, acquaintances and associates have been the same; and as I have been asked to explain the phenomenon upon the principle of "no magnetic currents," I will state, that, as somnambulists are clear-minded in all their faculties, whether they are in a natural or an artificial somnambulic state, either may read the mind of the other, at any angle or at any distance, independent of any outside influence or condition, and the phenomenon is simply reciprocal mind reading, whether the persons are conscious of having done so or not.

So, too, the faculties of susceptible persons, whether strictly somnambulists or not, can reach out—even when they are otherwise apparently in a natural condition, and fears the approach, or read the mind of persons at any distance, independent of any outside influence, or their own consciousness.

This is simply a power, inherent in and natural to all persons—especially when their faculties are in a somnambulic condition, and as matter, darkness and space offer no obstruction to the exercise of their faculties, it is impossible to say what mind can not effect when in this condition—and as "magnetism," even if it had an existence, could have neither acumen or intelligence, it is impossible that it could be the means of communication, and as all things are present to somnambulists, as well as to spirits, there can be no necessity for a fluid or a current of any kind to convey the mind, which has all the necessary powers within itself,—viz., perception or clear-mindedness, which reaches out, and like the natural eye, observes its surroundings, but unlike it, does so independent of material obstructions.

WM. B. FAHNESTOCK.

Can Spirits Cure Diseases?

BROTHER JONES:—I answer, yes! There can be no doubt of it; but they, like men, must have conditions, or they can not effect anything. If this be so, the question naturally arises, What are the conditions necessary which enable them to do so?

The facts connected with this subject and the necessary explanations, have often been made in previous articles, but still there seems to be a difficulty in some persons to comprehend the simple fact, that the somnambulic condition is necessary, or it will be impossible for them to effect anything, and the idea that spirits or any one else can produce this state, is out of the question—for it is a natural condition to all, and only requires an abstraction of the mind from the body to effect it in the first place, and when it has once been induced, and the proper instructions given when the person is in the condition, it can, ever after, be effected even in an instant, by the will of the subject, independent of any one.

When persons are in this condition, spirits can impress their mind so as to effect cures, and thus impressing the mind is equal to man's telling them to resolve that the disease shall cease to annoy them when they rouse out of the condition.

Impressing the mind, therefore, is the only way that spirits can effect cures, and it does not matter whether the impression of being well is brought about by men or angels, so that the mind of the patient is favorably impressed or resolved.

A belief upon their part, no matter how, or by whom induced, will have the same effect, and be equally efficient, if the idea originated with themselves. So that a resolution is made, or a belief entertained, is all that is necessary.

WM. B. FAHNESTOCK.

—A libel suit has been commenced against the Christian Union by Mrs. Victoria C. Woodhull, who claims that she has suffered $250,000 damages by reason of allusions to her in Mrs. Stowe's story published in the Union.

The Rostrum.

Reported for the Journal.

RELIGIOUS PROGRESSION.

A Discourse by Rev. D. W. Hull, Delivered before the Indiana State Spiritual Association, at Masonic Hall, Indianapolis, Sunday, June 18th, 1871.

"Wherefore the law was our schoolmaster to bring us unto Christ, that we might be justified by faith. —Gal. 3:24"

I have taken this passage for a text, because it is one of the landmarks of religion. A more proper translation of the word schoolmaster would have been pedagogus. We shall attempt to show in this discourse the progress of religious ideas from its early commencement until the present time; that godliness is not now what it was once, and that men grow out of old religious prejudices, and form new bases of faith, as the demand for them increases.

We then stretch back as far as history reaches—beyond the old Mosaic cosmogony—for if the Hindoo astronomy which has come down to us is correct, this people once celebrated their vernal equinox as the sun entered the sign of Libra, instead of Aries, as it is now said to do; and as it takes 2153 years for it to pass through one sign, it will take it six times as long, or 12,918 years for it to pass through six signs, which added to B. C. 388, at which time the sun entered the sign Aries, would make B C. 13,006 years, which would extend back 9 000 years before the time of Adam. These infidel diagrams came down to us with a history telling something about the mode of thought of this ancient people.

They had their hierophants, episcopates, bishops, priests or acers—terms which now have ceased to have solely a theological significance,—placed upon an observatory over their temples, whose business it was to observe the physical phenomena of the heavens, and to make due proclamation to the people who might congregate within the temple, any important changes that were about to take place in the season. Just before the sun entered the sign of Aquarius, the Dog-star, Sirius, was seen to arise, and it was regarded as the harbinger of the coming flood. Accordingly, the priest made the proclamation seven days beforehand of the coming flood, in which the Water-bearer was supposed to empty his vessel into the Nile or Ganges, and cause them to overflow their banks.

The sun being the cause of day and night, and the renewer of the seasons of the year, was regarded as the Great Architect or Royal Arch-Mason of the Universe, and received such appellations as to credit him with supreme power, knowledge and design. Every idea, every passion, and in fact every influence, was represented as a person. It was but natural that the poets should give the sun a name expressive of him as lover of the dawn, the moon, or the earth, and that the offsprings of the sun should also have a name. Taking the personifications out of the poetry of the times, we should understand that the dawn preceded the sun in the morning, and followed him in the evening, and were it not for the different titles expressive of his Godship and her Goddeship, we should know what the poet meant when he tells us the sun caught the dawn and kissed her, but that she fled away and overtook him in the evening.

These poems were recited, however, by the grandmother in the nursery, and each title expressive of a passion, principle, or phenomena in nature, became to the children, actual persons. To-day we are all only overgrown children, receiving and believing these old Hindoo fables as our religion, out of which the infants of yore never grew.

Now it is not an easy matter by the etymology of our Bible, to trace our system of religion back through Chaldea, to Egypt, to India; and believing that India gave of its religion to Egypt, we shall not attempt to show how it came out of Egypt, whatever doubts we may have on that point. Leaving this point, we then proceed to examine the Hebrew religion as it was before the captivity.

This system of religion was a material religion, having no reference to a hereafter, or a life to come. Indeed, very few of that people knew anything of a life beyond. Their whole system was only adapted to the wants of that selfish people. It was not with a promise of a life hereafter, or the dread of punishment in the future life, that induced the Hebrews to live virtuously, but it was for the purpose of prolonging this life, or increasing their happiness whilst here. The commandment is, "Honor thy father and thy mother, that thy days may be long in the earth." "If thou wilt not by any means serve the Lord thy God, then shalt thou be consumed with the burning ague, etc." Here were the promises and the threats, none of them reaching into the beyond. Their sacrifices and oblations reached no farther. They were commanded to make sacrifices to avert certain calamities that might occur in their life, or to hapify their lives and prolong their existence. They were even commanded to atone for sins of ignorance, that is, get sins forgiven that they may have committed, of which they were unaware; for their deity was a capricious being, who was liable at any time to fall into a rage about some trifle, that no one could find out until he had wreaked his vengeance on them, when he would stop and tell them the cause of all the mischief, and require of them to repent when it was too late to do any good by so doing.

Eventually the Jews went into captivity, and here, it seems up they made their first step up the ladder of progress. Sometimes calamities prove to be blessings; and it seems that this was a very fortunate disorder, for they fully received compensation for all their temporal losses, by their mental development. They went down into Babylon without a taper to light them beyond the grave, and they came up out of captivity with a fixed hope of immortality. With all their faults, the heathens have bequeathed to us and our Bible a blessed hope of a future life, of priceless value. They there learned a truth worth more than all they had endured during those seventy long years of captivity.

But there was a conservative class of persons in this day, who wished to restrict religion to the old manner of expressing thought, and hung to it with a dogged pertinacity. These were called Sadducees. In the time of Jesus there were several classes of persons, all of them fixing boundaries to their religious beliefs by the writings of some of their theologians. The Sadducees fixed boundaries around the writings of Moses, and would fellowship no one who should add another truth to their theology not found in one of his five books, whilst the Pharisees added the Psalms and the Prophets to these books, thus increasing their range, but [illegible] to certain boundaries.

[illegible] on the stage of action Jesus of [illegible] which he had not [illegible] how soon is their [illegible] Why, they [illegible] he would not [illegible] authority than any other good man, himself included. He heard the names, radical, infidel, etc, hurled after him with as much zest as we hear it now hurled after those of his disciples who think that all truth is sacred and that we have no right to confine our morals and religious obligations to the teachings of any one man. At one time we hear him saying that "all that ever came before him were thieves and robbers," which would include Moses, and which to the Pharisee and Sadducee was the most consummate blasphemy. At another time we hear him differing from church teachings:

Ye have heard that it was said by them of old time, Thou shalt not commit adultery.

But I say unto you, that whosoever looketh on a woman to lust after her hath committed adultery with her already in his heart.—Matt 5: 27, 28.

Ah, this was a different idea from that which they had received in the church; they had always thought that there was but one party capable of committing adultery, and that was the female party. Accordingly in John, 8th, we read of their arresting the woman taken in the act of adultery, but they never once thought of the man; and when Jesus had said, "Let him that is without sin cast the first stone," all of them being guilty of the same crime, there was no one left to throw stones. The "whosoever" in this passage, that "looks upon a woman to lust after her," is a man, and when Jesus condemns men, he goes farther than does the church. The church people of his day claimed to be "Moses' disciples,"—Bible believers, in contradistinction from the teachings of Jesus, as much as if they had said, "We can not believe in Moses and Jesus both," and they could not; but now the churchman inconsistently—asks us to take both of these teachers, Jesus and Moses, with all their contradictions of each other.

Now, we find that religion has been growing since the time of Moses till the time of Jesus, and that we have an improvement upon the old Hebrew system, and yet Jesus did not teach it all, as I shall show in a little while from his own words. But admit that he did, we have not got it all. Here in this little book which I show to you now, is all that was collected from Jesus' sayings for three and a half years, yet I suppose it does not amount to so much as one of his discourses.

Was it necessary that the disciples and early Christians should have all that Jesus said in order to accomplish their salvation? Then we can be saved with nothing less; and hence we must have a new gospel.

It was impossible for the disciples to remember what Jesus said during this time,—a long period of over thirty years,—and write it down just exactly as it was. They could not comprehend it, and no man can remember that which is beyond his comprehension, any more than a child can remember all the parts of a mathematical problem before he has advanced to that department of his education. To show that this is the case, I will refer you to an instance where two writers have each told a different story about the same affair. The first is found in Matt. 27: 3-6, and reads:

Then Judas, which had betrayed him, when he saw that he was condemned, repented himself, and brought again the thirty pieces of silver to the chief priests and elders, Saying, I have sinned in that I have betrayed the innocent blood. And they said, What is that to us? see thou to that.

And he cast down the pieces of silver in the temple, and departed, and went and hanged himself.

And the chief priests took the silver pieces, and said, It is not lawful for to put them into the treasury, because it is the price of blood.

The second is found in Acts 1: 18, 19, and reads:

Now this man purchased a field with the reward of iniquity; and falling headlong, he burst asunder in the midst, and all his bowels gushed out.

And it was known unto all the dwellers at Jerusalem; insomuch as that field is called in their proper tongue, Aceldama, that is to say, the field of blood.

Now, only one of these stories is correct; one says Judas returned the silver, and hung himself, whilst the other tells us that, he did not return the silver, but bought a field with it, and then he fell down and killed himself. Now, I have no doubt that each thought he was telling the facts of the case. They probably both remembered the main features of the circumstance, viz: that Judas had betrayed his leader, and got a certain amount of money for it, which was afterward used to buy a piece of real estate, and that in someway he came to a sudden and untimely death; but as they could not clearly state the facts of the case, they gave their impressions of the matter.

If such mistakes may be made in some of the most simple affairs that occurred, how much do we have at stake in matters of our faith? We may be led wrong. But this is not all. Origen saw this defect in the Bible, and went through it with his prolific pen, erasing here and there such sentences as did not suit him, and interlining in the place of them such as suited his faith, till he had got the New Testament to suit his old pagan notions, and then threw off the mask and told the world that he was a pagan. Such, dear friends, is the Bible you have to-day. No wonder there is such a din of confusion in the orthodox world about what men should believe and disbelieve.

But, as I said awhile ago, Jesus did not teach us all. Truth is always progressive, unfolding to the wants of each individual.

Now I will read John 16: 12.

I have yet many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now.

"In the name of sense," I think I heard one of the bigoted Pharisees exclaim, "what can he say that is worse than what we have heard? He says we can't bear it. Why, I thought we could bear anything after all the radical stuff that has fallen from his lips. He has called Moses a thief, denies the truth of all that's in the Pentateuch, says a part of the law is wrong, and now lets us know that we have not heard the worst of it."

But the Pharisee did not exactly understand him. Perhaps his truths were more radical, but he meant to say that he had not told enough of them.

It was only a few weeks after this time, that this bold radical was murdered, and if we get those truths we must get them through Spiritualism, for there is no other way. The church has deprived itself of the very truths that Jesus was anxiously waiting to give, by ignoring this passage, and shutting up the doors against the innovation of these many things.

The next verse tells us how we are to receive these truths:

Howbeit when he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he will guide you into all truth; for he shall not speak of himself; but whatsoever he shall hear, that shall he speak: and he will show you things to come.

This is Spiritualism again, and will be shut entirely out of the churches.

We now turn to Paul, and we find him as great a radical as any one else. I claim that Christianity is a progressive system; and, therefore, strange as it may seem, Spiritualists are the only genuine Christians. Paul had a great deal of trouble with his brethren because they stuck to their ideas of ecclesiastical bondage; and I have sometimes been afraid that Spiritualists would draw lines around sentiments we are now uttering, and arrest the progress of the truths we are teaching.

In Gal. 2: 4, Paul enters the following complaint:

And that because of false brethren unawares brought in, who came in privily to spy out our liberty which we have in Christ Jesus, that they might bring us into bondage.

But what is this liberty? When Jesus came, he said he "came to preach deliverance to the captives and let the oppressed go free." He struck hard at their creeds, for their mental thralldom was worse than their bondage to the Romans. Now they have got into a condition where they have liberty to believe and practice everything that their reason tells them is truth. And here it is that "false brethren" slip in amongst them, in order to bring them back into the bondage of their creeds. That this is the truth of the matter is evident from Gal. 4: 9, 10:

But now after that ye have known God, or rather are known of God, how turn ye again to the weak and beggarly elements, whereunto ye desire again to be in bondage?

Ye observe days, and months, and times, and years.

I am afraid of you, lest I have bestowed upon you labor in vain.

Church creeds may be likened unto a pen in which are kept a flock of sheep. Without any mental food, only such miserable garbage as is afforded by the gospel shops of to-day, they are literally starving for that which their pastors refuse them. They have picked the grass off close to the ground, and even dug in the earth to eat its dry roots. Thus they are in a beggarly condition. Now, the clergy find fault with us for tearing away that fence which is about them. We are doing the very work Jesus did, preaching deliverance to the captives. All outside is rich with abundant pastures, and the clergy well know that if they get out of the pen once and get a taste of the rich pastures outside they will never again have a tooth for the miserable dry roots of grass in their old fold, and they will never come again to eat of the miserable gospel slop afforded one day each week. There is a demand in their spiritual natures for something to supply their waste, and unless they can get a taste of the rich food adapted to their wants, the sheep will leave the fold forever. Now that they have left the fold, why do they turn to the weak and beggarly elements which afforded them such poor consolation, and "desire to be in bondage" again. This bondage then consisted in observing "days, and months and years;" now it consists in having a few words over a piece of baked dough, called it Jesus,—turning cannibal and eating it, —or being baptized to suit a theological whim of a capricious Deity! very appropriate play for children, but rather an ill business for full-grown men. In Gal 5: 1-5, Paul comes out with the following exhortation:

Stand fast therefore in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage.

Behold, I Paul say unto you, that if ye be circumcised, Christ shall profit you nothing.

For I testify again to every man that is circumcised, that he is a debtor to do the whole law.

Christ is become of no effect unto you; whosoever of you are justified by the law, ye are fallen from grace.

Here is "liberty" again, and he calls the old Mosaic law a "yoke of bondage." Why, that would be considered the worst kind of blasphemy in me.

Now, if we are going to turn back to their old law, we are going to give up all the "liberty" we had, for if we are debtor to a part of it, we are to all of it. And so we say to-day, if you make this book the boundaries of your knowledge, we are again under obligations to its rites and ceremonies. "Whosoever of you are justified by the law are fallen from grace." The Greek is "apostatized," that is, gave backward. Now, I am such a notorious apostate I presume I have given the subject more than ordinary attention.

When I was a boy I joined the United Brethren church, but I soon outgrew the faith of that denomination, which is similar to the faith of the M. E. Church, and became an Adventist. As my mother became an Adventist at the same time, the church raised the cry of spostacy, and she had experienced some trouble in getting rid of my father and brother for the same crime, the minister hit upon the ingenious plan of burning up the class paper, and let all the members join over, and as my mother and I would not be likely to avail ourselves of that opportunity, we might consider ourselves burnt out of the church. This was apostasy number one.

In the course of a few years, however, the Seventh Day Adventists came around, and as it was necessary for chick to grow large enough to fill his shell before coming out of it, it was necessary for me that I should grow up to fill my Bible before leaving it. Some people are born outside of the Book, and do not need to experience all I did. So I had the Seventh Day Sabbath attached to my theory. This was apostasy number two.

But there was a certain Mrs. White, who was rather an indifferent medium, who was having visions which she insisted should take the place of our former creed books. Against this, I, with a large number of others, finally rebelled, and we started a paper with which I become connected, entitled, The Hope of Israel. This was apostasy number three.

I remained with this class of people about two years, and was as much a creed-maker as any of them. During this time I unfortunately, or fortunately, had the rheumatism, and went to a mesmerizer, who had no spiritual influences about him, for relief. I became clairvoyant and could not shut myself up from my inner sight. Whilst my mind was grappling with the hard questions of the hour, I could not pray myself away from the inevitable infidelity before me. The result was, ere I was aware of it, I became a Spiritualist. I would have given the world, if I had possessed it, to have remained an Adventist; but I was forced forward by an unseen power, to the irresistible conviction of the truth of Spiritualism. I then found myself without friends in my church, and all kinds of reports were being circulated about me.

I came to the conclusion that I could tell the people what I believed as well as my brethren; and as I wanted that they should know the causes that induced this belief, I made application before the church to deliver three lectures on week-day evenings. The Deacon replied, that the church was to be a business meeting the next day, and he would present my petition. I supposed that he would not urge the matter quite so well as I should, and therefore concluded to attend myself and present my own petition. When I attended, the next day, I was astonished to find that the meeting was called to try me for my fourth apostasy. I had withdrawn, but the matter was not notorious enough; they desired to follow me with all the opprobrium possible. How they managed to call a meeting for the purpose of disfellowshipping me, and keep it secret from me, is more than I can tell.

I had determined to never take a public stand again on any matter, and went to the south part of the State, to follow a peaceful occupation. But one day the Hope of Israel came —and there, in flaming capitals, at the head of a column and a half of matter, I read the words, "The Apostasy of D. W. Hull!" I confess, I never saw my name look so big and ugly before.

I read the article, and I found no less than four falsehoods in it—fill told for Jesus' sake—and every fact misstated.

I will not say I wept, for I cried. I subsequently saw the editor, Elder B. F. Snook, who agreed to have the whole article taken back if I would show him one falsehood in it. I showed him several, but he had not the manhood to expose one of his brethren, whose name is too loathesome to be here mentioned.

I then began to think and question on that moral "apostasy." Had I but gone back into one of the churches out of which I came, I should have been an apostate. But as I had given up no truth, forgotten no [illegible] only added to my [illegible]

Now, "whosoever is justified by the law is fallen from grace;" that is, whosoever has come back from Christianity to Judaism; but I can't get back into the church out of which I came, any more than you can get an oak tree back into the acorn from which it grew. To do it, I must give up all that I ever learned in the churches, and that I cannot do. I tried to, but that I have all the truth I ever had in the churches, whilst I have been adding something to what I learned of them ever since I left them.

Hence I am not an apostate. We have traced Hebrewism up from Mosaism, or Sadducceism, through Pharisaism, up to Christianity, and found it a regular progressive system. The law was good; it was our schoolmaster, to take us one step higher; it was well adapted for the people for whom it was made; but it is far beneath the wants of the present enlightened day of the world. Infidel as I am, I find none who have not the same want of faith in the morals and social condition of the early fathers of our religious faith. We put primers in the hands of our youths until they have mastered their alphabets, and then we advance them to other studies just as fast as we find them capable of comprehending the lessons we teach them. We would not take the Bible away from those whose intellects and morals are still in need of such a book. We would only have them hurry up their lessons, and advance out of the book as speedily as possible.

I want to call your attention, in connection with this subject, to Heb. 6: 1-3; but before doing so, allow me to say a few words on the fifth chapter of the same book, wherein Paul upbraids his brethren because they were not able to bear "strong meat," but had to be fed on milk. "Milk is for babes," he says. But, if you will notice, the milk dealt out to the babes and sucklings of the gospel by the clergy, in our times, has a very sickly, blue look to it; it looks as if the pastors had watered it very liberally and there was not enough chalk left to whiten it with. And withal this milk is so scarce and has been so diluted, that the gospel-mongers have found it necessary to quiet the half-starved forty and fifty year old brats with sugar-teats made out of sweetened bread tied up in an old rag and soaked in warm water—a miserable counterfeit of the material found from which, in early life they received their nourishment. But we dare not approach them with strong meat, for the moment we do, they accuse us of infidelity, kick up their great heels, and raise a theological squall, and raise such a din that we are glad to let them alone. But I will not hold you longer from the passage above referred to, Heb. 6: 12.

Therefore leaving the principles of the doctrine of Christ, let us go on unto perfection; not laying again the foundation of repentance from dead works, and of faith toward God,

Of the doctrine of baptisms, and of laying on of hands, and of resurrection of the dead, and of eternal judgment.

"What," says one. "I hope you are not quoting that to prove Infidelity. I thought if there was a passage in the Bible to prove Infidelity, you would find it, and now you have found it. I suppose you would have us give up Christianity and become heathens?"

"No sir, I would not have you do any such thing, but I would have you leave the first principles of Christianity, for we can not be perfect and remain in them. As I said before, Christianity is a progressive system, and he is not a Christian who is too conservative to improve. Let me illustrate it:

A, B, C, and D, start to Kokomo, but before going there, they ask me the way. I tell them to go in a certain direction till they come to the forks of the road—there to take the right hand fork, and go on to a certain cross-road—there to go straight ahead till they come to a certain village, and when they come to that village, to go on to Kokomo.

They all start, but A being a Sadducee insists that he is at Kokomo when he arrives at the forks of the road. B, C, and D go on, however, till they come to the cross roads, where B, being a Pharisee, stops insisting that their chart takes them no farther. C and D go on till they come to the village, when C being a church-man says, "This is the very place I told of. We are now in Kokomo. He said we should leave this place, that is, walk backward and forward on this old track." C's mistake was in supposing I had fixed boundaries, and supposed a man might reach Kokomo by standing still. Whilst Kokomo is only reached by leaving the village, and going on through to Kokomo. The church-man would stop and claim he is a Christian, after he has learned all that Jesus taught—whereas Paul teaches us to leave it, and shows that we never can be perfect until we do. Pseudo-Christianity stops too soon. We would not take away one precept of your book: we would only ask that you do not make any one's book a finality. "Not laying again the foundation of repentance from dead works." "Faith without works is dead," James says, and Jesus tells us that the believers shall do the same works that he did, and the modern church-man tells us that all these works have passed away. If this is the case they are dead works.

Now, Spiritualism is a system of works, for we have the actual demonstration of our faith, and if I go back again to the church, I have gone back to a system of dead works. But if I am right now, I must in my upward progress come to the same ground I now occupy. So, if I go back to the church, I shall be compelled to repent of my sins, to get where I am now. So, when I go into the church, I am "not laying the foundation of repentance from dead works." "And of faith toward God." Now, this is not faith in God, but "faith toward God." If I go back into the church, I am compelled to believe in my minister's word, for I am not allowed the privilege that I now have of demonstrating God. But if my minister's word is not faith in God; it is faith in what the minister says of God, or "faith toward God." Now, if I get into this condition, I have laid a foundation for repentance here again; for some day I must outgrow this faith.

This doctrine of baptism's resurrection of the dead and eternal judgment, is all well enough in the primary condition of religion, but is rather for those who are of full age. I must go through it all if I go back again, and will be under the necessity of going through all these mumbling ceremonies before I can develop. Venus instituted baptism, and it will do for a Pagan institution; but we will necessitate ourselves for another development by the laying on of hands. Then comes the resurrection of the dead, but Paul finally discovers it is a resurrection from the dead, i. e., a resurrection from the old dead body; but the eternal judgment—Paul says "God has appointed a day in which he will judge the world," and the ministers used to tell us we should be tried for every secret and idle thought, and every word we utter, that witnesses will be called up, and their testimony given on all that had been said and done. When I was a boy I used to wonder how the Lord would manage to expedite all this business of trying all the myriads of earth,—hearing all the testimony pro and con, and make all the decisions in less than twenty-four hours. Now, I know how it is done—the judge is within each one's own breast, and they are tried before the bar of their own conscience for every idle thought. I see my little hour is up; a few more thoughts and I shall leave the subject with you. Some of us have taken Calvin, Luther and others, and drew lines around what one or the other of them has said, and see nuzzling for any of us to go any farther, or learn any thing else. Hence, we have Methodists, Lutherans, Baptists, etc., which simply means persons who do not think for themselves, but assert to the thoughts of others.

I believe that progression goes on eternally, that we will commence our progression in the next life, just where we leave off in this life, and that we will progress in proportion to the amount of help we give others, and that as we are receiving truths from the angels above us, we will help ourselves by handing them down to those beneath us—thus forming a ladder from earth to heaven, on which all may climb.

ILLINOIS.

Our Grove Meeting.

DEAR JOURNAL:—The experiment of holding basket meetings in this vicinity, where are only a few and widely scattered Spiritualists, has proved a grand success, in this our first effort.

On Saturday, the 24th inst., as per call, a few devoted and anxious friends of our cause assembled at my residence, finding Mrs. H. F. M. Brown and E. T. Blackmer, of Chicago, Dr. J. K. Bailey, of Laporte, Ind., and Dr. Samuel Underhill, present as speakers for the occasion. This array of workers was a surprise, and tended to allay our somewhat anxious doubts as to the result of our meeting.

At 2 o'clock, P. M., the meeting was called to order by Dr. A. Newton, of Daysville, Ill., who officiated as Chairman.

The afternoon was devoted to conference, which was opened with music by Bro. E. T. Blackmer.

Dr. Bailey being called for, read a poem, and made a few pertinent remarks, defining Spiritualism as the Religion of Nature and the Philosophy of Life.

He was followed by Sister Brown, Bros. Blackmer, Underhill, and others. A favorable impression upon the few unbelievers who ventured upon the grounds, within hearing, but at safe retreating distance, was the result of the afternoon session.

Adjourned till evening.

EVENING SESSION.

Sister Brown delivered a very interesting and instructive lecture upon her "Mission to California," to a large and appreciative audience, in the Universalist church, which, I feel, had good influence, softening the existing prejudice against our work, and in attracting unbelievers to our meeting next day.

SUNDAY MORNING SESSION, 10 O'CLOCK, A. M.

Meeting again opened with a song by Bro. Blackmer, followed by conference.

At 11 A. M., Bro. Bailey delivered a lecture on "Spiritualism," occupying an hour, to a good and closely attentive audience.

SUNDAY AFTERNOON SESSION.

Conference, and address by Bro. Blackmer, which was a well-written, philosophical, and scientific essay, eliciting much commendation.

SUNDAY EVENING SESSION.

The evening session, again held at the Universalist Church, was occupied, at our urgent request, by Bro. Underhill, upon the subject of "Sacrifice." He dealt sledge-hammer blows upon "old fogyism" and "obsolete ideas." His address, though able, was not relished by his orthodox listeners.

Several days having elapsed since the close of the meeting, from observation, I feel authorized to assert that our efforts in this experiment have been blessed with most favorable results upon the citizens of our villages and vicinity, of whatever shade of opinion. Perhaps, however, I ought to except the "officiating divine" and a few others of the Methodist persuasion. This "leader of the blind" counseled his flock—consisting mostly of Sunday school children—to keep away from our meetings. He has heretofore stated as his opinion, that "Wherever you find Spiritualists, you will find such mixes of virtue or brains." Latterly, he makes piteous complaints of the want of interest and attendance upon the prayer meetings of his church,—indicating that his flock are unfaithful, and declaring that "There must be something done to drive the Devil out of this town!"—all the since our spiritual circles and meetings of the last year. Are his members becoming brainless, or devoid of virtue?

I find that there is an unreserved expression of favor with our meetings and speakers. Especially is the lecture by Bro. Bailey highly [illegible]d for its lucid and able reasoning, its [illegible] scope, convincing logic, and apt illustrations. So favorably were the friends impressed with this effort, that the brother was engaged to speak at Dixon, July 2nd, and steps were taken towards securing his services for a few weeks in this immediate vicinity, and the question is repeated, "Why is not the man more generally known and employed as a public speaker?"

Bro. Blackmer's address is also much praised, as an admirable production. His singing was considered very fine by all, and is estimated the most pleasant, if not the most powerful appeal to the higher, finer emotions, sentiments, and aspirations of our being, among the many made. The California experiences, and their application to our philosophy, were interesting, eloquent and ever applicable remarks in conference, of Sister Brown, are also most favorably commented upon.

All these facts and the statements of the entire meeting, the first of the kind in our vicinity, and of my experience, convince me that such meetings are as much needed, as well as practicable, than is generally supposed. The cost, in money and trouble, is but comparatively little, while the effect and influence for good is incalculable.

Why do not Spiritualists hold these meetings everywhere? Why not take hold of this work, fellow Spiritualists, and move on the grand car of progress more rapidly, and thus cause its increasing impetus to crush all error beneath the mighty revolutions of its WHEELS OF TRUTH?

Yours, for pushing forward the good work,

C. B. BILL.

Franklin Grove, Ill. June 29, 1871.

—It is both ungenerous and unwise to taunt a man with either his physical, intellectual, or moral weaknesses. All of them are hereditary malformations, and in the very nature of the case must affect him far more deeply and painfully than they possibly can any one else.

—No man has a greater right to prescribe the moral, spiritual and intellectual, than the physical diet of his neighbor; his religion than his regimen. And yet the attempt to do the former has filled the earth's past with crime and blood, as it fills the present with all unkindness and uncharity.

—Duty is the pole-star, and conscience the needle that forever points to it.

—The grave, that narrow excavation in which is buried the placental attachment of the old existence on being born into the new.

—Slavery is a two-edged sword, cutting both ways.

"GOD'S PLAN OF SALVATION."

Sermon by Rev. J. H. Barnes, at Friendship, Montgomery Co., Va., May 21st, 1871.

This morning the subject of my discourse was:

"Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve."

I showed that there exists a universal feeling of worship among all classes and grades of people upon the earth, whether educated or ignorant, refined or savage; that each differs from the rest as they differ in their natures; and that as we Christians vary in our organizations, so we vary and quarrel in our creeds.

I also showed how it was that men can be religious, prayedevoutly, sing sweetly, and yet lie horribly and defraud most outrageously; believe strictly in orthodoxy, keep holy the Sabbath day, yet oppress the poor, abuse and tyranize over the weak and helpless.

I intended to speak this evening upon human accountability and responsibility; but my brother in the ministry here (Graham) not only requested, but insisted, that as all preachers here had distorted upon "God's Plan of Salvation," I must do the same, that people could judge for themselves of my faith and belief. After a few moments' reflection I agreed to comply, and here is my subject:

"GOD'S PLAN OF SALVATION."

My brother here (Methodist preacher) told me that man was a fallen being and must be saved, and that God had a "plan of salvation." Let me consider. Man a fallen being? Yes—he sometimes lies, steals, is abusive and cruel; all this is sinful, therefore, man is a sinner (that is a portion of mankind are, for not a tenth part of the great whole are sinners). The papers magnify and publish the few erring ones, while the greater part, who do justice and love mercy, are never mentioned.

Man a fallen being? born in the fallen state? Yes! I thank God for that. What would he have been if he had not been a fallen being, that is, subject to change? What pleasure could God take, or what good could he accomplish, with a world full of Egyptian mummies, neither decaying to fertilize the earth, nor advancing in knowledge and science, to bless each other, and improve the earth and themselves by culture?

If man had not been a fallen being he could not have existed, only as a living statue. What worse condition could he possibly have been placed in? Would not hell itself have been preferable? I should say, any condition where he would be subject to change, rather than be doomed to drag out his existence on earth where all is life, change, activity, and progress, while he, poor man, could not fall to the right nor to the left, forward nor backward. Yes, I thank God! and I call upon you all to praise and bless his holy name that man is a "fallen being."

Now, for "God's plan of salvation." You all believe the Bible to be divine authority, and that Jesus Christ was one-third God, and two-thirds something else, or you believe him to be the son of God or to have been a servant or messenger from God, that he was infallible and taught infallible truths, such as are never to be disputed—therefore, his sayings must be accepted as final.

Now, what does he (Jesus) teach and tell us about "God's plan of salvation?"—Matt. 25: 14-50

The talents are given, and the command to occupy or use them as talents or faculties given by God; and all who did use the same found God's approbation and got their reward—salvation full and complete. Only the idle, lazy, shiftless whelps who did nothing but grovel, find fault, and pick flaws in others, were rejected, and cast into outer darkness.

If the doctrine of Jesus is correct, salvation is life, action, and culture; damnation is indolence, inaction, no improvement of our God-given faculties perversion or abuse of our nature (originally good), and neglect of duty generally.

I am pleased to see so many here to-day. I am told there has not been so many for more than a year as were here last Sunday, and I find nearly double that number to-day.

I am glad that the greater part of the audience are young people, just starting out in life. Can I inspire you with a new hope, a new idea, a new and better opinion of humanity, a better idea of God and his revelation that I spoke of last Sunday, and of his plan of salvation for you and fallen mankind?

I told you awhile ago, that the fall of our first parents was good—a blessing to themselves and to all their posterity, for they fell upward, that is, straight forward—from ignorance to knowledge, from darkness to light; and the history of the past shows that in falling they have been progressing, in every age and every nation,—gradually falling and advancing from the animal into the intellectual and moral condition, improving continually.

I have seen here in Virginia some little dissatisfaction about free schools, by a few; yet there has been a great improvement during the past winter to organize and start schools, and great numbers of boys and girls are now at school who never had that privilege before; and hereafter, when I distribute the JOURNAL, the Banner of Light, the Index etc., and ask the people to read them and subscribe, will they say, "I can't read," and "I have no time to read?" No; education will create a taste, that will find time to read—time that is now spent to no purpose. It will also create a desire for knowledge, and find the means to purchase any books advertised in the JOURNAL. You should get the Koran, or Mohammedan Bible, and read it; and then you can judge and compare that and their religion with our Bible and our religion.

The Chinese are emigrating to this country in great numbers, and that element will soon be as large here as the Irish, German, or African. They will bring their religion with them, of course.

The Hindoo Bible and Testament are printed at the JOURNAL office, in Chicago. Do you not want it? If so—and I intend to get it; and I will procure any book advertised in the JOURNAL you want, at the prices therein mentioned. Now, when we all read, think, and understand for ourselves, what a change will there be—what an improvement upon the past! What a fall, a mighty fall, when all shall act upon their own responsibility! No political leader shall then be able to sway the multitude by evil influence, thereby plunging the nation into war, wringing the heart of many a mother, wife, and sister, and causing them to shed tears of anguish. No sectarian priest can then stir up strife and hatred between sect and sect. No division and quarrel between Methodist North and Methodist South, as you have here.

Can we not fall, as our fathers have done, from the bad to the good? Can we not fall like Luther—from Catholicism into Protestantism? as the Wesleys—out of Episcopacy into Methodism? Penn and Fox fell into Quakerism? and so many from orthodox Quakerism fall into skepticism of his own—founding the sect Hicksite. Read, again, into Spiritualism? Can not each of us fall out of our Methodism, Baptism, Campbellism, and every other "ism," into good old Human Nature, and be human beings, like brothers and sisters of humanity? Would not that be a great, noble, and glorious fall for us?

I will close by asking if I have given a satisfactory explanation of "God's plan of salvation." And are you all willing to fall, and continue falling, improving and perfecting yourselves, until at last you fall out of the animal into the spirit life,—"out of the tenement of clay, into that house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens;" out of corruption into incorruption; out of earth into the higher spheres above.

If the spirit moves, I will preach to you two more gospel sermons, four weeks from to-day.

And now may the blessing of God and the influence of the spirit world be with you and abide with you all forevermore. AMEN.

Letter from J. Steele.

BROTHER JONES:—I have received the following communication from H. W., which I send to you for publication if you think best, and in reference to which I make a few remarks:

1st. If Brother H. W. means that spirits can impress mediums as clearly, distinctly, and intelligibly, as one individual can impress their ideas upon another in conversation, or, as a speaker can impress an audience, or, as Brother Francis in his "Search after God" has impressed the intellectual world,—he contradicts all the knowledge we have of others and our experience.

2d. That every being, thing, and atom that exists throughout the vast universe, exists under or in conformity with law is admitted, for outside of law nothing can exist; and the law, or laws harmonize with the condition of every thing or being without doubt; but does this prove that there is a law of universal adaptation through or by which the angel world can hold communion with every human being on the globe, and impress the truths, beauties, and glories of that world on their minds, as clearly, vividly, and distinctly as you, Brother W., can impress my mind in conversation, or I yours? If such was the fact, Spiritualism long since would have taken the world—not an Infidel would be found in Christendom. The condition and nature of things and beings differ, and the same law of existence or development in that existence, will not apply to all, as in the law and rules of mathematics—hence to call it a law of universal adaptation, is, to say the least, a misnomer.

4th. If nothing transpire but for a purpose, false lights must be for a purpose,—must they not, Brother W.? I thank you for your friendly caution. I have no desire or wish to deceive myself or others, but do earnestly, honestly and most intensely long to find the truths. There may no antagonisms exist in the mind of him who can comprehend the beginning and end of creation, if beginning and end there was or will be,—but to us poor short-sighted beings, thousands of antagonisms appear to exist,—often in our own minds, and we are at war with ourselves. I think it would take considerable argument to prove to the mind of an intelligent Frenchman that his nation and the Prussian have been in perfect harmonious relations for the past two years.

Green Garden, Ill.

In answer to Brother Steele's inquiry, in the JOURNAL of May 20th, in regard to the law relating to mediumship, I am impressed with the idea that the power of the spirit to impress mediums with the light of what they deem truth, is the same as among mortals in impressing their ideas upon those with whom they may be in conversation. That all are susceptible of this spiritual influence, does not admit of a doubt. Some higher in the scale of knowledge, and some lower, but each in his sphere of life performing those acts which he does perform in obedience to the law (influence) acting upon him. To every atom of matter and every condition of mind, or being from the monad and infusoria to the highest and most exalted intellect of man, there is a law to which they are subject respectively, and it is utterly impossible for any atom, insect, or being of whatever kind or character to act, demonstrate, or rise superior to the law acting upon them physically or spiritually. The law of life and being is inexorable, eternal, and endless; and the power of that law is in exact harmony with the condition, matter or atom on which it operates, and is subject to it.

Progression is plain and simply over an increased knowledge of the powers of that law. No spirit on earth or in the spiritual world can control, or in any manner whatsoever exercise powers outside of the law operating upon them—hence there is a law of universal adaptation in exact harmony with the condition of the thing or being on which it operates.

However much the infant mind may desire to solve problems in mathematics, it is evidently certain he can not do it until his mind under the law of progression and development, has grown up to that condition by which the rule of action and the principle of that law becomes a part of the elements of his spirit. Then he can solve the problem, and not before. Don't be deceived by false lights, nothing transpires but for a purpose. Your singular condition on the night in question, was as much a necessity as that of your birth.

Consider this fact, you, as well as every other human being, and every insect, beast, bird or fish, vegetable or mineral matter, are but links in the chain of being, and each one must fill and occupy space in time and condition in spirit, in perfect harmony with the wisdom of that law or principle, through which you and all things have individuality.

Being thus united, you form a part of the whole, and as you rise higher and higher in a knowledge of that law, the better able you will be to harmonize, what to the children of earth is called antagonisms. But no antagonisms exist in or through the vast and incomprehensible realms of nature.

H. W.

Lower Lake, Cal.

A REVELATION!!!

of the

EXTRAORDINARY VISITATION

of

DEPARTED SPIRITS!

Of Distinguished Men and Women of all Nations, as Manifested through the Living Bodies of the "Shakers."

The Spirits of WASHINGTON, FRANKLIN PENN, GIRARD, ST. PATRICK, NAPOLEON, JOHN WESLEY, BYRON, GEO. FOX and Many of Distinguished Characters of the Past, who take Possession of and Discourse through the Living Bodies of the "Shakers," of New York, giving Wonderful Information, concerning the Events of their Lifetime, and their Opinions of Present Occurrences concerning those Events, as well as their Immediate Condition in the World of Spirits.

PRICE—$1 00; postage, 2 cts. Liberal discount to the trade.

ADDRESS:—RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 187 and 189 S. Clark street, Chicago, Ill.

New Books.

UNDERHILL ON MESMERISM.

WITH

Criticisms on its Opposers;

AND A REVIEW OF HUMBUGS AND HUMBUGGERS, WITH PRACTICAL INSTRUCTIONS FOR EXPERIMENTS IN THE SCIENCE—FULL DIRECTIONS FOR USING IT AS A REMEDY IN DISEASE—HOW TO AVOID ALL DANGER.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF ITS CURATIVE POWERS;

How to develop a good Clairvoyant

THE PHILOSOPHY OF

SEEING WITHOUT EYES.

THE PROOFS OF IMMORTALITY DERIVED FROM THE UNFOLDING OF MESMERISM—EVIDENCE OF MENTAL COMMUNION WITHOUT SIGHT OR SOUND, BETWEEN BODIES FAR APART IN THE FLESH—COMMUNION OF SAINTS, OR WITH THE DEPARTED.

BY SAMUEL UNDERHILL, M. D., L. L. D.,

LATE PROFESSOR OF CHEMISTRY, ETC., ETC.

Price $1.25. Postage 12 cents. The Trade supplied.

Address S. S. Jones, Chicago, Ill.

Exeter Hall!

Exeter Hall!

HAVE YOU READ EXETER HALL.

THE following are extracts from a few of the notices of Exeter Hall, the Theological Romance:—

"The plot and passion in Exeter Hall show an experienced hand in their delineation. Exeter Hall proves that the author has something to say and knows how to say it."—[Public Opinion, London, England.

"It is indeed a wonderful book."—[New York Mail.

"We commend it to the widest popular approval."—[Banner of Light, Boston.

"We have no hesitation in declaring this a great work."—[Universe, New York.

"The book is well and powerfully written. * * * The most scorching work ever published in America since the 'Age of Reason,'"—[Liberal, Chicago.

"One of the most exciting romances of the day."—[Democrat's Magazine, New York.

"Convincingly illustrative of the errors of Theology."—[Investigator, Boston.

"The humane and charitable tendencies of the book must receive the approbation of every friend of humanity."—[Daily Telegraph, Toronto, Canada.

Price, 60 cents. Postage, 4 cents.

For sale, wholesale and retail, by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 187 & 189 South Clark st. Chicago.

ARCANA OF SPIRITUALISM.

A MANUAL OF

SPIRITUAL SCIENCE AND PHILOSOPHY

By Hudson Tuttle.

WITH PORTRAIT OF THE AUTHOR. Price $2.00; Postage 24c.

This work embodies the results of the author's researches and experience during the past twenty years, and is, without doubt, the most thorough presentation of the subject of Modern Spiritualism before the public.

Dealing, as it does, with a question in which the interest of all mankind is centered, it cannot fail to command universal attention.

While the experience of thousands will repudiate some of the conclusions the author arrives at, they will still be able to obtain much invaluable information from the book. It is a good book to place in the hands of every person who would know more of what it is that is waking the world to new hopes and aspirations, and planting a tree of life beside every man's door.

 Price, $2.00; postage, 24 cents. For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

MRS. MARIA M. KING'S WORKS.

THE PRINCIPLES OF NATURE, as discovered in the Development and Structure of the Universe; The Solar System—Laws and Methods of its Development; Earth—History of Re'Development; Exposition of the Spiritual Universe. Price reduced to $1.75; postage, 24 cents.

REAL LIFE IN THE SPIRIT LAND,—Being Life Experiences, Scenes, Incidents, and Conclusions, illustrative of Spirit Life and the Principles of the Spiritual Philosophy. Price, $1.00; postage, 16 cents.

SOCIAL EVILS: Their Causes and Cure,—Being a Brief Discussion of the Social States, with reference to Methods of Reform. Price, 25 cents; postage free.

THE SPIRITUAL PHILOSOPHY VS. DIABOLISM. In two lectures. Price, 25 cents; postage free.

WHAT IS SPIRITUALISM? and SHALL SPIRITUALISTS HAVE A CREED? In two lectures. Price, 25 cents; postage free.

GOD THE FATHER and MAN THE IMAGE OF GOD. In two lectures. Price, 25 cents; postage free.

 For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

The Bible in India.

HINDOO ORIGIN OF

Hebrew and Christian Revelation.

TRANSLATED FROM

"LA BIBLE DANS L' INDE."

BY LOUIS JACOLLIOT.

EXTRACTS FROM AUTHOR'S PREFACE:

"I come to show you humanity, after attaining the loftiest regions of speculative philosophy, of untrammeled reason on the venerable soil of India, wastrammeled and stifled by the altar that substituted for intellectual life a semi-brute existence of dreaming impotence.

India is the world's cradle; hence it is that the common mother in sending forth her children even to the utmost west has, in unfading testimony of our origin, bequeathed us the legacy of her language, her laws, her morals, her literature, and her religion.

To religious despotism, imposing, speculative delusions, and class-legislation, may be attributed the decay of nations.

.....Aware of the resentment I am provoking, I yet attack not from the encounter.....We are no longer burnt at the stake."

 Price $2.00; postage 24 cents. For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark street, Chicago.

THE

Descent of Man,

AND

Selections in Relation to Sex;

By Charles Darwin, M.A.F.R.S. With Illustrations.

Two Vols., over 600 pp. each, Price $2.00 per Vol.; postage 24 cts.

 For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

Proof, Supposing Positive and Negative Psychometry for sale at this office.

Address, S. S. Jones, 189 South Clark street.

MEDIUMS'

DIRECTORY.

The Religio-Philosophical Journal being an organ dedicated to all true reformers, will hereafter publish a complete Directory, giving the name of all professional mediums, so far as advised upon the subject. This will afford better facilities for investigators to learn of the location of mediums, and at the same time increase their patronage. Mediums will do well to advise us from time to time that we may keep their place of residence correctly registered.

☞ It is a lamentable fact that some mediums so far forget their self respect as to speak evil of other mediums, not unfrequently even of those who are far their superiors. The names of such persons will be dropped from this Register as soon as we have evidence conclusive of their indulging in such wickedness.

It should be borne in mind that individuals visiting mediums carry conditions with themselves—so to speak—which aid or destroy the power of spirits to control the medium visited: hence it is that one medium gives satisfaction to certain persons, another better to others—all having their friends, and justly so, too, and all equally honest and useful in their places.

CHICAGO.

Dange children, 227 S. Morgan St. ‡
Mrs. Ettie Brown, 128 W. Washington St.
Dr. W. Cheshire, 167 W. Madison St.*
Wm. A. Crocker, 179 W. Madison St.*
Dr. D. G. Dake, 211 W. Lake Ave., Chicago.*
Dr. E. Dwyer, 201 West Madison St. Chicago.
Dr. L. P. Griggs, 229 W. Madison street, cor. Peoria.*
Mrs. Ferguson, Parlors 28 and 30 Hoover Block.‡
Mrs. M. Jenks, 176 W. Madison street.*
Jos. J. T. Lewis and wife, 70 Tunes Ave.*
Dr. S. S. Packard, 162 Wife, 245 W. Madison St.*‡
Mrs. O. Moody, 106 12th street.*‡
Mrs. A. H. Rounsaville, 148 Fourth Avenue.*‡‡
Madame Ritter, 501 S. Clark St. ‡
Mrs. S. Rose, 141 S. Clinton St.*
Dr. Sargent, 78 Third Ave.‡
Dr. M. L. Sherman and Wife, 306 South Clark St.*†
Dr. Benjamin Tadelski, 64 S. Clark street.*
Mrs. S. T. Viber, 682 Indiana Ave.*‡
Dr. J. Wilbur, 450 W. Randolph St.*
A. B. Willis, 1013 S. Halsted st.‡
Mrs. M. S. Weeks, Room 60 De Haven Block, Chicago.

BOSTON.

Dr. H. B. Storer,*†
Mrs. Julia M. Friend, 116 Harrison Ave.
Mrs. S. J. Stickney, 233 Tremont St.
Dr. Main, 226 Harrison Ave.*
Mrs. A. C. Stanhope, 4 Washington St.
Freeman Hatch, 8 Seaver Place.
Mrs. L. W. Letch, 97 Salisbury St. †
Mrs. M. Marshall, 80 Hudson St.
W. H. Mosher, 170 W. springfield street. ¶
Mrs. A. S. Eldridge, 1 Oak St.‡
Mrs. M. H. Hardy, 131 W. Concord St.‡
Samuel Grover, 23 Dix Place.
Mrs. F. O. Baxter, 231 Tremont St.‡
R. C. Littlefield, 26 Kneeland street, Boston, Mass.

PHILADELPHIA.

Mrs. S. A. Anthony, S. E. Cor. of 7th and Catharine
D. B. Cadwallader, 1006 Race St.
Mrs. H. J. French, 1826 Ridge Ave.
Mrs. E. Goodfellow, 413 Fairmount St.
Mrs. L. T. Mann, 240 South 12th st ‡‡
Katie E. Robin on 2-35 Broadywine St.
Mrs. Reynolds, 1013 Parrish St.
Mrs. R. McNeil, 1346 Hanover St.
Mrs. Taylor, 836 North 10th St.
DeWitt C. Hough, 812 Race st ‡
Mrs. Stoddard, 613 Race St.‡

NEW YORK CITY.

Jennie Danforth, 84 Lexington Ave.†
Miss Blanch Foley, 634 Third Ave.
Mrs. H. Seymour, 160 Mercer St.
Mrs. J. Cotton, 247 E. 31st St.
J. William Van Namee, 430 Fourth Ave.*‡‡

BLOOMINGTON, ILL.

Mrs. Helen Grover,
Mrs. H. E. Woodruff, 613 N. Main St. ‡
Dr. Mary Lewis, Bloomington, Ill.‡

BAYONNE CITY, N. J.

Mrs. B. Wallis.

GREEN GARDEN ILL

Mrs. Calkins.*†

GENESSEE, WIS.

Mrs. E. W. Balcom. *‡
Mrs. F. A. Logan.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.

A. B. Severance and Mrs. J. H. S. Severance. M. D. 457 Milwaukee street. Milwaukee, Wis.†‡
W. W. Herring, 188 Spring street, Milwaukee, Wis. *

ROCKFORD, ILL.

Samuel Smith, Box 1239, Rockford, Ill. *
Mrs. M. J. Colson. S. Rockford, Ill. ‡

RICHMOND IND,

Francis S. Heswell. 20 N. Marion street.
Dr. Samuel Maxwell, 73 S. 6th street.

SAN FRANCISCO.

Wm. H. Hatch, 135 Kearney St.

ST. CHARLES, ILL.

Mrs. Leonard Howard.*‡
D. P. Kayner, M. D.*

SAN JOSE, CAL.

Mrs. Mary E. Beach.

WHITEWATER, WIS.

Mrs. A. B. Severance.*‡

MISCELLANEOUS.

Mrs. Orris Abbott, Minneapolis, Minnesota. *
Lizzie Annis, Cedar Rapids, Iowa. ‡
Jonathan Bacon, Geneseo, Ill.*
Leonna Atwood, Lake Mills, Wis.
Miss M. A. A. phist, Dayton, Ohio. *
H. Alling, Milford, Ohio ‡
Mrs. Jennie Adams, Box 1209, Kansas City, Mo. *
Mrs. M. A. Blair, 126 Ridge st., Salem, Mass. ¶
Dr. E. H. Bonney, Wellsboro, Tioga Co., Pa.*
M. K. Cassion, 195 Bank street, Newark, N. J.*
Mrs. J. F. Carrier, Cincinnati, Ohio.†
Mrs. J. A. Drake, 34 Hoffman Block, Cleveland, Ohio.
J. W. Ellis, Atlanta, Ga. †
Mrs. S. E. Everol, Springfield, Mo. ‡
David P. Fuller, Hartford, Conn.*
Alonzo Fairchil, Schenectady N. Y. *
J. B. Fayette, Girard, N. Y.‡
Dr. E. W. Freeman, 116 Elgin st, Columbus, Ohio. *
Mrs. Wm. L. Gay, Canastota, New York. *
Dr. J. M. Holland, 206 Upper Broadway, Council Bluffs Iowa.*
Judge D.L. Roy, Mobile, Alabama.
U. S. Hamilton, Beloit, Wis.*
Dr. R. Heal, 63 Whitehall St., Atlanta, Ga.*
Miss Sarah Farris, } Traveling.†
Minnie Jefferson, } Traveling.†
J. W. Kenyon, Watertown, Wis.
Mrs. C. Lathrop, 92 East Harrison street. *
Mr. & Mrs. C. G. Latham, Taunton, Mass. †
Mrs. R. E. Moore, Care W. Chase & Co., 601 North 5th street, St. Louis, Mo.*
J. H. Nolan, Waterville, N. Y. ‡
Mrs. A. Nesbit, Cunnenburg, Mich.*
Mrs. Jennie D. Odell, Waterloo, N. Y.*
Dr. Abba Lord Palmer, New Boston, Ill. *‡§
Mrs Hattie Pine, 8 4th Bond Ind. *
Mrs. M. J. Robbins, Wenatchie, Ind.
N. B. Starr, Fort Huron, Mich. ¶
Isaac Jackson Sloan, Covington, Ind.‡
Mrs. A. C. Smith, Aurora, Ill. *
Mrs. P. W. Stephens, east side of 6th street, between I & J, Sacramento.*
H. B. Sherman, Cahawas, Ohio. ‡
Annie C. Torrey, Houston, Texas. ‡
A. Thomas, Lynden Station, Ohio.
Warren Wheelock, Mrs. A. Wheelock, Jr., N. Y. *
Mrs. Fanny Wheelock, Pleasanton, Kansas. ‡

* Healer.
¶ Spirit Artists.
† Psychometrist.
‡ Business and Test.
§ Writing and Drawing.
‡‡ Answering Sealed Letters.
§ Solemnizing Marriages and Attending Funerals.

SECOND EDITION.

A WORK OF GREAT RESEARCH.

ONE RELIGION: MANY CREEDS.

BY ROSS WINANS.

"We object to what the Church demands, an unbounded and unjustifiable confidence in the infallibility of the writings of Moses and the prophets, and the Four Gospels and the Epistles. We dissent from a sentimental attachment to an impossible compound of God and man. We protest that Christian theology, as we have it, is not taught by God himself, nor by Christ himself, nor is it consistent with established facts, nor is it comprehensible by our reason. We would destroy, if we could, no principle taught among us, is no better than other systems taught in other than Christian countries, and in some respects not so good.

The Bible, the great text of the Bible, in relation to the creation of the world, has its counterpart, also in the several systems of theology here questioned. They all had their cosmological legends, equally good authority and equally wide of the truth, as that recorded in the Bible. The time and manner of the creation, no man has ever known, or ever will know, in this life; nor is such knowledge of importance in preparing us for the life to come."—EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

This book is a large 12 mo. of nearly 400 pages, printed on fine, heavy-tinted paper, and is sold at much less than the actual cost. Price, $1.50; postage, 32 cents.

 For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

Health by Good Living.

BY W. W. HALL, M. D.,

Editor of Hall's "Journal of Health."

THIS book is to show how high health can be maintained and common diseases cured by "good living," which means eating with a relish the best food; prepared in the best manner.

The best food includes meats, fish, poultry, wild game, fruits, and the grains which make bread.

The best cookery preserves the natural taste and juices.

As there can be no "good living" without a good appetite, how to get this great blessing without money and without price, is pointed out, and, it is hoped, in very clear and plain terms.

Some of the subjects treated are:—

The object of eating: Power to work: Early breakfast: Dinner-time: Luncheon: Eating "down town:" What shall a man do? What shall he not eat? How to get Bad blood: Diet for the sick: Spring diseases: Children's eating: Forcing children to eat: Young ladies' eating: Cold feet and headache: Biliousness: A lazy liver: Mischievous tonics: The out-door air: Why are we dyspeptic? Discomfort after eating: Cole slaw: Certain cure of neuralgia: Nervous debility: Air and exercise: Food cure, etc., etc.

It tells

How to cure dyspepsia: How to cure neuralgia: How to cure biliousness: How to cure nervousness: How to cure exhaustion: How to get a good appetite: How to get lean, How to get fleshy: How to get well: How young men are ruined: How bad matches are made: How good wives are made at home: How home influences purify.

Price $1.50. Postage 16 cents. For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189, So. Clark Street, Chicago, Ill.

DR. E. P. MILLER'S WORKS,

The Cause of Exhausted Vitality, or Abuses of the Sexual Function. Cloth $1,00, Postage, 12cts.

Every Young Man and every Young Woman, every Married Man and every Married Woman, Should read it.

A vast amount of suffering, as well as physical, mental and moral ruin would be prevented, if all were acquainted with the facts contained in this work and followed its excellent advice.

Vital Force, How wasted and How Preserved. Cloth $1,00, Postage 12cts; Paper Cover, 50cts, Postage, 4cts.

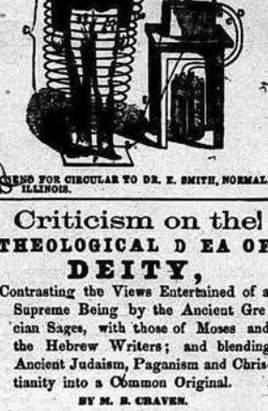
Mrs. Francis Dana Gage says; "I earnestly wish that it could be read by every mother in the country."

It is an invaluable work and should have a place in every family library.

How to Bathe, a Family Guide for the Use of Water in Preserving Health and Treating Disease.

Paper Cover, Price 40cts. Postage, 4cts

Important Truths, By Mrs. E. P. Miller, M. D.



Price, 20cts, Postage, 2cts.

This little work is written in a style adapted to children's Minds, and no parent need fear to place it in their children's hands as an opening to conversation and advice on points upon which their future health, happiness, and even life, largely depend.

THE TRADE SUPPLIED.

Address S. S. Jones, 187 & 189, South Clark Clark street, Chicago, Ill.

The Great MAGNETIC CURE.

SEND FOR CIRCULAR TO DR. E. SMITH, NORMAL, ILLINOIS.

Criticism on the THEOLOGICAL IDEA OF DEITY,

Contrasting the Views Entertained of a Supreme Being by the Ancient Grecian Sages, with those of Moses and the Hebrew Writers; and blending Ancient Judaism, Paganism and Christianity into a Common Original.

BY M. B. CRAVEN.

12mo., 317 pages.—Price, $1.00; postage, 16 cents.

 For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

SECOND EDITION—REVISED AND CORRECTED.

THE VOICES

Three Poems.

VOICE OF SUPERSTITION.

VOICE OF NATURE.

VOICE OF A PEBBLE.

By Warren Sumner Barlow.

THIS volume is startling in its originality of purpose, and is destined to make deeper inroads among materialists than any work that has hitherto appeared.

The Voice of Superstition takes the creeds at their word, and points out the inconsistencies of the Bible that the God of Moses has been defeated by Satan, from the Garden of Eden to Mount Calvary!

The Voice of Nature represents God in the light of Reason and Philosophy—in His unchangeable and glorious attributes. While others have too often only demolished, this author has erected a beautiful Temple on the ruins of Superstition. Judge Baker, of New York, in his review of this poem, says: "It will unquestionably cause the author to be classed among the ablest and most gifted didactic poets of the age."

The Voice of a Pebble delineates the individuality in matter and the Omnipotence of Chance.

The book is a repository of original thought, containing noble conceptions of God and man, beautiful and pleasing in style, and is one of the few books that we'd grow with its years and mature with the centuries. It is already admired by its thousands of readers.

The book is large, fine, heavy, fine paper, bound in beveled boards, in gilt style; nearly 300 pages. Price $1.50, postage 16 cents. Very liberal discount to the trade. For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 South Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

AGENTS! READ THIS!

WE WILL PAY AGENTS A SALARY OF $20 per week and expenses, or allow a large commission, to sell our new and wonderful inventions. Address M. WAGNER & Co., Marshall, Mich.

v9 n18 4m.

Religio-Philosophical Journal.

[redacted]

Religio-Philosophical Publishing House.

☞All letters and communications should be addressed to S. S. JONES, 189 South Clark Street, Chicago, Illinois.

TERMS OF THE

Religio-Philosophical Journal.

$3.00 per year, $1.50—6 months, $1.—4 mo.

☞Fifty cents for Three Months on Trial

TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS.

In making remittances for subscriptions, always procure a draft on New York, or Post-Office Money Order, if possible. Where neither of these can be procured, send the money, but ALWAYS IN A REGISTERED LETTER. The registration fee has been reduced to fifteen cents, and the present registration system has been found by the postal authorities to be virtually an absolute protection against losses by mail. All Postmasters are obliged to register letters when requested to do so.

All subscriptions remaining unpaid more than six months, will be charged at the rate of $2.50 per year.

PAPERS are forwarded until an explicit order is received by the Publisher for their discontinuance, and until payment of all arrearages is made, as required by law.

No names entered on the subscription books without the first payment in advance.

SUBSCRIBERS are particularly requested to note the expiration of their subscriptions, and to forward what is due for the ensuing year, with or without further reminder from their office

DECISIONS.

[redacted] a paper regularly from the office to which he is known or another's, or not—is responsible for the payment.

1. If a person orders his paper discontinued, he must pay all arrearages, or the publisher may continue to send it, until payment is made, and collect the whole amount,—whether the paper be taken from the office or not.

2. The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers and periodicals from the post-office, or removing and leaving them uncalled for, is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

LOOK TO YOUR SUBSCRIPTIONS.

Upon the margin of each paper, or upon the wrapper, will be found a statement of the time to which payment has been made. For instance, if John Smith has paid to Dec. 10th, 1870, it will be marked, "Smith J.—10 Dec.—0." The 0 means 1870. If he has only paid to Dec. 10th, 1869, it would read thus: Smith J.—10 Dec.—9, or perhaps, in some cases, the last two figures for the year, as 70 for 1870, or 69 for 1869.

☞The ensuing money to this office for the JOURNAL, or which he is entitled to claim when he renews, or a new subscription, and write all proper names plainly.

CHICAGO, JULY 15, 1871.

A SEARCH AFTER GOD.

NUMBER XLVII.

Our task before us,—to continue our Search for God. Where next? What regions of science, philosophy, or metaphysics now demands our attention? We will see. Really the course traversed, the fields explored, have been as new to us as to the readers of the JOURNAL. We are merely transmitting the thoughts to paper as they are impressed upon our mind, and really we claim no credit therefor, only so far as we possess a brain admirably adapted for this work which has been inaugurated and pursued with so much perseverance. The ideas advanced have been entirely new to us, and seemed so much at variance with our own preconceived opinions, that at times we allowed our brain to be used quite reluctantly. So lucid were the demonstrations, and so startling the assertions made, that sometimes we felt alarmed, but as we proceeded, we gradually became intensely interested in the course traversed, for we felt that a theory that did not narrow the destiny or mission of man, but beautifully enlarged the same, would be instrumental in doing great good, and could not possibly injure any one. Thus encouraged, we have from week to week, for nearly a year, submitted ourself to be used as the instrument of one who has long been in spirit-life, and who was a distinguished barrister at law,—living during the reign of Queen Elizabeth. He was an Irishman, on earth a Roman Catholic, and deeply imbued with the philosophy and belief of that church. Being, however, of a progressive turn of mind, with remarkably clear perceptions, nervous temperament, and endowed with large causality, ideality, and withal a man of wonderful energy and perseverance, he did not long remain in theological bondage, but burst those chains and commenced investigations in the arcana of nature, resolving, if possible to solve the great question, "Is there a God?" We have seen him and conversed with him.

At first his efforts were but little rewarded. Confined to the lower spheres when he first made his advent into spirit-life, he could learn but little in regard to the grand question that so interested his mind. He carefully studied ancient authors, delved deep into the recesses of nature, traveled to remote countries, conversed with the ancient Brahmins, Chinese, Chaldeans,—in fact, he left no stone unturned whereby he could glean a particle of information in regard to this question. Those who believed in the existence of an Infinite God could could give no intelligent explanation of the reasons on which their belief was based, and all his efforts in that direction met with no success.

After he had read all the books at his command on this subject, both in spirit-life and on earth, he still was unsatisfied—the problem still remained unsolved. As he continued his researches among the traditionary lore of ancient times, carefully examined the mysteries of history, and found nothing therein on which he could predicate a belief, his wish to solve the question seemed to increase, and he now directed his attention to another quarter. He watched the operations of nature; saw the unconscious elements proceeding with a glorious work, and there seemed to be connected therewith a design. He saw the atmosphere, wind, gravity, water, and the rays of the sun, which could not see, hear, think or feel, uniting their energies, and forming therefrom a perfect [illegible] hailstone, and he straightway inferred the elements being idiotic, there [illegible] connected therewith a God, but he [illegible] not see him.

Ardent in the pursuit of the investigation of his subject, he re-doubled none of his efforts, but ascending higher in the scale of existence, he found that a circle of spirits were superintending the operations of the elements, so far as the earth was concerned.

This discovery astonished and perplexed him, for he had come to the conclusion that the elements were automatic in action and governed themselves through the instrumentality of a God omnipresent. This circle of spirits had a certain duty to perform, and their operations complied with a specific purpose. Thus the earth, moved as it is with inconceivable rapidity, is supplied with force that operates thereon, and that be found under the control of this circle of spirits. First, a planet is assigned a place in the heavens, bearing a certain relation to all others in that system. The rules by which this grand work is consummated is taught in the higher spheres, and is quite well understood by the denizens of earth.

The mathematician on earth understands very well many of the laws that govern the motion of planets and their distance from each other and the sun, is in a certain well-defined ratio.

After his researches among the different libraries of the earth and the Spirit World, it was then that he directed his attention to mathematical astronomy,—to solving those intricate laws connected with the movements of worlds in the regions of space. He saw them all beautifully and harmoniously arranged—perfect order seemed to characterize all their movements. His mathematical calculations were all theories based on observation; by and by, as he progressed from sphere to sphere, drinking knowledge at every fount, he found that facts nicely corroborated his former experience. Facts have an origin. If in the study of the geography of the heavens you find a certain definite order of arrangements exists in the location of the planets, that is a fact,—it exists,—and you only have to ascend higher in the scale of existence, to find where that fact first originated. He, in his studies, was often perplexed at the difficulties he had to encounter, obstacles to remove, but still he persevered. He learned that the movements of the planets enunciated grand principles, and as he ascended higher, he found that they were but the outworkings of some master mind. As the wheels of a clock in motion enunciated certain grand principles, which point to the mind of individualized intelligences as their author, so do the principles enunciated by the movements of our system of worlds, tell the same grand truth. Wherever he could prove the existence of a principle in action, he could finally trace it to man,—he found that to be invariably true, so far as mechanism in nature or art is concerned. This occasioned a wonderful revolution in his previously conceived opinions, and he seemed to be imbued with new life. He then retraced his steps to earth, to ascend again, systematically investigating various abstruse subjects. He saw clustering around the earth sphere, a circle of spirits that were interested in agriculture. He now devoted his attention to them, following them in their investigations for many years. He studied the history of agriculture as published by the circle of spirits, and traced their operations from those primeval periods when the siluriun monsters,—mammoth animals both of the land and the sea,—existed, and saw their operations. As the earth was prepared for the reception of seeds, they were organized by a systematic action of the elements, controlled by them, and given to the world. A seed is only the concentration of certain forces with matter, the method of combining the forces determining the character of the seed. Not a seed on earth, however insignificant it may be, that does not owe its existence to this spirit circle. This astonished him, and he saw how superficial had been his studies. In connection with this circle of spirits, he studied attentively, and learned the true nature of agricultural chemistry. To-day thousands of seeds are in the earth, that two thousand years ago had no existence, and now, even, thousands of seeds are becoming annihilated each century. As he gazed upon this wise circle of sages, saw their operation, their wonderful power, and withal their interest in the welfare of the children of earth, he thought indeed he was in the presence of Gods. This experience caused a flood of light to burst in upon him, for what he had ignorantly ascribed to a God, he found individualized intelligences connected therewith. With a new base of operations, with his mind strengthened with many new ideas, he started anew in his investigations, resolving to find God. On all sides mystery confronted him. The operations of nature connected with agriculture were no longer to him a concealed problem, for this circle of spirits seemed to have exclusive control over it.

Where next? As all seeds, etc., on earth, originated from this circle of spirits, is it not possible he thought, that a higher order of spirits still was connected with world building? He seemed elated at this thought, and started forth with new resolutions in his mind. He found that none but individualized intelligences were connected with operations of agriculture on earth, in originating seeds, etc., and he determined to find out if there was not above them, some God, who made them his instrument. Armed with this resolution, his mind animated with an ardent zeal, he went to work with renewed energy. He now directed his attention only to guardian circles. He studied the history thereof and he found the following:

1. Those conducting agriculture,
2. Governments,
3. The atmosphere,
4. The movements of the earth in the planetary system.
5. The forces that through the operations of which, the earth was formed.

The first circle originate all seeds, of what ever character, they may be, from which, root, herb, stalk, tree, etc., originate.

The second control the formations and dissolutions of governments.

The third control the atmosphere, cause tornadoes, water spouts, rain, etc., in accordance with well-defined laws.

The fourth, superintends the action of certain forces that cause all the motions that the earth is subject to.

[To be continued.]

The Bhagvat-Geeta.

Translation of Charles Wilkins. (Chicago: Religio-Philosophical Publishing House). This is an American reproduction of the famous translation made by Mr. Wilkins, under the patronage of Warren Hastings, of India fame, and published in 1785 by the Court of Directors of the East India Company. The Bhagavat-Gita (we adopt the recent spelling of the best Asiatic scholars) is an episode of the Maha-Bharata, a quite important authority with the Vedantist sect of Brahmins. It furnishes a very satisfactory glimpse into the theology of one of the great religions of the East. Why the Religio-Philosophical Society should publish it we scarcely know, unless the Chicago Spiritualists have made up their mind to substitute the Vedas for the Bible.—Christian Union.

REMARKS:—We will inform the Christian Union (Henry Ward Beecher's paper) why the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE—not the Chicago Spiritualists—republish the BHAGVAT-GEETA.

The proprietor of this house—S. S. Jones—is a believer in the philosophy of spirit communion. Spiritualism, so-called, is the PHILOSOPHY OF LIFE.

The investigators in that field of philosophy, find that the early inhabitants of earth, in their highest conceptions of a deity, conceived of a man highly endowed, mentally and physically,—a great warrior, a teacher of moral ethics; that from time to time, leading men, who were endowed with powers and capabilities for systematizing the traditions of the barbarous people of former ages, put forth new systems, based upon old mythology, until, finally, after the lapse of eons of ages, the Bhagvat-Geeta was written by a learned Hindoo, based upon a then popular system of religion, recognizing BRAHM as Deity, and KRISHNA as the second incarnate Deity. The ancient Hindoos were not only a powerful nation but a polished people.

Their religion was as much a system, five thousand years ago, as is the Christian religion of to-day.

The reader of that book will find that the Christian system of religion which is based upon the Mosaic, is borrowed or stolen from the Brahmins.

Kreeshna, the son of Brahm, was, like Christ, born of a virgin and cradled in a manger. His teachings in many essentials are reproduced and put into the mouth of the Nazarene, and thus the enlightened world,—the polished Christian people of the evening of the nineteenth century, are believing that the code of morals, the teachings of the New Testament, had their origin with Christ, the so-called incarnate Deity. To disabuse the minds of all who dare to read or think upon that subject, the BHAGVAT-GEETA has been republished by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, and not that "the Spiritualists of Chicago (or of the world) have made up their minds to substitute the Vedas for the Bible."

Spiritualists—philosophers, look upon all past systems of religions as having been useful in their time, as having been the highest conceptions of Deity and moral ethics, which the masses of people in different ages were capable of appreciating. That all systems have been abused by a corrupt priesthood and leading devotees to accomplish selfish ends, no close and careful investigator can doubt.

The age is already ushered, that recognizes sound philosophy and common sense as preferable to all systems of religion, which have their foundations in the traditions of ignorant people,—the early inhabitants of the earth. The Philosophy of Life—Spiritualism, teaches the continuous unfoldment of mind and matter from one plane to another; that such ever has been the law of progression, and ever will be. To more fully comprehend that great truth, we seek to know the teachings of the past; to carefully compare such teachings with facts of to-day—such is the mental food of the immortal soul. Hence we place such food before the people.

An Ignorant Alderman - By Warren Chase.

BRO. JONES:—There is at least one member of the tax City Council of St. Louis, who is ignorant enough to believe that the Council can make clairvoyance a crime, and fine a person fifty dollars for seeing a spirit. He (I hope only one) is also wicked enough to do it. Have you any in your City Council as ignorant or as wicked? If such could be made or construed as law here, it would drive away some thousands of the best citizens, and stop four times as many from coming, but it is not probable it will ever be tried in court. The same wise man would also include in this new list of crimes, a punishment for casting nativities by the stars, or Astrology, and, for aught we know, Astronomy or Geology might come next. "Where ignorance is bliss (and rules) 'tis wore folly to be wise." We are pretty near moth-eaten here by ignorance.

St. Louis, Mo.

REPLY:—No, Brother Chase, we are not now cursed with any such bigoted church-ridden ignoramuses in the Common Council of Chicago.

We had such not long since, but they have greatly improved by the free school system. Last winter's term enlightened them very much. But for the good offices of the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL, Chicago, the whole State of Illinois, and in all probability the whole North-west, would, to-day, be prosecuting, fining, and imprisoning all healing mediums.

It will be remembered that the Catholics and Protestants united, for once, in an effort to fine and imprison all mediums in this city, under an old ordinance to prohibit fortune-telling.

Poor souls, they did not like to have their foul deeds and secret machinations revealed! So the Chief of Police, with his ready tools, made a raid upon divers and sundry mediums one evening, and took them to the Armory, determined to imprison them for one night at least, before they could have a hearing. But fortunately friends came to the rescue, and one friend, MILTON T. PEIRCE, a lawyer standing at the head of his profession, and a gentleman who should be remembered by all liberal-minded men—Spiritualists especially—presented their defense, backed by constitutional guarantees, in such a light, that the accused already in custody were acquitted, and the raid contemplated to be made upon all other mediums was abandoned.

The fate of the poor old granny Doctor's Bill, before all the State Legislatures in the North-west, is fresh in the minds of all readers of this paper. It is conceded by all who know anything upon the subject, that but for the timely and bold stand taken by this paper, and the remonstrances which it sent out for the people to sign, and send to the respective Legislatures, we should to-day be cursed with one of the most infamous laws of class legislation that was ever enacted for the oppression of the masses for the benefit of a few—a privileged class.

To the end of defending the right, and standing by true mediums in their peril, this the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL was instituted. It will do its work fearless of all consequences.

A MICHIGAN LOVE-FEAST.

Selfish Piety at Hillsdale.

The New York Tribune, contains the following gushing remarks in reference to the Rev. E. H. Whipple, an account of whose transgression we published several weeks ago:

The town of Hillsdale, in Michigan, has recently enjoyed a scene of hysterical interest, which affords a singular mixture of French sentimentality and Yankee mysticism. The Rev. E. H. Whipple, who bears the honorable titles of clergyman, father of family, and Professor's of Belles Lettres in the College at Hillsdale, has been relieving the monotony of his collegiate and sacredotal functions by an intimacy with the wife of one of his deacons; to whose honorable name we will give no further publicity. Of course, the liason could not long be hidden in a little town where there are tired eyes at every window, and where every visit is carefully observed and estimated by neighbors across the way. Circumstances favored the busy-research of malicious eyes; the relations between the parson and the deacon's wife became the subject of remark, and the secret air seemed intolerable to the professor when set in the light of his townsmen's countenances. So one Sunday evening, after services were over, he asked a number of the prominent church members to remain, and read to them a confession which would have been impossible to any man not crazed with morbid vanity and a constant brooding over his own mental processes. He acknowledged his intimacy with the unfortunate lady he had misled, and said he made this confession in the interest of his imperilled salvation. He then invited three of his parishioners to go with him to the house of the outraged deacon, and there repeated the humiliating confession. The injured husband received the avowal with Christian equanimity. The whole company joined in prayer. The wronger and the wronged shook hands in token of forgiveness, and the next morning the deacon and his wife left Hillsdale. The penitent professor remains, and receives a large share of public sympathy for his humble truthfulness.

There are people who seem really to admire this sort of exhibition, degrading and unwholesome as it is. They say it is better to act in this way than for husband and a seducer to shoot and stab each other. But, in admitting this, it is not necessary to say that these shocking and deleterious scandals are needed or laudable. There is danger to the character of excitable young people, in elevating into an attitude of moral heroism this unsavory performance of Mr. Whipple. It was an act of intense and irredeemable selfishness. He had pondered upon his sin until he feared the flames of perdition in case he did not confess publicly. He chose to blast the character and the peace of a respectable family who had shown him great favor rather than put his own salvation in jeopardy. A manly man or an honest friend would not have yielded to this spiritual cowardice. He would have forsaken and forsworn his crime, settling his account with God in earnest penitence, and trusting to true repentance and good works to blot out his sin. He had no right to destroy the innocent man who had befriended him and the erring woman who had trusted him, on any such pitiful plea that only in that way he could escape hell. The fear of physical death is no excuse for flinching from earthly duties, and the fear of damnation will never excuse an act of meanness and treachery. Mr. Whipple may learn some day that his craven confession was as bad as his sin.

The most singular detail of these attacks of mystical sensuality is the unhealthy craving for excitement and desire for publicity they evince. It would greatly shock Mr. Whipple and his sympathizers to hear that the parson was guided in part by the same motives that induce the barroom loafer to tell of his conquests, and the school girl to print her sentimental verses in the county paper. He felt an irresistible temptation to take the whole community into his innermost confidence. The operations of his own mind and heart, the struggles of his soul, seemed to him matters of such infinite importance that the order and decency of the society in which he lived ought to be sacrificed to the pleasure of discussing them. What other feeling had Casanova and Lauzun in writing those scandalous memoirs which have blackened the fame of so many families? What else was it that drove Rousseau to that frightfully truthful exposition of his own diseased fancies and fitful life? The world has no concern with the state of any man's spiritual nature. Each must work out his own salvation. The morbid exercises of our neighbors' hearts are not of much practical benefit to us. The really valuable autobiographies, such as Gibbon's and Franklin's are those which tell us what the narrators did, and how they did it; not how they loved and prayed and suffered.

If there is any moral to be drawn from this Hillsdale scandal, it is one which the sentimental penitent probably never suspected; and that is, that there is no such things as honor among paramours, and sooner or later, either under the pressure of fear, hate, vanity or remorse, those who have the weakness to sin will have the weakness to blab.

Mediums and Seances in Chicago.

Mrs. Lord, Mr. Read, and the Bangs children, continue to hold seances for physical manifestations. Mrs. Robinson is astonishing the most skeptical by the wonderful cures she performs in all sections of the country, without ever seeing her patients. Dr. McFadden is holding seances every evening, at his residence, 348 West Madison street, where many are surprised at his way of giving tests, often with great accuracy. There are also a great number of other very excellent mediums in the city, whose residences will be learned by reference to the Medium's Directory and advertisements in this paper.

Our Mediums.

F. A. Moore, reporter and correspondent of the Evening Wisconsin, Milwaukee, has visited Chicago, and writes as follows to that paper in reference to our mediums:

THE BANGS CHILDREN.

It would be too long and "crazy" a chapter to tell what I saw among the mediums. I visited the Bangs children on Morgan street, little chubby six and eight-year-olds, who go through all the rope tying and cabinet feats of the Davenports. An empty chair was made to dance and keep time through a dozen waltzes and polkas on the piano. The chair was two feet from any body, and under the clearest gaslight. It could have really been no more wonderful if the Court House had danced and polkaed, to the music of the great fire bell on the Square.

MRS. MAUD LORD.

Mrs. Maud Lord was a Fon du Lac girl a year ago, and is now one of the most celebrated mediums living. I visited her at her house on Park avenue. A family circle was formed. After many wonderful phases—too wonderful to report, little hands gathered about my face, toyed with my hair, patted my cheeks, took out my watch, put it in my hands, lifted it to my ear, carried it around to every one in the room, put it back into my pocket, and the chain in its place as before. Maud described the hands as belonging to a little blonde-cheeked girl, with violet eyes and golden curls. To my own question, came a soft, articulated answer, "Little Floy." All were grown people in the room, and how "little hands" could fashion themselves, must be counted a marvel.

CHAS. H. READ.

Last evening I spent an hour with that "mysterious man." His feats are far ahead of the Davenport Brothers, and knocked all the daylight out of our philosophy. He visits Milwaukee on Monday, and will hold a "seance" at Dr. Herring's, 133 Spring street, in the evening.

Singular Human Phenomenon.

The two young ladies alluded to on the first page of our paper, are attracting a great deal of attention. The Peoples, a paper published at Freemont, Ill., alludes to them as follows:

There resides in the Northern part of this county, about twelve miles from this place, a family by the name of Williams, composed of father, mother, three sisters and several brothers. The two elder sisters are young ladies, aged respectively, sixteen and eighteen years.

For some weeks these young women have been acting in a very curious manner, which, up to this time has been unaccounted for. Their actions are a great deal like deranged persons. But there seems to be various opinions in the neighborhood as to the cause of these actions. Many persons who are well acquainted with them, say that in the day time they are very rational, but as soon as night comes their various performances begins, and many people, who are very intelligent men, and truthful persons, have told us that they have seen them jump from the ground to the top of a large barn, perhaps thirty feet high, and stand straight on the comb and dance; that they have hung from the eaves of the roof by their chins, and went through the roof at a whole probably 10x12 inches—squirrel-like jump from the roof to a tree, which is, perhaps, a distance of sixty feet, and many other such performances. Their actions have alarmed the entire neighborhood, and a great deal of excitement exists over the strange phenomenon. People for many miles flock to see these young ladies. In company with several gentleman, we visited the place on Wednesday evening, and found part of the story correct, which can not avail words for the truthfulness of the whole of it, yet conversed with many persons in attendance, whose truth and veracity can not be doubted, who will vouch for the truth of our statements. From two hundred to three hundred persons from all parts of the country, visit the scene nightly. Mr. Williams and his entire family are well respected by all who know them, and the strange phenomenon must work hard upon the parents. We will probably give more items regarding their strange actions in our next issue.

Spirit Likenesses.

M. B. Delano, of South Barre, New York, writing, says he has in his house some very fine spirit likenesses, by Mr. Milleson, spirit artist.

Spirit artists are becoming quite common. Those who do good work, usually send specimens to be placed on exhibition in our reception rooms, and advertise in the JOURNAL, thus affording the public an opportunity to see their work and know their terms.

Lectures at St. Charles, Ill.

Dr. Kayner and Mr. Cowan are holding regular Sunday forenoon and evening lectures at the Universalist Meeting House, now used in common by the Spiritualists and Universalists at St. Charles, Illinois. Both will answer calls to lecture and attend funerals in adjacent towns.

Dr. Kayner is also a healing medium of extraordinary powers.

Dr. Samuel Maxwell.

Our readers will find in another column the advertisement of Dr. Samuel Maxwell.

The Doctor stands high as one of the very best healers of the age. We respectfully recommend him to the favorable consideration of the sick everywhere.

LITERARY.

The Fireside Friend for July, is fully equal to the preceding numbers. This magazine seems now to be under full headway, with every prospect of a long and successful career. H. Leonidas Hamilton, publisher, 420 Fourth avenue, New York.

The Herald of Health, Wood & Holbrook, publishers, New York.

Home and Health, W. R. DePuy & Bro., publishers, New York.

Good Health, Alexander Moore, publisher, Boston.

The three last-named publications, for July, are received. They are very valuable and instructive magazines, each filling its own peculiar sphere. The stanch old Herald of Health is probably a familiar friend in the household of very many of our readers.

—Mrs. Sarah A. Byrnes address is now Wollaston Heights, Mass.

Personal and Local.

—Good! Dr. H. P. Fairfield is ready to answer calls to lecture in the West as well as East. He cannot be excelled as a trance speaker, and we hope he will find employment in the West. Such a speaker is needed here. In making out your list of speakers for the fall, remember him.

—E. D. Babbitt, a prominent Spiritualist of Madisonville, Ohio, has been writing some articles on Spiritualism for Theodore Tilton's Golden Age. Articles in favor of our philosophy are admitted to the columns of that paper.

—How these religious papers love one another! St. Peter, "a Roman Catholic paper of the highest class," speaking of the Independent, says: "There is a little money in it; there is the sweet gratification of hatred in it,—that we grant; but there is also eternal damnation in it for the souls of the mean, mendacious, and sacrilegious wretches who are its authors."

—Have you got any friends that you want to save from the fear of the lake of fire and brimstone? Then send them the "Biography of Satan," by K. Graves.

—Mrs. R. P. Moore, of St. Louis, is vouched for as a good clairvoyant and healer. For her address see Medisms' Register.

—Especial attention is called to the advertisement of Dr. P. T. Johnson, to be found in another column. We have every reason to believe that he is able to perform all he promises.

—C. B. Bills, writing from Franklin Grove, Ill., says:

"Dr. Bailey gave excellent satisfaction here as a lecturer, and is to speak at Dixon.

—If you are in need of a fine buggy or wagon, we would refer you to the advertisement of Brother N. Kinney, in another column. He does good square work, and you will be pleased with your purchase if you buy of him.

—Brother Jessie Hepper, of Jackson, Tenn., writes us that he would be glad to give any good medium a home at his residence.

—M. H. Houghton, M. D., writes as follows from Stowe, Vermont:

"We have had a grand time; I think the best convention ever held in Vermont, or anywhere else. Able speakers were present from all over the country; I will name a few: Dr. H. S. Storer, of Boston; Geo. A. Bacon, Boston; A. E. Carpenter, Boston; Mrs. S. E. Warner, ill.; Fannie Davis Smith, Brandon, Vt.; Mrs. Hyzer, Vermont; and a host of others. We climbed up the mighty steeps of Mt. Mansfield, and were transfigured there with the power and love of the angel hosts from their happy home among the stars."

—Levi Dickinson is now lecturing in various parts of the country. He lectures while entranced, and many times is enabled to describe spirits. He is a convert from the Jewish faith, and is doing a good work in our ranks.

—Think of the little folks when you are ordering books, and send for the Vine Cottage Series, comprising "The Little Flower Girl," "The Orphan's Struggle," and "Little Harry's Wish;" the children will be delighted with them.

—The Boston Herald contains the following: "On Sunday last, Mr J. E. warner, a photographer of Fall River, was called by some parties who live in Cherry street, to take some pictures of a deceased child. The latter was placed in a chair, and over it was arranged an arch of roses, with one sprig hanging down from the centre. As we are informed by one who declared himself an eye witness, several pictures were taken; and in the sixth, partly obscuring the pendant sprig, appeared, clearly defined, the face of the child's own mother, who has been dead several years. The statement comes with the assurance that there was no chicanery in the matter; and it is said this well-authenticated case has created considerable local excitement."

—J. H. Powell and family sailed from Boston in the Cunard steamer Tripoli for Liverpool, Tuesday, June 27th.

—Henry Houston was hung at Winnsboro, S. C., for murder, last week. The Sheriff gave his body to his friends, and they took it home, went to work at the vital spark, rekindled it, and set Mr. Houston on his taps again. Before the next morning, Mr. Houston started to look after some urgent business in another part of the country, and his family is preparing to follow him.

—Elder C. F. Evans, the great Shaker apostle of New Lebanon, went to England July 1st on a missionary tour.

—"The Science of Evil," by Joel Moody, continues to excite much comment. The demand for it will increase for many years.

—The following case shows the growing importance of our cause, and the decision will be read with interest by those who have desired to see the matter tested in court: "On Friday, June 23d, in the Superior Civil Court for Plymouth County, Mass., held at Plymouth, the case of Luther J. Phillips vs. Wm. Chandler, came up. This was an action brought by the plaintiff to recover for injuries received from an unskillful surgical operation performed by the defendant. The defendant is a well-known spiritualistic doctor residing in Kingston, and it was contended by the defense that he can neither read nor write, and that he is entirely ignorant of medicine, that he never pretended to have any of himself, and that his patrons well knew that his treatment was wholly dependent upon abnormal influences while in a trance condition, and that there was no responsibility beyond the acting in good faith to obtain the abnormal influence. The court (Judge Reed) ruled that where a party holds himself out as a Spiritualist doctor, he is only held to use the ordinary reasonable means to procure the attendance of spirits at the time and place of treatment, or that if the party so holding himself out to treat disease takes the ordinary means in use with such person to induce the attendance of spirits, he is not liable for want of skill while so treating his patients. The case was submitted to the jury upon the question whether the defendant treated the plaintiff while in the condition he contracted to be in, and if not, whether the plaintiff suffered injury from that treatment, and to what extent. The jury rendered a verdict for the defendant."

—We have going through the press a new and revised edition of the only true history of Jesus of Nazareth ever written, or, probably, that ever will be written.

—M. Millesom the spirit artist for portraits, will be in Birmingham, Mich., during July.

—Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe defines her position on Spiritualism as follows: "In answer to the inquiry whether I am a Spiritualist, I reply that I believe in the Spiritual teachings in the Bible, and in that alone; and regard a great part of what is called Modern Spiritualism as being precisely what we are warned against in the Bible as seducing spirits and doctrines of devils."

[illegible] is lecturing this month at Terre [illegible]

[illegible] Donnell, Catholic pastor, in a letter to [illegible] in deep affliction, says: "In the deep affliction [illegible] has recently visited you, I implore you to [illegible] well that there is a communion of spirits of the departed dead, which death cannot prevent, and which, when prayer, can impart much consolation. This, with the condolence of every parent and child in my flock, I beg leave to offer you, wishing, in the meantime, to assure you of my heartfelt regret and sympathy.

Philadelphia Department.

BY ..... HENRY T. CHILD, M. D

Subscriptions will be received, and papers may be obtained at wholesale or retail, at 634 Race street, Philadelphia.

Soul Freedom.

We have spoken of soul needs and soul growth. Out of the fulfillment of these shall come the most glorious inheritance that man can realize,—soul freedom. The declaration that "He is a freeman whom the truth makes free," applies more truly to this, than to either physical or mental conditions—freedom in all of which is essential to real happiness.

Freedom on the physical plane, results first, from a good degree of health of body; next, from the best and most appropriate surroundings.

Men and women are slaves on this plane when they are obliged to labor to the utmost extent of their powers to procure the means of livelihood, and especially is this the case if they are compelled to labor at some irksome and unessential pursuit. The mass of mankind toil so long and continuously, that with a constant weariness, they are crying for a boon of rest, and so blinded are many in their judgments, that they suppose absolute indolence will constitute such a heaven for them. Women suffer from an incessant and ceaseless repetition of monotonous labor.

The mass of mankind perform too much labor; the poor being compelled to it by stern necessity, and the rich by semi-voluntary slavery, which is often full of disappointment and vexation of spirit.

Few, indeed, enjoy that happy medium in which they perform only that amount of labor which produces the most perfect rest, which, without being in bondage to the physical, brings sweet peace and repose in the accomplishment of the desired object.

Contentment and an appreciation of our powers, enables a few individuals to labor so as to realize physical freedom.

Intellectual freedom is equally important and quite as rare. Mankind are slaves on the intellectual plane, and very few dare think independently, and every one must suffer for thinking and acting thus. Intellectual tyranny is fascinating, and perhaps there is no other form of tyranny that is so little recognized, either by those who wield it or those who suffer under it.

Dogmatism is mistaken for wisdom, and the blind and positive assertions of ignorance are put forth to transmit to the mind. This is manifest in all societies and associations, and in this country, where there is so much freedom in public meetings, for the discussion of various topics, this spirit of dogmatism is very apparent. It may be the best thing that it is thus freely manifested, as it will be most likely to work out its own cure.

Intellectual freedom is of great importance in giving to mankind a consciousness of many truths, and an appreciation of them. It has made rapid strides within the last quarter of a century, and is beautifully onward and upward; especially in those countries where the freedom of the press and public speech is guaranteed.

Soul freedom, however, is the highest, holiest, and noblest boon that man is capable of realizing. The first obstacle to the freedom of the soul, are the influences of the physical body,—the soul being a divine spark encased in the physical tenement. For a time it is imprisoned in an unconscious state. Gradually the windows of its prison house are opened; first, by the unfoldment of the intellectual powers, which stand between the soul and the body, and then the native energy and activities of the soul begin to manifest themselves, and before the corroding and darkening influences of sin have acted upon the body, often enable it to give forth beautiful expressions. Child life is thus made most attractive, the windows are opened, through which the soul can throw some of its light, and well will it be for humanity, when they learn to surround these little ones by such influences as shall not only permit this light to shine forth clearly and beautifully, but shall tend to open wide the doors and windows of the physical body, so that soul vision and soul freedom shall be thus early cultivated.

The children of the poor, often amid the most squalid conditions of poverty, are very attractive during the early months of their lives, and the distinctions which separate them from the more refined and better educated classes are not seen until after they have been subjected to many rude, harsh, and unspiritual influences and surroundings which develop the coarse and hard characteristics that are so common.

The reason of this is obvious. The soul nature expresses itself through these physical organizations, and its manifestations are very beautiful and attractive; but when the cold, withering blasts of selfishness and crime nip these buds of promise, and the germs from whence they spring are driven back to remain dormant, then the superficial observer sees evidence of total depravity.

Think of this, ye fathers and mothers, and let no rude and unkind treatment take away that which you have so dearly loved. Know that if these tender flowers are gently watered by the dews of kindness and loving sympathy, they will continue to pour out their rich fragrance more and more freely, and bathe human life in a glory more transcendantly sublime and beautiful than anything that has ever been realized by mortals.

Owing to the blindness and ignorance of mankind, even the most intelligent and refined portions of society have failed to realize this natural and divine soul growth and soul freedom which would place humanity on the high plane which it is designed to occupy.

Mankind have been journeying in the wilderness through all the ages of the past, with occasional glimpses of the promised land, and we believe Modern Spiritualism is not only destined to lead humanity up to the mountain-peaks of physical and intellectual life, but to take them out into the broad plains and rich valleys of soul life in which will be realized true soul freedom.

Freedom of the soul is not marred by any impurity in itself, for this cannot be, but it is clouded over by the impurities and angularities of the body and mind. Its freedom, like that of the body and mind, is dependent on knowledge and consequent growth.

The freedom of the body depends upon physical health and such surroundings as shall enable it to outwork its mission, the body being subject to its surroundings to a great extent, and limited by its strength and endurance. Man is continually overcoming these influences and extending his empire even in the domain of the physical.

So also the freedom of the intellect or mind is governed by its surroundings and its interior development and the amount of knowledge it has obtained, and in this man is also rapidly extending his sphere and enlarging the boundaries of his domain.

If the physical and intellectual natures of either of them be allowed to occupy more than their appropriate time and place, the freedom of the soul is interfered with, and of course this will be the case if there be violations of physical or mental laws, all of which are divine.

If an individual has no consciousness of a soul nature, it is vain to speak to him of the freedom of the soul. All intuitions of moral law, on any plane, fetter the soul, and deprive it of its freedom. But it is our aim to set forth the means by which the soul may attain to the highest freedom.

It must be evident to all that the best physical and mental conditions should be maintained, and that ante-natal conditions have a very important influence upon the freedom of the soul. The spontaneity with which this manifests itself in some children is evidence of this.

Next to these conditions is a proper education—one that shall bring forth the soul in its activity, and by maintaining the innocent and confiding trust of childhood, keep it upon those planes on which the soul can continually increase its power and extend its freedom.

The soul ever holds communion with the angel world, and wherever it is free it will give evidence of this, and it will thus lead the mind to go forth into all the conditions of life, searching out the hidden causes that underlie all human actions. Going to the fountain and source from whence these proceed, it will "judge righteous judgment" upon the actions of men, —not with a view to condemn any, for all are more or less subject to conditions and give them that freedom which can alone come from the full and perfect unfoldment of all their faculties and powers—physical, mental, and spiritual. The mission of the soul is intuitional, it is the purest clairvoyance; it sees beyond the surface into causes and principles, and when there is a good degree of soul freedom, these are laid out clearly before it as stars in the firmament, and the harmony and beauty of God's laws are apparent. All the external harmony of nature is dim and shadowy in comparison to the interior harmony which is thus opened to the soul.

A very good degree of soul freedom should be attained in this life, though its perfection will only be approximated in the higher spheres.

Among the grand lessons that Spiritualism is teaching mankind, we may enumerate, first, that each one has a soul: second, that this soul has needs; third, that it must experience a growth, and then by attain to its legitimate freedom.

A balloon will give us an instructive illustration of man's triune nature. The beautiful silken globe, which is destined to hold the gas, represents man's spirit; the net-work, which should be regularly folded over this, and extend its chords down to sustain the basket, represents the mind; while the basket with its ballast, illustrates the physical body.

Alas! how many human beings do we see carrying the basket uppermost, with the net-work of the mind terribly entangled around them, and the beautiful silken globe of the spirit empty and trailing in the dust.

When Spiritualism has taught us its grand and ennobling lessons, we shall learn to fill the balloon of the soul with the pure ethereal airs of heaven, and as it rises gracefully and beautifully, the net-work of the mind will be carefully and properly folded around it, and its chords reaching downward, shall hold the basket of the physical body so that it may rise above the storms and discords of earth, and move onward triumphantly in the heavenly journey of life. Let us then endeavor to throw off the ballast of selfishness and inharmony, and rise to purer and holier conditions, to sublimer heights of glory and happiness, and then we can sound forth the gospel note to all, "Come up higher" and realize more fully the freedom of the soul.

In future articles we shall speak of the soul-life, past, present, and future.

The line of life may be doubled up by the use of stimulants, and seem to be stronger, but it is really weaker, and shorter on account of this.

Many persons are like a vessel at sea impelled by sails, and at the mercy of every wind that blows, and not like a powerful steamer driven by a force.—W. F. Evans.

Our touch is morally healthful or poisonous. Our spiritual states are contagious, and it is a serious and earnest thing to move among our fellows. Many of our intolerable thoughts and unhappy feelings are excited in us by the spheres of those around us, and come to us from spirits in the flesh, rather than from those who have passed to the world beyond, to whom they are often unjustly charged.—Ibid.

It is one of our highest duties to be innocently happy, not merely for our own sake, but for the general weal.—Ibid.

The strongest government in the world is not strong enough to trample on the rights of the meanest citizen with impunity.—W. Hancock.

> "The twilight deepens; brooding sleep
> Shadows the green earth tenderly;
> The house lies buried in slumber deep;
> The peace of heaven seems strangely near;
> I kneel beneath the meadow's fear,
> And soft upon my troubled breast
> Comes down a blessed sense of rest,
> Praying, beloved, for thee!"

Carefulness in little things indicates a well-developed mind; but a prouder appreciation of all things, is the highest attainment of man.

Justly censurable is the common habit in fashionable life, of expending all the income in extravagant indulgence.

Spiritualism encourages the loftiest spiritual aspirations, energizes the soul by presenting only exalted motives, prompts to highest endeavors, and inculcates noble self-reliance. It frees man from the bondage of authority of book or creed. Its only authority is truth; its interpreter, reason.—Hudson Tuttle.

Baby Mysteries.

Where did you come from, baby dear?
Out of the everywhere into here.

Where did you get your eyes so blue?
Out of the sky as I came through.

What makes the light in them sparkle and spin?
Some of the starry spikes left in.

Where did you get that little tear?
I found it waiting when I got here.

What makes your forehead so smooth and high?
A soft hand stroked it as I went by.

What makes your cheek like a warm white rose?
Something better than any one knows.

Whence the three-cornered smile of bliss?
Three angels gave me at once a kiss.

Where did you get that pearly ear?
God spoke, and it came out to hear.

Where did you get those arms and hands?
Love made itself into hooks and bands.

Feet, whence did you come, you darling things?
From the same box as the cherubs' wings.

How did they all just come to be you?
God thought about me, and so I grew.

But how did you come to us, you dear?
God thought of you—and so I am here.

DR. SAMUEL MAXWELL,

MAGNETIC PHYSICIAN

TREATS the sick by magnetic touch, and the use of approp iate magnetized remedies. Also makes clairvoyant examinations. Patients to be treated by letter should send age, sex, and leading symptoms. Board desired. Come to, or address, SAMUEL MAXWELL, M. D.

[illegible], ROCHESTER, Ind.

NOTICE OF MEETINGS.

Eighth National Convention.

The American Association of Spiritualists.—The Eighth National Convention will meet at Troy, New York, on Tuesday, the 12th of September, at 10 o'clock in the morning, and continue a session three days.

Each active State or Territorial organization of Spiritualists, within the limits of the United States of America, shall be entitled to one delegate for each fractional fifty members of such organization, and of each working local society, and each Progressive Lyceum within the boundaries of such State or Territory, provided that only one general organization shall be entitled to representation from any State or Territory. Each Province of the American Continent shall be entitled to one delegate for each working association within its limits, and the District of Columbia shall be entitled to two delegates.

Each active local Society, and each Progressive Lyceum of any State, Territory, or Province which has no General Association, shall be entitled to one delegate for each fractional fifty members.

These Associations are respectfully invited to appoint delegates to attend this meeting and participate in the proceedings.

HANNAH F. M. BROWN (Orange, Ill.), Pres.
HENRY T. CHILD, M. D. (634 Race St. Phil.), Sec.

Eaton Rapids and Windsor, Mich.

The friends of eternal progression, of Eaton Rapids and Windsor, Mich., and vicinity, will hold their First Quarterly Meeting at the Cheney Schoolhouse, or at the grove in the neighborhood, on the 15th and 16th of July next.

Mrs. L. A. Pearsall and others will be present to address the meeting. Provision will be made for friends from a distance. Dr. Bailey will be present to sing and play the organ.

Come, friends, and have a good time in keeping the wheels of progress in motion.

JAMES ASHLEY, President.

Two-Days Meeting at Albion, New York.

At an assembly of the Spiritualists of Orleans Co., today, it was resolved that a two-days meeting be held in Albion, Saturday and Sunday, the 22d and 23d days of July next, and that J. G. Fish and Lyn Miller be invited as speakers. Entertainment will be provided for friends from a distance.

A. C. WOODRUFF.

Hymeneal.

MARRIED, on the evening of June 14th, 1871, at the home of her parents, in Cincinnati, Ohio, Annie S. Graham to Oliver S. Garretson, of Buffalo, N. Y., the writer officiating.

A pleasant gathering of friends paid tribute of their regards and esteem in congratulations, and many more tangible testimonials added to the occasion.

ADDIE L. BALLOU.

Obituary.

Passed to the higher life, from Fox Lake, Wisconsin, Geo Morgan, Esq., in his 72d year. A moral reformer, in its highest and noblest sense, his epitaph might truly be: He was an honest man—the noblest work of God.

BELVIDERE SEMINARY,

FOR YOUTHS OF BOTH SEXES,

Belvidere New Jersey. Fall Term begins Wednesday, Sept. 13th. One of the most liberal institutions in the land, being strictly non-sectarian. It has the superior advantages of a healthful and beautiful location, added to the comforts and genial influences of a pleasant home, with excellent opportunities for obtaining a practical education in any or all of its several departments, English, Classical, Literary, and Scientific. Pupils graduate in each department, also in Gymnastics.

For catalogues, address Miss Bush, Principals.

v10 n17 9t.

813 RACE ST.

R. H. STODDARD, of 813 Race St., PHILADELPHIA, can accommodate MEDIUMS visiting that city with first-class rooms for business purposes, at reasonable rates.

v10n13 tf

IT COSTS

Only about one third Bookbinders' prices to do binding handsomely by the use of Alden's Ready Book-Binder. Sizes suited to any publication, from the smallest Monthly to the largest Weekly. Price circular free. Send 50 cents for samples of both styles and Binder. Size for the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL, No. 18; price $1.20 and $1.50. Address, ALDEN'S PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

A. B. Severance,

The Well-Known Psychometrist,

Will give to those who visit him in person, or from autograph or from lock of hair, readings of character; marked changes, past and future; advice in regard to business; diagnosis of disease, with prescription; adaptation of those intending marriage; directions for the management of children; hints to the inharmoniously married, etc.

TERMS—$2.00 for full Delineation; brief Delineation—$1.

A. B. SEVERANCE,
457 Milwaukee St., MILWAUKEE, WIS.

v7n18tf.

GROSVENOR SWAN, M. D.

DR. SWAN MAY BE FOUND AT ALL hours, at 117 Wabash Ave., Chicago, where he will be happy to receive calls from his old friends and patrons, and all who may require his services. v9 n8 tf

WANTED AGENTS

In every Town and City, to sell an article needed in every household. SELLS RAPIDLY. Large PROFITS to AGENTS. Send Stamp for Circulars. O. E. WOOLLEY & Co., Room 12, No. 181 Lasalle St., Chicago.

v10 n13 tf

CARRIAGE MANUFACTORY.

Waverly, N. Y.

THE UNDERSIGNED MANUFACTURES TO ORDER, and keeps on hand all varieties of Open and Top Buggies of the Best Styles; Platform Spring Wagons, with two or more seats, with or without top. This wagon is an improvement on the old two-spring wagon, and as a business wagon, or for family use, is unsurpassed. Best quality of stock used and first-class workmen employed, and all work WARRANTED.

Situated on the Erie R. R., we have good facilities for shipping, and are constantly sending work to all parts of the country.

N. KINNEY.

v9 n25 6m.

THE

VOICE OF PRAYER,

A Poem by W. S. Barlow, Author of "The Voices."

This little poem is fully equal to any of Mr. Barlow's best efforts, and should be read by everybody.

Printed on fine tinted paper with blue line border. Price 25 cents; postage 2 cents.

 For sale, wholesale and retail, by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

MEDIUMS.

SPIRIT PHOTOGRAPHS.

Madison Doherty, having severed his connection with A. D. Willis, at Chicago, has opened a Gallery at Indianapolis, Indiana, where he will sit for spirit pictures.

Parties at a distance wishing these pictures can get the same result as if present, by inclosing a lock of hair, a picture, and the fee of three dollars, and post office stamp, stating the day and hour they wish a trial. Money refunded if no result is obtained.

DOHERTY & PURSELL, PHOTOGRAPHERS,
Nos. 94 & 96 East Washington street,
Indianapolis, Indiana.

v10 n17 3m

CLAIRVOYANCE.

DR. P. T. JOHNSON examines diseases by receiving lock of hair, name, and age, inclosing one dollar accompanying the order. He also prepares a sure antidote for OPIUM AND MORPHINE EATERS; three months will cure the most inveterate case. Charges, six dollars per month. He also prepares a Sure Cure for Agues—50 cents per bottle. Will be sent by express. Ypsilanti, Mich.

v10 n17 tf

J. G. W. ENTWISTLE,

CLAIRVOYANT PHYSICIAN.

No. 194 South Clark Street, Room 3, Chicago.

He is prepared to treat any of the many forms of disease, and possesses a peculiar insight into the cause and character, and a controlling power over it which seems wonderful even to himself. His medicines are purely vegetable, invisible at any distance will be as thoroughly examined, and the means of cure (if curable) as definitely pointed out as if they were present, by sending a lock of hair, giving name, age, sex, and two leading symptoms of the disease. Insanity and Rheumatism a specialty. Examination fee, by hair, $2.00.

v10 n8 9t

DUMONT C. DAKE, M.D.,

ANALYTICAL PHYSICIAN FOR CHRONIC DISEASES.

Patients at a distance successfully treated. Medicines sent by mail or express. Send a simple statement of condition, age, and sex, occupation, temperament, (if not known, send photograph). Address P. O. Box 30, Chicago, Ill. Send for ANALYTICAL HEALTH JOURNAL.

v10 n8 tf

MRS. C. H. LELAND,

Wonderful Psychometrist, Soul Reader, and Business Medium, will, upon receipt of photograph, lock of hair, whether married or single, send to any person a correct delineation of character, with leading events in the past and future life, for one dollar. Advice concerning business, two dollars. Written communications from friends in spirit life, two dollars. Satisfaction guaranteed. Instructions for mediumistic development, one dollar. Address, TAUNTON, MASS.

v10 n10 tf

MRS. E. MANIFOLD

Medical, Clairvoyant, and Healing Medium. Parties at a distance examined by lock of hair. Price, $1.00. Prescriptions, $1.00. Magnetic Remedies sent to all parts of the country. Address MRS. E. C. MANIFOLD, P. O. Box 1094, Rockford, Ill.

v10 n7 tf

MRS. LODEMA ATWOOD,

Healing Medium,

Has been before the public as a successful Healer the past fifteen years. We rely entirely on the controlling influences. We diagnose and give prescriptions by letter. Distance no objection. Will visit in person a reasonable distance those that desire, and can afford the expense. Delineation and advice in a variety of ways. Emblems we give gratuitously to all our patients, when presented by our guides. Our former custom has been to come in rapport with the applicant by the hand-writing or lock of hair; but to save time, and the unpleasant sensation of taking on the symptoms of the disease, we require the applicant to give age and sex, with one or two leading symptoms of the disease, written by the patient, if able to write—if not, send lock of hair. As the giving of tests is not the object which we seek, but to restore the patient to health by Nature's own hand, in the shortest time possible, we do not deem it necessary here to lumber up an advertisement with what we have done or what we can do, but prefer to be known by our fruits.

Terms, for diagnosis and prescription, $3; Diagnosis without prescription, $1; all subsequent prescriptions, $1 each. All letters should be accompanied with the fee, and addressed to MRS. LODEMA ATWOOD, Box 45, Lake Mills, Jefferson Co., Wis.

v10 n1 tf.

Dr. Abba Lord Palmer.

BOX 181, NEW BOSTON, ILLINOIS

WONDERFUL PSYCHOMETRIST AND CLAIRVOYANT PHYSICIAN, SOUL READER AND BUSINESS MEDIUM.

Can diagnose disease by likeness, autograph, lock of hair, without a failure, and give prescription, which, if followed, will surely cure.

Can trace stolen property, tell the past, present and future—advise concerning business, and give written communications from spirit friends.

Diagnosis of disease, with prescription, $3.00. Communications from spirit friends, $5.00. Delineation of character with advice concerning marriage, $1.00.

n1 v10 tf.

MRS. A. H. ROBINSON,

Healing, Psychometric and Business Medium

148 Fourth Avenue, Chicago.

MRS. ROBINSON, while under spirit control, on receiving a lock of hair of a sick patient, will diagnose the nature of the disease most perfectly, and prescribe the proper remedy. Yet, as the most speedy cure is the essential object in view, rather than to gratify idle curiosity, the better practice is to send along with a lock of hair, a brief statement of the sex, age leading symptoms and duration of the disease of the sick person, when she will without delay return a most potent prescription and remedy for eradicating the disease and permanently curing the patient in all curable cases.

Of herself she claims no knowledge or the healing art, but when her spirit guides are brought "en rapport" with a sick person through her mediumship, they never fail to give immediate and permanent relief, in curable cases, through the POSITIVE and NEGATIVE forces latent in the system and in nature. This prescription is sent by mail, and be it an internal remedy, or an external application, it should be given or applied precisely as directed in the accompanying letter of instructions, however simple it may seem to be; remember it is not the quantity of the compound, but the chemical effect that is produced, that science takes cognizance of.

One prescription is usually sufficient, but in case the patient is not permanently cured by one prescription, the application for a second, or more if required, should be made in about ten days after the last, each time stating any changes that may be apparent in the symptoms of the disease.

Mrs. ROBINSON also, through her mediumship, diagnoses the diseases of any one who calls upon her at her residence. The facility with which the spirits controling her accomplish the same, is done as well when the application is by letter as when the the patient is present. Her gifts are very remarkable, not only in the healing art, but as a psychometric, test, business and trance medium.

Terms:—Diagnosis and first prescription, $2.00; each subsequent one, $1.00; Psychometric Delineation of Character, $3; answering Business Letters, $3. The money should accompany the application, to insure a reply.

Original Essays.

Written for the Religio-Philosophical Journal.

SPIRITUALISM AND SORCERY.

By M. J. Wilcoxson.

NUMBER THREE.

"'Tis education forms the common mind; just as the twig is bent, the tree's inclined."

Mind without "education" acts in unison with the predominant impulses and characteristics of the individual; but that which finite beings term education, does not always liberate the soul from the material plane where those impulses take direction. When men speak of education, it is not the education of self-growth and self-experience, the concomitants of soul trials and discipline, to which they refer; but it is to duly constituted and accepted systems of education they look for the unfoldment of mind, rather than to those imperative and purifying means, which the true philosopher accepts as most potent in liberating the soul. And then the author of our quotation could not have used the word "education" altogether in its popular and generally accepted sense. Book learning, with its accompanying illustrations, however perfect, is but a system by which we repeat the thoughts and discoveries of others, and is far as their thoughts are mathematically proven, they become undisputed truths, which belong equally to all. Thus, as far as present standards of teaching are concerned, we must make a distinction between the mathematical or scientific, and that which is not yet capable of demonstration. Again, we must make the same distinction between that which we know, and that which we do not know. We may prove an arithmetical problem with perfect accuracy, when a mere theory or speculation which never has been proven to the common mind, may by the self-constituted authorities of ignorance and ambition, be made an unquestionable dogma and canonical rule, to sway and hold in subjection millions of human souls. We all know full well what priestly domination has done in one direction, while in the opposite, a rank materialism has more effectually still, if possible, shut and barred every avenue to the spiritual arcana of reason, and insisted upon holding the exercise thereof purely to the domain of the physical senses. True, materialism is severely scientific on the mortal plane—but it is perfectly powerless in attempting to explain any phenomena pertaining to a super-mortal or unseen agency. With the dogmatism of materialism on the one hand, and that of priestcraft upon the other, positive, demonstrated truth must hold the central, middle ground in the controversy. So, millions of spirits are liberated from the body every year, to swell the unnumbered hosts who have gone before, translated to the next sphere of life as totally ignorant of the realities of that life, as the child of one year is ignorant of the size, form, weight, and all that is contained in the wonderful resources of this planet; and those millions are as completely blinded and ignorant of spiritual truths, or very nearly so, as if they had never existed with the comparatively few exceptions, where souls have caught a ray of illumination through their own quickened natures. And even those thus illuminated, have, in nearly every case, gained their knowledge of the superior world in broken, fragmentary lessons, and interior experiences, which it is impossible for the pentecosted to transfer to another; consequently the spheres of spirit life just bordering upon the mortal plane, are filled with these millions of restless, yearning, striving, and undeveloped minds, who having no definite knowledge of the geography or government of the higher realm, naturally turn earthward for their enjoyment, and are, for a time, as truly intermingled with earthly plans and passions, as if they were still in the body. And having never cultivated a desire to explore "the unseen country," they are attracted to their old haunts, their old companions, and their old habits. Having never been educated to subordinate the appetites and the passions, ambitions and avaricious propensities, they cannot at once become transformed in this respect, and consequently hover like "a cloud of witnesses" around the high and by-ways of mortal existence. "Thirty millions of souls," says a recent statistician, pass on to that bourne every year," and three hundred millions every ten years! All this "innumerable company" come pressing round the home they once occupied! The earth zoned and banded with this great army, this living sea, and for one man of Nazareth, for one Socrates, for thousands of martyrs in one age or period, a host beyond computation, whose tidal waves swell and beat with ceaseless ebb and flow upon the shores of mortal life! And according to their loves, their attractions, their affinities, is their magnetic influence perpetuated in the gratification thereof. The easy, careless, self-satisfied man is still the same, in degree, as the ambitious schemer, the heartless speculator, the genteel swindler, the midnight prowler and robber, the licentiate, the prize-fighter, the clown, the murderer, the disappointed, profane and selfish are all the same, with only the slight modification of a change of base, (or locality). The work of obsession commences. As a contractor uses his influence in obtaining the most profitable materials and agencies, so will minds still on the material plane, though shorn of a mortal mechanism, lay tribute on all who may for the time being prove available instruments.

It is not the work of a moment, by any means, to purge these blinded, selfish souls of their ignorance; and "just as the twig is bent the tree's inclined." "You cannot gather grapes of thorns or figs of thistles;" "for what a man soweth that shall he also reap." And this is true of society. It is true concerning the individual—it is true when applied to the nation. Let an individual cultivate only his selfish nature—he enters that world a selfish man. Let governments be based upon the selfish principle, they will tolerate and sanction it in individuals. Let governments license one form of crime to increase their revenues, or cover and make respectable their sins, and they put a pandora box in the hands of every subject. Let governments strangle men to death, and individuals who have their personal apologies for the crime—or who, like some Christian governments do not stop to apologize, will dirk their victims. Let priests tyrannize over their subjects, let them burn heretics, proscribe thinkers, and steal by cunning, cant, and artifice, the wages of the people, and should opportunity offer, the devotee will become a tyrant and a licensed thief in his turn: Let men adopt any system of administration with no higher aim than to possess wealth and power—let rulers become dictators and drones, or military despots, and the seed is planted for a national harvest. Only when the tyranny becomes insupportable, when selfish gratification is all on one side, and tyranny grinds to dust the last spark of liberty; does justice unsheath her sword and call the people to the conflict. It is then, when oppression has become profane and insolent, when mad passion puts her loathsome hands upon the throat of the first and the last beggars, that the fires of dissolution burst forth.

Then woe to the tyrant! Woe to the despotic! Woe to the Herod whose hands are red with the blood of the innocent! In all the rending and conflict of earthly powers, is there no "war in heaven?" Do not those legions of the lately translated mingle in the fight? Are they the silent, passive spectators of the scene? or are they the ever busy, watchful, prying aids of the party or cause they espouse? And do they really wield less power than when in the body? Are they not now armed with invisible potencies, the psychological weapons of the multiplied individualities; and will they not prove powerful allies or deadly foes, as they take their places, actuated by all these diverse and contending motives? Thus, when wars rage, when inquisitions are powerful, the mad, unbridled fury of the mob, the relentless cruelty of the licensed hordes of avengers, betokens the multiplied strength and power of the lower nature, while justice grapples with the anaconda of human hate, and holds high her unerring scales till it writhes beneath her victorious charge!

Are there no battles to be fought, but these which humble nationals their pride, and through wreck and storm let fly the arrows, and the fiery shells of judgment? Is not every life a miniature battle field, where the seeds of national destiny take root, and where government truly commences? For it is in the wisdom, the choice of the people, what the future of a nation may be, at least to a great and important extent. It is in the choice of the mind once aroused to a discrimination between right and wrong, to uphold the right and denounce the wrong—that it is not the right of any, to punish the individual, or even knowingly oppress him for that over which he has no control. And the same argument we would apply to persons in the body, we make bold to apply, as well, to persons out of the body.

The inhabitants of the next sphere are just as much burdened with a sense of accumulated wrongs and miseries, at least for a time, as those who still remain—and whenever and wherever they may act out their respective natures, will continue to do so. Their motives, their real loves and affections, their emotions and impulses will all be as variously represented, as though they were still in the body. And they feel bi-trustment, false judgment, the arrogance and pride of those who despise them. They listen to hard words and sentences coming from hypocritical lips. Accused of deception, some do not scruple to deceive. Called "devils" they sometimes make use of the Christian's polished sort of vocabulary, and always however quite from the Christian's canonical authority. Interfered with by the blustering, bombastic, High Church tribunal, which came into use soon after the purity of physical manifestations became established, and which won a readily and successfully among a certain class of "dark circle" skeptics, they have taken to exposing exposers in the attitude of Paul before Agrippa, "all for naught." certain long-armed, tip-toed, be-frocked and skirted exposunders who have themselves been caught deceiving, too, when the dark lantern business came into vogue! Immaculate judges of the spiritual high court!

Previous to this, Prof. Brittan, Sunderland, and the whole school of public expounders of psychology, mesmerism, etc., had demonstrated the law of mental or spiritual control, as based upon a peculiar condition of receptivity in the subject—and after hundreds, and probably thousands of experiments, it was conceded that the mind of a negative, passive subject, could be made to occupy the same relation to the controlling power, which the negative plate in photography holds to the object before it. Just as the negative plate retains a correct likeness of the original, so does the negative brain of the psychological or mesmeric subject, become a mirror in which is reflected the thoughts positively impressed thereon by the magnetiser. But again, it was seen that all positive, intervening influences blending with the influence of the operator, would mar or proportionally weaken his power and dim the truthfulness or perfection of his control. So it became the care of the operator to prevent any foreign interference, which could be easily done, before others had, by following the rules of mesmeric law, became as well versed in the art as the prominent and original teachers thereof. But no sooner did the knowledge become more generally diffused, than all the these counter influences, the result of so much experiment, produced with the subject exactly what a changing, shifting, unsteady scene would produce on the negative plate of the camera—a complete admixture of the rays of impression, and therefore a materialization of the picture. During this period, "sensitives," as they are termed, were passing on beyond all human control to the influence of unseen operators, and "mediumship" came to be universally recognized. This made the subject the intermediate agency between two worlds—the seen and the unseen—and diversity or antagonism of influence from that world in connection with the psychological effects of this, incr sed rather than diminished the extreme susceptibility of the subject, at the same time that ignorant experimenters and investigators, constantly jeopardized and destroyed the purity of spirit control by their almost criminal recklessness—for they could not always have the apology of ignorance, being almost every well balanced medium could get clear, rational directions how to proceed.

(To be continued.)

Written for the Religio-Philosophical Journal.

THE LAWS OF SPIRIT COMMUNION.

By D. P. Kayner, M. D.

NUMBER FOUR.

In all manifestations of spirit presence certain conditions are necessary. This is not alone true in Spiritual science, but in every department of life; and the more clearly and completely the requisite conditions are complied with the more perfect will be the result. Take for instance the operations of the chemist. He can to a certain extent imitate the diamond, but not understanding the laws fully, and hence failing to comply with all the necessary requisitions, the product of his labors and the best yield of his laboratory, will be nothing, after all, but a feeble imitation of the real gem.

Now in spiritual chemistry, as in physical, if all the conditions are not supplied, we shall often have in the place of what we are seeking for, real or partial failure, or as near an approach as the spirits controlling can give under the circumstances. This then leads us to the inquiry:—What are the conditions requisite to obtaining correct and intelligent communications from the spirits of departed human beings.

Before proceeding to solve the question we should consider the fact, that mind is exerting an influence upon the universal thought realm of the Infinite, in every pulsation of a human soul. That every thought born in the spirit brain of a human being is one drop of the infinite ocean of intelligence, who's wavelets will ripple on in the eternal ages of the yet to be. And these, rising from their thousands of millions of sources, will mingle according to their affinities, and roll across the plains of mind, as in our earth, drops unite to form rivulets; and, as rivulets unite to form streams and rivers, so shall these streams, becoming purified, locate and flow together to unite all humanity in the bonds of unity, benevolence, charity, and brotherly love, as the waters upon the face of the earth are gathered into the great central ocean of unity.

In this then we can see that our minds to a certain degree affect the channels of inspiration or the flow of spirit communion, and can to that extent, promote or retard the flow of those purer streams of divine love.

We infer, then, that one condition essential to intelligent communion with our friends and the elevated intelligences on the other shore, is honesty of purpose.

What pure mind, desiring the elevation of humanity and seeking its own advancement, could be strongly attracted to enter an atmosphere of selfishness, fraud and deceit? Would it not be more in accordance with natural principles that those who seek a lie should find the reflection of their desire returned to them? I was once told by a minister that Spiritualism was all a deception and fraud, and that the mediums were all arrant knaves and impostors. I asked him if he had ever investigated the phenomena, when he answered that he had, saying: "I have visited more than thirty medi[illegible]

[illegible]tom 'a man and as you [illegible]onest spirits, and [illegible]rove them humbugs, and Spiritualism a fraud and deception, you have been answered by your own thoughts, and have deceived and humbugged yourself. But if you will seek with an honest heart for the truth, laying aside your prejudices and preconceived opinions, I pledge you, you will obtain very different results."

Another essential condition is—a willingness to receive the light in any way it may be presented, without dictating the form.

Spirits see what conditions are necessary, and measure their ability to produce results according to their conditions supplied; and we should accept whatever they are able to present in evidence of their individuality and presence; and if little only is given, that little is an earnest of their and our immortality.

We do not enter upon the study of the natural sciences with a determination to torture, pervert and misrepresent the phenomena and facts upon which a knowledge of their laws are based, or to reject the remotest possible phenomena or the minutest fact in any way relating thereto, but with a desire to weigh, analyze and arrange every conceivable point that bears upon the subject involved, and deduce therefrom the unfailing truths which untold those inwrought principles whereon all science is based.

Why then, if honest intentioned, or even desiring our own improvement and progress, should we enter upon the study of soul-science in any other way than that in which we advance in knowledge in other departments of scientific research?

The idiot might walk for ages on the sea shore and toy with its shells, or wander among the rocks and gather the curious fossils therein deposited, without ever gaining from them a single idea of their unfolding or history, or deducing therefrom a single thought with regard to the geological formations of the earth; yet in them is the unwritten history of this world and of "beings that hath life" recorded; and the epochs and ages are registered there.

These were awaiting the action of such minds as Hugh Miller, Lyell, Hitchcock, Baron Von Humboldt, Agassiz, Darwin and Dawson, and hosts of others, before they could find appropriate language to express the historic utterances of the ages long agone.

Others had seen those wonders of the past and present—had walked over beds of fossil shells—had unearthed the fossil remains of the silurians, and the bones of the early sharks and mastodons—had gathered sponges and corals—had made use of flint and lime rock—had worked among the chalk deposits and volcanic scoriae—had witnessed the flow of rivers and the ebb and flow of tides—had seen the pounding waves as they spent their fury upon the rocks, and beaten-back by the mighty convulsions of earthquakes, and yet had not gathered a single idea, with reference to the grand march of progress, and eras of development of which these were the enduring record.

So spirits may have caused "raps" for ages, but they waited for the "Fox girls" before they could make those sounds intelligible and communicate thereby the loving messages and sacred counsels they were anxious to give to their friends on earth. It is true they made an effort to communicate through the "Wesley family" in the same way many years before, but the superstition and bigotry with which they were surrounded could not be broken through, and the highest form of progress they could then impress was Methodism—which in the early history of that church partook largely of the spiritual element, but since, growing prosperous in numbers and wealth, has become ostentatious, bigoted and proud, and now seeks, by abandoning its ancient land marks, "to become chief among its brethren;"—forgetting that "pride goeth before destruction, and a haughty spirit before a fall."

These "raps" were the natural alphabet of spiritual science.

Minds were filled with educational prejudices and superstition, and therefore could not receive at once the full glow of spiritual illumination; for, like one who has long been in physical darkness, and the pupil of the eye expanded to its fullest extent, the light must come gradually to enable the focus to be arranged to receive it, or permanent blindness may be the result, so the mental vision darkened by ignorance, and obscured by priestcraft and superstition, had become so weak that it must have time to regain a healthy focus before the meridian effulgence of spiritual glory could be borne. The "raps" challenged investigation. Investigation set the machinery of mind in motion and produced thought. Thought opened up the avenues of inspiration, and inspiration lifted up the soul into communion with the WORLD OF LIFE beyond. The river of death was bridged and the two worlds indissolubly joined. The raps opened the key and spiritual science has since bridged the stream. All praise to the tiny raps—they were the first "key notes" from the land immortal.

How they were produced will form the foundation for the next chapter.

St. Charles, Ill., June 23rd, 1871.

Written for the Religio-Philosophical Journal.

"WHAT OF THE PORTENT OF THE COMING ERA?"

By Luna Hutchinson.

In our limited view of the ultimate of cause and effect, we are only able to trace the designs of destiny, running through individual or natural history, like looking at some intricate pattern from the wrong side.

As all life and development are made between positive and negative forces, so all history proves that the progress of civilization, has been by first the masculine, and then the feminine element predominating in each succeeding era of the world's advancement in political and social life.

The era now closing has been decidedly masculine, all its main energies have been used to overcome and subjugate all the properties and forces of nature to man's control, even the bodies and souls of men and women.

[illegible] and predominant force has been settling a New World, subdued, and still more untrammeled, [illegible]olitical ties that [illegible] and many of its [illegible]d despotic rules over the lives and con[illegible] sciences of men, and sought freedom at any sacrifice.

Now is approaching the centennial anniversary of the Declaration of Independence, and the year 1876 will be more memorable still on account of the fuller meaning that will be given it by the united voices of us, the people, declaring the inalienable rights of all, without regard to race or sex, to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

Then will commence on a grand scale a new plan of national house keeping, with women clearing out the burs ous and scrubbing up the boards, airing the political club rooms, ventilating lobby schemes of plunder, and giving the whole governmental arena a cleansing process, and a polish of political economy; in fine, do for the nation what they have ever done for home, church and social life, purify it from "the filth of years which has gathered round it," and prove to the world that it is not good for man to be alone in any of the relations of life.

This will be only the external reform, the preparatory condition, on getting the bride chamber ready for the final union of science and religion, the two great ultimate powers that shall regenerate the race, and make it more beautiful than the fabled garden of Eden; for between the blending of the light of reason and intuition, all mysteries will be revealed both in the sensuous and spiritual domain of objective and subjective being.

All things will then become new, so changed will be the ideas and interpretations of God, religion and our whole relations to the material and mental universe, and the mighty powers of mind in its full development and control.

This present time is one of those lofty waves of spiritual forces, that lift a generation above the level of the past, to catch a glimpse of the coming future ages; and it is well done to make good our observations before the receding wave leaves us in its depth's with no guiding star but the compass of eternal truth within us.

Woman now stands in the same relation to man, that religion does to science, or, much as boys and girls approaching manhood and womanhood, neither comprehending or having faith in each other, and more inclined to disparage than to praise each other's act. But slowly, respectful attentions are being made between them, and when man shall be more just to woman, and treat her as his equal, and woman becomes more worthy of his highest love; and science ceases to ignore religion, and to jeer at what it holds as sacred, and more inclined to drop her garb of hypocrisy and superstition, then, and not before, will dawn that millennial era, so long prayed and waited for by unnumbered generations of the past. To this desired end and final triumph of good over evil, of wisdom over error, may every lover of truth labor with heart and hand until this our grand destiny is accomplished.

Owensville, Cal.

Written for the Religio-Philosophical Journal.

Somnambulism the Foundation of Spirit Control.

BROTHER JONES—The following is the case of Miss ——, in Cincinnati:

A certain female spirit had for sometime been endeavoring to control Miss F., a young lady of this place, who had never been "magnetized," or in a somnambulistic state before, and knew nothing about the condition, nor of spirit control, having never witnessed anything of the kind.

Upon one occasion this spirit endeavored to control her in church, and her friends, not knowing what was the matter with her, had to remove her during service.

After that time repeated attempts were made by the same spirit to control her with but imperfect success, until a few evenings before I saw her. Upon those occasions, however, although unconscious and apparently under perfect control, it was unsatisfactory, because the spirit brought such an unhappy condition with it, that it seemed to suffer from the disease which had caused it to pass away. This condition caused great annoyance and prevented free speech, so that nothing connected or intelligent could be communicated.

Upon my visit to this city, I was paying a visit to my old friend Mr. ——, on the evening of the 24 of June, I found him trying to aid the spirit, who then had the young lady, Miss F., under control. He was endeavoring, after observing the unsatisfactory efforts of my friend to bring about satisfactory results, I suggested that there was no necessity for the unhappy condition which the spirit seemed to be laboring under, and that if he would request it to come in the mind in all her faculties, making many clairvoyant and satisfactory experiments. She was then requested to throw the head only out of the condition, and being perfectly herself.

Upon the spirit's return to the condition of all present, taught her to throw any part of her body into an insensible condition, and to feel or not in any part of her body by an act of her own will. While she remained with great facility, and could then throw herself wholly into or out of the condition at will, in an instant, and when she had done so for the last time, was perfectly astonished at seeing me, a perfect stranger to her, present. That she possessed the power of clairvoyant field, sympathy or an influence of any kind outside of her own powers, for I never saw her in my life before, and she was under spirit control when I entered the room.

In conclusion, I will but add that before she threw herself out of the condition she was requested to remember all that she saw and had done while in the somnambulistic condition, and that she should resolve to feel perfectly well when she had done so, and I have the pleasure of stating that she afterwards acknowledged that she was perfectly relieved of an unpleasant affection that had annoyed her for some time.

Last night our visit was repeated. We found the young lady well and in fine spirits, and after an interchange of the usual civilities, my old friend Mr. ——, requested Miss F. to throw herself into the somnambulic condition, as he was anxious that she should practice the art. This she accomplished at once, and after some interesting clairvoyant experiments at a distance, and several visits to her friends, &c., she became passive, and was then easily and pleasantly controlled by the same spirit that had controlled her upon former occasions. In conversing with me, this spirit acknowledged that the control was not necessary, but that it was not necessary for her to make passes or to strain to effect it, since the truth was known.

The same acknowledgments were made by a second spirit who took control as soon as the first retired. The second was a merry spirit, a soldier who was killed in Tennessee during the war, and hailed from Iowa. This spirit, I was told, had made several imperfect attempts to control before. He was exceedingly happy in returning, and held control for half an hour.

WM. B. FAHNESTOCK.

Cincinnati, June 6, 1871.

—A criminal is a person with weak eyes. Our prisons, which ought to be moral infirmaries, where the sight should be gradually restored, are dungeons where he is shut up in the dark until the sense of vision is nearly or wholly lost, whence the sight is put out rather than put in. We need some Christ to "open these prison doors" and let in the light.

Voices from the People.

ALDEN, McHENRY COUNTY, ILL.—Amos Bailey writes.—Curiosity is on the alert to know when we shall comprehend the incomprehensible great "Summit." We already agree that the author is a host, in his "Search."

DEERFIELD, LAKE CO., ILL.—Vernon Handy writes.—Your glorious journal is the splendor of the two worlds. I hope Brother Francis will find God, even to the entire disgust of the whole orthodox community. Thousands of Spiritualists, by the light they have received, have outgrown great quantities of prejudice. I have read the book "Jesus of Nazareth," by A. Smyth, medium, and must say, to my mind, it appears as truth. It is the most instructive work I have ever read.

VINCENNES, IND.—J. G., writes.—Your very worthy paper speaks of a great many mediums, as well as a great many phases of mediumship, but fails, I believe, to give the process of developing.

Remarks.—Our columns are open to well-written articles, giving the experience of well developed mediums. Friends, of the light you possess from experience, please impart to seekers for like truths, and oblige many thousands.

OSKEMOS, MICH.—P. Thompson writes.—Inclosed please find $3.00, for renewal of my subscription. I see that I have been your debtor since Feb. Accept my thanks for the favor. I am more than pleased with the JOURNAL, and am especially interested in your "Search After God."

CLAY, ONONDAGA CO., N. Y.—Orrin Barnes writes.—We had a man in Syracuse, N. Y., who became very rich in the nursery business. He in de ed great love for S piritualism. He contributed sparingly to the cause. He passed into the spirit world, and was permitted to return, and tell earth's children that he regretted having done so little for the good cause. Spiritualists were half hearted to sustain Spiritualism, as our orthodox friends do their cause, ours would be a mighty power in the land. I am poor in this world's goods, but feel rich in Spiritualism.

SUMMERFIELD, ST. CLAIR CO., ILL.—O. R. North writes.—I don't mind the exact number—but last week's paper never came. Will you please send this missing number to me. I don't want to lose one article of it—especially the "Search After God."

CHILLICOTHE, IND.—S. Hubbell writes.—Inclosed is 50 cents, for trial subscriber, Warren N. Walter. I think your journal is one of the best progressive paper in print. Every number adds increased zest, and almost every subscriber expresses most hearty approbation, and declares it the best paper they peruse. Some who were taking the other Spiritual papers say that, for reasons given them, said they may be counted regular subscribers.

LASALLE, ILL.—A. H. Loomis writes.—Inclosed you will find a postoffice order which calls for the amount of $4 23, for which I want in return three Hindoo Testaments. I will remit my dues for the JOURNAL, with the best wishes for the prosperity of that valuable paper. "Search After God," and find him if you can.

CEDAR FALLS, IOWA.—W. F. Barker writes.—We want a few mediums in Iowa, that will go into the conferences and conventions of the different churches and tell what is the matter with us, and let them exclaim as one of old, "I am not come to call the righteous etc.;" "I am not sent but unto the lost sheep of the House of Israel." If you know of such, Iowa is now the best place for the work in. If I were a good test medium, I would like to sit in conference with the two or three hundred ministers that generally meet about once a year in these parts, and give them a few sound tests—make them feel as I understand. I think the truth would spread better.

WILMINGTON, DEL.—H. James writes.—As regards your "Search," I think you are on a "wild goose chase." Hadn't you better wait until your object is embodied in the Constitution? There he might have "a local habitation and a name."

Remarks.—Be patient, brother, and you will see. Fulton, Franklin, Moses, and hundreds of other scientific men, were regarded as "on a wild goose chase," and now to have the same oft-repeated words applied to us, only amuses us, for we have success, not failure, imprinted on our soul. We are content to let our spirit guide have his own way in the discussion of this subject, having perfect confidence in his ability to fully unravel the knotty question.

LANSINGBURGH, N. Y.—Julia Rowley writes.—Find inclosed $1.50 for a renewal of subscription for your most valuable paper, the JOURNAL; that and the dear old Banner feeds me with heavenly manna while gleaning their pages from week to week.

MOUND CITY, KANSAS.—Loyal Griffin writes.—In regard to the "Search After God," I see no signs of the mystery being cleared. The truth is, the Fountain, or First Cause, is incomprehensible, when we shall have reached that—were it possible. I don't see any further chance of progression.

COLLINS, ERIE CO., N. Y.—H. Smith writes.—I like the JOURNAL, for I see you have not the fear of orthodoxy before your eyes, and dare to speak out boldly on all subjects as truth and reason shall dictate, regardless of any fire from the front or rear of the sectarian press or clergy.

WADE, OHIO.—C. H. Toler writes.—There is nothing printed that pleases me better than the JOURNAL. Mostly they are gleanings of truth, and most lasting benefit, comes to me as I thoroughly and thoughtfully read each welcome number. Be assured that, to the extent of my meagre capacity, the whole paper and the great good you are doing through it, are fully appreciated.

UNION VILLAGE, LEBANON, OHIO.—O. C. Hampton writes.—Your fellow that writes "The Search After God," is smart—but it takes such an almighty long time to find him! Now, my advice to him is—quit your "search after," give up the gun. I was really surprised to find even the articles almost exactly like one I wrote even before he ever "struck an attitude." It made me think of the aphorism of the old negro—"There must be a debil, or else we could folks make his picture so zactly like him."

STILLWATER, MINNESOTA.—B. J. Masterman writes.—May angels bless and help you to continue to circulate a paper which is food for the most profound thinkers of the nineteenth century.

NEW SHARON, FRANKLIN CO., MAINE.—A. R. Hall writes.—I love your JOURNAL; I like its contents; it sticks to the mark. I want it well. The "Search After God" is worthy, and it should be in book form; of course it will. Put me down for one copy. I want "Jesus of Nazareth," also.

MADISON, WIS.—Wm. Westerman writes.—At last I feel able to remit you three dollars for the JOURNAL. I am sorry it is not five instead of three, but sickness has kept me back. I hope in future to be more prompt, for I can not dispense with the JOURNAL; it is meat, drink, washing, and lodging to me, so don't leave me out in the cold, I am a little lardy. I return you my sincere thanks for your kindness heretofore. I hope you may ever continue in the good work; and that you may get your reward both in this world and the world to come is my prayer.

NEOSHO, MO.—S. A. Hughes writes.—I am much obliged to you for sending the paper after my time had expired. I don't wish to miss a number.

ONTARIO, WIS.—F. C. Cholvin writes.—Inclosed please find one dollar, for which send me the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL for three months, the book entitled "The Sunday Question, and Self-Contradictions of the Bible," and "Life's Unfoldings Revealed to Man,"—according to your proposition of June 25th. Send me the first July number of the JOURNAL. Your "Search After God" is overflowing with sound sense. Keep on searching, and when you come across him, just inform us if you please.

OAK GROVE, WIS.—D. S. Woodworth writes.—I think the cause is gaining ground very fast here. Your paper is doing a good work. The people are becoming more and more interested when it is a good test medium or speaker, or both, as there is some here engaged in this blessed work.

Price-List of Books.

LIST OF BOOKS FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

All orders by mail, with the price of books named, and the additional amount mentioned in the following list of prices for postage, will meet with prompt attention.

	Price.	Postage.
Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies,	.75	16
Artificial Somnambulism. By Dr. Pahnestock,	1.50	16
A Revelation of Departed Spirits among the Shakers,	.25	02
Alice Vale, a Story for the times, by Lois Waisbrooker,	1.25	16
American Crisis, by Warren Chase,	.75	02
Answers to Questions Practical and Spiritual. Devine,	1.50	20
Apocryphal New Testament,	1.50	20
A Peep into Sacred Tradition, by Rev. Orrin Abbott. Paper,	.50	02
Age of Reason, by Thomas Paine. Cloth,	.50	02
A Woman's Secret, by Mrs. C. F. Corbin,	1.75	20
A Lecture in Rhyme—The Past, Present and Future, by Mrs. F. A. Logan,	.15	02
Arcana of Nature, or History and Laws of Creation, Vol 1, by Hudson Tuttle,	1.25	20
Arcana of Nature, or the Philosophy of Spiritual Existence, and of the Spirit-World, Vol 2, by Hudson Tuttle,	1.25	20
A B C of Life, by A. B. Child,	.25	02
Arabula, or the Divine Guest, by A. J. Davis,	1.50	20
After Death, or Disembodied Man, by Randolph,	1.00	06
Cloth,	1.50	20
Approaching Crisis, by A. J. Davis,	1.00	12
Apostles, [translated from the French] by Renan,	1.75	20
A Stellar Key to the Summer Land by A. J. Davis,	1.00	16
Astro-Theological Lectures, by Rev. Robert Taylor,	1.25	24
A Kiss for a Blow, a Book for children by H. C. Wright, small edition,	.50	12
do do do	1.50	20
Antiquity and Duration of the World by G. H. Toulmin, M. D.,	.50	20
An Eye Opener, by Zepa. Cloth.,	.75	12
Paper,	.50	04
A Roman Lawyer in Jerusalem in the first century by W. W. Story,	.15	2
Address on Spiritualism, by T. G. Forster.	.15	02
Analogy Between the Facts of the Bible and the Facts of every Spiritualist, by T. G. Forster.	.15	02
Arcana of Spiritualism, by H. Tuttle.	2.00	24
Biography of Satan, By E. Graves. Price 35 Cents		02
Better Views of Living, by A. B. Child,	.50	12
Blossoms of Our Spring, (a Poetic Work,) by Hudson and Emma Tuttle,	1.50	16
Beyond the Breakers, a Tale of Village Life in the West, by Robert Dale Owen,	2.00	24
Book of Poems, by J. Wm. Van Namee. Cloth,	.75	2
Biography of Faith, by Mrs. J. S. Adams, a book for every Spiritualist,	1.25	16
Bethesda, by Professor W. Denton,	.10	2
Bhagvat-Gheta, or Bhidoo Now Testament,	1.25	16
Bonjagal Sins against the Laws of Life and Health, by A. E. Gardner, A. M. M. D. Paper,	1.00	08
Cloth,	1.50	16
Bomber Constitution of Man,	1.75	16
Common Sense Thoughts on the Bible, by William Denton,	.10	02
Cosmology, by O. W. Ramsey, M. D.	1.25	20
Common Sense, by Thomas Paine,	.20	02
Christ Idea in History, H. Tuttle,	1.25	16
Chester Family, or Sorcerers of the Drunkard's Appetite, by Julia M. Friend, with an Introduction by H. C. Wright,	1.00	12
Christ and the people, by A. B. Child, M.D.	1.25	16
Christianity; its influence on Civilization, and its relation to Nature's Religion, by Caleb B. Weeks.	.25	02
Christianity no Finality—Spiritualism Superior to Christianity, —Wm. Denton,	.10	02
Criticism on the Theological Idea of Deity, by M. D. Craven,	1.00	16
Descent of man, by Darwin. Two Vols. ($2.00 per Vol.)	4.00	45
Davenport Brothers, their Remarkable and Interesting History,	1.50	20
Day of Doom, A Poetical Description of the Great and Last Judgment with other poems, from the ninth edition of 1716,	1.00	12
Death's Priest, by Rev. Robert Taylor, with Sketch of the Author's Life,	2.00	20
Doris, A Novel of intense interest to progressive people,	1.75	24
Dealings with the Dead, by P. B. Randolph,	.75	12
Death and the After Life, by A. J. Davis, paper 60, postage 4, cloth,	.75	12
Discourses on the Mysteries and Miracles of Nature, by Henry. G. Wright. Paper, 35 cts; postage, 4 cts. Cloth,	.50	8
Diseases of the Throat, Demonstrated by the Truths of Nature, By Henry. G. Wright. Paper, 35 cts; postage, 4 cts. Cloth,	.50	8
Diseases of the Throat, Demonstrated by the Truths of Nature, By Henry. G. Wright. Paper, 35 cts; postage, 4 cts. Cloth,	.50	8
Discipline of the Mother, or the Character and Destiny of the Race, H. C. Wright paper,	.50	04
Cloth,	.75	12
Footfalls on the Boundary of Another World, by Robert Dale Owen,	1.75	24
Familiar Spirits and Spiritual Manifestations, by Dr. Nevius,	.50	2
Four Gospels Concerning Religion, or Nature v s Theology, by A. J. Davis,	.50	2
Fugitive Wife, by Warren Chase, Paper,	.50	4
Festival Night, an Inspirational Poem, Mrs. M. J. Wilkinson, Medium,	.5	2
Gamble, a Tale of the Great Rebellion, by Emma Tuttle,	1.25	16
Gist of Spiritualism, by Warren Chase,	.50	04
Great Harmonia, by A. J. Davis. 5 vols. viz: Vol. 1 The Physician. Vol. 2 The Seer. Vol. 3 The Reformer; Vol. 4 The Teacher. Vol. 5 The Thinker. Each,	1.50	20
Gymnastic Manual for Teachers and Students,	1.50	16
God Idea in History, by Hudson Tuttle,	1.25	16
God Dealing with Slavery, by Thomas Richmond. Cloth, $1.00; postage, 12 cents. Paper,	.75	04
Healing or Good Society,	1.75	20
Hieroglyphics, or Gleanings from the Past, by G. C. Stewart,	1.00	08
Health by good Living W. W. Hall M. D.,	1.50	20
Harbinger of Health, by A. J. Davis,	1.50	20
Harmonial Man, or Thoughts for the Age, by A. J. Davis, Paper,	.75	12
Cloth,	.75	12
History and Philosophy of Evil, by A. J. Davis Paper,	.50	8
Cloth,	.75	12
Hayward's Book of all Religions, including Spiritualism,	2.00	24
Holy Bible and Mother Goose, by H. C. Wright,	.50	24
How and Why I Became a Spiritualist, by Hon. Nelson Tiffany,	.75	12
Helen Harlow, a Novel,	1.50	16
How to Bathe, by R. P. Miller, M. D., paper,	.50	4
Cloth,	.75	12
Hedged In, by Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, author of Gates Ajar,	1.50	16
Hollow Globe,	2.00	20
History and Philosophy of Marriage, or Polygamy and Monogamy compared,	1.25	16
History of the Intellectual Development of Europe, by J. W. Draper, M. D. L. L. D. 2 vols.	5.00	60
Human Physiology, Statistical and Dynamical, or the Conditions and Course of the Life of Man, by J. W. Draper, M. D. L. L. D. 560 pages, cloth $2.50	2.50	32
History of the supernatural, (2 Vols., $10 paper each,	2.00	40
Hit, by Dr. Mary H. Walker,	1.50	20
Intuition, by Dr. F. Kingsley,	1.25	16
Important Truths, a book for every child,	.50	2
Is the Bible Divine? by S. J. Finney, Paper,	.50	2
Cloth,	.75	12
Is there a Devil? The argument Pro and Con,	.25	2
Inquirer's Text Book, by Newton Crosby,	1.50	16
Incidents connected with Spirit Land, Mrs. M. E. Park, Medium,	1.25	16
Incidents in my Life, by Dr. D. D. Home, Introduction by Robert Dale Owen,	1.25	16
Is it the Despair of Science? by W. D. Gunning,	.15	02
Poems of Heaven, by Alexander Smyth,	1.00	20
Jehovah Unveiled, or the Character of the Jewish God Revealed,	.25	4
Joan of Arc—A Biography, translated from the French, by Sarah M. Grimke,	1.00	12
Kiddle's Secrets of the Lodge. Price, paper bound 50 cents. Boards bound,	.75	08
Koran, with explanatory notes, by George Sale 2 vo. 670 pages, best edition yet published,	3.00	60
Koran. with Life of Mahomet. Translated by George Sale, Gent. 12 mo., 673 pages.	1.50	24
Life Line of the Lone One, by Warren Chase,	1.00	12
Life's Problems,	.50	2
Life of Thomas Paine, with critical and explanatory observations of his writings, by G. Vale,	1.00	16
Life of Jesus, by Strauss,	1.75	20
Love and its Hidden History, by P. B. Randolph,	1.50	16
Lyric of the Golden Age, by T. L. Harris,	1.00	20
Legalized Prostitution, or Marriage as it is, and as it Should Be, by C. S. Woodruff, M. D.,	1.00	16
Life and Moral Axioms of Confucius, by M. E. K. Wright,	.25	02
Letters to Elder Miles Grant, by Rev. Moses Hull,	.25	02
Living Present, Dead Past. H. C. Wright. Cloth,	.75	08
Paper,	.50	04
Lyceum Guide. Cloth cover,	.75	16
Paper cover,	.50	04
My Love and I. by Abby M. Laflin Parre,	.50	2
Night Side, an Auto-Biography of A. J. Davis,	1.50	16
Masonic, by Myron Coloney,	1.00	12
Marriage and Parentage, by Henry. G. Wright,	1.00	08
Ministry of Angels Realized, by A. E. Newton,	1.50	16
Midnight Prayer,	.10	2
Moses and the Israelites, by Merritt Munson,	1.00	16
Mrs. Packard's Prison Life,	1.50	20
small edition,	.50	04
Morals of the Bread of Life, by D. S. Cudworth,	.10	02
Manual for Children (for Lyceums,) by A. J. Davis, Cloth,	.50	8
Paper,	.30	4
My Affinity, and other Stories, by Linda Dotson,	1.50	20
Marriage, its Love and Counsels,	.25	02
Instruction for the Formation of Spirit Circles, by J. M. Peebles,	.25	02
Man is Trinity, by T. S. Forster,	.15	02
Man's Origin and Destiny, by G. W. Stocton,	1.25	16
Modern American Spiritualism 1848 to 1868, by Emma Hardinge,	2.00	44

man's Rights, or how would you like it, by Annie Denton Ordge,	.15	2
Morning Lectures (Twenty Discourses) by A. J. Davis,	1.75	20
Man and his relations, by Professor S. B. Brittain,	4.00	60
Nature's Divine Revelations, by Andrew Jackson Davis,	5.00	60
New Testament Miracles, and Modern Miracles, by J. H. Fowler,	.10	4
Night Side of Nature, by Crow,	1.25	20
Ordeal of Life. Through Dr. J. G. Grimes, Medium,	.25	04
Orthodoxy False, since Spiritualism is True, by Wm. Denton,	.10	02
Our Planet, Geology by Denton,	.75	20
Optimism, The Lesson of Ages,	.75	17
Origin of Species. Darwin,	2.00	24
Origin of Civilization and Primitive Condition of Man, by Sir J. Lubbock,	2.00	24
One Religion, Many Creeds, by Rose Wixans,	1.50	20
Origin of Species, with Notes and References by G. F. Kittridge,	.10	02
Persons and Events, by A. J. Davis,	1.50	20
Pre-Adamite Man, by Randolph,	1.00	12
Physiology of Woman by C. Morrill, M. D.	1.50	20
Planchette—the despair of Science, by Epes Sargent,	1.25	16
Philosophy of Spiritual Intercourse. A. J. Davis. Paper 50 cts; postage 8 cts. Cloth,	1.00	16
Principles of Nature, by Mrs. M. M. King,	1.75	24
Poems from the Inner Life, by Lizzie Doten,	1.25	16
Philosophy of Creation, by Thomas Paine, through Horace Wood, Medium. Cloth,	.25	04
Real Life in Spirit Land given Inspirationally by Mrs. Maria M. King,	1.00	16
Rules for forming Spiritual Circles, by Emma Hardinge,	.5	02
Sexual Physiology, by R. T. Trall, M. D.,	2.00	20
Sacred Circle, Dictated through a clairvoyant,	1.50	20
Spiritual Harp,	2.00	24
Abridged Edition	1.00	16
Sequel to the Love Life, by the Spirit of Dr. R. H. Rose,	.20	2
Spiritual Tracts by Judge Edmonds,	.20	4
Self Abandonment, or the true King and Queen, by H. C. Wright, Paper,	.50	6
Cloth,	.75	12
Spiritualism, or Directions in Development, by A. M. Ladin Ferree,	.30	2
Soul Affinity, by A. B. Child, M. D.,	.50	02
Sermons on the Philosophy of Life, by Mrs. R. G. Willard,	2.00	24
Six Lectures on Theology and Nature, by Emma Hardinge, Paper,	.75
Cloth,	1.00
Soul of Things, by Williams and Elizabeth Denton,	1.50	20
Spirit Manifestations, by Adin Ballou,	.75	12
Spirit Mysterion Explained, by A. J. Davis,	1.00	20
Supremacy of Reason, by Moses Hull,	.10	02
Social Evils by Mrs. M. M. King,	.25	02
Spiritual Philosophy versus Diabolism, by Mrs. M. M. King,	.25
Sense and Nonsense, S. M. Landis, M. D.	2.00	20
Life of Satan, —S. W. Tucker,	.20	02
Spiritual Songs, by S. W. Tucker,	1.5	02
Spirit Life of Theodore Parker, through the Mediumship of Miss E. Hamsdell,	.20	02
Seven Hour System of Grammar, by Prof. D. P. Howe,	1.00	08
Paper,	.50	04
Science of Evil, by Joel Moody,	1.75	20
Sketching Randolph,	1.00	20
Spiritual Manifestations, by J. S. Rimer,	.10	02
Sunday Question and self contradictions of the Bible,	.50	.00
The Fountain, by A. J. Davis,	1.00	12
The Irreconcilable Records, or Genesis and Geology, by Wm. Denton,	.25	04
Cloth,	.40	06
The Bible in India,	2.00	20
The Faithful Guardian, an Inspirational Story, by J. William Van Namee,	1.50	16
The Bible in the Balance,	1.50	16
The Terrible Question, by Moses Hull,	.10	02
True Love. What it is, and What it is not, by A. B. Davis,	.5	02
The Dynamic Gown, by Lacy Sunderland,	1.50	16
Tale of a Physician, by A. J. Davis,	1.50	16
The Future Life, by Mrs. Sweet,	1.50	20
The Ancient Bible, by Thomas Hull,	1.50	16
The Gates Wide Open, by George Ward,	1.00	16
The Gates Ajar, by Miss. E. S. Phelps,	1.50	16
The Spirit's Book, by H. C. Wright,	.75	12
The Pearl Diver by Dr. O. W. Kirby,	.15
The Gospel of Good and Evil, by Silver,	1.50	16
The Soul, by Paul,	1.00	12
The Great South-West, by W. Hosking,	1.00	24
The Merits of Jesus Christ and the Merits of Thomas Paine as a reformer, by Sperrie in others. What is the difference between them? H. C. Wright,	.25	2
The Philosophical Dictionary of Voltaire. Fifth American Edition, 674 octavo pages, two steel plates, Largest and most correct edition in the English Language. Contains more matter than the London Edition sells for $12.00,	5.00	60
The Diagosis, by Rev. Robert Taylor, written by him while imprisoned for blasphemy. This work is a History of Religion, evidences, and early history of Christianity,	2.00	20
The Inner Mystery, an Inspirational Poem by Lizzie Doten,	.20	02
The Deluge, William Denton,	.10	2
The Two Voices,	1.25	16
The Infernal Philosopher, Voltaire,	1.50	20
The Woman who Dared, by Epes Sargent,	1.00	20
Theological and Miscellaneous Writings of Thomas Paine,	1.00	16
Thomas Paine's Pilgrimage in the Spirit World.	.75	.05
The System of Nature, or Laws of the Moral and Physical World, by Baron D'Holbach,	2.00	24
The Psalms of Life, by J. S. Adams. Paper cover,	.50	08
Board cover,	.75	16
Gilt,	1.00	16
Tobacco and its Effects, by H. Gibbons, M. D.	.20	02
The Pentateuch, by A. J. Davis,	1.75	24
The Yoh o, a Spiritual Rhapsody.	.75	08
The Restoration Dream Book, compiled from all languages, by P. B. Randolph,	.50	.04
The Art of Courtship,	1.50	16
The Arts of Writing, Reading, and Speaking,	1.50	16
Undertalk on Mesmerism, Post-paid,	1.50
Unhappy Marriages, by A. B. Child,	.20	2
Unwelcome Child, by Henry C. Wright, Paper,	.50	12
Cloth,	.75	16
Voice of Prayer, by Barlow,	.50	.05
Vestiges of Creation,	.75	.05
Vital Force, how wasted and how preserved, by R. P. Miller, M. D. Paper, 50 cts.; Cloth,	1.00	12
Volney's Ruins; or Meditations on the Revolutions of Empires, with Biographical notice by Count Dorn,	1.00	12
Voices from Spirit-Land through N. P. White,	1.00	12
What is Right, William Denton,	.10	2
What is spiritualism, and Shall Spiritualism Have a Creed? by Mrs. M. M. King,	.25
Whatever is, is Right, A. J. Child, M. D.	1.50	16
Writings of Combe,	.10	02
Wolf in sheep's Clothing, or God in the Constitution. Moses Hull,	.10	.02
Your Book of Spiritualism. Cloth,	1.25	20
Paper,	1.00	06

WE ARE ALSO NOW IN A SITUATION TO FURNISH Miscellaneous books of any kind published at regular rates, and, on receipt of the money, will send them by mail or express as may be desired. If sent by mail, one fifth more than the regular cost of the book will be required to prepay postage. The patronage of our friends is solicited. In making remittances for books, buy postal orders when practicable. If postal orders cannot be had, register your letters.

H. SNOW,

319 KEARNEY ST., (Up Stairs,) SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.,

Keeps for sale the

RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL,

And a general variety of

Spiritualist and Reform Books,

At Eastern prices. Also, Orton's Anti-Tobacco Preparations, Spence's Positive and Negative Powders, Adams & co.'s Golden Pens, Planchettes, Dr. Storer's Nutritive Compound, etc. Catalogues and Circulars mailed free. Remittances in U. S. currency and postage stamps received at par. Address, HEZEKIAH SNOW, P. O. Box 117, San Francisco, Cal.

WARREN CHASE & CO.,

No. 601 NORTH FIFTH ST, ST. LOUIS, MO.,

KEEP constantly on hand all the publications of the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, Wm. White & Co., J. P. Mendum, Adams & Co., and all other popular liberal literature, including RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL and BANNER OF LIGHT, Magazines, Photographs, Parlor Games, Golden Pens, Stationery, etc.

Rail-Roads.

SUMMER ARRANGEMENT.

ARRIVAL AND DEPARTURE OF TRAINS.

Chicago and Northwestern Railway—Council Bluffs and Omaha Air Line—Depot North Wells street

Ticket Office, south-east corner of Clark and Lake streets.

	Leave.	Arrive.
Cedar Rapids Passenger	8.30 a. m.	8.50 p. m.
Pacific Fast Line	*10.45 a. m.	3.50 p. m.
Rock Island Express	10.45 a. m.	*3.50 p. m.
Pacific Night Express	†10.00 p. m.	†7.00 a. m.
Rock Island Night Passenger	†10.10 p. m.	†7.00 a. m.
Dixon Passenger	*4.30 p. m.	*11.10 a. m.

Prospect Line.

Prospect and Dunleith Fast	*9.00 a. m.	*7.15 a. m.
Prospect and Dunleith Pass	*2.45 p. m.	*2.30 p. m.
Rockford, Rigin, Fox River and State Line	*4.00 p. m.	*11.10 a. m.
St. Charles and Elgin Passenger	*2.15 p. m.	*9.45 a. m.
Junction Passenger	*4.30 p. m.	*9.30 a. m.
Lombard Accommodation	*8.10 p. m.	*8.50 a. m.

Milwaukee Division—Depot corner of Canal and Kinzie street.

Milwaukee Mail	*8.00 a. m.	*10.10 a. m.
Day Express	*2.45 a. m.	*4.0 p.m.
Evanston Accommodation	*7.00 a. m.	*2.00 p. m.
Rose Hill, Evanston, and Highland Park	1.00 p. m.	3.40 p. m.
Afternoon Fast	*3.45 p.m.	*7.40 p.m.
Night Passenger	*6.00 p. m.	*9.30 a. m.
Waukegan Passenger	*2.30 p.m.	*9.30 a. m.
Waukegan do	11.00 p.m.	*7.05 a.m.
Milwaukee do	11.00 p.m.	5.30 a.m.

Kenosha and Waukegan trains leave from Wells street Depot.

Wisconsin Division—Depot corner of Canal and Kinzie street

St. Paul Express	*10.00 a. m.	*7.15 p. m.
Night Passenger	*6.00 p. m.	*9.30 a. m.
Janesville Accommodation	*2.00 p. m.	*1.00 p. m
Woodstock Accommodation	*4.30 p. m.	*10.30 p. m
Lombard Accommodation	*8.10 p.m.	†7.45 a. m

GEO. L. DUNLAP, General Superintendent.

H. P. Stanwood, General Ticket Agent

Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Rail-Road.

Depot corner Van Buren and Sherman streets. Ticket Office 66 South Clark street.

Mail	*8.30 a. m.	*7.00 p m
Special N Y Express	*9.00 a. m.	*6.00 p. m.
Richardt Accommodation	*2.30 p.m	*10.30 a. m.
Atlantic Express (daily)	5.15 p. m.	7.00 a. m.
Night Express	*12.00 p. m.	†6.30 a. m.

Detroit and Grand Rapids Line.

Day Express	*7.30 a. m.	*7.30 p. m.
Night "	*12.00 p. m.	*6.30 a. m.

P. B. MORRIS, Gen'l Pass. Agt., 66 Clark st., Chicago.

Michigan Central Railroad—Union Depot, foot of Lake street

Ticket Office Lake st., cor. Dearborn—Passenger trains of this company leave and arrive at Chicago as follows:

Mail Train	*8 30 a. m.	*9.05 p. m
Fast New York Express	*9.00 a. m.	*4.00 p. m.
Atlantic Express (daily)	12.15 p. m.	*7.00 a. m.
Night Express	*12.00 p.m.	*6.30 a. m.
Kalamazoo Accommodation	*4.10 p. m.	*12.00 m

Cincinnati and Louisville Trains

Day Express	*9.00 a. m.	*9.30 p. m
Through Express	10.30 p. m.	†6.30 a. m

for St. Joseph via New Buffalo.

Day Express	*9.00 a.m.	*11 30 a. m
Accommodation	*4.30 p. m.	*5.00 p. m

HENRY C. WENTWORTH, General Passenger Agent.

H. B. RAMSEY, Gen'l Superintendent, Chicago.

Chicago, Burlington and Quincy

Ticket Office 63 Clark St., opposite Sherman House. Union Depot, foot of Lake St.

Riverside Accommodation	*7.45 a. m.	*2.15 p. m
Mail and Express	*7.30 a. m.	2.45 p. m.
Pacific Fast Line	*10.45 a. m.	*4.15 p.m.
Riverside Accommodation	*7.45 p. m.	*8.30 p. m.
Meadow Passenger	*4.30 p. m.	*9.45 a. m.
Aurora Accommodation	*5.30 p. m.	*8.30 a. m.
Aurora Passenger	*8.30 p. m.	*9.30 a. m.
Riverside Accommodation	*6.15 p. m.	*8.30 a. m.
Pacific Night Express	10.00 p. m.	†7.00 a. m.

SAMUEL POTTER, Gen'l Ticket Agt. Office in St. Cent. Depot

Illinois Central—Depot, foot of Lake street.

Cairo Mail	*8.30 a. m.	*7.45 p. m.
Cairo Express	*9.00 a. m.	*7.30 p. m.
Kankak Day Passenger	*4.10 a. m.	*7.45 p. m.
Kankak Night Passenger	*8.30 p. m.	*7.30 a. m.
On Saturdays this train will leave at	4.45 p. m.
Champaign Passenger	*4.00 p. m.	*9.30 a. m.
Hyde Park and Oak Woods	*9.30 a. m.	*7.30 a. m.
" " "	*2.00 a. m.	*9.30 a. m.
" " "	*12.15 p. m.	*2.45 p. m.
" " "	*4.30 p. m.	*6.30 p. m.
" " "	*8.15 p. m.	*7.30 p. m.
(St. Louis through Express)
Day Express	*9.00 a. m.	*8.15 p. m
Fast Line	*8.15 p. m.	*7.00 a. m

M. HOUSMAN, Gen'l Supt.

W. P. JOHNSON, Gen'l Passenger Agent.

Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne and Chicago—Depot, Corner of Madison and Canal Streets.

Mail	*8.30 a. m.	6.10 p. m.
Day Express	*9.00 a. m.	6.00 a. m.
Atlantic Express	5.15 p. m.	3.20 p. m.
New York Express	8.00 p. m.	8.00 a. m.
Valparaiso Accommodation	5.30 p. m.	7.30 a. m.

W. C. CLEARY, Gen. Ward's Pass. Agt., 66 Clark st.

Chicago and St. Louis—Depot, corner Madison and Canal sts

Night Express	*9.15 p. m.	*8.00 p. m.
Joliet Accommodation	*4.40 p. m.	*9.55 a. m.
Night Express	12.20 p. m.	6.00 a. m.
Lightning Express	† 2.00 p. m.	*9.55 a. m.

*Except Sundays. †Runs through to St. Louis every night. ‡Saturdays and sundays excepted. §Except Monday.

T. B. BLACKSTONE, Pres. & Gen'l Superintendent.

A. NEWMAN, Gen'l Pass. Agt., Office 56 Dearborn st.

CHICAGO, DANVILLE AND VINCENNES RAILROAD.

Milwaukee Depot—Corner Canal and Kinzie Sts., West Side. Freight Office at C., G. & I. G. O.'s Office, corner Halsted and Carroll sts.

Mail Train Chicago time, ... 3.45 p.m. 9.15 a. m

Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad. cor Van Buren and Sherman Streets.

Pacific Day Express	10.00 a.m.	6.15 p.m.
" Night Express	*6.30 p.m.	8.50 a.m.
Peoria Night Express	10.00 p.m.	6.00 a.m.

An elegant parlor sleeping car is attached to the 10 a. m. train, running through to Council Bluffs and Omaha.

H. M. ADAMS, Gen'l Passenger Agent.

R. M. JOHN, Gen'l Ticket Clerk.

Pittsburg, Cincinnati, & St. Louis R. R.—Cincinnati Air Line.

Cincinnati Express	*9.45 a. m.	3.40 a. m.
Columbus Express	*9.45 p. m.	*2.30 p. m.
Cincinnati Night Express	†7.45 p. m.	*2.30 p. m.
Columbus Night Express	†7.45 p. m.
Lightning Express	3.40 p. m.	9.35 a. m.

W. R. SCOTT, Gen'l Pass. Agt., Ticket Office Corner Randolph and Dearborn streets.

Goodrich's Passenger Steamers.

For Milwaukee and West Shore ports *daily at 9 00 a. m.
For Grand Haven and East Shore ports *daily at 7.30 p. m.
For St. Joseph and Benton Harbor, *daily at 10 a. m.
Green Bay Ports, Tuesdays and Fridays at 7 p. m.

*Sundays excepted. †Mondays excepted. ‡Saturdays excepted.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF CREATION

Unfolding the laws of the Progressive Development of Nature, and embracing the Philosophy of Man, Spirit, and Spirit world. By Thomas Paine, through the hand of Horace G. Wood, Medium.

Price 35 cents, postage 4 cents. For sale at this Office

The Biography of Satan;

or an Historical Exposition of the

DEVIL AND HIS FIERY DOMINIONS.

Disclosing the oriental origin of the belief in "a Devil and Future Endless Punishment. All about the BOTTOMLESS PIT. KEYS OF HELL.

Chains of Darkness, Casting out Devils, etc.,

By E. GRAVES, author of "Christianity Before Christ."

Price 35 cents. The Trade Supplied at Liberal Rates.

PUBLISHED BY

RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL Publishing House, 187 & 189 S. Clark St, Chicago.

[PAUL AND JUDAS Entering the Cave of JOHN THE BAPTIST.]

J S OF NAZARETH

BY

PAUL AND JUDAS,

Through Alexander Smyth, Medium.

This work has been read with intense interest by thousands, and is universally pronounced the most in the whole line of Spiritualistic Literature. It is the only true and reliable history of the remarkable medium called Jesus, ever written. After waiting eighteen hundred years, PAUL AND JUDAS, finding the times propitious, and an excellent medium through whom to communicate, have given to the world a book of lasting interest, by taking possession of Mr. Smyth about one hour in every twenty-four, usurping all his powers, giving a continued series of well-connected scenes, presenting scenery, characters and personages, dialogues and actions in their regular order and succession, embracing all the most important personages and incidents which occurred during the sojourn of Jesus upon earth. There was, probably, no book ever written in which such perfect life-pictures occur; every city and country village, every river, brook and mountain, and scenery in general, is so vividly portrayed that an actual journey through the country could hardly be more interesting. The characters in this unexampled drama are so faithfully portrayed, that, as you are introduced to each in turn, you seem well acquainted and delighted with your company, and the many points of interest you are called to visit. The book is replete with interest from beginning to end, and contains 319 closely-printed pages.

WONDERFUL BOOK

PRICE, $1.50; postage, 20 cents.

☞ For sale, wholesale and retail, by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 187 & 189 South Clark St. Chicago.

Prof. Wm. Denton's Works.

THE SOUL OF THINGS; OR PSYCHOMETRIC RESEARCHES AND DISCOVERIES. By WILLIAM and ELIZABETH M. F. DENTON.

This valuable and highly interesting work has become a part of the standard literature of the country.

Price, $1.50cts. Postage, 20cts.

LECTURES ON GEOLOGY, THE PAST AND FUTURE OF OUR PLANET. A valuable scientific work.

Price, $1.50cts. Postage, 20cts.

COMMON SENSE THOUGHTS ON THE BIBLE. For Common Sense people. Twelfth thousand, revised and enlarged.

Price, 10cts., Postage, 2cts.

THE DELUGE, IN THE LIGHT OF MODERN SCIENCE.

Price, 10cts., Postage, 2cts.

WHAT IS RIGHT. Price, 10cts., Postage, 2cts.

BE THYSELF. Price, 10cts., Postage, 2cts.

For sale at THE RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL Office.

Address S. S. Jones, 187 & 189, South Clark street, Chicago, Ill.

NEW WORKS BY PROF. DENTON.

"ORTHODOXY FALSE,

Since Spiritualism is True."

Price, 10 cents: postage, 2 cents.

THE IRRECONCILABLE RECORDS, OR GENESIS AND GEOLOGY.

80 pages. Price: paper, 25 cents, postage, 4 cts cloth, 40 cents, postage 8 cts.

For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 187 & 189 S. Clark Street, Chicago.

A BOOK FOR WOMEN;

TALKS TO MY PATIENTS,

BY

MRS. R. B. GLEASON, M.D.

A book by a woman, for women, on the diseases of the sex. The LIBERAL CHRISTIAN, speaking of the book says:

"After reading the whole of this book, we pronounce it the most admirable and excellent that we have ever had," its class. It is written for women; it is full of wise counsels and suggestions regarding the very things in which so many people most need assistance. It is a safe book for young people to read, for any body indeed, and this can be said of very few books. Every inch and every sentence is pure; a sentence in it that can be perverted or misused, so as to do any harm. We wish the book could be read in every household in our country."

Harper's Magazine says:

"We wish the chapter 'Confidential to Mothers,' might be published as a tract and sent to every Mother in the land."

Mrs. Dr. Sales says:

"I would rather have written that book than been queen of the greatest empire on this small globe of ours!"

Godey's Lady's Book says:

"This book treats in a thorough yet delicate manner of all the troubles, ear-s, and diseases of women. We do not hesitate to say that it is the best book of its class we have yet seen."

Price, $1.50; postage, 16 cents. Address RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark street, Chicago.

THE LAW OF MARRIAGE,

BY C. L. JAMES.

An exhaustive argument in favor of liberal divorce legislation. For sale by the author, Louisiana, Mo Post paid for 25 cents.

vp.nlS-tf.

REPLY OF WASH. A. DANSKIN, ESQ., PRESIDENT of the First Spiritualist Congregation of Baltimore, to Rev. Thomas E. Bond, M.D. Price, 10 cents; postage, 2 cents. For sale at the office of this paper.

WOOD'S HOUS

Frontier Department.

BY.....M. V. WILSON

A False Statement.

In an article that appeared in the Herald last week we find the following:

"E V Wilson, one of the most stern and powerful lecturers among Spiritual mediums, has the names in his possession of over 700 Christian ministers, that have been arraigned before the courts as horse thieves, adulterers, forgers, etc., within the last five years."

This low slang at Christian ministers bears upon the face of it, just what it is—a lie.

We do not wish to enter into an altercation on this subject, and only make this correction for the benefit of those few who might possibly be led into error by such false statements. By facts and figures we could prove our assertions, but will only say that Illinois, according to the present population, has about one-twentieth of all the ministers in the United States; one-twentieth of 700 would be thirty-five ministers in our State thus stigmatized! Is it true? Will our ministerial record show it? We leave these questions for you to answer, knowing that your better judgment will dictate truth, and leave such infamous assaults to sink into their natural oblivion.

We call the attention of the writer of this extract, especially the one who pronounces it "a lie," that we are prepared to count noses with him, and for every Spiritual speaker, lecturer, and public medium that has sinned, gone wrong, or strayed outside the paths of virtue, we will find twenty clergymen, elders, class-leaders, deacons, and other notables in the various churches, who have done more, and I can find its full proportion in Illinois.

What I have said, and say it again, is, that I can produce a list of several hundred clergymen and other notables of the church, who read the Bible and preach its word, who are guilty of one or more of the acts known in the calendar of crimes—from robbing a hen-roost, to murder, and that these criminals have committed these crimes since the advent of Modern Spiritualism, or since the 1st of June, 1849

Our friends in New Boston, Ill., will use this as they think proper.

We refer to the criminal reports and records of the country, and the Police News and Gazette.

Dr. Albert Barnes on Sin.

A friend sends us the following extract concerning Dr. Barnes. It is a bitter criticism on a life spent in the service of Jesus, and if these are the conclusions of a great and wise man concerning his present and future, what conclusion shall the foolish ones of this world arrive at?

We know that we are immortal. Dr. Barnes did not before his apotheosis. Does now. Hence Spiritualism is ahead of the Doctor, for we have learned this side of the grave that which the Doctor had to go beyond to learn.

"The Rev. Albert Barnes, the well-known writer of Notes on the Gospels, in a recent letter on theological problems says: 'In the distress and anguish of my own spirit, I confess I see no light whatever. I see not one ray of that light to lead to me why sin came into the world, and why the earth is strewn with the dead and dying, and why men must suffer to all eternity. When I feel that God only can save them and yet he does not do it, I am struck dumb; all is grievous to my soul, and I cannot discuss it.'"—New Orleans Picayune, winter of 1869.

GREAT CURE BY SPIRIT POWER.

Mrs. A. H. Robinson, Medium.

MISS ROBINSON—Dear Friend: You will find inclosed the name, age, and lock of hair of a young lady that has been afflicted by the loss of the use of her lower limbs ever since last fall. They never have pained her any, and yet she cannot move them a particle. She is an orphan child and in very poor circumstances, living with her aged, widowed grandmother. They have not even a home of their own. Do, please, cure her, if she can be cured, and your God will be your reward. I saw her last Sunday—the first time I have known anything about her—and my heart was so moved I could not help asking your pity and charity.

I know your terms, but it is not possible for me to send the money at this time. I shall send for myself in a few weeks, and I hope to be able to pay you for the young lady at the same time. If you can cure her, please write to me soon. I feel almost certain she can be cured by some of our great healers of the day. The young lady's name is Elizabeth Angeline Miller, age 18 years the 24th of last April.

Direct your letter to me, as I shall go and take charge of the young lady as soon as I hear from you.

Yours in faith,
MRS. LAURA J. DRAKE.

Waterloo, Iowa, May 17th.

MRS. ROBINSON, under spirit control, diagnosed the case and prescribed a remedy, and the following letter shows the result:

MRS. A. H. ROBINSON—Dear Sister: By your request I will write and advise you of the result of your prescription.

I read your letter and have done as you requested by the young lady. I have seen her once a week, although she lives six miles from here. She is doing well and gaining fast. When I wrote you four weeks ago, she could not walk a step. To-day I saw her walk across the floor a number of times. Her back seems better. I send a lock of her hair, hoping the work of the spirits may be crowned with success in the cure of this young lady.

I have to bear a considerable amount of orthodox slang in doing this, but I fear them not. Let me hear from you soon—please do.

Yours in faith and truth,
MRS. LAURA DRAKE.

Waterloo, Iowa, June 25 h.

Letter from Fisher Doherty.

BRO. JONES:—I suppose you feel an interest in all spiritual movements of the day, so I will post you as to what we are doing. Miss Lizzie Keyser has been with us for a few days, giving us some fine tests of spirit life. We wish that there were more like her. In our circles last winter the spirits promised Madison Doherty and John Purcell, that if they would fit up a gallery, they should be developed as "spirit artists." They got a camera, fitted up a room, set for development, and the promises made were fulfilled. Doherty and Purcell have to-day a gallery in the city of Indianapolis, where, during our late State Convention, quite a number of recognized spirit pictures were taken. I think the picture tests about the most interesting convincing of any that I am acquainted. September next, we will have a debate between Hull and the Rev. Mr. Jewell of Subject: Does the Bible teach in all its phases? Jewell was selected by the Christian Conference held here last winter. He sent me a challenge which was accepted and Hull chosen as our man. We expect a glorious victory—not only in sustaining modern Spiritualism, but in rescuing the Bible from being perverted and used in building up some six hundred creeds or sects, each proving itself right and all the others wrong, and not one of them, save the Quakers, demonstrating in their lives the first great moral precept of the humble Nazarene. We think that the cause is gaining slowly but surely. There is a desire, particularly in the country, to hear the gospel of Spiritualism. The pulpit still thunders against us, but the congregations cannot forget their relatives and friends in the other life, nor get rid of the desire to know that they still live and love.

Letter from Belle A. Chamberlain.

BROTHER JONES:—I found at Fort Dodge a Progressive Lyceum in good working order, under the guiding care of Mrs. Swain, who in herself proves the fact, that a person may be a Spiritualist and never lose their position in society. I delivered six lectures in Henry's Hall which were well attended, and this, too, by the best minds of the place. Tests were given after the lectures which created much surprise and investigation. The tide of Spiritualism is gaining strength much faster than our opponents suppose. Herein Des Moines, I find a strong spiritual element, and hope to do much good here. All letters may be directed to me at this place during July, in care of box 347.

Des Moines, Iowa.

Letter from Levi Dinkelspiel.

BRO. JONES—Allow me to say a few words ab ut the three days meeting at Sturgis, Mich. People came from all the surrounding country, and such a gathering I never had the pleasure of witnessing before, and such a feast of good things that we had! Feast did I say? yes; to me it truly was; just started out and am in the glorious work, it was to me more than a feast. It gave me encouragement such as I had least expected, and many thanks to the angels for taking me there. There were present, Bro. J. M. Peebles, Moses Hull. G B Stebbins, Cephas B. Lynn, and Sister H. F. M. Brown, and they used no fair means, and of others who bore sides myself, are about taking the field, there was present, Sister A. E. Messop and Brother James M. Choate and who like myself, are now asking engagements.

Yours for the cause,
LEVI DINKELSPIEL

An Entirely New Proposition.

We now have in press, and will be ready to fill orders before this notice reaches our readers a splendid new book, entitled THE SUNDAY QUESTION, and SELF-CONTRADICTIONS OF THE BIBLE.

This work consists of 123 large, closely printed pages It is an exhaustive review of the so-called Sunday question, and self-contradictions of the Bible. The work shows the so-called divine authority for the supposed holy day, to be the cunning device of designing priests rather than the inspiration of an Infinite God! This work, which we sell for the low price of fifty cents, and send free from postage on the receipt of the money, we will send to any old subscriber on receipt of seventy-five cents, together with the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL to any new subscriber on trial for three months; or, we we will send the same work and the JOURNAL for three months on trial direct to a new subscriber, on the receipt of seventy-five cents. For one dollar, we will send for a new subscriber, the JOURNAL three months and the above-named book, together with that very remarkable book called LIFE'S UNFOLDINGS, or The Wonders of the Universe Revealed to Man.

We hope that every subscriber to whom we are now sending the JOURNAL will avail him or herself of this generous offer, and thus secure these books, as well as to thus aid in doubling the number of the subscribers to the JOURNAL.

Address S. S. Jones, 189 South Clark street, Chicago, Ill.

Mrs. Robinson's Tobacco Antidote.

The most certain and perfectly harmless antidote for the poisonous effects, and remedy for the tobacco appetite, is known by the above name.

It is compounded by MRS. A. H. Robinson, the celebrated medium of Chicago, while entranced by a celebrated chemist, long in spirit life. This antidote is warranted to break the habit of using tobacco by the inveterate lover of the weed, when the directions (on each box) are followed.

Agents for selling the same throughout the country are wanted. For sale, wholesale and retail, at this office. Price $2.00 per box—sent by mail free of postage, on receipt of the money.

AN HONEST MAN OR WOMAN when they desire a newspaper discontinued, inclose arrearages, and say so. Exceptions to this rule are almost invariably found among church members, or those leaning that way. They trump up a pious lie to get rid of paying honest dues. Such people will be promptly exposed, so far as this paper is concerned.

JULIA DAKE CASTERLINE, M. D.,
TREATS SUCCESSFULLY CHRONIC AND ACUTE DISEASES. SPECIAL ATTENTION TO DISEASES OF WOMEN. 641 North 12th street, Philadelphia.
v10 n16 tf.

ROSICRUCIA!!!
THE ROAD TO POWER!! SEXUAL SCIENCE! F. B. Dowd's Private Lectures to Ladies and Gentlemen. A pamphlet of 80 pages, containing principles, ideas, and advice beyond price. Ignorance is the cause of mankind. Price 50 cents. For sale by the author, F. B. Dowd, Davenport, Iowa.
v10 n15 tf.

CHRISTIANITY:
ITS ORIGIN, NATURE AND TENDENCY considered in the light of Astro-Theology.
By D. W. Hull.
This book is, as far as it goes, a thorough review of the Origin of the Christian system, showing it all to be plagiarized from ancient heathens. Being unlike almost any other work ever written on the subject, it cannot but be deeply interesting to all. Its explanations of Scripture are lucid, and so self-evidently correct that no one can gainsay them.
. For sale, wholesale and retail, at this office.
Price, at retail, 50 cents; postage, 8 cents.

ABSTRACT OF
COLENSO ON THE PENTATEUCH.
A comprehensive summary of Bishop Colenso's argument proving that the Pentateuch is not historically true, and that it was compiled from traditions and legends of the Jews, from 1350 to 624 B. C. The substance of five volumes in 56 pages. Price 25 cents. AMERICAN NEWS CO., N. Y.
v10 n5 6m

THE CELEBRATED
CRAIG MICROSCOPE
Is an optical wonder; reveals the thousands of hidden wonders of Nature; is of permanent use and practical availability, combining instruction with amusement, and never losing its interest. It magnifies

TEN THOUSAND TIMES.

A power equal to other microscopes of many times its cost. Reveals countless little worlds all around us, teeming with life, which, to the naked eye must forever remain a sealed book—as Eels in Vinegar, Animals in Water, Cheese Mites, Sugar and Bath Insects, Milk Globules, Claws and Hairs of Insects, Hundreds of Eyes in the Single eye of a Fly, Dust of a Butterfly's Wings to be perfectly formed feathers, the much talked of Trichina Spiralis or Pork Worm, which was first discovered in America with this Microscope.

It is of infinite value to professional men, to teachers and to students, but nowhere is it of greater value than on the family table, within the reach of every member. It will delight yourself, your children and friends during the long winter evenings. It will show you adulterations of sweetness of various kinds in food, as sugar, tea, bread, meat, &c.

It is of Inestimable Value to the Farmer

in examining insects which prey upon his crops. The power of a $50 microscope, and so simple in its construction that any child can use it understandingly and with appreciation.

A Beautiful Present, Elegant, Instructive, Amusing, and Cheap. Over 60,000 sold.

During the past six years its worth has been testified to by Thousands of Scientific Men, Farmers, School Teachers, Students, Physicians, Heads of Families, and others.

PRICE $3.00.—Sent by Mail, Post-paid.

Every instrument is neatly boxed, and handsomely labeled with full directions for use. Thousands have been sent by mail.

Address:—RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 South Clark St., Chicago.

CONJUGAL SINS
AGAINST THE
LAWS OF LIFE AND HEALTH,
AND
THEIR EFFECT ON THE FATHER MOTHER AND CHILD.
BY AUGUSTUS K. GARDNER, A. M., M. D.
Late Professor of Diseases of Females and Chemical Medical Midwifery in the New York Medical College.
CONTENTS.
I. The Modern Womens' Physical Deterioration. II. Local disease in children and its cause. III. At what age should one Marry. IV. Continence physically infamous. V. Personal Pollution. VI. Consequences results of Physical Excess. VII. Methods used to prevent Conception and their consequences. VIII. Infanticide. IX. Conjugal relations during the period of Menstration. X. Conjugal relations between the old. XI. Marriage between Old Men and Young Girls XII. What can be done. With Health in View. And the fearof God before us. Appendix.
Price in cloth, $1.50, postage 16 cents; in paper, $1.00, Postage 8 cents. The Trade Supplied.
Address S. S. Jones, 187 and 189 So. Clark St., Chicago Ill.

PROF. HOWE'S
SEVEN-HOUR SYSTEM
of
GRAMMAR.
The writer of this useful book has had a practical experience in the art of teaching of upwards of thirty years. He had long been impressed that a shorter pathway to grammar than that which led through the perplexing subtleties of the text books could be secured, and with much skill devised his "Seven-Hour system" of oral teaching. Appeals from his audiences for request from correspondents abroad became so numerous and repeated, that he was compelled to put his ideas into print to satisfy the public demand. He discovered in the work are many and startling, reducing the labor, in many instances, from years to minutes. The limited working power of the Translative Verb from 50,000 words to seven; his rotating or vibrating Nine, securing syntactical agreement between the Verb and Noun; the exposition of the Subjunctive Mood and Proposition, with many other interesting features of the work, are not only original, but might with very great propriety be termed inspirational. These are of the utmost value to the the public writer, the platform speaker, the clergyman, or the senator. Fifteen minutes attention to any one of them will protect any intelligent person from erring once in a lifetime!
The work is got up in pamphlet form of about 80 pages, strong and durable, with flexible cover, containing everything within in its simplest essence, to constitute the Practical Grammarian. It is not sold for the value of the paper, or binding, but for the Seven-Hour grammatical education contained within.
Price:—cloth $1.00. Paper 50 cents. For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 187 & 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.
v9 n1 tf.

THE PSALMS OF LIFE,
A COMPILATION OF PSALMS
HYMNS, ANTHEMS,
CHANTS,
ETC.,
Embodying the Spiritual, Progressive, and Reformatory Sentiment of the Present Age. By John S. Adams.
This work has been prepared with special reference to the wants and increasing demand for a volume expressing the sentiments and views of the advanced minds of the present time, and meeting the requirements of every species of Reform. It is entirely free of Sectarianism, of all the theological dogmas of the past, and fully recognizes the presence and ministration of Spirit, in every condition of life on earth.
This book contains five hundred and twenty-two choice Selections of Poetry, with suitable music on each page from Handel, Hadyn, Mozart and Other Distinguished Composers.

It combines the advantage of "Hymn" and "Tune" Book. It is produced with a Classified Table of Subjects, and Complete Indexes of First Lines, Tunes and Metres; and being of convenient size, is peculiarly accepted as the Standard Music Book of Spiritualism, Radicalism and General Reform.

alike desirable for the LECTURE-ROOM and the HOMES OF THE PEOPLE.
"I think there is in the book a great or proportion—so, I think I ought to say a greater number—of beautiful and truly spiritual poetry than in any other collection I have seen, whatever the size of the volume."
Rev. John Pierpont.
PRICE:—Paper cover, 50 cents; Postage, 6 cts. Board cover, 75 cents; Postage, 12 cts. Cloth-bound, 90 cents, Postage, 12 cents is the same of mankind. Price 50 cents. For sale by the author, F. B. Dowd, Davenport, Iowa.
For Sale at the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL BOOK STORE,
187 and 189 South Clark St.,
Chicago, I
v9n19 tf.

HESPERIA:
AN EPIC OF THE PAST AND FUTURE OF AMERICA.
By Mrs. Cora L. V. Tappan.
. PRICE: $1.75; postage, 20 cents. For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING House, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

EXPRESS!
THE "SHEPHERD" and other Rubber Goods,
FOR
The Use of Ladies and Gentlemen.
Send stamp for circulars. Address: "SHEPHERD" Box 330 Clark St., Room 10 Chicago.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

ATTRACTIVE NEW BOOKS.
—o—
ERNEST RENAN'S WORKS.

THE LIFE OF JESUS.—THE LIFE OF SAINT PAUL.—AND THE LIVES OF THE APOSTLES.

These three remarkable books, by the great French Philosopher, are attracting the earnest attention of all readers. "They are of great power and learning, carefully and honestly written, beautiful in style, admirable in treatment, and filled with reverence, tenderness, and warmth of heart."
. Price $1.75 each; postage 20 cents.

THE BIBLE IN INDIA;
Or, the Hindoo Origin of Hebrew and Christian Revelation. Translated from the French of Louis Jacolliot. A remarkable volume, which is making a great sensation in Europe, and exciting the profoundest attention of thinking people. . Price $2.00; postage 30 cents.

HABITS OF GOOD SOCIETY.
A hand-Book for Ladies and Gentlemen; with hints and anecdotes concerning nice points of taste, good manners, and the art of making one's self agreeable. The best and most entertaining book on the subject ever published.
. Price $1.75; postage 20 cents.

THE ART OF CONVERSATION,
With directions for Self-Culture. Teaching the art of conversing with ease and propriety, and setting forth the literary knowledge requisite to appear to advantage in good society. A book of real merit and intrinsic work.
Price $1.50; postage 20 cents.

THE ARTS OF WRITING, READING, AND SPEAKING.
A remarkably clever book that every one, whether educated or not, will find of immense advantage and profit. A capital companion for every writer, which is THE ART OF CONVERSATION. . Price $1.50; postage 20 cents.

☞ These books are all beautifully printed and handsomely bound in cloth covers, with gilt backs.

For sale wholesale and retail by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

Artificial Somnambulism.
The author of the above named book, is a philosopher of large experience in this special merit.
In this work he treats of the philosophy of mind as demonstrated by practical experiments during the last twenty years. No work has ever been published which so thoroughly demonstrates many popular theories to be unfounded, and fallacious; and at the same time gives a rational theory for phenomena manifested.
DR. FAHNESTOCK is a thorough believer in spirit communion, and teaches in this work the modus operandi, to demonstration.
The following is the table of contents of this valuable work.
CHAP. I.—HISTORICAL SURVEY. Mesmer not the discoverer of the state—His theory of—Deleuze examination by the French commissioners—Their conclusions—The author's remarks.
CHAP. II.—Of the causes which have retarded the progress of the science.
CHAP. III.—Of the conditions necessary for the production of the somnambulic state, with instructions how to enter it, etc.: I.—Of the instructor or "operator." II.—Of the patient. III.—Instructions. IV.—Of the sensations experienced by those who enter this state. V.—Of their awaking.
CHAP. IV.—Theory of this state.
CHAP. V.—Of the somnambulic proper sleep. I.—Of a partial state of Artificial Somnambulism.
CHAP. VI.—Phreno-Somnambulism.
CHAP. VII.—Of the senses: I.—Motion; or, the power to move.
CHAP. VIII.—Of the functions of the faculties. I.—Consciousness. II.—Attention. III.—Perception. IV.—Memory. V.—Association. VI. AND VII.—Likes and Dislikes. VIII.—Judgment. IX.—Imagination. X.—Will
CHAP. IX.—Of the peculiar functions of perception in the different faculties while in a natural state. I.—Of the peculiar functions of perception when in a state of Artificial Somnambulism. II.—The functions considered when in a state of Artificial Somnambulism. 1.—Consciousness, 2.—Attention, 3.—Perception, 4.—Memory, 5.—Association, 6 and 7.—Likes and Dislikes, 8.—Judgment, 9.—Imagination, 10.—Will.
CHAP. IX.—Of reading or knowing the mind. I.—Illustration. II.—Illustration. Theory of Dr. Collyer. Mental alchemy or electrifying.
CHAP. XI. I.—Of the identity of other mysteries with this state. II.—Of the mysteries practiced by the ancient magicians of Egypt. III.—Of the "mysterious lady." IV.—Of the earth mirrors. First earth glass, Second earth glass. V.—Second sight. VI.—Phantasms.
CHAP. XII.—Transposition of the senses.
CHAP. XIII.—Natural sleep.
CHAP. XIV.—Natural Somnambulism. I.—Trance.
CHAP. XV.—Of intuition.
CHAP. XVI.—Of Presentiment or foreknowledge.
CHAP. XVII.—Of interior provision. II.—Of exterior provision. III.—Prophetic dreams. IV.—Witchcraft.
CHAP. XVIII.—Sympathy. I.—Clairvoyance. Clairvoyance at a distance.
CHAP. XIX.—Of the sense of hearing.
CHAP. XX.—Of the sense of smell and taste.
CHAP. XXI.—Of the sense of feeling.
CHAP. XXII.—Of the sense of motion. Of their physical effects.
CHAP. XXIII.—Of the influence of Artificial Somnambulism on the system. I.—Of its influence upon a healthy subject. II.—Of the influence of Artificial Somnambulism upon diseased subjects.
CHAP. XXIV.—Artificial Somnambulism considered as a therapeutic agent.
CHAP. XXV.—Of the kinds of disease cured while in this state. I.—Chorea, or St. Vitus's dance. II.—Epilepsy. III.—Intermittent fever. IV.—Neuralgia. V.—Fever. VI.—Case. VII.—Inflammatory rheumatism. VIII.—Chronic rheumatism. IX.—Hysteria. X.—Melancholy from unrequited love. XI.—Case. XII.—Case. XIII.—Case. XIV.—Contraction of the muscles of the fingers. XV.—Scarlet fever. XVI.—Case. XVII.—Case.
CHAP. XXVI.—Surgical operations.
CHAP. XXVII.—Obstetrical cases. Conclusion.
This valuable work is for sale at this office, at $1.50 per volume, postage 20 cents. See book list in another column. ☞ The trade supplied on reasonable terms

GOD
DEALING WITH SLAVERY.
God's Instrumentalities in Emancipating the African Slaves in America.
SPIRIT MESSAGES
Given During the Years 1860 to 1870, inclusive,—from FRANKLIN, LINCOLN, ADAMS, JACKSON, WEBSTER, PENN, and others to the Author,
THOMAS RICHMOND.
This is one of the most interesting books in the whole catalogue of Spiritualist publications. Its author is well and widely known throughout the United States, he having been one of the early pioneers and a man of extraordinary energy and ability, who would make his mark in any company. After an active career of over fifty years, he is now, in his seventy-fifth year, is as strong and hearty, and as capable of doing business as he was fifty years ago. His ability, energy, and acquaintance with many of the leading men of the country, pointed him out to Franklin and other distinguished spirits as the most fitting instrument with which they were to accomplish a work of great magnitude. The manner in which they worked through him and the results achieved are herein related by the author in a book of 368 pages.
PRICE: Cloth, $1.00; postage, 12 cents. Embossed paper sides and cloth back, 75 cents; postage, 6 cents.
☞ For Sale, Wholesale and Retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 187 & 189 South Clark Street, Chicago.

AN EYE-OPENER.
"OITATEUR PAR PIGAULT."
LE BRUN.
DOUBTS OF INFIDELS.
Embodying Thirty Important Questions to the Clergy; also, Forty Close Questions to the Doctors of Divinity.
BY ZEPA.
Price 10 cents at the office of this paper.
Price, in cloth, 75 cents; postage, 12 cents. In paper, 50 cents; postage, 6 cents.

Bible in India and Hindoo New Testament.
We will send the above-named rare books, free of postage, on receipt of $3.50.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

MEDICINA PSYCHICA! ANIMA MEDICA!!
☞ "Dico hominem externum esse animal: Internum vero non animal sed imaginem DEI VERAM!"—VAN HELMONT
—o—
THIERS' ODYLLIC WAFERS,
The most safe, salutatory, and effectual Nervine Medium Developer and Curative in all
DISEASES OF THE NERVES,
Including Neuralgia, Epilepsy, Hysteria Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Gout, Lumbago, Sciatica, Chorea, (St. Vitus' Dance) Depression of Spirits, Melancholy, etc.
Sent per mail, in letter form. Price $1.00 per package. Four or five packages mailed free for $3 cents.
Address, W. F. J. THIERS, M. D., NEUROPATHIST, No. 71 I St., Washington, D. C.
v10 n11 tf

THE
HOLLOW GLOBE;
Or, the World's Agitator and Reconciler.
A Treatise on the Physical Conformation of the Earth.
PRESENTED THROUGH THE ORGANISM OF
M. L. SHERMAN, M.D.,
AND WRITTEN BY
PROF. WM. F. LYON.
—o—
EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.
"THIS book is addressed to the reasoning intelligence of Humanity,—to all inquiring and reflective minds, everywhere upon the earth
"We earnestly request the reader to suspend his judgment concerning the ideas advanced, until he has carefully perused its pages; when he may be better prepared to form his opinions, and offer his criticisms.
"We do not claim that the teachings contained in this work are infallible neither are they presented in an authoritative manner. But we do claim that it contains more original, natural and startling ideas, which are of great interest to civilized humanity, and which seem to be entirely irrefutable, than any book of its size that has made its appearance in modern times.
"We, therefore, commend it to the careful consideration of the modern thinker, being fully persuaded that its pages contain a large fund of thought which may open to his mind new fields of research, thus tending to enlarge his understanding, and enlighten his intellect."
EXTRACT FROM INTRODUCTION.
"THE central idea contained in the following work, and the one that most of these chapters are designed to substantiate, is, that this globe is constructed in the form of a hollow sphere, with a shell some thrity to forty miles in thickness, and that the interior surface, which is a beautiful world in a more highly developed condition than the exterior, is accessible by a circuitous and spirally formed aperture that may be found at the north polar regions. Polar Sea, and the opening affords easy navigation by a broad and deep channel leading from one surface to the other, and that the largest ships of war could pass through it in either way, with as much facility as they can pass through any other winding or somewhat crooked channel. And we have endeavored to show as clearly as possible, that the internal formation of the globe is such as to be perfectly compatible with an outer and inner world, or two worlds instead of one."
12 mo., 447 pp. Price $2.00; postage 20 cents.
. For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING House, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

[Reprinted from the London edition of 1783 by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, Chicago.]
THE
BHAGVAT-GEETA,
Or Dialogues of
KREESHNA AND ARJOON.
In eighteen lectures, with notes. Translated from the original Sanskrit, or ancient language of the Brahmins.
BY CHARLES WILKINS,
Senior merchant in the service of the Honorable, the East India Company, in their Bengal Establishment.
The antiquity of the original and the veneration in which it has been held for so many ages by a very considerable portion of the human race, renders it one of the greatest curiosities ever presented to the literary world.
Our edition of the BHAGVAT-GEETA (sometimes called the Hindoo New Testament) is printed on Ivory tinted paper and beautifully bound. It is in great demand, orders for nearly all of the first edition having been received before it left the binder's hands.
Price $1.25; postage, 12 cents.
. For sale, wholesale and retail, by the Religio Philosophical Publishing House, 187 & 189 S. Clark st., Chicago

LIFE'S UNFOLDINGS
OR THE
WONDERS OF THE UNIVERSE
REVEALED TO MAN.
The Medium, in his address to the public says:
The Medium (David Corless, of Huntley's Grove McHenry Co., Ill.,) through whom this work was given, has been a careful observer of the phenomena of "Modern Spiritualism" for over twenty years and during that time he has been the humble Medium through which hundreds of philosophical and scientific lectures have been given to attentive listeners. Of himself, he can only say he is unacquainted with the letter A, and has no desire to be this pamphlet a careful and attentive perusal.
The Introduction entitled "The Unveiling," treats of man as the grand objective ultimate of Life's Unfoldings:
He also stands at the pinnacle of all organized Life in the native purity of all things.
On page twenty-four, the author treats of "the way mediums paint likenesses, in the true order of the development of the arts and sciences.
In part second, under the general head of mysteries Revealed, the author treats of "How Mankind Manifest their presence through Physical Bodies of Medium. How the writing is done. How we influence Mediums and Mediums. The fullness of all kinds of language investigated. The ring test and the carrying of Musical Instruments around the room explained."
This work is neatly got up and consists of seventy-three closely printed pages and we hesitate not to say that it contains more original thought upon important subjects, a few only of which we have enumerated, than any other work of equal size we have seen.
. Price 50 cents; postage, 2 cents. For sale wholesale and retail by the publishers, the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING House, 189 South Clark St., Chicago.

THE Science of Evil;
OR
FIRST PRINCIPLES OF HUMAN ACTION.
BY JOEL MOODY.
—o—
THE SCIENCE OF EVIL is a book of radical and startling thought. It gives a connected and logical statement of the FIXED PRINCIPLES OF HUMAN ACTION, and clearly shows that without Evil there can be neither Morals, Science, Knowledge, or Human Action on earth. In fact, without Evil, man could not exist. This work fully solves the problem, and unveils the MYSTERY of Evil, giving it a scientific meaning, and shows it to be THE LEVER WHICH MOVES THE MORAL AND INTELLECTUAL WORLD.
The book is a large 12 mo., of 363 pages, printed from large, clear type, on fine, heavy paper. Price, $1.75; postage, 20 cents.
. For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING House, 187 & 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

HARMONIAL PHILOSOPHY

RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL

AN ILLUSTRATED WEEKLY JOURNAL DEVOTED TO THE HARMONIAL PHILOSOPHY, AND THE ARTS AND SCIENCES, LITERATURE, ROMANCE AND GENERAL REFORM.

$3,00 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.] Truth bears no mask, bows at no human shrine, seeks neither place nor applause: she only asks a hearing. [SINGLE COPIES EIGHT CENTS.

S. S. JONES, PUBLISHER AND PROPRIETOR. CHICAGO, JULY 22, 1871. VOL. X—NO. 18.

From the Medium and Daybreak.

SPIRITUALISM IN ENGLAND.

Emma Hardinge—Artemus Ward—The Spirit Messenger, etc.

OVER THERE.

By Request Read Repeatedly by Mrs. Hardinge, at her Lectures in London.

Oh, the spacious, grand plantation,
Over there!
Shining like a constellation,
Over there!
Holy with a consecration,
From all tears and tribulation,
From all crime and grief and strife,
To all sane good and fair,
Over there!

Always broadline, warm and golden,
Shines the mellow sunshine olden,
Over there!
Never blighting shadow passes
On the silken, star-eyed grasses,
Waving wide their flowing hair
In the clear, translucent air,
Over there!

Oh, the grand encamping mountains,
Over there!
Oh, the sheeny, spouting fountains,
Over there!
Oh, the boundless, star-lit arches,
Where the sun in glory marches,
On a road forever trending,
Through bright legion worlds unending,
Over there!

Brilliant blossoms breathe and burn,
Over there!
Nectar-drunken drops the fern
By the tulip's early urn,
Over there!
Orange beds and passion flowers
Lustless crypt hymneal bowers,
Over there!

All the heavenly creatures born
Of the breeze, the dew, the morn,
In diffuse beauty greet,
Drape their purple, drift their snow,
Don their crimson, sheen their gold,
Shed their odors manifold
On the enlightening air,
On the flower-laden air,
Over there!

Oh, the regal forests growing,
Over there!
Breath of Judaan over flowing,
Over there!
Pine from the Holy Mountain,
Palm from the Holy Sunny palms,
In the ever blue there,
Over there!

And a sentinate perfume
With the deep delicious gloom;
While through trees wreathen ringing,
Lustrous birds are floating singing,
Over there!

No salt tears the ground are drenching,
Over there!
Faint with toil no skins forms blenching;
No more agonizing heart-broak;
No more crouching in the cane-brake;
And no fitful hands wave-sending
With a frantical beseeching,
Over there!

No more desperate endeavors,
No more separating ever,
No more desolating severs,
Over there!
No more fettered limbs are quaking,
No more burdened backs are aching,
No more hearts are breaking, breaking,
Over there!

THE SPIRIT MESSENGER.

[A seance is held every Friday evening, at eight o'clock, at the office of the MEDIUM; J. J. Morse, Trance Medium. By our reports of them or other circles we do not endorse or stand responsible for the facts or conclusions given by the spirits. Our desire is, in brief, to give a faithful representation of what takes place, for the benefit of those who cannot attend.]

June 16.

(The first control was by Tien-Sien-Tie, guide of the Medium.)

The letter in last number of the MEDIUM enforcing the doctrine of the Trinity was read, and the spirit was asked to reply to it.—A. We assumed that information was required as to the sense in which we used the words "I" and "We." We confess that we have no belief or faith in the doctrine of the Trinity as taught by Church theology. The dogma is of no practical value to the spirit after death. We are charged with ambiguity, but this ought to be attributed to the questioner, who failed to comprehend our meaning. No doubt his views on the Trinity are, to him, the highest truth, but as we all differ in education and mental capabilities, mutual concessions must be allowed. We utterly deny that beliefs have any power to improve the quality of spirit communications, which are the product of organic conditions in spirit-life and on earth.

Mr. Potter asked: Do not the spirits acknowledge the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost? and if so, which are highest, those who believe, or those who do not? Does such a belief not tend to the glory of God?—A. The position of the spirit in the other world is determined solely by his actions in this life. The only way to promote the glory of God is to do to others as you would have them do to you, and also not do to others what you would not have them do to you.

Mr. Gardner, of Nantucket, asked: If the doctrine of the Trinity be true, will it not impede the progress in spirit-life of those who hold it?—A. It is an effete, worn-out superstition, and is entertained by spirits who have not got rid of the ideas acquired on earth. No doubt it originated in a perception of truth, but that truth has been long disrupted by the blind belief now entertained. We may state a Natural Trinity, composed of God the centre, Nature the effect—the connecting link being the realm of forces. It might be named otherwise—God, Wisdom; Nature, Love; and the intermediate forces, Will-power; Force; it is exhibited in man—Soul, Body, Mind. All beliefs not founded on a perception of truth retard the soul, and prevent it from making progress in spirit-life. Man cannot at all times perceive truths in the abstract, and hence personalities are adopted to shadow them forth. The ambition of priests has turned these symbols to the personal advantage of their order, till, in the present day, the three idols worshipped in Christendom entirely obscure the spiritual principle which they misrepresent.

ARTEMUS WARD.

A spirit controlled the medium, and was at first thought to be the "Strolling Player," as he acted and talked in a personating manner, making numerous puns. He said he was a celebrated showman, a class of individuals who looked down on "strolling players." He was particularly cell-abraided in the lungs before he left earth, indicating that he died of pulmonary consumption. He spoke in a strong New England accent, and it was suggested that he was Artemus Ward, and he acknowledged that he was Charles Brown, vulgarly known by the former name. He spoke in a genial manner, and full of genuine humor. He concluded with a short address, in which his fictitious name occurred often. It was not properly reported, but the "Strolling Player" gave the following version of it, which, however, is not so concise and pointed as the original:—

"A. Ward awards to his many friends such good feelings and wishes as they are desirous to have awarded to them; at the same time trusting they will award him a continuance of such sympathy and love. A. Ward also trusts they will be able to ward off any blows upon their own nuts; at the same time he awards the task to them of warding off blows from the heads of other people; and as they work and entitle themselves to their award hereafter, so he trusts that their award will be one rdance with the good they have awarded to other people; but if their award fall short of what they would like, he trusts they will have common sense enough to ward off a recurrence of the same failures; so that in the end we may be united in one ward, one of commerce (not lunatic), and toget er unite ourselves into one band of kindly feeling, and benevolent labors for the purpose of warding off misery and awarding happiness to all who are deserving of such A. WARD."

The "Strolling Player" concluded the seance by a travesty on the absurdities of theological superstitions.

MESSRS. HERNE AND WILLIAMS' SEANCE AT 15 SOUTHAMPTON ROW.

Much has been said against dark seances, and properly too, for when the phenomena are of such a trivial character as to be readily simulated, no good, but rather evil, can come from such seances. When, however, the phenomena are of such an astounding description as to baffle imitation, then the dark seance gives as positive evidence of spirit-action as any other form of experiment. The latter description applies most emphatically to the mediumship of Messrs. Herne and Williams. The carrying of human beings and other objects through closed doors has been thoroughly established by these mediums. On Monday evening last a very interesting incident took place at their seance at the Spiritual Institution. On that occasion objects were handled in a very free manner. A rack of books were carried from the piano and placed on the table. Then a stack of loose publications was taken from the sofa and showered over the table and the sitters. The table-cloths were wrapped round several of those present. An arm-chair and another chair were hoisted on to the table by spirit-power, after which Mr. Herne and Mr. Pegan, of Liverpool, were levitated. Mr. Williams was lifted on to the table, and afterwards was heard to fall behind one of the sitters. In about a couple of seconds the noise as of a heavy body falling was heard in the room above, then another noise, and in less than two minutes Mr. Burns and Mr. Williams were outside of the seance-room door asking for admittance. Mr. Burns gives the following account. He was in his office under the seance-room, when Mr. Williams walked in, and in a wild, excited manner asked, "Where are they? Are they all gone? Where am I?" Mr. Burns asked, "Where have you come from?" He replied, "From the top rooms." After being assured that the seance was still sitting, Mr. Williams accompanied Mr. Burns to the outside of the seance-room door. Mr. Burns shouted out, "Have you had these doors opened?" Several voices answered simultaneously, "No." "Can I come in?" "No." "What have you done with Williams?" "Why, the spirits have taken him away." "Well, I have got him here." The doors were opened, and Mr. Williams and Mr. Burns entered the room. Light was struck, and it became evident that the spirits had carried Mr. Williams into the room above; that after assuming his consciousness he was again entranced and made to walk downstairs quickly, and come to himself again just as he entered Mr. Burns office. We think it proper to state that the doors were not locked, but it is utterly impossible that Mr. Williams could have passed out of the doors, as he was not allowed time to do so before he was heard in the room above; the doors were not heard to open or shut, and if they had been opened the stream of light from the staircase must have been perceived by the sitters. Three separate spirit-voices spoke a good deal during the evening.

MEDIUM.

Q. What is the nature of the lights seen at spirit-circles—are they real objects, or are they only subjective in the mind of the seer?—A. Those lights are real objects, and are caused by the spirits who are present being attracted and mixed so as to produce a peculiar combustion, in such a way that the present state of spiritual science cannot imitate.

Q. Is it proper to send missionaries to the heathen?—A. Let us first consider the position of the heathen spirit. He is a teacher, and his object is to give all mankind a knowledge of eternal life, that they may know how to conduct themselves on earth so as to take a high place in spirit-life. Has the missionary the necessary knowledge to perform such duty? What does he really know of the spirit world—of its laws and conditions, and how they are modified by the acts of earth life? What evidence has he of spiritual life at all? Only tradition and assumption. The missionary should not set out upon his mission till he has been educated, and can place his teachings upon the basis of fact and reason; otherwise, he may sow the seeds of error and misconception, and perpetuate that which rational men begin to suspect is wrong and false—a system of creedal theology.

After answering a number of other questions, the "Strolling Player" controlled, and discoursed in a humorous manner in reply to questions on the devil, redemption, disinfecting clothes by burning them, etc. When asked what he had been doing during the last twenty-four hours, he said he had been taking part in the theatrical representation of a piece called "Life." The audience would number 20,000. It was a means of instruction, and the object was to illustrate the influence of church theology on the human mind on earth and in the spirit-world. Many minds were thereby impressed, and when he left to attend the seance, there was a private meeting of clergymen, talking earnestly on the subject which had been represented.

THE SPIRIT OF A CLERGYMAN.

The next spirit was introduced without the medium being waked up. The control was effected readily. The medium sat erect and dignified, leaned gently forward as if to give expression to his thoughts, and endeavored to get just something which he tried to find under his chin and across his breast. He then spoke in a calm and dignified manner:—"In some respects it is a pleasant duty I have to perform to-night. There has been some little inquiry in this place into the existence of redemptive agencies in the after-life. Also into the common with many others, not only as to the existence of redemption. A revelation in the world of the newly-arisen has brought such a theory from my mind, and I have set forward my testimony against it, or to put it more correctly, against the doctrine. It [illegible] the materials and [illegible] my teaching which I had received, so far as I could, by the [illegible] we find him a teacher and a light to us. It is now nearly a year and a half since I left the mortal frame in September, 1869, dying in the belief of a Christian, and with the hopes and expectations of a Christian. Finding these beliefs, hopes, and expectations fallacious, as a Christian and a man I am bound, in the cause of eternal truth, to record my testimony against them. The subject of Spiritualism hath engaged the attention of some of the inhabitants of the town close to where I lived, and perhaps my brief communication here will arouse interest in that direction. Rev. Walter Galen Townley, Hayle's Place, near Maidstone.

A COMMUNICATION FROM THE SPIRIT-WORLD

Through the hand of Tyson Hogen, from his Mother, on her passage from the Earth Life to the Spirit-Land.

"The sensation was one of sweet repose. On opening my eyes, I found, to my utmost astonishment, that I was still as when in my body; for though I missed the outward covering I had for so many years been carrying, I was sensible some wonderful change must have passed over me, for which I was quite unable to account. Having so long entertained the belief that in passing out of our earthly bodies we ceased to exist as individuals, I could by no means comprehend the change I felt and saw. Everything appeared changed, and yet the same. I felt as though I missed the outward covering I had for so many years been carrying.

CRITICAL.

Shakerism and Spiritualism in their Moral Aspects.

We have reviewed the following long article from the Shaker, which we now copy in connection with our reply, for the benefit of our numerous readers.

Will the Shaker have the courage and manliness to publish in its columns this our rejoinder?

All religions that have attained great proportions, if perhaps, we except the Confucian system of China, have had their original basis in some report of spiritual manifestations. Both profane and ecclesiastical history sustain us in this position.

Believers have had experiences relating to Spiritualism extending over more than a century; for our visible founder, Mother Ann Lee, was a visionist and wonderfully endowed with spiritual gifts.

Studying the history of Shakerism and religious, it becomes clearer to us, that communicating spirits were, in the past, as in the present, good and bad, orderly, disorderly, and even demoniac. This with us has been a matter of prayerful consideration. As a body of people, we have never exercised a blind faith in idle curiosity or worldly gain, spiritual, entrancing or otherwise controlling, certain of our brethren and sisters, in several of our societies, many years ago, from the newest Rochester disturbance, (distinctly informed us that the spiritual manifestations which we had enjoyed (during a period of seven years) were to cost the world, five to the center court of the Temple of Humanity! These heavenly intelligences further prophesied what the result of this widespread, promiscuous spirit intercourse in the world would be; and these prophecies are being continually verified.

Under the providence of God, by the law of cycles, prophecy is fulfilled in time and order. And, having for several years been anxiously expecting the breaking out of those spiritual manifestations, we, upon the first hearing of the Rochester rappings, sent a committee to visit the Fox girls in New York City, paying our dollar apiece for admission. This committee at once recognized the genuine character of the manifestations, and reported upon their return. Sub sequently we witnessed similar manifestations to those first occurring in the home of Dr. Phelps. In brief, for the last twenty years or more, we have seen very much of these manifestations of the spirit; have been the attentive readers of the Spiritualistic journals and books and were visited by the late Secretary Stanton, Mr. Gow, and other Spiritualists of New York, and many others of the most distinguished Spiritualists in the country. Therefore, when we read of Spiritualists falling to comprehend the law of spiritual gifts, and their frequent descent into the "snare of the pit," we are in no way surprised, knowing that there will yet be greater and more disastrous falls in the coming; and many ambitious will meet with a worse than a Sodom defeat. The angels are separating the chaff from the wheat. The Rochester manifestations, with its "like frogs," which issued from the mouths of the three great powers—Paganism, Catholicism, and Protestantism—already in the land, the Mormon fraud, Spiritualism is the parent of Free-Loveism, of inordinate, unclean affections and carnal relations, under the institutions of communism. Comparatively few Spiritualists seem to understand the situation; some, however, are seeking a higher plane as of a more religious life; and, therefore, are gradually arriving at affiliating with the purer principles and practices which characterize our Shaker Communities.

In a late anniversary address, delivered in New York, on the 21st of March, by Judge Edmonds, we find this significant paragraph:

"From us the physical manifestations which once so powerfully excited our wonder have almost entirely ceased. Their office was to establish the reality of a spiritual life, and the fact of communion with it. That office with us has been performed. That work is done; and henceforth the appeal is not to our senses, but to the intellect and our hearts; to the reason which God has given us, and to the spirit of devotion, once the distinguishing mark and badge of our immortality—which He has implanted in us.

"Our duty is plain and simple. It is to receive, to digest, and to comprehend the revelations which are produced to us of the existence and the conditions of a future life; to receive and realize the great principles which are to fit us for that life, and which can make it a source of happiness or otherwise."

That Spiritualism as an organic movement is making no progress, but rather declining, is as evident to Spiritualists as to outsiders of Shakerism. The various reasons for this: In the majority of places the management of Spiritualistic institutions (Spiritualists themselves believe) is under the auspices of the lowest seekers; and Spiritualism has fallen into quite unstable company. Fraternalism, noise and confusion are the fruits in the lower degree; in the higher degree, of Reported for the Journal.

FUNERAL SERVICE.

Delivered at the Grave of our Dearly Beloved Sister, Louisa A. Montague, Consort of Rodney Montague, at Los Angels, Cal., June, 1871.—By Thomas Andrew Garey, Inspirational Speaker.

BELOVED FRIENDS:—By particular and special request of the dear Sister whose mortal remains lie before us, we propose to make a few remarks. This is a solemn and mournful occasion which brings us together to-day. The loved Sister, beloved by all who knew her, has, to the outer senses, left us, never to return. Her body has gone down to the dust of the earth, but her emancipated and new-born spirit returns to us to-day, clothed in the garments of the summer land. Let us pause here for a moment and reason together. We know of a surety that the worn and emaciated body must decay and return to the bosom of mother earth. Our natural outward senses tell us this. But in regard to the return of the spirit to "God who gave it," or the positive truth of an existence beyond the grave, how, we ask in all candor, may we know that the spirit of man retains its identity and survives the shock of death? We are told, "Thus 'tis written: 'The spirit lives on forever.'" Who has written thus? We answer, man, fallible man of the earth, earthy, reiterating the sayings of men of the past ages. 'Twas well for those in the days when written. Faith in our fathers has sufficed to keep alive our hopes of future life for a season. But, friends, we live in a new, critical age, an age in which all assertions must be proven or pass for naught.

The teeming millions of earth to-day cry aloud, has man an existence beyond the grave? And if so, how are we to believe it? aye, to know it? Our response to you to-day is, by the return beyond a doubt of the loved ones of earth. We are bold to assert to-day, they do return and manifest themselves unto us and teach us of the future, bringing unto us a perfect knowledge of the future life.

Death, my friends, comes when accident overtakes us, or when the body, from disease or other causes, ceases to perform the functions required of it by the spirit. In the light of our philosophy, death is a misnomer. There is no death. The change known as death is a chemical change, through the door of which the spirit is born into newness of life. 'Tis the door that opens to an eternal and never-ending life beyond the cares of earth-life. For 'tis written: "No man can enter the kingdom of heaven except he be born again." This is the second birth. The first birth of water, when you are born into the natural world of efforts; the second, of spirit, when you put off the mortal coil and ascend to mansions not made with mortal hands in the eternal spirit land.

Our beloved sister has experienced the second birth, and can truly cry aloud, "O, death! where is thy sting! O, grave! where is thy victory!" She has passed on intelligently to her spirit home prepared for her by those preceding her, and her home is embellished with wreaths of beautiful flowers, emanations from her pure mind and acts while in earth-life. Like an intelligent and consistent traveler, she has perused a chart of the journey she was preparing to enter. She had no fears of the future, knowing that a life of purity and benevolence would be fully rewarded in the summer land.

Two weeks before her departure, she requested us to officiate at her funeral, and repeated the request but a few short hours before she left us. She retained her powers of mind and thought until the last moment. A serene and heavenly tranquility pervaded her death chamber. She had no angry and cruel father God to fear, nor roaring demon to appease. Her faith was placed in a just and omnipotent God of love to all his children; a God who dispenses his blessings alike upon the Jew and the Gentile, the king and the peasant, and the harmonious as well as the unharmonious of earth's inhabitants. Her God deals in generalities, and not in special providences. Her God is not the God who created a plan of salvation, and then in his fickle-mindedness repented that he made man, and was compelled to send into the world his only begotten son to redeem mankind from the short-sightedness of the reputed originator of man. Oh, no! She passed on in a living faith of the purity and goodness of the great father. Our sister was well schooled in the truth of the accountability of man for his own acts either for good or evil. She had no Savior in the person of a Jesus to take upon himself her sins. Each person, O man and woman, must save thyself. I cannot take upon myself your sins, you cannot atone for mine. The time has arrived when the popular mind must be enlightened in regard to this popular heresy. When men come to know that they must work out their own salvation, perhaps it may be in "fear and trembling," they will begin to cease to do evil, and will strive to do right. This, my friends, is the foundation stone upon which the new temple of progress is being built; and the keystone of the arch of the mighty structure is, "love to one another and the whole human race." Our religion, friends, consists in living up to the highest conceptions of right in our possession. We care not for costly edifices in which the rich may worship in velvet-cushioned pews, while the poor beggar rots in his garret. We have no sympathy for the sounding brass and tinkling cymbals of form and gorgeous ceremony. "Do unto others as you would have others do unto you," is our religion, and we firmly believe this great principle of love and charity will eventually bring peace on earth, good will to man." We find in our investigations that all books are the works of men. Among others claiming inspiration and revelation from the celestial world, we find the Holy Bible, the Koran, the Zends Avesta, and Andrew J. Davis' Nature's Divine Revelations. All these books, or portions of them, at least, were written by highly inspired men, and, further, were adapted to the wants of the age producing them. Hence, the need of a continual flow of inspiration, which is eternal, and fills in its unceasing flow the receptive minds of all ages, of all nations, kindreds, tongues, and people. The accounts for the divinity of beliefs upon the globe. Where mind is not receptive, crippled and blessed by creeds and dogmas, the heavenly stream flows on to more unfolded organizations.

Our age is singularly, peculiarly, and wonderfully progressive and receptive. We have outgrown the old and seek for the new. Hence, it flows to us to-day from the great and good gone on before, among whom we rank Fenelon, Howe, a Wesley, and a Washington; yea, from the mighty host of men and women determined to eradicate the errors of earth by supplanting them with truths from from the angel world.

Our interior sight and hearing are wonderfully quickened in this golden age of grace, for a still small voice comes to us to-day and whispers in our receptive ears, "Lo, joy pervade the afflicted circle, for of a truth the loved one lives." We wish you to understand that we live to-day upon the lofty and spiritually unfolded eminence of the nineteenth century, from which we survey with accuracy the period and events of the follies of the past, and with a fair and clear degree of clairvoyance we gaze into the ever-changing future and the condition of earth and her offspring who, by the disenthralling process known as death, have traveled onward. We know, friends, this change comes sooner or later to all.

"To living men come clear the ground Whom your bodies will shortly be."

However and the event may be, it is the common lot of all. Hence, it is of paramount importance that we always stand in readiness for the justice-dealing angel. You may ask, "What should we do to be prepared?" We answer, Obey the holy injunctions and best thoughts of the truth-loving martyrs of all ages, and take heed to the promptings of your own souls. Extend a helping hand to the unfortunate of earth wherever found. Cultivate your spiritual nature, that you may know of yourself the best course wherein to travel. Teach thy children, O man, to study the great and immutable principles of nature, that you may feel a sacred nearness to the loved ones gone on before, who oft return to comfort you in your trials and tribulations of earth life.

In the light of the great truths revealed to-day, the change from death into a never-ending spiritual life, from mortality to immortality, becomes interesting, grand, and ever glorious, and in some instances, as with this dear sister, desirable—because it relieves the spirit from the worn and diseased body, no longer able to perform the uses of the ever unfolding spirit. When the inhabitants of earth become fully informed in regard to these glorious truths, then a loving hope, joy and tranquility will take the place of the gloom and sadness now attending the birth of a spirit into spirit-life. Those whom we have been erroneously taught in the past as gone from our gaze forever—gone to that bourn from which no travelers returns, now do return to bind up the broken and grief-stricken heart. They would say to those who mourn, "Be comforted." She who but just now passed on, who is but a step apart, would say to her loved husband and sons, "Grieve not; she whom thou dost mourn still lives." These are the teachings that come from heaven to earth to-day. These are doctrines taught by loved ones in spirit-life. We put this body of our dear sister away silently, carefully, lovingly, as the honored casket of the new-born spirit. While we do this, we know this body will never be raised. There is no resurrection of the physical body.

There is a natural body and there is a spiritual body. The one is earth, earthy; the other spirit, spiritual. It is contrary to reason and common sense to say to these people "this body will rise at the last day." For know, O man, that the last day of the body is when the spirit deserts it and passes away. What use has the grain for the chaff after it is matured; the fruit for the parent tree after fully developed and ripe? None friends. We are taught to-day that the spirit is raised immediately upon the dissolution of the physical body. Then there is no resurrection of the body. And, Oh! how grand and glorious the condition of the new-born soul, free from the trammels of earth-life, with a grand and glorious unfoldment in the heavenly world!

And now, in conclusion, we would say to the living here to-day, investigate with an honest heart the claims of the freedom-loving dead of earth. Acts V: 38 and 39. "For if this counsel and this work be of men, it will come to naught; but if it be of God, you cannot overthrow it, lest haply, ye be found to fight even against God." Now, earth to earth, dust to dust, ashes to ashes; "but life to life and spirit to spirit." And may this dear sister find a happy home in the "heaven of rest, the port of peace."

THE SPIRIT ARTIST.

Letter from Mrs. E. A. Blair.

BROTHER JONES: Please find $3 00 inclosed for the JOURNAL, to be sent to G. D. Blake, 91 Cumberland St., Portland Maine. Myself and husband have been in their family for three weeks, in which time I seem to have given perfect satisfaction. We have been in Portland nearly six weeks. I have given in that time over two hundred private sittings; at each a picture was painted.

We are still en route for your city, but will not reach it before October, at the speed we have been traveling the last three months. I solicit subscriptions for your paper. The time is not far distant when your valuable paper will be a household word, and as much reverenced as is "Holy Rolo." You do well in devoting so much attention to mediums, spirit communications, physical manifestations, and its philosophy.

The cry is, Oh, give me more proof that I can and will meet my loved ones after what is termed death. Give me confidence that they can and will return to earth, to guide us poor mortals.

LAWRENCE, Mass.

Letter from S. D. Jewett, P. M.

DEAR SIR: A copy of the RELIGIO PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL, published in Chicago, by S. S. JONES, is sent to this post-office, to the address of D. S. Carpenter, and is not taken from the office, said Carpenter having gone from here to parts unknown.

If Mr. Jones, who I suppose is a Spiritualist, will please inform me where this subscriber is, I will thank him, and try to collect back postage.

Middlefield, Conn.

Remarks!—Mr. Jewett is entitled to our sincere thanks, which are hereby tendered to him.

S. D. Carpenter owes $1 50 for the JOURNAL. Will he be so kind as to remit and save further notice. Any one knowing his present post-office address will oblige by informing us of the same.—ED. JOURNAL.

Criticism on the THEOLOGICAL IDEA OF DEITY,

Contrasting the Views Entertained of a Supreme Being by the Ancient Grecian Sages, with those of Moses and the Hebrew Writers; and blending Ancient Judaism, Paganism and Christianity into a Common Original.

BY M. H. CRAVEN.

15 mo., 217 pages.—Price, $1.00; postage, 16 cents.

 For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

The Great MAGNETIC CURE.

SEND FOR CIRCULAR TO DR. E. SMITH, NORMAL, ILLINOIS.

New Books.

UNDERHILL ON MESMERISM.

WITH

Criticisms on its Opposers.

AND A REVIEW OF HUMBUGS AND MISCONCEPTIONS, WITH PRACTICAL INSTRUCTIONS FOR

EXPERIMENTS IN THE SCIENCE—FULL DIRECTIONS FOR USING IT AS A REMEDY IN DISEASE—HOW TO AVOID ALL DANGER.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF ITS CURATIVE POWERS;

How to develop a good Clairvoyant

THE PHILOSOPHY OF

SEEING WITHOUT EYES.

THE PROOFS OF IMMORTALITY DERIVED FROM THE UNFOLDING OF MESMERISM.—EVIDENCE OF MENTAL COMMUNION WITHOUT SIGHT OR SOUND, BETWEEN BODIES FAR APART IN THE FLESH.—COMMUNION OF SAINTS, OR WITH THE DEPARTED.

BY SAMUEL UNDERHILL, M. D., L. L. D.,

LATE PROFESSOR OF CHEMISTRY, ETC., ETC.

Price $1.25. Postage 15 cents. The Trade supplied.

Address S. S. Jones, Chicago. Ill.

Jesus of Nazareth

ARCANA OF SPIRITUALISM.

A MANUAL OF

SPIRITUAL SCIENCE AND PHILOSOPHY

By Hudson Tuttle.

WITH PORTRAIT OF THE AUTHOR. PRICE $2.00; Postage 24c.

This work embodies the results of the author's researches and experience during the past twenty years, and is, without doubt, the most thorough presentation of the subject of Modern Spiritualism before the public.

Strange, as it does, with a question in which the interest of all mankind is centered, it cannot fail to command universal attention.

While the experience of thousands will repudiate some of the conclusions the author arrives at, they will still be able to obtain much invaluable information from the book. It is a good book to place in the hands of every person who would know more of what it is that is waking the world to new hopes and aspirations, and planting a tree of life beside every man's door.

 Price, $2.00; postage, 24 cents. For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

Given Through Alexander Smyth.

Exeter Hall! Exeter Hall!

HAVE YOU READ EXETER HALL?

THE following are extracts from a few of the notices of Exeter Hall, the Theological Romance:—

"The plot and passion in Exeter Hall show an experienced hand in their delineation. Exeter Hall proves that the author has something to say and knows how to say it."—[Public Opinion, London, England.

"It is indeed a wonderful book."—[New York Mail.

"We commend it to the widest popular approval."—[Banner of Light, Boston.

"We have no hesitation in declaring this a great work."—[Universe, New York.

"The book is well and powerfully written. * * * The most scorching work ever published in America since the 'Age of Reason.'"—[Liberal, Chicago.

"One of the most exciting romances of the day."—[Democrat's Magazine, New York.

"Convincingly illustrative of the errors of Theology."—[Investigator, Boston.

"The humane and charitable tendencies of the book must receive the approbation of every friend of humanity."—[Daily Telegraph, Toronto, Canada.

Price, 60 cents. Postage, 4 cents.

For sale, wholesale and retail, by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 187 & 189 South Clark st. Chicago.

BY PAUL AND JUDAS.

MRS. MARIA M. KING'S WORKS.

THE PRINCIPLES OF NATURE, as discovered in the Development and Structure of the Universe; The Solar System—Laws and Methods of its Development; Earth—History of its Development; Exposition of the Spiritual Universe. Price reduced to $1.75; postage, 24 cents.

REAL LIFE IN THE SPIRIT LAND.—Being Life Experiences, Scenes, Incidents, and Conditions, Illustrative of Spirit-Life and the Principles of the Spiritual Philosophy. Price, $1.00; postage, 16 cents.

SOCIAL EVILS: Their Causes and Cure.—Being a Brief Discussion of the Social Status, with reference to Methods of Reform. Price, 25 cents; postage free.

THE SPIRITUAL PHILOSOPHY VS. DIABOLISM. In two lectures. Price, 25 cents; postage free.

WHAT IS SPIRITUALISM? and SHALL SPIRITUALISM SAVE A CHAOS? In two lectures. Price, 25 cents; postage free.

GOD THE FATHER and MAN THE IMAGE OF GOD. In two lectures. Price, 25 cents; postage free.

 For sale, wholesale and retail by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

BUY IT. READ IT.

The Bible in India.

HINDOO ORIGIN OF

Hebrew and Christian Revelation.

TRANSLATED FROM

"LA BIBLE DANS L' INDE."

BY LOUIS JACOLLIOT.

EXTRACTS FROM AUTHOR'S PREFACE:

"I come to Europe humanity, after attaining the loftiest regions of speculative philosophy, of untrammeled reason on the venerable soil of India, was translated and stifled by the almost total annihilation of her intellectual life a most hideous existence of dreaming impotence.....

India is the world's cradle; hence it is that the common mother in sending forth her children even to the utmost verge, in unfolding testimony of our origin, bequeathed us the legacy of her language, her laws, her morals, her literature, and her religion.....

To religious impostors, theocracy, speculative notions, and class-legislation, may be attributed the decay of nations.....

.....Aware of the resentment I am provoking, I put aside not from the encounter.....We are no longer burnt at the stake."

 PRICE $2.00; postage 24 cents. For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark street, Chicago.

For Sale at this Office.- Price $1.50.

Prof. Gunning's Positive and Negative Powders. For sale at this office. Address, S. S. Jones, 189 South Clark street.

MEDIUMS' DIRECTORY.

The Religio-Philosophical Journal being an expositional to all true mediums, will hereafter publish a complete Directory, giving the place of all professional mediums, so far as advised upon the subject. This will afford better facilities for investigators to learn of the location of mediums, and at the same time increase their patronage. Mediums will do well to advise us from time to time that we may keep their place of residence correctly registered.

☞ It is a lamentable fact that some mediums so far forget their self respect as to speak evil of other mediums, not unfrequently, even of those who are far their superiors. The names of such persons will be dropped from this Register, so soon as we have evidence conclusive of their indulging in such unfairness.

It should be borne in mind that mediumistic visiting mediums carry conditions with themselves—so to speak—which aid or destroy the power of spirits to control the medium visited; hence it is that one medium gives satisfaction to certain persons, another better to others—all having their friends, and justly so, too, and all equally honest and useful in their place.

CHICAGO.

Bangs children, 237 S. Morgan St. ‡
Mrs. Ellen Brown, 126 W. Washington St.
Dr. W. Cleveland, 85 West Harrison St.*
Mrs. A. Crocker, 179 W. Madison St. •
Mrs. Do Wolf, 161 West Indiana St. ‡
Dr. R. Dwyer, 823 West Madison St. Gazouge
Dr. L. F. Grigg, 329 W. Madison street, cor. Peoria. •
Mrs. Ada Hoyt, Room 20 and 22 Honore Block.†
Mrs. M. Jenks, 176 W. Van Buren street.*
Dea. J. T. Lewis and wife, 14 Third Ave.•
Dr. R. K. McFadden and Wife, 345 W. Madison St.*†
Mrs. C. Moody, 106 12th street. • ‡
Mrs. A. H. Robinson, 148 Fourth Avenue.*†‡
Madame Ritter, 151 Clark street. ‡
Mrs. M. Smith, 141 S. Clinton St.*
Dr. Sargent, 78 Third Ave.†
Dr. H. A. Sherman, Room 4, 206 South Clark St.*†
Dr. Samuel Underhill, 189 S. Clark street.*
Mrs. S. T. Vibor, 689 Indiana Ave.*‡
Dr. J. Wetherbee, 680 W. Randolph St.
A. D. Willis, Cor. Clark & Madison st. ¶
Mrs. M. S. Weeks, Room 89 De Haven Block, Chicago.

BOSTON.

Dr. H. B. Storer.*†
Mrs. Julia M. Friend, 116 Harrison Ave.
Mrs. S. J. Stickney, 823 Tremont St.
Mrs. M. J. French, 1 Hope Ala.
Mrs. A. Goodallow, 615 Saturpine St.
Mrs. L. F Mann, 349 Sonth 12th st.*‡
Mrs. S. M. Brandreth, 5 Bradbury Pine St.
Mrs. Reynolds, 1013 Parrish St.
Mrs. R. McNeil, 1346 Hanover St.
Mrs. Taylor, 856 North 10th St.
DeWitt C. Hough, 813 Race st ‡
Mrs. Stoddard, 813 Race St.

NEW YORK CITY.

Jennie Danforth, 46 Fourth Ave.†
Miss Blanch Foley, 624 Third Ave.
Mrs. H. Segnour, 160 Bleeker St.
Mrs. J. Scott, 107 E. 31st St.
J. William Van Namee, 499 Fourth Ave.*†‡

BLOOMINGTON, ILL.

Mrs. Union Grover.
Mrs. M. E. Gotchell, 613 N. Main St. ‡
Dr. Mary Lewis, Bloomington, Ill.¶

RAYONNE CITY, N. J.

Mrs. E. Wallis.

GREEN GARDEN ILL.

Mrs. Oaklaus.*‡

GENESEE, WIS.

Mrs. E. W. Bolton. * ‡
Mrs. F. A. Logan.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.

A. B. Severance and Mrs. J. H. S. Severance. M. D. 407 Milwaukee street, Milwaukee, Wis.*‡
W. W. Sterling, 135 Spring street, Milwaukee, Wis. •

ROCKFORD, ILL.

Samuel Smith, Box 1833, Rockford, Ill. •
Mrs. M. J. Colson. S. Rockford, Ill. ‡

RICHMOND IND.

Francis S. Haswell. 26 N. Marion street.
Dr. Samuel Maxwell, 73 S. 8th street.

SAN FRANCISCO.

Wm. H. Hatch, 126 Kearny St.

ST. CHARLES, ILL.

Mrs. Leonard Howard.*‡
D. P. Rayner, M. D.*

SAN JOSE, CAL.

Mrs. Mary E. Nichols.

WHITEWATER, WIS.

Rev. A. B. Severance.*‡

MISCELLANEOUS.

Mrs. Orvia Abbott, Minneapolis, Minnesota. •
Little Annie Ouzle, Cedar Rapids, Iowa. ‡
Jonathan Allen, Geneseo, Ill.
Lyman Allen, Moline, Ill. Wis.
Miss M. A. A. pplet Dayton, Ohio. •
D. Atkinson, Marietta, Ohio. ‡
Mrs. Ann Bartlett, 1 Rock Hill, Kansas City, Mo. •
Mrs. E. A. Blair, 106 Ride St., Salem, Mass. ‡
Dr. M. Butler, Wellsboro, Tioga Co., Pa.*
M. K. Carter, 195 Main street, Hartford, Ct. J.*
Mrs. J. F. Currier, Cleveland, Ohio.*
Mrs. J. A. Danks, 24 Hoffman Block, Cleveland, Ohio.
Capt. G. Dunton, Lyons, Iowa. ‡
J. W. Ellis, Atlanta, ga. †
Mrs. R. K. Everell, Sprinfield, Mo. ‡
David H. Farnsworth, Plainfield, N. J.
Alonzo Fairchil, Schenectady N. Y. •
J. B. Fayette, Geneso, N. Y.‡
Dr. S. M. Grover, 24 Second St, Columbus, Ohio. •
Mrs. Wm. L. Gay, Canastota, New York. •
Dr. J. M. Holland, 206 Upper Broadway, Council Bluffs, Iowa.*
Judge D.L. Hoy, Mobile, Alabama.
U. S. Hamilton, Beloit, Wis.*
Dr. R. Heal, 53 Whitehall St., Atlanta, Ga.*
Mrs. Pamela Ferris, ‡
Minnie Jefferson, Travelling. †
Dr. F. F. Johnson, Ypsilanti, Mich. •
J. W. Kellogg, Watertown, Wis.
Mrs. C. Lathrop, 97 East Harrison street. •
Mrs. A. Mee, E. Lodard Station, Iowa. •
Mrs. R. F. Moore, Care W. Chase & Co., 201 North 8th street, St. Louis, Mo. •
J. H. Nichols, Sherrille, N. Y. ‡
Mrs. A. Nesbit, Canonsburg, Mich.*
Mr. John D. Odell, Watertoo, N. Y. •
Dr. Addison Ogden, Mt. Morris, Ill. *†‡
Mrs. Nellie Pine, 5-8th Bend Ind. •
Mrs. M. E. Robbins, Evansville, Ind.
H. B. Root, Fort Huron, Mich. ‡
Isaac Jackson Sloan, Covington, Ind.‡
Mrs. A. C. Smith, Aurora, Ill. ‡
Mrs. J. W. Stapleton, east side of 4th street, between I & J, Sacramento.
H. B. Sherman, Gahanna, Ohio. ‡
Angelo G. Story, Hudson, Ohio. ‡
A. Thomas, Lynden Station, Ohio.
Warren Wright, Waterloo, Seneca, Co., N. Y. •
Mrs. Fanny Wheelock, Pleasanton, Kansas. ‡

* Healer.
† Spirit Artists.
‡ Psychometrists.
¶ Readings and Test.
• Writing and Drawing.
§ Answering Sealed Letters.
* Solemnizing Marriages and Attending Funerals.

Jesus of Nazareth

JESUS! JESUS! JESUS! JESUS! JESUS!

A New Book by Andrew Jackson Davis,

ENTITLED,

"THE FOUNTAIN,

WITH JETS OF NEW MEANINGS."

ILLUSTRATED WITH ONE HUNDRED AND FORTY-TWO ENGRAVINGS.

Beautiful Paper, Fine Presswork, Superior Binding.

Price only $1.00; postage 16 cents.

This Book is Freighted with Thoughts for Men and Pictures for Children.

For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING House, 189 Clark Street, Chicago.

JESUS OF NAZARETH.

JESUS

Health by Good Living.

BY W. W. HALL, M. D.,

Editor of Hall's "Journal of Health."

THIS book is to show how high health can be maintained at common diseases cured by "good living," which means living within a reliable bean food, prepared in the best manner.

The best food includes meats, fish, poultry, wild game, vegetables, fruits, cereals and milk.

The best cookery preserves the natural tastes and juices.

As there can be no "good living" without a good appetite, how to get this great blessing without money and without price, is pointed out, and, it is hoped, in very clear and plain terms.

Some of the subjects treated are:—

The object of eating: Power to work: Early breakfast: Dinner-time: Luncheon: Eating "down town:" What shall a man do? What shall he not eat? How to get fat: Bad blood: Diet for the sick: Spring diseases: Children's eating: Forcing children to eat: Young ladies' eating: Cold feet and headache: Biliousness: A lazy liver: Mischievous tonics: The out-door air: Why are we dyspeptic? Dissipation after eating: Cole slaw: Certain cure of neuralgia: Nervous debility: Air and exercise: Food cure, etc., etc.

It tells

How to cure dyspepsia: How to cure neuralgia: How to cure biliousness: How to cure nervousness: How to cure exhaustion: How to get a good appetite: How to get lean: How to get good sleep: How to maintain high health. How to avoid disease: And all these without medicine: without money; without price.

It tells about

Luncheons and how to take them: Late dinners and how to take them: How drunkards are made at eating-houses: How girls are spoiled: How boys are spoiled: How health is lost: How home love is lost: How novel-reading ruins them: How love of dress is instilled: How young men are talked about: How bad husbands are made: How good wives are made at home: How home influences purify.

Price $1.50. Postage 18 cents. For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189, So. Clark Street, Chicago, Ill.

OF

DR. E. P. MILLER'S WORKS.

The Cause of Exhausted Vitality, or Abuses of the Sexual Function. Cloth $1,00, Postage, 12cts.

Every Young Man and every Young Woman, every Married Man and every Married Woman, Should read it.

A vast amount of suffering, as well as physical, mental and moral ruin would be prevented, if all were acquainted with the facts contained in this work and followed its excellent advice.

Vital Force, How wasted and How Preserved. Cloth $1,00, Postage 12cts; Paper Cover, 50cts, Postage, 4cts.

Mrs. Francis Dana Gage says; "I earnestly wish that it could be read by every mother in the country."

It is an invaluable work and should have a place in every family library.

How to Bathe, a Family Guide for the Use of Water in Preserving Health and Treating Disease.

Paper Cover. Price 40cts. Postage, 4cts

Important Truths, By Mrs. E. P. Miller, M. D. Price, 20cts, Postage, 2cts.

This little work is written in a style adapted to children's Minds, and no parent need fear to place it in their children's hands as an opening to conversation and advice on points upon which their future health, happiness, and even life, largely depend.

THE TRADE SUPPLIED.

Address S. S. Jones, 187 & 189, South Clark Clark street, Chicago, Ill.

NAZARETH.

SECOND EDITION.

A WORK OF GREAT RESEARCH.

ONE RELIGION: MANY CREEDS.

BY ROSS WINANS.

"We object to what the Church demands, an unbounded and unjustifiable confidence in the infallibility of the writings of Moses and the prophets, and the Evangelists and the Apostles. We dissent from a sentimental air assumed to an impossible conformity to the doctrines of God contained in Christian theology, as we have it, is not taught by God himself, nor by Christ himself, nor is it consistent with established facts, nor is it consistent with reason, or sense. We would show you that Christianity, as taught among us, is no better than other systems taught in other than Christian countries, and is unsupported, not so much by the historic part of the Bible, in relation to the creation of the world, but its counterpart, also in the several systems of theology here mentioned. They all had their cosmogonies based on equally good authority and equally wide of the truth, as that recorded in the Bible. The time and manner of the creation, no man has ever known, or ever will know, in this life; nor is such knowledge of importance in preparing us for the life to come."—EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

This book is a large 12 mo. of nearly 400 pages, printed on fine, heavy-tinted paper, and is sold at much less than the actual cost. Price, $1.50; postage, 32 cents.

 For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING House, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

The Most Wonderful Book

THE CAREER OF THE CHRIST-IDEA IN HISTORY.

A COMPANION VOLUME TO

"THE CAREER OF THE GOD-IDEA."

BY HUDSON TUTTLE.

CONTENTS.

I Introductory; II Career of the Christ-idea in Hindostan and among other Races; III Prevalencies of the Advent of Jesus; IV Conception and Genealogy; V Birth of Jesus; VI John the Baptist—his relation to Jesus; VII The sermon on the Mount; VIII Miracles; IX sending forth the Apostles; X The final journey; XI Burial and Resurrection; XII The Descent into Hell XIII The Gospels; XIV Resume of the Life and Character of Jesus; XV Causes of the Extension of Christianity; XVI The extension of the Christ-idea.

Price $1.25. Postage 16 cents.

The demand for these new works of Hudson Tuttle both in this country and Europe, is unprecedented.

For sale at the Religio-Philosophical Journal O B

EVER PUBLISHED.

THE

Science of Evil;

OR

FIRST PRINCIPLES OF HUMAN ACTION.

BY JOEL MOODY.

THE SCIENCE OF EVIL is a book of radical and startling thought. It gives a connected and logical statement of the FIRST PRINCIPLES OF HUMAN ACTION, and clearly shows that without Evil there can be no Good, Science, Knowledge, or Human Action on earth. In fact, without Hell, man could not exist. This work fully solves the reason, and unveils the nature of Evil, giving it a scientific meaning, and shows it to be the LEVER WHICH MOVES ALL MORAL AND INTELLECTUAL WORLDS.

The book is a large 12 mo.; of 363 pages, printed from large, clear type, on fine, tinted paper. Price, $1.75; postage, 20 cents.

 For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 187 & 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

Religio-Philosophical Journal.

S. S. JONES, } EDITOR, PUBLISHER, AND PROPRIETOR.
J. R. FRANCIS, } ASSOCIATE EDITOR

Office 167 and 169 So. Clark Street.

Religio-Philosophical Publishing House.

☞ All letters and communications should be addressed to S. S. JONES, 169 South Clark Street, Chicago, Illinois.

TERMS OF THE

Religio-Philosophical Journal.

$3.00 per year, $1.50—6 months, $1—4 mo.

☞ Fifty cents for Three Months on Trial

TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS.

In making remittances for subscriptions, always procure a draft on New York, or Post-Office MONEY ORDER, if possible. Where neither of these can be procured, send the money, but ALWAYS IN A REGISTERED LETTER. The registering fee has been reduced to FIFTEEN CENTS, and the present registration system has been found by the postal authorities to be virtually an absolute protection against losses by mail. All Postmasters are obliged to register letters when requested to do so.

All subscriptions remaining unpaid more than six months, will be charged at the rate of $3.00 per year.

PAPERS are forwarded until an explicit order is received by the Publisher for their discontinuance, and until payment of all arrearages is made, as required by law.

No names inserted in the subscription books without the first payment in advance.

SUBSCRIBERS are particularly requested to note the expiration of their subscriptions, and to forward what is due for the coming year, with or without further reminder from this office.

NEWSPAPER DECISIONS.

1. Any person who takes a paper regularly from the post-office, whether directed to his name or another's, or whether he has subscribed or not—is responsible for the payment.

2. If a person orders his paper discontinued, he must pay all arrearages, or the publisher may continue to send it, until payment is made, and collect the whole amount,—whether it be taken from the office or not.

3. The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers and periodicals from the post-office, or removing and leaving them uncalled for, is PRIMA FACIE evidence of intentional fraud.

LOOK TO YOUR SUBSCRIPTIONS.

Upon the margin of each paper, or upon the wrapper, will be found a statement of the time to which payment has been made. For instance, if John Smith has paid to Dec. 25th, 1870, it will be marked, "Smith J.—25 Dec.—0." The 0 means 1870. If he has only paid to Dec. 25th, 1869, it would stand thus: Smith J.—25 Dec.—9, or perhaps, in some cases, the last two figures for the year, as 70 for 1870, or 69 for 1869.

☞ Transmitting money to this office for the JOURNAL, should be careful to state whether it be a renewal, or a new subscription, and write all proper names plainly.

CHICAGO, JULY 22, 1871.

A SEARCH AFTER GOD.

NUMBER XLVIII.

CHURCHES OF CHICAGO.

A delightful May morning this, as we sit down to pen this number of the Search. The air is cool and bracing; the noise of pattering feet on the sidewalks below, and the hum and buzz of busy voices speak a language that only the interior soul can interpret.

Two hundred churches consecrated to the God of Moses lift their tall spires heavenward, while beautiful organs, under the manipulation of master hands, give forth sacred music that, no doubt, affords intense gratification to those in attendance. Sacred music, sacred chants, hymns, and airs, issuing from a church organ,—would they be as sacred if given expression to by an Italian organ-grinder in some secluded alley? or is it the tall spires, the carpeted aisles, beautiful pulpits and frescoed work, the solemn visage of the minister and his sonorous voice, that gives to it an appearance of sacredness? Here, then, amidst the ascent of two hundred sermons that are supposed to be translated heavenward for the edification of Deity, we are holding converse with our spirit guide.

What a city! What a mixture of the devil and the divine, the diabolical and the angelical, the licentiousness of a thousand brothels and divine services! But we must not pause to roar into the dark and damning corners of Chicago, or at those places where divinity is supposed to smile approvingly.

GUARDIAN CIRCLES.

In our previous communication, we gave a brief history of our spirit guide, detailed many of the remarkable incidents of his career in endeavoring to disclose the whereabouts of Deity. After he had found that there was a spirit circle connected with agriculture,—its guardian band,—he seemed to possess new life. He thought he had found the key that would finally unlock the mysterious problem. As he ascended the scale of existence, progressed in knowledge and light, he seemed to be imbued with additional ardor, and proceeded with his work with increased vigor. Armed with his experiences, as previously recorded, he went forth with his investigations, gaining at each step additional truths in relation to the object of his search. He had found the guardian circles of agriculture, governments, the atmosphere, the movements of the earth, the forces through the operation of which this globe was formed, and still the problem remained unsolved.

He had studied mathematics, learned its rules, its wonderful revealments, yet there was a vast field before him that demanded his attention.

THE SPIRITUAL CONGRESS.

Where next in his investigation? To the Spiritual Congress. There, oh, how grand the scene! Towering intellects were there, and they guided the car of national progress, directed it onward, and all their dictations were ultimately realized. What a power there! The combined intellects of the mighty dead! See their brilliant eyes, long, flowing beard, and majestic mien,—who would not wish to be like them? Their actions are unseen by mortal eyes; their influence unobserved by the denizens of earth,—yet they seem to control the forces that can move the giant will of a nation. In their hands is a power that transcends in magnitude the conceptions of the children of earth. Nations rise to-day, enjoy a season of prosperity, but to-morrow pass away like a breath of wind. The work of this Spiritual Congress is law. The late rebellion was inaugurated by it, by exciting the abolitionists of the North, and the prominent men of the South, to deeds of violence,—the object being to free the slaves. When the rebellion was fully inaugurated, and the government seemed determined to restore the Union with slavery, defeat and disaster constantly greeted the Union army; when, however, the Emancipation Proclamation was issued, there was one continual series of successes, until the rebellion was finally subdued. Concerning the defeat at Bull's Run, the panic on that memorable occasion was caused by a large band of spirits acting in accordance with the wishes of this Spiritual Congress, and who concentrated on the Union army their magnetic influence in such a way that made it susceptible to fear, and the result was a defeat! But the power that caused its defeat, saved it from subsequent ruin.

This Spiritual Congress is the acknowledged guardian circle of our nation, and through its instrumentality, it is being gradually led from one condition to another, until it will become the model government of the world.

SPIRITUAL BATTERIES.

In the progress, then, of our government, our guide recognized the guardian care of this circle of spirits; saw the vast mental batteries that they used to operate on those administering the government at Washington. On earth we have magnetic and electrical batteries that can prostrate the strongest man, that would shock the whole world could the denizens thereof form themselves in a circle. They, however, can only affect the physical organization; but in the Spirit world, are batteries organized to control the mind, the spirit, and which, in their action, are equally as potent as those of earth on the physical organization. With one of these powerful batteries, a panic can be caused in an army, or a general be so confused that he can not successfully direct those under him. Our brave generals at Bull's Run could not understand why they were so unsuccessful.

In the Spirit World batteries are formed by circles of spirits, to control the emotions, the feelings, the aspirations of individuals, and prepare them for a specific work. Here is a prominent general, and while at the head of his army, is merely responding to the impulses of a spiritual battery that is en rapport with him. Sometimes one spirit only is required, at other times two, but in many instances they reach as high as a hundred or even more. Their numbers are sufficient to place themselves in positive relations to the individual, and the moment that is done, their control is supreme. In these batteries wise ends are subserved, and grand works inaugurated that do great good. Little does the world understand the power of mind over mind, or a dozen minds over one. A circle of spirits, by placing themselves in positive relations to a man on the earth sphere, can control him, direct him in his movements, and while he is arrogant in his assertion that his own individuality is being exercised, the spirit circle constitute the power behind the throne.

The moment your mind becomes negative to the spirit circle around you, they can at any time control your thoughts or actions. This has often been beautifully illustrated by the magnetiser and his subject, by the former controlling the latter. Thus we find that while traversing the weary routine of life, we may be acting out the wishes of the higher power in all respects, and not be sensible of the fact. Washington, when struggling to break the yoke that joined this country to England,—his mind was subservient to a spirit circle, and while he was cautious and prudent, that policy was engendered by those that surrounded him, and to them he owes all his success. Thus we find in the Spirit World constant activity, and an interest is manifested in the affairs of earth that assume tangible shape. This nation is controlled in all important measures by this Spiritual Congress, and no step is made in progress that is not first inaugurated by them. Whenever they see a demand for a measure, it is easy to place a spirit circle en rapport with some master mind, and becoming positive to it, impress such thoughts thereon as lead to the results desired. No Infinite God has anything to do with such business, but individualized Intelligences have. On all sides we observe the operations of spirits. There is no condition of life where their influence is not exerted, and efforts made in the interests of humanity.

Many profound thinkers in various parts of the country are endorsing the position we have assumed in this series of articles. In a late number of the Banner of Light, W. H. King, of Huntington, L. I., sustains the positions we assume in an elaborate article. He says:

THE SOUL.

Hence the soul either existed previous to the human infant form, as an individualized intelligence, and knew what it was doing when it took advantage of Nature's laws, and entered an organism through which it could manifest itself, or at the time of its conception it was thrown off from the God of Nature, and individualized by some infinite power outside and independent of the soul. This last can not be, for then the individual could not be made responsible for something, the production of which it had nothing to do with. It would also destroy the individuality of the soul, and throw upon God, or the Infinite power which created, the full responsibility of all acts or crimes, degrading humanity to a mere machine or agent through whom they were produced. If any one is to be punished for crime, it should be the author of the crime, and not the instrument used in committing it.

The soul eternal is that infinite part of man which has ever existed as an individual intelligence, and which will ever continue to do so; and I will, for the better demonstration of my position, call it the "Father."

PERTINENT CONCLUSIONS.

Again: If man was projected by God in the manner before stated, he must be a part of God himself, and must have existed as long as he has had an existence; and he being infinite, or without beginning, then the soul must be infinite also; and if any wrong has been done, it was an infinite wrong, because the act was performed by an infinite being; and as there are no limits to infinite, there can be no limits to the act or its consequences. Hence, the punishment must be infinite also; and as no finite being can suffer an infinite punishment, then there must be an infinite being to suffer for the law violated. This is the position of the theologians, who assert that God (or Christ) is the only being who is of sufficient magnitude to be able to bear the fearful consequences. His being, according to their theory, the author of everything in existence, is still another reason why he should suffer punishment of so vast a nature.

WHO IS THE CONTROLLER?

But if this position be correct, you may ask Who is the controller of the universe of worlds? Is there no central head? Is there none to govern and guide the millions of worlds which surround us? I answer, yes; and will try to explain.

First, all eternal souls being divine and infinite in their individual character, are in perfect harmony with each other, but still retain their individuality. For instance, the highest conception of beauty to one soul, is to perfect the rose in its fragrance and beauty in the most perfect manner the material essence of the planet will permit. Another soul conceives in its modesty that the humble violet in its lowly condition would be more lovely and powerful to cheer some immortal soul, while locked in its human cage, and so manufactures that. Still another soul believes it can do more good by calling from the elements found in the muck and mire of the sluggish stream, the lily in all its purity, fragrance and beauty. But in order to project this lily, there must be a soul to manufacture the muck and mire in which the root is planted; still another to collect the water above which it shall rear its beautiful head; another to call forth the root with its fibres drawing its nourishment from this soil; another the storms and winds to buffet and sway it, almost at times engulfing it. Thus is produced this most beautiful of all flowers. Again, some other soul sees more usefulness in the mighty oak, in all its strength and grandeur; another sees greater beauty in the rippling brook, the majestic river, or the vast ocean. And so on, through all the varied stages of nature, either in the vegetable or animal form of life. Each is stamped different from many who roam about the streets of Chicago—the moment you glance at them, you read from the features a lesson that tells you plainly, that they have the true nobility in their veins — honesty, intelligence, and kindness. They submit to be tied, questioned, and examined without a murmur, and evince no displeasure at the remarks of unbelievers. A few evenings ago, we had the pleasure of tying one of the children, a little boy, and we excited all our skill and strength in so adjusting the ropes, that we thought it impossible for the spirits ever to untie him. While he and his sister were in the cabinet, she being securely tied also, we distinctly saw several hands at the aperture in the front, at least twice as large as those of the medium. Finally, they were untied, and came forth from the cabinet, seemingly enjoying the seance as much as any one in attendance.

In a previous number of the JOURNAL, we gave an account of the spirits on one occasion assisting Mrs. Bangs in doing her house work. We believe her statement in reference thereto as strictly true. Indeed, in the presence of certain mediums, it is easy for the spirits to materialise themselves sufficiently to even do cooking. A case of this kind occurred at Hartford, Ohio, in 1855, the truthfulness of which was testified to under oath.

A Chicago Congregation.

Chicago has a congregation so given to criticism that whoever occupies the pulpit is subjected to the dissecting-knife in a fashion that is the despair of ordinary surgeons. Their own minister is almost literally taken to pieces every Sunday, and it would seem that he could not survive the cutting up and be ready for duty in a pleasant mood in a week. But it is simply their way of doing things, and implies no disrespect for the man whom they engage to furnish them a weekly topic for critical analysis. Indeed, let an outsider intimate that a tenth part of what they say of their clergyman may possibly be true, and they fly into a passion, if not at his person, in an instant, like an Irish couple when a third party interferes with their conjugal altercation, receiving the blows of both on his own head. Exactly whether this is the normal type of Chicago churchism, or whether the critical temper finds more food and provocation there than elsewhere, are questions we shall not presume to answer; but we have always found that religion which runs to criticism of a very thin and debilitated sort, of which the least one has the better, and from which the honest unbeliever should pray to be saved. We should as soon think of looking on the northeast side of an iceberg for bananas, or in our city government for an honest man, as in that Chicago congregation for Christian saints.—Golden Age.

The cruel members of this society have a church on the North Side, and they seem entirely destitute of charity, "which covereth up a multitude of sins." When ushered into heaven, it would be well for God to keep them at some distance from his throne, or they will take that to pieces also, leaving him standing to govern the universe. Since the hot weather commenced, this minister has been saved from going through the severe ordeal each week, of being taken to pieces, as most of his hearers sleep while he is preaching. Those who compose his congregation are intensely Christian, so much so, that each one aspires to be like God, and rule. Indeed, they have a pious thermometer, which the minister applies to each one, at least once a month, in order to determine his true moral status. It has been said they never allow their minister to apply his pious thermometer to their character, without they have just returned from prayer, where they have been forgiven of all their sins. One member forgot to do this once, and when the instrument was applied to him, it sank down to "Terribly Black and Hideous,"—a mark that leads to each one's expulsion from the church.

Noted Mediums in Chicago.

By reference to the Medium's Register and advertisements in this paper, the reader will learn of many good and reliable mediums in this city.

During the heated season, the BANGS CHILDREN will suspend their seances.

CHARLES H. READ will continue his seances. He can be addressed care of this office.

Mrs. MAUD LORD, it is well known, can be addressed care of this office. The time and place of her seances can be learned by calling here.

Mrs. A. H. ROBINSON, the great healing and business medium, can be addressed or found at her residence, 148 FOURTH AVENUE.

It is conceded that she is one of the greatest healing and business mediums of the age, and seldom fails to give immediate relief, and generally cures the most desperate cases of disease by one diagnosis and prescription.

The Bangs Children.

Many extraordinary incidents occur at the residence of Mr. Bangs, the father of these remarkable children, whose mediumship has excited such a wide-spread interest. Those who visit their seances are astonished at the wonderful manifestations. This family are highly favored, especially the children. Frequently the spirits comprising the circle that control them, will take them to the store, and furnish postal currency to buy them such trinkets and playthings as they seem to think they require. A short time ago, strange as it may appear, one of the little girls saw her Aunt Elizabeth, who has long been in spirit life, walk up the door steps, approach her, and hand her a gold ring, which is now worn by Mrs. Bangs. We believe this statement. This family is an honor to our cause, and we take especial pleasure in referring to them.

In connection with the many trinkets brought the children, are two beautiful images made out of Parian marble. "Where," it may be asked, "do the spirits obtain these things? Were do they procure postal currency, gold rings, trinkets of various kinds, which they bring to their mediums, to encourage them in the work in which they are engaged?" This is a pertinent inquiry. In all cases when asked that question, they reply, "We steal nothing; no one loses anything through our instrumentality." Those chubby little children are entirely different from many who roam about the streets of Chicago—the moment you glance at them, you read from the features a lesson that tells you plainly, that they have the true nobility in their veins — honesty, intelligence, and kindness. They submit to be tied, questioned, and examined without a murmur, and evince no displeasure at the remarks of unbelievers. A few evenings ago, we had the pleasure of tying one of the children, a little boy, and we excited all our skill and strength in so adjusting the ropes, that we thought it impossible for the spirits ever to untie him. While he and his sister were in the cabinet, she being securely tied also, we distinctly saw several hands at the aperture in the front, at least twice as large as those of the medium. Finally, they were untied, and came forth from the cabinet, seemingly enjoying the seance as much as any one in attendance.

In a previous number of the JOURNAL, we gave an account of the spirits on one occasion assisting Mrs. Bangs in doing her house work. We believe her statement in reference thereto as strictly true. Indeed, in the presence of certain mediums, it is easy for the spirits to materialise themselves sufficiently to even do cooking. A case of this kind occurred at Hartford, Ohio, in 1855, the truthfulness of which was testified to under oath.

A Chicago Congregation.

Chicago has a congregation so given to criticism that whoever occupies the pulpit is subjected to the dissecting-knife in a fashion that is the despair of ordinary surgeons. Their own minister is almost literally taken to pieces every Sunday, and it would seem that he could not survive the cutting up and be ready for duty in a pleasant mood in a week. But it is simply their way of doing things, and implies no disrespect for the man whom they engage to furnish them a weekly topic for critical analysis. Indeed, let an outsider intimate that a tenth part of what they say of their clergyman may possibly be true, and they fly into a passion, if not at his person, in an instant, like an Irish couple when a third party interferes with their conjugal altercation, receiving the blows of both on his own head. Exactly whether this is the normal type of Chicago churchism, or whether the critical temper finds more food and provocation there than elsewhere, are questions we shall not presume to answer; but we have always found that religion which runs to criticism of a very thin and debilitated sort, of which the least one has the better, and from which the honest unbeliever should pray to be saved. We should as soon think of looking on the northeast side of an iceberg for bananas, or in our city government for an honest man, as in that Chicago congregation for Christian saints.—Golden Age.

The cruel members of this society have a church on the North Side, and they seem entirely destitute of charity, "which covereth up a multitude of sins." When ushered into heaven, it would be well for God to keep them at some distance from his throne, or they will take that to pieces also, leaving him standing to govern the universe. Since the hot weather commenced, this minister has been saved from going through the severe ordeal each week, of being taken to pieces, as most of his hearers sleep while he is preaching. Those who compose his congregation are intensely Christian, so much so, that each one aspires to be like God, and rule. Indeed, they have a pious thermometer, which the minister applies to each one, at least once a month, in order to determine his true moral status. It has been said they never allow their minister to apply his pious thermometer to their character, without they have just returned from prayer, where they have been forgiven of all their sins. One member forgot to do this once, and when the instrument was applied to him, it sank down to "Terribly Black and Hideous,"—a mark that leads to each one's expulsion from the church.

The Riot in New York City.

The riot that occurred in New York City, July 12 h, created intense excitement all over the country. The history of the affair may be briefly stated as follows: The Orangemen of New York had resolved to celebrate their festal day, being the anniversary of the final defeat of James II. by William, prince of Orange, which resulted in the confirmation of the "Protestant succession" to the throne of Great Britain. Threats had been made by Irish Catholics, that if the demonstration took place, it would be assaulted and dispersed. These menaces continuing, and the Orangemen persisting in their determination to observe the day, the police authorities of New York forbade the parade in a public manifesto. This was published at a late hour on Monday evening. On the following day Governor Hoffman, being advised, of the situation, proceeded at once to the metropolis, revoked the order of Superintendent Kelso, and in a proclamation that will go far in confirming his reputation as an able executive and a sagacious and catholic statesman, declared that "any and all bodies of men desiring to assemble and march in peaceful procession would be permitted to do so."

When the Orangemen were marching in procession, they were greeted with hideous yells by the Catholics, and in the riot that followed several were killed on both sides.

In regard to the Orange Society, its members associate in honor of William Henry, prince of Orange, whose name they bear, and whose memory they revere, tending, as he did, under divine Providence, to the overthrow of the most oppressive bigotry, and the restoration of civil and religious freedom, and hope in the adoption of his name to emulate his virtue by maintaining religion without persecution or trenching upon the rights of any. They also assemble in the name and revere the memory of George Washington, believing him to be blessed by Almighty God, in raising as a lasting tribute to his memory, the universal freedom, both civil and religious, of this country to the end of time. Likewise do they revere the memory of Abraham Lincoln, as one whom the people of this country should forever remember as the great liberator of a section of the human race.

The riot has alarmed the American Protestant Association, and they issued the following card over the signature of Samuel Simons, G. M.:

The fiendish riot at present raging in the city of New York being truly demonstrative of the intolerant and despotic spirit that has at all times actuated the devoted members of the Roman Catholic church, it becomes all liberty-loving American Protestants to band themselves together for the purpose of self-defense, so that, should their liberties at any time be invaded by intimidation or actual violence, they may be ready for such occasions. The American Protestant Association was organized for such contingencies. We are an independent and truly American association, and as such invite all Protestants, who are law-abiding citizens, to immediately fraternize with us in upholding the principles guaranteed to us by the genius of our constitution, should they at any time be placed in danger.

The various orthodox churches have always exhibited a spirit of intolerance,—it permeates all of them, and this, to a certain extent, is a fight among themselves.

Such riots are to be deplored, and we hope the American people will never have occasion to witness another.

Mrs. Robinson's Tobacco Antidote.

The most certain and perfectly harmless antidote for the poisonous effects, and remedy for the tobacco appetite, is known by the above name.

It is compounded by Mrs. A. H. Robinson, the celebrated medium of Chicago, while entranced by a celebrated chemist, long in spirit life. This antidote is warranted to break the habit of using tobacco by the inveterate lover of the weed, when the directions (on each box) are followed.

Agents for selling the same throughout the country are wanted. For sale, wholesale and retail, at this office. Price $3 00 per box—sent by mail free of postage, on receipt of the money.

The rules mentioned in her advertisement should be strictly complied with by those who correspond with her for treatment.

St. Charles, Minnesota.

For some eight or ten months the Baptist church of St. Charles has been in trouble, which culminated on Friday, and was disposed of by a council of delegates from twelve of the neighboring churches. Last winter some eighteen members were excluded, including the former pastor, D. L. Babcock, and two-thirds of the city members, by a bare majority vote. The only charge against the excluded members was based upon their opposition to the Rev. H. M. Day.

At the time of this appointment there was no suspicion of any immoral conduct in Mr. Day. But within the last two or three months rumor began to make charges against him which would entirely corrupt him for any pulpit, or for membership in any church. A charge of adultery was made by the members of the church who had been friendly to Mr. Day. Such proof was brought before the council as to convince them that for several months ranging from November, 1870, to March, 1871, Mr. Day had been criminally intimate with a young woman employed in his house. Therefore, H. M. Day was deposed from the ministry and excluded from the church by the unanimous vote of the twenty-four members of the council.

This is a painful affair, for many reasons: Mr. Day has a wife and two children. His aged father and mother, for many years missionaries in India, where he was born, are now alive. It is a wound to the cause of religion. Great sympathy was manifested for the innocent sufferers in this sad and deep fall.

The other difficulties of the St. Charles church were all adjusted, and causes of grievance removed, and it is hoped a brighter day is before them.—Winona Republican.

Yes, and it is hoped that those pious Baptist saints, as well as those of other churches, who are continually puddling in dirty water, will direct their attention to their own pollution, instead of slandering Spiritualists, and denouncing them all as "free-lovers."

There is a marked case of the moral effect of that kind of hypocritical cant which converts heathens, and denounces Spiritualism as the work of the devil.

This reverend adulterer is the son of missionaries,—begotten and born by "servants of the Lord," while in active service.—[ED. JOURNAL.

Reports of Conventions, etc.

It is a well-known fact that the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL has a larger circulation in the West than all other Spiritual papers combined.

We are always perfectly willing to publish reports of conventions, meetings, etc., but wish it distinctly understood that we shall publish no report of meetings held in the West, secondhanded. Secretaries who can not furnish us an original copy of the proceedings, need not think we shall take them from some other paper.

It is an impossible for an official to send a report of a Western meeting East to be published, with a request for us to copy. Such a course deprives Western subscribers to the JOURNAL of the privilege of reading such proceedings until long after the same have been published in Eastern papers.

Meetings will do well to see that officials who have no higher sense of propriety receive special instructions.

Daniel T. Edwards.

Upon the recommendation of a large number of Spiritualists, the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL SOCIETY granted a Letter of Fellowship and Ordination to the above-named brother, on the 7th day of July, constituting him a "Regular Minister of the Gospel" in the language of the law, thereby authorizing him to solemnize marriages in legal form.

☞ We are in want of dues for the JOURNAL. When it is not convenient to pay all, let us have a part, as an earnest of a good will. Wake up! we are in earnest.

The Hollow Globe.

DR. SHERMAN—Dear Sir: The "Hollow Globe" came safely to hand; many thanks for it. I have perused its contents with deep and increasing interest, and hesitate not to say, that it contains great principles of wisdom worthy the candid consideration of earth's ablest minds. It is destined to give philosophy and astronomy a momentum that will be better understood and appreciated in the future.

Many subjects treated upon in your work, such as the Igneous Theory, Inherent Forces, and Vision, have settled my mind and removed many doubts which heretofore have impeded my onward progress.

Long may you live, friend Sherman, to agitate thought, even though you should be misunderstood; for the world is groveling in darkness, and there is large need for sturdy pioneers to remove the rubbish of old theology, and rear in its stead a pastoral religion that shall have reason and common-sense for its basis.

Yours for truth in its broadest expansion,

MARY E. LYON.

Sherman, N. Y.

☞ For sale at this office. Price $1 00; postage 20 cents. Address S. S. Jones, 169 S. Clark street, Chicago.

Collin M. Campbell, a tailor, of Milwaukee, Wis., having no fear of God or the Devil in his eyes, sends forth to the world the following advertisement: "Christian Communism taught in short and easy lessons to the clergy of the city, at 447 Milwaukee street. The foundations for such teaching are found in the New Testament, in the life and sayings of Jesus, the labors of Paul, and the Acts, made manifest by the early Disciples, in the ever memorable Day of Pentecost, when they were all of one mind, and had all things in common. Like Paul, I work with my hands for my living. Tailoring, in all its branches, done at short notice. Cutting, making, cleaning, and repairing clothing, prompt and cheap for cash only. The Trinity in Unity of the future must be production, distribution and consumption. Closed on Sundays, so on that day the clergy must earn their living. Amen."

AN HONEST MAN OR WOMAN when they desire a newspaper discontinued, inclose arrearages, and say so. Exceptions to this rule are almost invariably found among church members, or those leaning that way. They trump up a pious lie, to get rid of paying honest debts. Such people will be promptly exposed, so far as this paper is concerned.

Personal and Local.

—David P. Towle, of North Hampton, N. H., offers his services to the public as a developing medium. In some cases persons are thrown into a trance by just being in his presence.

—Brother Dean Clark intends, we understand, to spend the fall and winter in the Southwest, and is ready to make monthly engagements. Give him employment.

—Elijah Woodworth, of Leslie, Mich., sends the following: "I, Elijah Woodworth, of Michigan, do challenge Moses Hull, E. V. Wilson, A. B. Whiting, W. F. Jamieson, or any other approved Spiritual lecturer, at any time and place in the bounds of Michigan, the coming winter of 1871-2, to debate the following resolution, to consume at least ten consecutive evenings, if called for: 'Resolved That the Bible, Old or New Testament, Greek or Roman copies with their Apocryphies, mythic fictions or fabulous legends, does teach the return of persons disembodied, organized individual spirit entities, after the death of the material body,'—of which question I will take the negative."

—Brother Samuel Smith is laboring in Iowa. He sends us several new subscribers.

—Will E. V Wilson pay particular attention to the resolutions of respect, passed by the Cleveland Society of Spiritualists, in behalf of J. M Peebles, they may help to open his eyes in regard to the settlement of speakers. —Crucible.

—Remarks: Brother Wilson is willing, and fully competent, to defend any position he may take.

—Brother Thomas Sherwood, of Independence, Iowa, gives an account of a skeptic who, attending a circle the third time, was taken possession of by the spirit, and compelled to dance.

—"In connection with the missing brig 'Kentucky,' Capt. Bryant, the San Francisco Chronicle tells a curious story of a dream which Capt. Bryant's father-in law, Capt. Knipe, had about the time she is supposed to have been lost. It appears that Mrs. Knipe awoke one night, and discovered her husband talking in his sleep, with his right arm extended, as if to shake hands, and that he related to her that he saw Bryant at the bedside, shook hands with him, was astonished at his unexpected arrival, and asked: 'How is this, Bryant, that you are here? I was down at the Exchange this evening, and did not hear of your arrival or expect you so soon.' Bryant replied, 'Well, I am here and there's Louisa by her mother.' When Mrs. Knipe awoke the Captain, he exclaimed: 'Let me be! Oh, why did you awake me? I saw Bryant and Louisa here most vividly; I hope nothing has happened to them.'"

—Brother Shearer, of Meridian, Miss., writes as follows. Physical mediums take notice: "Could you not send me a good physical test medium, to sojourn with us awhile. We want one who can give convincing demonstrations to bigots, and those who doubt every thing. We are yet in the A. B. C. of the science. My house would be a home for such one as long as he might stay, and I think we could raise money enough to prepay expenses to and from, and probably a little more."

—The Waukesha Plaindealer says: "Mr. Chas. H. Read, the 'mysterious man,' who during the past week, created such a sensation among our Milwaukee neighbors, in Good Templar's Hall, is at this village on Friday and Saturday evenings two well filled houses Among other mysterious things, he permits himself to be tied by a committee appointed for the purpose, to a chair. His head and arms are fastened back to the chair, his hands bound together and tied to his feet, which are also bound to the chair. In this predicament, without any human assistance, his head is taken off and put on at leisure, solid steel rings are strung on his arms, his arms are thrust through the rounds of chairs, plays on the guitar, tamborine, etc., finger rings are changed from one hand to the other, and a large, heavy table moved several feet, and is last resting on his head. During each act, which occupies from three to five seconds, the lights are extinguished, and are lighted up again for the committee to examine and see that he is still tied as they left him. He calls it 'Spiritualism,' but we are not prepared to say that it is Spiritualism, Mesmerism, Rheumatism, or any other ism, but are forced to admit that 'his ways are past finding out.'"

—The Blue Earth City Post mentions that one "Elder" J. C. Strong, of Chain Lake Center, has been recently hauled up on a charge of embezzlement. A few years ago, it appears, the sum of thirty or more dollars was put in his hands, which had been contributed by Sunday school children for the purpose of purchasing artificial limbs for the Fremler boys, who were maimed by freezing. Strong never delivered the money, because he had "conscientious scruples about allowing the money of innocent children to be given to the wicked." He said "there was no evidence that the freezing —a dispensation of providence—had softened the hearts of the boys, or made them better," and hence arose his conscientious scruples.

—Annie Curran Torrey is now at Memphis, Tenn., engaged in holding circles, giving tests, etc. A brother writing from there says: "She is receiving numerous calls, especially from those belonging to the more intelligent classes of our citizens, and as a test and clairvoyant and medical medium, she is a decided success She gives fair notice, however, that she pretends not to infallibility, but like other mortals is liable to err. Inasmuch as she is teaching and demonstrating new and important truths, is contributing to the relief of the sick, is imparting consolation to the mourners, is inspiring humanity with nobler aims, and higher and holier hopes, and leading aspiration to heaven is, 'Oh, long may she wave.'"

—Lyri Dinkelspiel has been lecturing in the vicinity of Waukegan, Ill., to good audiences. He spoke at Libertyville last Sunday.

—Mrs. Maud Lord has been at Hebron, Ind., holding seances. Brother Lock writes as follows in reference to her: "We had the pleasure of having Mrs. Maud Lord with us for two days and had splendid manifestations,—just enough to cause quite a shaking among the the old theological dry bones, and set them to thinking, talking and lying, and that is considerable, Mrs. Lord left a good impression among the majority of the people."

—Brother White informs us that at Anderson, Ind., is a society of fifty Spiritualists. They have a hall, lyceum, and occasional lectures. The hall belongs to Dr. Westerfield, an active Spiritualist.

—Brother J. L. Potter is doing a very good work in Minnesota. His missionary labors are awakening the people to an interest in our cause, wherever he goes.

—A case involving the legality of Sunday traveling was decided in the Massachusetts Supreme Court, last week. The main point of dispute was, that the plaintiff, a Mrs. Fiotal, could not recover damages, because she was traveling on Sunday, and repairing from a Spiritualistic camp meeting at Weir, which the defendants claimed was a place of no amusement, and not devoted to religious worship. Judge Wells charged the jury that, "by the Constitution every one has a right to worship according to his own conscience, and he told them to determine from all the evidence whether the plaintiff was sincere in her belief in Spiritualism, and also to decide the character of the meeting. A person has the right to travel on Sunday for the purpose of attending religious worship, and if the plaintiff was so doing, she was entitled to recover. The jury gave a verdict for the plaintiff, for $6,000 damages.

—It is reported that a photographer who took several photographs of a dead child, in Fall River, Mass., near Boston, recently, decked on the sixth day after the death of the child's mother, who had been dead for some time. There is a sensation in Fall River in consequence.

Philadelphia Department.

BY ..... HENRY T. CHILD, M. D

Subscriptions will be received, and papers may be obtained at wholesale or retail, at 624 Race street, Philadelphia.

Distance.

Distance is perhaps one of the most deceptive things which we are called upon to judge of.

How often are we deceived in regard to the distance of a large fire, either by day or night.

Some one has facetiously remarked that "Sound flies at very different rates; thus the sound of a dinner bell will pass more than twice as rapidly as the same bell calling to work."

An anecdote is related of an English nobleman who had large mines. He noticed that the men came out of the mines after the morning's labor, much more expeditiously than they entered an hour later, to work. Speaking to one of the men about it, the reply was, that "There being twelve strokes, it fully roused the men, and they were on the alert to get out, whereas, at the end of the hour, there being but one stroke, there was less impression made upon them."

The owner of the mine concluded to have a clock made that would strike thirteen for the hour at nine, and the clock may now be seen in the office of the mines. We have no report of the effect it had upon the men.

Our consciousness of distance is very unreliable, and it is a singular fact that its apparent length is very much lessened by going over it frequently. When we walk over the same ground, the distance appears shorter, and on this account men and animals make their paths, by going over the same ground.

It is probable that Weston, in his wonderful feat of walking four hundred miles in less than five successive days, was enabled to do so with more ease, because it was on a small course or circle, around which he walked eighteen hundred times.

The new incidents which we meet on a hitherto untravel road, take our attention, and make both the time and distance seem longer. The result of travelling, is to reduce the comparative size of the earth to us, and make us feel that we are masters of it.

All persons have experienced the feeling that after having once traveled any road, it is much less of an undertaking to go over it again, especially if we feel inclined to do it. The first walk of a little child across its nursery is really a greater journey than that around the world may be to him fifty years later in life.

The greatest exertions of our lives, if they do not entirely exhaust us, fit us for the accomplishment of still more important ones.

The works of man to-day, throw a shade over all the efforts of past generations. We know it has been said that in building the pyramids and ancient temples, mechanical powers were used which we are not acquainted with to-day.

The tunneling of Mount Cenis, the Atlantic Telegraph, and our great Pacific Railroad, are far more gigantic works than were ever before conceived, much less executed by man. The triumphs of the last half century, are but a beautiful prophecy of what the next will accomplish.

The telegraph is but a prophecy of what mind is already beginning to do,—hold intercourse with mind without regard to distance. One of the first communications spelled out by raps for us was, "Mind shall with mind direct commune." It did not seem very clear at that time, but now, we realize it. Mental telegraphy is in its infancy, but enough is known of it to show that it is a fact, and that as the race progresses into higher and better conditions, it will be better understood and much more common.

Since we have learned to study mineralogy and geology of the sun, moon, and distant planets, and even the fixed stars, which are central suns of other solar systems, let no one be surprised, if in the grand outlinements of science we shall yet learn to open telegraphic communication with the inhabitants of those far off worlds.

A few years ago, if any one had spoken about our having a positive and scientific demonstration of the actual constituents of the soil and atmosphere of a planet, it would have been considered quite as chimerical as our prediction that we shall yet hold intercourse with the inhabitants of other worlds, and learn many things in regard to their history and progress. We have no doubt that it is given to spirits in certain advanced conditions, to travel away through the blue ether of space, and visit all these distant homes of man, and so through these means, and through actual telegraphy by signals, we shall hear from these our distant brothers and sisters, whose very existence was unknown until the light of Modern Spiritualism revealed the fact, and compelled human reason to admit that he who planned the universe, and called into being the starry hosts, hath not made anything in vain, or without some useful purpose or design in the beautiful economy of nature, and, therefore, these worlds are much larger, older, and grander than our little planet, must be inhabited by races of men corresponding to themselves. Then our ideas of distance will be changed, and we shall realize that it belongs to time and physical things, while the immortal soul,—God within man,—which is infinite in its attributes, shall not always be trammeled by the physical, and bound by the limitations of time or space, but asserting its own innate powers, it shall go forth into the realms of infinitude, and recognizing its divine parentage and attributes, shall awaken in man a consciousness of powers that have hitherto been dormant, because the overwhelming influence of the physical and external upon this.

It is this awakened consciousness of the soul, that alone gives man a positive idea of the existence of a God. The perception of his infinite attributes within us, is the only means that can reveal the Great Father of All to us.

Human faith and human reason, stimulated by the glimmering rays of light from the central source, have endeavored to prove such an existence, but the effort has been unsuccessful, and only as the soul is awakened to a consciousness of its own powers, can there be any recognition of the Infinite Being whom men call God.

The human race in all ages of the past, have groped their way, accepting this essential and important idea or faith.

The transition from faith to knowledge, like the tearing down of an old temple preparatory to the construction of a new one, was through the cold and dreary road of Infidelity, but as the bold pioneers have marched steadily on, with unmistakable harmony, through this road, the day has dawned, and through the unfolding influence of Modern Spiritualism, many of the race have come to a practical realization, first, of the existence of their own souls, and secondly, of God, as the Central Sun and Source of All Power.

The Earth and its Population.

Dr. Elder in an address before a Teacher's Institute, gave the following in speaking of the productions of the earth and increase of population:

England's present average is thirty bushels of wheat to the acre, and ours in this New World has not gone above fifteen in the last ten years! Moreover, you must give due weight to the fact that modern agriculture is constantly substituting nutritious roots, which yield by the ton, for grains that multiply only by the bushel. One acre of wheat will support three men for a year, but one acre of potatoes will feed nine. France feeds her people now with potatoes, carrots, and pulse to more than three times the equivalent of all her native food a hundred years ago. Her potato crop is more than twice the amount of ours, and she is making six pounds per head of beet-root sugar, whose culture is not a half century old.

